Starlight

*Open wide, the lights fade.
Gone are the orbs,
Where once dreams were made.*

*Dark and foreboding now.
The lights burn no more.*

*The days have taken a toll,
Extinguishing the flames
To the windows of the soul.*

*Through dark lenses I now peer,
Filtering what was whole,
I see no love, I see only fear.*

*Where have the flames gone
Which burned so bright?
A candle in the wind
They have left me alone*

*I scan the horizon of days past
While standing in the pits of days to come.
They darken still. They darken fast.*

*Where is the torch to reignite?
Mine eyes which once burned so bright?*

*I see it now. It is lost.
The torch burns afar
In the windows of another.
So distant now. It twinkles as a star.*

*But I shall cherish the days its warmth held me tight.
And I shall wish upon that star each and every night.*
