

The Ultimate Solar Goddess by Jenna Willis (2006)

Queen of the solar system, Empress of all of the planets.

Instead of liquids or solids, gases delightedly dance,

Oh yes, I am a Star in every meaning of the word,

You may call me The Sun or The Ultimate Solar Goddess.

On the surface, you may find me amusing,

Inspiration for your songs, narratives, and rituals.

I'm your bliss for exceptional weather, astronomical discoveries, or simple illumination.

As a cultural icon, I'm enriched in an abundance of symbolism.

As a ruler, mother, traveler, entertainer, educator, and decorator,

My time is precious, so what's your interest?

Curiosity overrides any obligation, so let's chat.

On the surface, I'll be forever youthful.

I'm not bad looking for five billion years old,

Oh, but is that my true age? A woman never tells.

For gratification or vigorously directed elsewhere,

Anyone may lit my fury, my energy to their hearts content.

My green-thumb can make anything grow in dirt, on skin, or even in a refrigerator.

In everything I do or aid in creation,

I'm a zealous, tenacious, and ostentatious celestial body.

Witty to the core, wisely underscored,

On the surface, a shade of yellow you may see me as,

But on the contrary, I'm no chicken.

I'm not afraid to do my share of sweat and suffering.

On the surface, I'm warm and cuddly,

No one can resist my sunny days, especially those sunbathers.

To the ones playing footsie in the shadows,

I'll play games of chary and neighborly.

No one can escape my shaft of light, especially those who try to hide.

Oh, I'll always find you, one way or another,

I'll play games of surly and sly.

I may just give you a tan or plenty of sun-kisses,

But I am also a source for your sweaty, itchy, swollen, and burnt skin.

It all depends on how I feel, all creatures beware of my potential lethal rays.

A sharp headache, panting-heart, or dizzy sensation is to my delight.

From sunrise to sunset, a solitary star shines.

Forever keeping Earth's core from being putrefied,

Forever keeping organisms comfy.

I am an entity that revolves around you, changes you.

For better or for worse,

I am The Sun.
