

Public Relations Officer

Shashank V. Parulekar

A Public Relations Officer is necessary in every department that needs to maintain its relations with the public. Whether there is such a need or not, there are often officers who maintain good relations with the public for whatever reasons.

The Public Relations Officer begins charity at home. He arrives late and asks the Boss how everything is that day.

The Public Relations Officer has absolute self control. He listens peacefully to the Boss shouting at him, agrees with everything the Boss says, and continues to do what he wants to do.

The Public Relations Officer is a master magician. His best trick is the disappearing trick. He can disappear from the department without anyone realizing that he has disappeared.

The Public Relations Officer can do almost everything. The only thing he cannot do is to be found in his chair during working hours.

The Public Relations Officer is very popular in public. People keep going to the department to see him all day. The funny thing is that they keep asking the Boss where he is.

The Public Relations Officer is highly influential. He claims that everyone visiting the department does so only because of him, including the Boss' husband.

The Public Relations Officer has many extracurricular activities. His main activities are extracurricular, like amateur naturopathy for public.