TOURNAMENT SUMMARY

PeeWee Castro and Joe Durso had little difficulty advancing to the finals, beating Roberts and Fred Torres, then Satish Jagnandan and Carlos Lopez. On the other side, Rookie and Dave needed to outlast Kendell Lewis and Robert Sostre, then Kaplan and Sala. Rookie also had a war against Satish on Thursday, in what might have been the best singles match of the tournament.

In the finals, Joe and Peewee came out shooting making more than they missed. They captured the first game easily and kept the pressure on to take a big in the second, 19-10. For some insane reason with it all going their way, Peewee and Joe got into an argument. Focusing on yelling at each other instead of the game allowed Dave and Rookie to make their run. As the match proceeded, the heavens thundered. Castro and Durso were like a fighter plane that had just been hit; smoke and flames shooting out of the rear, spiraling downwards towards a seemingly unavoidable horrific crash landing.

But then the Dave served off the court. One engine started coughing back to life. At first server, 18-20, Dave served off again. The other engine started sputtering too. Peewee and Durso managed to narrowly avoid the crash landing and take the championship. For Peewee it was a repeat of his 2003 Doubles win. For Durso, it was another championship like the many others of his legendary career.
