Lifestyle

Family | Newborns

Lifestyle photography lies somewhere in between documentary photography on the one hand, and classic portraiture on the other hand. A documentary photographer will have a "fly on the wall" approach, catching life as it is without trying to interfere with what is going on. He or she will tell the story of real life, as it happens, while trying to be as transparent as possible for his/her subjects.

Family Portraits

Family photography portraits capture a moment in time alongside those you care for most. They are treasured memories, placed on a wall or a mantle of a specific time and place.

Portraits

Senior | Couples | Studio

Senior portraits are about celebrating a life stage - for many teens, their entire senior year is filled with milestones, and it is definitely one worth noting and celebrating in many ways, including portraiture. It's their last year of high school, but so much more. It is also typically their last year with the friends they grew up with, their last year at home (it will never be the same, even if they are twenty seven and living in your basement), and their last year of truly being under their parents wings. Their senior year is about being on the cusp of something great - their futures, and they will never see the world the way they do right now. Documenting that with professional photography is one way of ensuring that you never forget who they are, RIGHT now.

Newborn

Family | Newborns

Newborn portraiture is about capturing this beautiful moment before the child grows up.

The well being of the subject as the main priority. Safety is key. The great thing is, the parents get to act as your assistants, holding and posing the baby. They can also make them laugh, and easily put them back to sleep.

Maternity

Lifestyle | Outdoor | Studio

More mothers-to-be are celebrating their growing bellies in print, with the help of professional photographers

There once was a time when women were shy of their bodies during pregnancy. But this is no longer the case, and this attitude has been shattered in recent years as society has embraced the glow and wonder of new life. More and more, women are looking to capture this special moment in their lives.

Maternity photography has become wildly popular. Usually, it's done in the latter stages of the pregnancy for maximum visual effect. Maternity sessions often include the spouse and other children, making them part of a family portrait session that captures a unique time in the life of a growing family.
