

Finwë

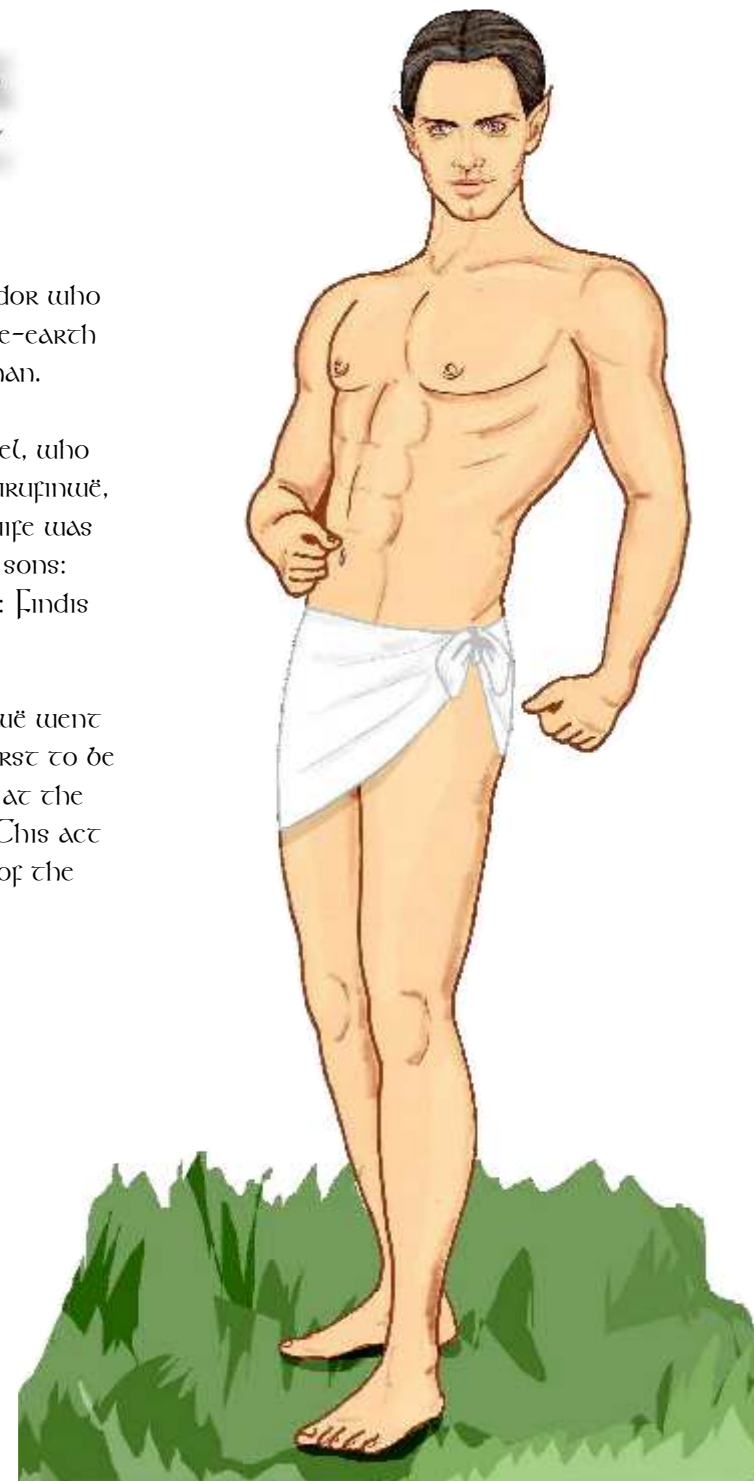

Finwë was the first High King of the Noldor who led his people on the journey from Middle-earth to Valinor in the blessed realm of Aman.

Finwë had two wives. His first was Míriel, who died soon after bearing their only child, Curufinwë, commonly known as Fëanor. His second wife was Indis, of the Vanyar, who bore him two sons: Fingolfin and Finarfin, and two daughters: Findis and Irimë (in 'Unfinished Tales').

When Fëanor was exiled from Tirion, Finwë went with him to Formenos. There he was the first to be killed in Valinor when Melkor slew him at the doors of Formenos seeking the Silmarils. This act was the catalyst that led to the flight of the Noldor.

The journey with
Oromë to Valinor

King of the Noldor