About My Job and What I do

My name is Jonathan Burne. I am a trained and educated speaker on the topic of drugs. I travel around the nation teaching young and old about how drugs affect people who can relate to them. My main areas of research are addiction, music, and dealers. I also write educational songs about drugs and how they are made, used, and the dangers of them. The lyrics also portray the effects these drugs have on people who have relations to them. Many people experience drug references through music, usually from rap or hip hop.

About My Life

I was born in Tuscaloosa, Massachusetts on April 23, 1964 to a wealthy family. My parents are Alicia Burne and Pablo Burne, and my brother is named Trent. I moved out to the city when I was 23, after college. I permanently settled there after I met my wife, Mary at one of my talks. We have been married for 29 years, and have two kids, Sally and Ben. We have a lab, named Tonka, and two cats, Mercy and Fireball. I have accomplished over 100 speeches, at 17 different colleges, including Yale, Stanford, and USC. I have also spoke at many middle and high schools.
