

A n y parting words of wisdom - it's your forum.

Well, the only thing I can say: after all this time in my life, I would like to say, gay or straight, don't get too carried away with false love - go for the real love. Don't be fooled by people who want to make you an image of what they want their life to be like; I've dealt with that, with people who want me to be an image that they can parade around with - it's not me.

Some people have an image and an attitude - on both sides of the fence, mind you; they wanna parade around their straightness or they wanna parade around their gayness & they do their best to piss off the other camp. There's anger on both sides of that fence & I haven't yet been quite able to analyze all that anger. Most people who really want to get together & be around each other that happen to be gay OR straight, that want to get to know each other have a certain kind of wisdom that says, "Well, I'm gonna invite you to my party because I like you... and you can actually tell me a few jokes & you'll probably understand some of mine," and then, there is a lot of laughter. Laughter, most of all, brings people together; if people are too serious about an agenda, they certainly have forgotten how to laugh - and they don't know what they're missing with the people on the other side that can laugh.

I'm sorry that this world has forgotten how to laugh, more than anything else - people get too serious, and too structured & too rigid - and I'm talking about both the gay & straight sides; we really have forgotten how to laugh together. We should think more about being happy than about sexual orientation - just have some fun before we die. That would be my wish; that we could get together, we could share a barbecue, we could like each other & we could laugh. That would be what life is worth living for & not this fighting - not this discord. Because it's a waste of time, ok? Discord in life is a waste of time - you don't have to fight so hard to be happy.

This may be a continuing feature;
depending on The Lesbian's schedule, & interest. Obviously, there's lots more to be talked about, and if there's interest, we'll go a little further.
