The December recap issue—
for 40,000 business aviation operators worldwide.

AIN's NBAA Quintet features the best preformers in New Orleans.

WHEN PROSPECTIVE clients and customers come marchin' in to NBAA 2005—how you'll want to be in that number.

And the number one proven way to do that is with AIN's five-issue NBAA coverage.

The perfect warm-up act forNew Orleans: AIN's NBAA October preview issue.

Can't wait for the show to get started? Neither can your customers. That's why they'll be checking out AIN's October NBAA preview issue to find out just what, and who, they can expect to find in New Orleans. People, products, new aircraft introductions, issues up for discussion, company news and all that jazz.

It's the indispensable overture of all that's to come.

Showtime with NBAA Convention News. The one 3 out of 4 pilots and executives choose over any other show publication.

Every day of the show the decision makers you want to reach, reach the same decision: to spend more time reading NBAA Convention News than any other show publication.

Specifically, 3 out of 4 pilots and executives say if there were only one publication covering NBAA, they want that publication to be be NBAA Convention News.

Which makes sense, since 2 out 3 also say it's the most newsworthy, informative and overall most valuable.

Think about it. If it's "overall most valuable" to them, how valuable does that make NBAA Convention News to you?

After the show—the encore.

For 40,000 business aviation executives around the world, including those who were there in New Orleans and those who only wish they were, AIN's December post-show issue is NBAA 2005.

Your customers know it's the place to turn for an insightful recap of every important highlight of the show.

And that makes it the ideal place for you to recap your NBAA message to you prospects.
