

DUELIST PRICE INDEX

HOW TO USE THIS GUIDE

The prices presented here are the result of a nationwide survey of retailers. All prices, high, median, and low, are real. The median is similar to an average price (also called the mean in high-falutin' mathematical terms). The difference is that the median is an actual value that is located in the middle of an ordered list of all values, while the mean is the total of all values, divided by the number of values. The variations between high, median and low reflect the differences in regional supply and demand. The index shows the change in the median from last month's DPI. Amounts in the index column are black when a card's value increases, and red when it decreases.

The high and low are best used to determine the price range for a given card. When purchasing cards, it's very likely that the price will fall somewhere between the listed high and low, and is likely to be closer to the median than to high or low.

When trading cards, it's best to compare their median prices. The high and low often fluctuate depending on where you are in the country. For the most stable comparison, the median is the way to go. The tradability rating (TR) can also be used to help determine the demand for a card.

CARD CONDITION

Mint—Fresh out of the pack, cards are almost always in mint condition. Cards that are not straight out of a booster may still be in mint condition but typically are not, unless they've been protected somehow since opening.

Near Mint—Upon first inspection, mint and near mint condition cards should seem identical. Near mint condition cards are different only by the virtue of one or two barely detectable marks. All DPI prices are for mint/near mint condition cards. The distinction is so minor that one or two indiscernible marks do not devalue the card.

Very Fine—Bearing one or two small but noticeable marks, which can include small scratches, whitened corners, and minor scuff marks. Very fine condition cards are worth about 70–90 percent of a mint/near mint version of the same card.

Fine—Cards that have many minor defects—whitened corners, scratches, and scuff marks—but no major marks, such as creases, folds, or extensive scuff marks. Fine condition cards are worth about 60–80 percent of a mint/near mint version of the same card.

Good—Similar to a card in fine condition, but with more pronounced defects, or one or two major marks. Good condition cards are worth about 30–70 percent of a mint/near mint version of the same card.

Poor—Heavily played, creased, or folded cards are considered to be in poor condition. Generally, poor condition cards that are not in limited supply have little or no value. Poor condition cards that are difficult to find in mint/near mint condition are worth about 10–50 percent of a mint/near mint version of the same card.

TRADING WITH THE NEW CARDS

by Alex Shvartsman

An experienced trader is always excited when a new set comes out. Each new set places a dozen or more new entrees—more sought-after cards—onto the Magic stock market. For traders, this is one of the best times to try to increase the value of their collections. It's not without risk, but the best investments are always full of risk.

There are several strategies to follow in pursuit of this goal. All of them involve stocking up on the new set as soon as it comes out.

GO TO THE PRERELEASE TOURNAMENT

You will get a highly collectable Prerelease foil rare and a bunch of new cards, too. Entry fee costs are usually far offset by the trades you can get on the new cards. It's really silly, but people will trade for cards from a new set at a premium even just a day or two before it's officially released.

Prereleases will also give you an idea of which cards everyone is looking for. For example, you couldn't get a Yawgmoth's Bargain out of anyone at the Destiny Prerelease, a sure sign this card will be sought-after.

STOCK UP

The most cost-effective way to stock up is to buy a box or two. If you plan on spending money on booster packs anyway, check with your local retailer to see if you can preorder boxes. Be sure to make arrangements to get the box as soon as the set comes out—this will give you a head start when it's time to trade. You could, instead of spending money, trade away some of your older cards to pick up the new rares. This can be more time-consuming and expensive. New cards are often inflated in value early on.

IT'S A BLOWOUT!

Trade away most of your new rares for popular older rares. It can't hurt to pick up a few extra Karn, Silver Golems or Serra Avatars. Thanks to the many Internet strategy resources, people wise up to the quality of new cards quickly. In a couple of weeks, some of those rares might not be so valuable. You're probably asking yourself, "Then won't I have any new rares?" Not yet, but you will.

HERE'S THE RISKY PART

Choose which rares you believe are going to be hot and trade for them. The more you diversify your selection, the less risky—and potentially profitable—it'll be. It's up to you to determine whether you want to focus on a few cards, or dabble in a dozen or so different rares. Sometimes you'll get burned—it happened to me with Second Chance. More often, though, I trade for a hot card at a fraction of its eventual cost. I was able to pick up Cursed Scrolls at $3–5 during the first two weeks of the Tempest set's release.

KEEP IT STANDARD

Watch out for sets leaving the Standard tournament environment. The Urza's Destiny set, the final expansion of the Urza block, is in. It's a good time to start trading away Rath Cycle rares. When the next block begins, starting with the Mercadian Masques expansion, Rath Cycle values will begin to drop. Even popular singles like Mox Diamond will probably decrease in value.

SAGE ADVICE

If you build an interesting deck based on some of the new cards, other players will often trade for those cards if you manage to make a good showing. Whether you're trying to build up your collection or just build a deck, use these trading tips as a rule of thumb. They're your cards, so don't let anyone tell you how to trade them. Avoid impulsive trades, and hopefully you'll see a steady increase in the value of your collection.

The Fine Print—The prices listed are based on the experience of the authors and a select group of nationwide consultants. They are presented as a guide for information purposes only. No one is obligated in any way to buy, sell, or trade according to the prices. Condition, rarity, demand, and the reader's desire to own determine the actual price paid. No offer to buy or sell at the prices listed is intended or made. Buying and selling is conducted at the reader's risk. Neither the authors nor the publisher assume any liability for any losses suffered for use of, or any typographic errors contained in, this guide. All value estimates are presented in U.S. dollars.

Meet the Contributors

On this page you'll find the names of all the retailers who've contributed their price lists. Without their help, we wouldn't have any prices. Part of their reward can be seen throughout the DPI, in the form of "Shop Talk." Every month Shop Talk will feature eight contributors, one from each region, voicing their opinions about a variety of topics. If you see a store in your area that you didn't know about, give them a call. They could be closer than you think.

Our "financial consultants" are some of the most skilled traders in the United States. Bill Macey, Dan Bock, Randall Newell, and Alex Shvartsman will be keeping us up to date on what Magic cards are being traded and which ones are just collecting dust.

CENTRAL

Nobody around here really talks about Prereleases or attends them because they are held too far away. Most of our customers play casually and do not travel to tournaments.

I usually open some product—not too much—and I sell out most of it in a couple of weeks. I open the boxes when they come out, sit down, and figure out how much each card will be worth.

For some reason the black cards come to mind. For example, Eastern and Western Paladins are among the cards that were wanted at the beginning but the interest quickly died out.

Prereleases are pretty popular here. We had 15 people, give or take, from this store attend the most recent one.

I usually open one or two boxes of the new shipment to fill up the singles binder. After that we buy and trade from the customers the cards that seem to sell.

I can't think of any cards that really bombed out in Urza block. There are a few that have been popular from the time they came out, but they remain popular today.

Our players are very enthusiastic about Prereleases. They like getting new cards and foils. We have to travel to Salt Lake City, which is a six-hour drive, yet a dozen people from our store showed up at the Urza's Destiny Prerelease.

During the first week of the new set, I open one or two boxes, just to see the cards and let the customers see them. After that, I trade for or buy the cards I can sell from the customers along the way.

Nothing really comes to mind. The Urza block has been very consistent. Cards like Time Spiral and Stroke of Genius took a hit when Tolarian Academy got banned, but no card really lost value because it wasn't as good as expected.
