Changes Shown

by Sherri Welter and Ron Decker

Registration for Rainier High School was held Sept. 7, 1971. Schedules were issued and Stan Peerboom commented on some changes in school rules.

One change was there will not be an activity period after school this year. The buses now leave at 3:07 instead of 3:30.

This years senior count, jumped from 98 to 109, juniors climbed from 111 to 125.

Sophomores lost ground, to 119 from 134 last year. Freshmen went downhill to 110 compared to 128 last year.

Towel fees were accepted the first day of school and student body cards were available at $5.50.

Peerboom also stressed that no one is to be in a car during lunch.

Clubs Face Problems

This year the clubs are faced with a problem because there is no activity period after school. In years past the time from 3:00 to 3:30 has been used as a time for clubs to have their meetings.

Clubs and classes may schedule for a meeting at night. It may be held on any night except Wednesday. Wednesday nights are reserved because a lot of the churches have meetings that night.

Stan Peerboom, the principal, said that they would probably try to have meetings during the lunch periods. Also it might be allowed to get out of a class early at the end of a school day fifteen minutes for a meeting.

Some students aren't happy about not having an activity period. But as of now on one has a solution.

ADVISOR ATTENDS WORKSHOP

Dick Fisher, adviser for The Columbian, attended a high school newspaper advisers workshop at the University of Oregon, June 14-18.

From 8:00-4:30 daily, 24 advisers from Oregon, Washington and California met to study practical aspects of newspaper publication.

Reporting, writing, copy editing, columns, and editorials were basic elements of the workshop. Photography, page make-up, advertising and evaluation of high school papers were also included.

"Comparing newspapers and swapping ideas with other advisers highlighted the workshop," he reported.
