

IMRAZÔR the Númenórean

Imrazôr was the son of Adrahil I, Prince of Dor-Eri-Enid. At some point Imrazôr moved to the area where once was the elven haven of Edhellond. According to tradition, there he married Mithrellas, a Silvan Elf of Lórien who had accompanied Nimrodë, the beloved of Lothlórien's king Amroch, on her journey towards Edhellond, but had become lost along with her mistress sometime in the middle of the Third Age. Galador and his descendants therefore had claim to Elven blood.

Mithrellas' fate is nowhere described, only that she eventually left Imrazôr after bearing him a son Galador and a daughter. After Imrazôr's death, Galador went on to found the city and later the principdom of Dol Amroch. He is counted as its first Lord. The specific date of its foundation is nowhere recounted.

