ABOUT US

Founded just under three years ago, Java Been is now a bustling cafe. With its high ceilings and "found space" appeal, the cafe has come to host exhibitions, meetings, and local bands. It has become an integral part of the arts revival community that has taken root in the old factory mill buildings along the river.

The owners take pride in their community, striving to provide a creative space with gourmet coffee, tantalizing baked goods, and music to inspire the artist's soul. Throughout the day, self-employed and remote workers enjoy a focused space away from home to get in a few productive hours. At night, the space comes alive with artists, student study groups, and everyday people just looking to enjoy a cultured night on the

Reflection:

For my project I used Java Been as the client. I kept their website simple because it will has a lot of content on it. The site uses all brown tones with some black and white mixed in to keep with their branding. I left the navigation traditional, at the top of the page, so that customers can easily find what they need. The navigation is responsive and collapses to a hamburger style menu when shrunk down to mobile size. I have the CSS changing all of the colors so that it matches JavaBeen's branding. The homepage will have information about the company and a brief preview of the menu. This information will also be found on separate pages that can be clicked on in the navigation menu. This tab menu uses HTML, CSS and JavaScript to make it function. The CSS formats it and the JavaScript creates the functions that happen when the tabs are clicked. I also have a slideshow of testimonials on this page. The testimonials also use all three coding languages to function. It is setup to change slides every 2 seconds. On the menu page I have a "show more" button that uses HTML, CSS, JavaScript and JQuery to get it to work. It hides some of the menu items so that the page is not overwhelming.

Overall, my website is functional, provides all of the information needed and matches JavaBeen's branding. The design elements that I chose to use reflect on the modern and almost industrial feel of JavaBeen's style. If I were doing this site over I would have added more detail into the about page and the location page. Compared to the menu and homepage the other two are boring. Designing the site for Java Been was a new and exciting experience for me. The design mockup was my favorite part. I enjoyed creating something to show my client my ideas before going through the trouble of coding.
