NewsBetter Vol. 8

Now matter how you smell it, it still stinks!
(Wait a second...?)

I am here once again with my wittful charm and punning cunchlines, not to mention my grate sence of humour that I am so gracefully sharing with all those poor unfortunate souls whom read my elegantly assembled NewsBetter! (Why does everyone aske my if I lived under powerlines when I was growing up?) SEW, on with my production! All in front of my fear not! Watch wear I tread and bee gone with thy fortunes! (Wait a second...! Oh, well!) And so, the story continues onward to yet another issue which reminds me! It's time for...

Question and Answeres:

Q. I've been using my computer for a week now, and the build up on the screen is ridiculuos. The instructions say I need to "reboot" my computer when this happens, but I just can't figure out how it works. The name of my computer is Scribbler 2000. I got it at a very reasonable price from my sister's kid. Could you please tell me how to reboot it!!!!?

A. Here at MRW Programs Anonymous, we think we have found the answer. With a little bit of research and re-researching, we were finally able to pinpoint the problem with your computer. The Scribbler 2000 is a fun toy...er... machine that is very simple to operate once you figure out how. Shaking the computer vigoruosly for a few seconds will produce the desired result of a reboot! Also a unique, stress relief feature.

Q. Everytime I eat food at my computer, the keyboard disappears under this greasy film of goo, then my machine starts beeping wildly! Is it eating my food?

You see all this space down here! It's because people don't send me anything to write!!!
-Editors Note

Oh, yeah! Nearly forgot the A.

Here at MRE Programs Anonymous, we researched and re-researched, but the answer was actually right in front of us all along! We must feed our hard working computers at least once a week. But beware, if your computer doesn't work very hard, over feeding will cause it to become lazy, and it simply won't work for you!

Current News Updates:

Do to complete and utter boredom, (right!) Walter Acheson, Sean (Shawn?) Somebody, and Chief Editor at MRW Programs Anonymous, went for a little ski TRIP to sKeystone, (get it, Skey stone!) Anyways! After many hours of driving, MRW himself brought the group safely to Keystone Resort at 2:30 in the morning. We could have been there faster had Kari known where he was going. (Kari lead the caravan from Dillon on.) (However, Kari is very adamant that it was his mom's fault due to poor directions) After banging on many doors, (okay, one!), and taking a couple wrong stairs, the Quadro found the room that Donna Malsom and Sara(h?) (a friend) were staying in. With a couple hours of sleep, the Sixo headed to the slopes! (after a delicious breakfast made by Sara(h?) and Donna.) After teaching the newcomers how to ski, the sixo hit the "big" slopes. (much to Walter's delight). However, Walter soon became bored and wanted to go on the dreaded BLUES! Afterward, he both looked and felt very blue! (glad he didn't go on a black!) (uhuhuh... why?) That night, three of the six retired to the hottub and pool to soak their weary bodies. Sometime the next morning, all members of the party tore out for Kansas. (well, Kari went to Boulder, but you know!)

Poetry and Other things like that!

I sat down one night,
 To view TV alright.
 But instead fell asleep.
 A sleep so deep!
 I was suddenly transformed,
 And now shorter than beformed.
 I tried standing up,
 To get a drink from my cup,
 But to no result,
 I would have to catapult!
 Looking around,
 I noticed I was lying on the ground.
 I looked at my hand,
 But was greeted by the sand.
 If only I could see what I be,
 I might reverse this spell on me.
 A curse to the end,
 Too late, a shoe turned me into a sticky goo!

Once again, the Love Day of the year is here. But, ironically, if shortened like Americans do for most holidays, it becomes V-day. Is this by co-winky-dink or maybe some little joke God played on us? Actually, in a wierd sort of way, V-day kinda sorta makes sense. .. I think. First, let's look at what V-day stands for.

Now, unless I'm 'total tote hose' (Toe tal toe ta hoes a) or completely moronic, I believe V-day stands for VICTORY day! The end of war. The end of suffering. Peace! I guess that's really what Valentines Day is all about. A time to "love one another", forget all the things that nag at each other and just be friends for a day. Maybe if you're friends for a day, you could be friends for life, no matter what! Well, it seems that I have actually covered both by covering V-day. Of course V-day is a peaceful day! Then again, so is V-day! But why do we have Valentines? Well, I consulted the archives of my CD-ROM and found this little tid bit of info.

"The name Saint Valentine is given to two legendary Christian martyrs whose feasts were formerly observed on February 14. One, believed to be a Roman Priest martyred c.269 during the persecution of Claudius the Goth, was buried on the Flaminian Way; The second was probably a Bishop of Terni, martyred in Rome. It is possible that these two legends were based on real people, or , as some believe, one person. The association of Saint Valentine's Day with love and courtship may have arisen from the coincidence of the date with the Roman festival of LUPERCALIA. In 1969 the feast day was dropped from the Roman church calendar."

(Grolier 95)

Okay, so what! We have two people that supposedly died for some cause that actually means very little to most of us today. And, by coincidence, there used to be a great feast on that day, but no longer is, but that's what gave us our Love theme! I understand completely! Oh, well. At least it is a time to make a friend and not an enemy.

Saying of the Week

Those of us who refuse to risk and grow, get swallowed up by life.
