

020122 China Prelude

As I am sure you are all aware, I can get a bit carried away when I put pen to paper to describe my travel experiences. Case in point, my lengthy three part email about my week of travels in Norway and Germany. The description about China will be no exception. I understand that these emails are often too long for most of you to read in their entirety. Thank you for bearing with them as much as you do. I write these as much for myself as I do for you. I love to write and doing so helps me to process what I experience. I also love sharing the experiences with you, so thank you for allowing me to do so.

Since I am on holiday for the next few days, it gives me the ability to sit down to finish writing all of the experiences in China down before they begin to fade. And, the experiences were plentiful. I have always admitted that I lead a very serendipitous life and that I was able to return to China is no exception. I got to see old friends, make new ones, teach, attend banquets, see how much China has changed in only a year and even met someone. But, all in good time.

Jeff
