Monologue

Maya Shams

A mirror stands tall before me

There she stares back at me, in fear

Her eyes as black as coal, as white as snow

What do you want? Why are you looking at me?

She attacks. She flares her teeth

I don't know, I say. Curious, I guess.

Curious to see what lies behind that blackness

Curious to unfold your fears, unveil your darkness

Curious to know...

Her eyes tremble, she hides her teeth.

You don't want to know, she bleeds

I am unlovable, unforgivable...she hides her face away

But I am here. I stay. You're stuck with me, I say.

I'm not going anywhere. Look here my way.

Let me love you, please. Over here. Let me know you, please.

I am here. I stay.

Mirror starts shaking, it breaks. A million little pieces, she disappears

The music stops. I catch her eyes, they dissolve

We sit outside of our bodies, we hold each other, we cry

It's so hard to accept. It's so hard to love those reflections now scattered away

Those eyes of yours, they contain multitudes. Three hundred forty six million lifetimes and more

So many stories untold, forgotten. So much hurt and pain begotten

I know it's bad now. I know you're sad

We don't have to dig beneath the surface, we don't have to understand

I forgive you I inhale her tears lure behind a cloud of smoke, she exhales

It's Okay I finally hold that fragile gaze

It's tough, we linger there for another breath.

We've never lasted this long before

She smiles sadly. Careful not to fall,

Will you love me again tomorrow? She holds her breath

Of course I will, my blue neglected self

I gather the pieces, all around us, they're spread

we pick up the glue, together for the work ahead

I am not going anywhere. I stay.

I'm here. I am always here. I say