

Crime

The next part about addiction that I want to mention is the crime. When addicts become short on money, they often look to crime to get money for the drugs. Car stereos and bike tires are two of the main things addicts will steal (Connolly, 28). The drug dealer may also raise prices of drugs for people who are severely addicted, so they have to steal pricier items. This can lead to serious consequences like jail or possibly death (not the death penalty, but possibly by being killed by the person who was stolen from). Crime is a large part in society, because many innocent families may be robbed or mugged just because an addict needs some money for his/her daily supply.
