

Aegnor

Aegnor was a Noldorin Elf, a son of Finarfin and lord of the Noldor.

Aegnor was the elder brother of Galadriel and younger brother of Finrod Felagund and Angrod; together with them joined the Exile of the Noldor from Valinor.

Aegnor was "renowned as one of the most valiant of the warriors...; in wrath or battle the light of his eyes was like flame, though otherwise he was a generous and noble spirit".

Later in Beleriand he was a vassal of Finrod and together with Angrod held the highlands of Dorthonion against Morgoth, but both were slain in the Dagor Bragollach.

Aegnor never married. He was in love with the Beorian woman Andreth, but because it was wartime did not make his intentions towards her clear, and was killed soon after.

(Sources Aethraeth Finrod ah Andreth: J. R. R. Tolkien (1993). Morgoth's Ring, The new genealogies of the Edain; J. R. R. Tolkien (1994): The War of the Jewels.)

