

bani haykal
adsurbism
01

bani haykal
adsurbism

#01

decidedly, the staples unbuttoned unscrambles together the purpose trudging along our methodologies breathing towards the corridors where perceptions are mimicked to profess in metaphors for betterments hidden in puzzle boxes.

whata sentence whata sentence what a sentence. unstructured; tongues bloom into music kissing lip gloss bright in the afternoon sun, as we stand to pretend caring, catching bites whilst spitting plastic into cans, bring the legs and make them taste sweetly in unison to the satisfying sigh called relief.

who standsbaffled to the acoustic moon violently marooning the clumsy thinker washing his face in dull cinema called care? i certainly don't, i certainly don't; intend to pretend is a phrase used in a sentence, a sentence whata sentence, breathing life only seconds to comatose relief because friends, friends, friends, friends, friends : undecidedly
my buttons scrambled a purpose a purpose i call life and an open call to death is default payment we cash in every puzzling month.

© 2009 bani haykal
all rights reserved.