HUMAN EXPERIMENTATION CALLED TO A HALT

By Jack Kemp

The proposed medical experiments upon prisoners at the Diomedus Penitentiary have been cancelled by the government. These experiments, designed to test new medical theories upon human guinea pigs, have been the source of a great deal of controversy, and few people were surprised at the news that they have been halted. Sunset City University's Dr Carl Crusher, the head of the project, is reported to be in talks about continuing experiments under private sector funding from LexCorp west.

ARMY CONTROLS PRISON SECTION

By Hubert Hubbersmith

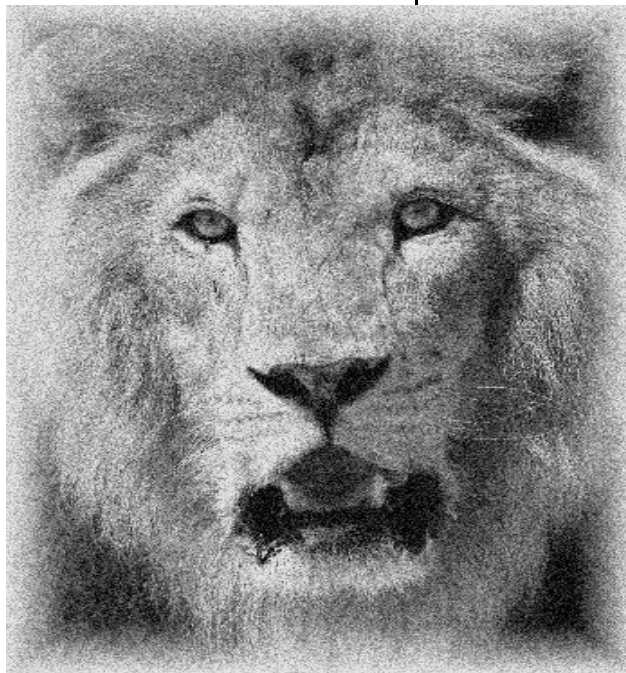

The military takeover of the Ultra-Security section of Diomedus Penitentiary has been completed, and several high-risk criminals from around the country have begun to be delivered under heavy guard. One of the first prisoners moved to Diomedus after the transfer of control was Lt. Lance Freeman, better known to the residents of Sunset City as the malevolent malefactor "Ironclad," the metal-garbed criminal who terrorized Sunset City until he was finally captured by army forces, working in concert with Sunset City police. Army officials promise that new security measures will make it impossible for criminals to escape in the future.

with the outcome of talks with Rhodesian businessmen and government officials. "These are people we can do business with," Pollard said, "People we have a lot in common with. I think I speak for everyone when I say that we felt right at home in New Salisbury."

A NEW FACE AT CITY HALL

By Harold Moore

Visitors to City Hall will in future be subjected to a considerable shock upon their entrance into that noble edifice, as they come face to face with a full-grown African lion. The magnificent but terrifying beast, named "Leo", was shot by Mayor Goodman on his recent visit to Rhodesia, and the mayor has decided to make a present of the trophy to Sunset City. The lion will be positioned on a pedestal directly beside the main staircase in City Hall, and should certainly add a certain regal air to the building.

AFRICAN SUCCESS

By Prescott Price

Mayor Gordon Goodman's recent visit to New Salisbury, the capital of the Federation of Rhodesia, has resulted in several lucrative contacts for local business. Paul Pollard, the vice president for West Coast operations of LexCorp, speaking as an unofficial spokesman for the various business leaders who accompanied the mayor, expressed everyone's satisfaction

WAVERLY SUSPENDED

By Jack Kemp

Sunset City University Professor Warren Waverly is reported to be under temporary suspension from the university after a recent argument with the Dean of Science over the direction of future research in the High Energy Physics Department of Sunset University.
