

REBEL ATTACK

In a most shocking attack rebel forces assaulted the camp of King Kalunga-ngombe while President Mbagu was present for a meeting to discuss the role of the Bantu tribes in the future of the Federation of Rhodesia. These communist-inspired guerrilla fighters were armed with rifles and machine guns, and the spear-armed Bantu tribesmen faced a most grim danger indeed. The President's brave and loyal bodyguard fearlessly leapt to the defense of the President and the native people, and managed to slay and drive off the rebels, although at the great cost of their own lives. The President has requested the Prime Minister to honour these brave men with the Medal of Meritorious Gallantry. Prime Minister Jafari has called for renewed military measures to ensure that such attacks can never happen again. The President is said to be in close consultation with the generals of the Army to give them all available details on exactly what occurred in this disturbing episode.

AMERICAN MAYOR GOES HOME HAPPY

The most honourable Mayor of Sunset City, USA, has completed his visit of friendship. After meeting with both the President and the Prime Minister, and also the Governor General, the Mayor was taken on a tour and hunt of our lovely and magnificent country. With him went many people who were with him on his trip, and also many stayed behind in the city to have many business talks and meetings.

GREAT BANTU CELEBRATION

Many Bantu people are celebrating a great holiday. This is not a regular holiday occurring each year, but a special celebration called by King Kalunga-ngombe, after consultation with the little-known Bantu-zandi people. It is said to be a great celebration of the triumph of goodness over wickedness, and also a ceremonial defeat of a mythical creature called "Stone Man" or perhaps "Rocks-from-Cave Man." Anthropologists who study the Bantu say this is no doubt in response to the recent near assassination of the King, and this sort of celebration is this simple people's way of thanking the spirits for the continued safety of their monarch.
