A VISIT to an art gallery led to a miracle cure for a north Dorset woman and her husband.

Linda Nazin had suffered severe pains in her left shoulder since falling while pregnant six years ago.

She was unable to raise her right arm above her head and even physiotherapy had failed to cure the problem.

But fate took a twist when she visited an exhibition in Bryanston Street, Blandford, and met artist Joe Potts.

Linda, a book designer of Rumbolds Road in Shaftesbury, said: "I didn't actually seek Joe out. I was chatting to him at the exhibition and somehow the subject of my injury cropped up.

Incredible

"He mentioned he was a healer, but he wasn't trying to sell his business to me."

Linda, aged 51, said his healing method was very simple.

"He put his arms on my shoulder and carried on talking. This lasted for about five minutes, it was all very informal," she said.

"I tried to raise my arm and suddenly the pain was gone, it was just incredible."

When Linda returned home, she told her news to husband Joss, 38, who suffered for years with pains in his neck, back and wrist.

His pain has been almost completely erased by Joe's treatment.

"I wouldn't say I had ever been a sceptic about this kind of healing, but I wouldn't have gone looking for it," says Linda.

"Now my husband and I are both so grateful to Joe. I thought my pain was something I'd always have to live with."

Joe, 55, has been using his healing powers for three years, since he was successfully treated for a ten-year condition which caused extensive lethargy.

He said of his treatment of Linda: "I could sense the warmth in her shoulder, and channelled energy to her.

"I think this is the first instance where a husband and wife have both been treated successfully, but I'm happy they both feel pleased with the treatment."
