Dear Reader:

My name is Shackle Sully from the news . I've been trying to find out how healthy some schools are and I think I found the perfect place. I started a website that informs you about the kind of stuff they serve. Also, the stuff that I have dug up in this dirty place called the internet is insane.

After finding some research I found a poem written by one of your own about the poverty line. I've read it and did some research. What it's about is the line that defines if you are rich or poor and if you are able to buy school lunch. It's very detailed and interesting I will make sure to put that on my website

The last thing that I found was this Bio, it's the plan on how the food is transferred from the place that they are made or grown to schools. Wow this is an amazing blueprint! Next thing on the website. Now on to my interview with Clell Hoffman the director of school lunches at your school. (10 minutes later) wow that was an interesting interview I can't wait to put this on my website.
