

HERE WE ARE AGAIN!
NEWSBETTER Vol 7.

Better Zoan Update:

Last issue, I was sucked into an unknown demension known as the BETTER ZOAN! This issue, I am still there, along with all of my readers and faithful fruitcake followers who can not find a good use for the said item. In this realm of paper, the issue is what the issue was and what the issue should be so long as it could be what I say it might be. Once again, I must give my fatefull warning about this NewsBetter due to rightists and leftist and ambidexterousists who feel the urge to put into full effect the laws that can be and will be and ought not be twisted to twist their income to higher levels so that those who have lowere incomes will be even lowere until the high is high and the low is low, no?

Question And Answer:

Q: I love your NewsBetter, man, but what happens when a penguin, accompanied by his buddy, runs around an iceberg yelling RADIO RADIO!

A: Everyone around you starts laughing!!!(snicker)

Q: You NewThinger is great! Keep up the good work! Here's my prob. I wanted more speed out of my computer, so I plugged it into a 220v outlet, (twice the norm) but it started smoking then burned down! WHY???

A: Here at MRW Programs Anonymous, we researched your question for a long time before we finally found what we think is the problem. Actually, we came up with two possible reasons.

1. A 220 volt current is produced by running two 110 volt circuits to the same plug in parallel. If the electrician accidentally hooked a positive (+) and a negative (-) to the same side, it would produce some very wacky results and even a time continuum breakdown at the most. Have a licensed electrician double check the circuitry.

2. You simply plugged the computer in backwards.

Current News Updates:

What's been going on since Christmas? Well, quite a lot! New Year's Eve and New Year's day brought quite a few surprises. On New Year's Eve, "The Youth" got together at six-one and threw quite a party. Gary kept himself entertained by blasting music while the rest of us tried to watch a movie. The New Year was about to roll around, so we plowed upstairs just in time for Richard to call us. We conversed with him via speaker phone as we prayed the New Year in. After that, we all just kinda hung out as the cows ran about!

New Year's Morning brought Roy Acheson as the bearer of bad news.

Later that week, Walter decided that it was just more than a bad case of gas as he sat in his tub of warm water. So, off he went, making the hospital circuit until he ended up in St. Anthony's awaiting a "tonsillectomy via his rectum. (Trent Lambert)" All I have to say is that Walt is very grumpy after surgery! I would be too if 60 million people were in my room 24 hours an hour. After Gakking out and talking to a parrot talking to a parrot, then hand cuffing the Nurse to his bed, Walt begged and pleaded the nurse to let him out. But they said he would have to wait one more day! With that, we split, leaving Walter in an empty room with his mother.

Saturday and Sunday we just kinda' slid around hear and thear on little patches of snow. From my point of view, all had a good time! (Boys in the Hood!) However, the snow was way too light and fluffy to do much good. But hey, when going down a cliff, "snow is optional."

Poetry Department of Revecanoes

With the bright snow that flies so white,
 Comes a loud whisper in the night.
 "Tonight is the night", it laughs
 Then runs away like a heard of giraffes.
 With a knock at my door,
 I wonder what on Earth
 Are these people here for.

The drifts gather in height,
 All small mountains made of white.
 The sun has drowned out the night,
 But I feel better, even though so slight.
 Til I remember the knock at my door,
 sounding louder than before.
 I look out the window and what do I see?
 Someone lost in this white sea,
 Staring back at me.
 I see one, then two
 Sitting in their department canoe.
 A member of MAC Revenue,
 Eating Elmer's Glue.

I close my eyes and wake from my sleep.

January is a special time of the year. a time for which we celebrate a new year. But what does it mean to celebrate a new year. Let's look at it in physical terms. As we are taught in school, the sun is the center of our universe. A big ball of burning nuclear fission in which we revolve around and around and make one revolution per year. We have been going around this ball of gas for millions of revolutions or millions of years. So in the physical sence, we are celebrating the fact that we have not gone off course, detouring from our orbit around the life giving sphere.

In the theological sense, it is a time when the past is erased and we are given a new future. A future to get it right and do what we should, or mess up again. One proverb says we are given twelve new sheets of paper to draw on what we like, make it pretty or at least valuable. How many of us actually do this? It seems that most of us fail at both. Oh sure, we have our moments of valuables and of pretties, but only moments at best.

Then there is the spiritual sense. The new year falls shortly after we celebrate the coming of the Christ child. He is our new life. The one who can erase the scribbles on our life and turn us into a beautiful masterpiece. With the New Year doing the same, it only makes sense to celebrate them so closely together, don't you think?

Finally, We have what New Years means to us. To me, it's a time to look back and view what mistakes and progressions I have made. I want to learn from these to improve my life before me. As they say, history repeats itself. History for me is my life. Learning from myself is the best way to go at it. I get all sorts of advice from my friends, but I only actually learn it from real situations. I can listen to my friends advice, but it sinks in much faster when I apply it. So do just that in this New Year. Instead of just doing it, just apply it.

Saying of The Week

To see things in the seed,
that is genius.
