Martha Stewart Becomes Prisoner of the State

Martha Stewart reported to the Federal detention facility in Alderson, West Virginia on Friday October 8th. Her early surrender to authorities (she still has several viable appeals pending), indicates a commitment to putting MSLO back in the black in 2005.

Since persecution of Stewart by right-wing puppet Federal agents began in 2002, stock in what was once one of the most brilliantly omnipotent enterprises since the glory days of the Gettys and the Hearsts, has plummeted.

Led by cookbook author, colon cancer survivor and Congressional Representative Billy Tauzin (LA-3), the witch-hunt against Stewart continued even after Federal prosecutors had cleared her of all charges related to actual wrong-doing in the IMClone Scandal.

Stewart supporters worldwide lamented the imprisonment of the domestic doyenne, widely acknowledged as the business world's own Albert Einstein.

"To lose such an amazing national resource, even for 5 months, to petty political agendas is a horrible waste and a terrible tragedy," stated avowed follower and Stewart peer Oprah Winfrey. "It's just another example of The Man keeping a strong sister down."

While it is unlikely that fans will be able to visit Stewart in prison, it may be possible to catch a glimpse of her in the open spaces surrounding the minimum security facility (see following story). Supporters are encouraged to visit and write to Stewart during her imprisonment.

In a press statement, Alexis Stewart, prodigal daughter, told loyal followers: "My mother will put on a strong front. But inside she's hurting. She will cherish each and every letter and homemade craft she receives. Your love and support will help sustain her and our family during this dark hour." She also noted, "Sam Waksal and Doug Faneuil are goat fuckers."

Martha and "Camp Cupcake" Inadequate Staffing Puts Stewart in Jeopardy

Founded in 1927 and nicknamed "Camp Cupcake," Alderson Federal Prison is the nation's oldest federal prison for women.

It has housed both famous and infamous prisoners, including jazz singer Billie Holiday, who worked in the prison's now-closed garment factory while serving time for drug possession, World War II propagandist Iva "Tokyo Rose" D'Aquino and Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme and Sara Jane Moore.

It was converted to a minimum-security prison camp in 1988, and now houses about 1,040 women, primarily drug offenders and women convicted of white-collar offenses such as fraud.

The prison's religious, educational and work programs have a good reputation with defense lawyers, but the union that represents the prison guards has complained in recent days that staffing cuts that have reduced the complement of guards to 44 - down from around 60 in the early 1990s -- will make it difficult to protect Stewart.

Bureau of Prisons officials say staffing is "adequate."

Alderson Prison inmates - including Stewart - must follow a strict work regimen, rising at 6:00am daily to begin assigned tasks, which may include garment sewing, sanitation services, grounds maintenance, and food preparation.

Stewart will be allowed to take the following items with her to the prison: one pair of moderately-priced earrings; her social security card; a small amount of cash; and one religious item.

ANTI-CHOICE CORNER

Today we follow the stream of consciousness ramblings of ex-cop and perennial "Pro-Life" candidate Mike Reynolds. On the theft of Bush signs from his Tarrytown, NY, yard: "It's the antithesis of what democracy is all about. It's not Tarrytown, it's (expletive) Fallujah. Use that. That's a good quote I just gave you." Reynolds "can't understand the relentless Bush bashing." Reynolds: "I mean, he's not Nixon. Nixon was hateable, you know? You just look at him, and he's one of those guys you wanna hit." But Reynolds "freely admits" he isn't voting for Bush. Reynolds, on his wife: "Yeah, I'm writing in Carol Reynolds for president. Well, it's only because voting for myself would be over the top." Reynolds "has run for office 10 times, almost exclusively" as a Right to Life candidate. "I've just about run in every party in New York except the Democratic and Marijuana parties." He's run for NY GOV, Congress and for the Legislature, "and he's running again this year" for the state Senate. As for the person who's taking his signs, he says: "You hope he's driving a big SUV with a Kerry sticker and that he works for Morgan Stanley. It would be great to catch one of those Yuppie swine, with a big (expletive) golden retriever in the back seat and bring him and (expletive) Bowser down to the station." He adds: "But you know, life is not that good to you. It's like I'm not going to get that date with Sigourney Weaver, either" (Westchester Journal News, 10/12).

A Redeemed Mindset: inspiring selections from Christian Radio Ministries

Leslie Basham: This is Revive Our Hearts with Nancy Leigh DeMoss. Today's program isn't appropriate for young children, and you might want to protect the little ears in your home. We'll discuss a topic that might make some people uncomfortable, yet it's important and it's biblical. Here's Nancy to get us started:

Nancy Leigh DeMoss: Our desire, through the ministry of Revive Our Hearts, is to minister to women in practical areas of their relationship with the Lord and others. One of the very important areas that God's Word addresses is a woman's physical relationship with her husband. The Lord has given us a gift this week of two guests, who are going to help us from a standpoint of biblical understanding and also from their experience as married women, to know what the Scripture has to say about the practical area of a woman's intimacy, physically, with her husband. Linda Dillow is with us this week. She's been a guest on Revive Our Hearts in the past. And she's co-authored with Lorraine Pintus a book called Intimate Issues: 21 Questions that Christian Women Ask About Sex.

Linda Dillow: I'm so happy to be here.

Nancy Leigh DeMoss: And joining us also is my friend, Holly Elliff. She ministers regularly to women in her church and in our community. I've asked Holly to join us because, particularly as I am a single woman, I felt it would be helpful for us to have two married women addressing this subject, which relates specifically to married women. Linda, as you've helped women talk through and work through some of these intimate issues, sexual issues, in their marriage, what part does the mind, the thinking, play in this whole issue?

Linda Dillow: Oh, it's huge, Nancy. It's huge. And the problem is that our minds are filled with the world's perspective because the world blares at us from every venue. I'm just so grateful that God spoke so freely and so specifically in the Scriptures about the sexual relationship in marriage. He says in Ephesians 5:31 and 32 that the intimacy in the physical relationship between a husband and wife is to picture the spiritual intimacy between the Lord Jesus and each believer.

Holly Elliff: Most of the time when we think about our physical relationship with our husbands that we see that as a biblical issue, as something that brings joy to our Father, when we respond in the right way. Linda, you refer in your book to "pulling up weeds" and getting rid of wrong thinking in this area. What are some issues that you think women deal with in their mind-set toward the sexual area that need to be addressed?

Linda Dillow: Well, as a woman sees her mind-set, Holly, and as she sees, "Oh my goodness. It's just distorted," she needs to go before the Lord humbly in prayer and just say, "God, I want You to uproot these weeds. Like a gardener, dig out this wrong thinking that, even in marriage, my sexual relationship isn't right. It's not pure. God isn't really interested in this area of my life." Those thoughts just have to be uprooted. First, we just need to lay this at the feet of the Lord and ask Him to, in a mighty way, come in and renew your mind and your heart.

Holly Elliff: So after we uproot the wrong ways of thinking, get those cleared out, then new seeds, new thoughts need to be planted in their place.

Linda Dillow: Absolutely, because we don't just want a barren field with nothing. I often ask women, "How many scriptures do you have memorized about your sexual relationship with your husband?" I hear lots of gulps. So I encourage women, as they're thinking of planting the seeds of God's Word, to plant Song of Solomon 5:16, "His mouth is full of sweetness, and he is wholly desirable. This is my beloved, and this is my friend." What a combination. This is what God wants. Song of Solomon 7:10 says, "I am my beloved's, and his desire is for me."

Holly Elliff: It allows us to respond to our husbands, even sometimes when we don't have a natural, emotion-driven desire to respond to our husbands. It brings healing and restoration. Nancy Leigh DeMoss: So we want to say to married women, obviously, but also to single women: make sure you're getting your input, your viewpoint, your perspective, from the Word of God, that you're reading the Word, studying it, memorizing it, meditating on it, personalizing it, obeying it, internalizing it, getting it in-grafted into your spirit. Married or single, young or old—sexual issues and every other issue of our lives—we need to go back to the Scripture and say, "Lord, shape my thinking. Shape my perspective. Help me to think Your thoughts, to know Your ways." And we do that as we fill our minds and our hearts with the Word of God.

K Phipps Proud, Frustrated Owner of Hot New Car

At time of printing, not all details for this story were available to the Happy Hour editorial staff. This is breaking news.

We understand that our friend K Phipps is in possession of a sporty little new-to-her car. We also understand there have been troubles with said car.

The Happy Hour has had numerous dealings with those who hate contented car-owners and all we represent. As such, we offer our considerable harassment skills to K Phipps in dealing with those who oppress her and her happily motoring ways.

For instance, we would be glad to spearhead a letter writing campaign. We are well-versed in the "crazy-letter" genre (a crazy letter is seen at sidebar). And some staff members have taken up a bizarre obsession with the ransom-note style of correspondence.

Or, perhaps a "zap-action" on a Saturday outside the dealership. Simply let us know what next step you'd like to take.

Re: Donation for WTOP Auction??

Hi Randy –
I might be willing to donate a pair of beanie babies that I bought on ebay from their charity website. They are Not a donkey and an elephant, but other little animals. One is signed by George W Bush and the other by Senator Kerry. There is no certificate of authenticity, but they came from a very reputable seller ("Points of Light"). Do you think they would do well at the WTOP auction? If you think they're special, could you highlight them? If so, how would I go about donating? (They would be an anonymous donation).

An Open Letter from Senator John F. Kerry to Armenstock Attendees

August 28th 2004

I am sorry that I can't join you today at Armenstock, and I want to thank all of you - the organizers of Armenstock, Armenians for Kerry and the Armenian National Committee of America - for bringing so many Armenians Americans together today to help move America forward.

I have been honored to represent tens of thousands of Armenian Americans as a Massachusetts Senator. And I look forward to representing hundreds of thousands of Armenian Americans as the next President of the United States.

It has been my privilege, over the past two decades, to work with the Armenian community on important issues including U.S. recognition of the Armenian Genocide, strengthening U.S.-Armenia relations and trade, lifting the devastating blockades of Armenia and working for a fair and lasting peace in Nagorno Karabagh.

I am honored to have the endorsement of the ANCA. By bringing together Armenian Americans from several states in the Northeast, Armenstock is generating enthusiasm and inspiring political involvement, especially among young Armenian Americans. I appreciate your work to encourage Armenian Americans around the country to go to the polls in record numbers for the Kerry-Edwards ticket on November 2nd.

I want to assure you that, as President, I will continue to fight against the denial of the Armenian Genocide. My administration will recognize April 24, 2005 as the 90th Anniversary of this atrocity and will work to ensure that the lessons of this crime against humanity are used to prevent future genocides. There can be no compromise on the clear moral imperative to end genocide.

Please accept my appreciation for all that you are doing for our campaign, for our communities, and for our great nation.

Tell the Monsters, Ghosts, and Vampires to "Go Vegetarian" This Halloween!

This Halloween, remind trick-or-treaters that nothing is scarier than a factory farm. Visit www.goveg.com for a list of delicious, animal-friendly candies available at most grocery stores. These candies are all gelatin-free—no hooves, tendons, ligaments, or other unsavory animal parts are included. PETA offers a great kid-oriented leaflet that will be a perfect complement to your animal-free treats. It explains that pigs, chickens, and cows are friends, not food and directs kids to vegkids.com. To request leaflets, please e-mail us. In your e-mail message, be sure to include your address and the number of trick-or-treaters you expect to come knocking this year so we will know how many leaflets to send.

If you plan to go trick-or-treating on October 31, give your neighbors both a scare and some important information about helping animals! Click on the e-mail link above and let us know how many houses you plan to visit this Halloween, and we will send you plenty of our "Think Before You Eat" leaflets to give out wherever you go. With your help, this Halloween we can make the lives of animals a little less frightening!

Kerry Edwards

A STRONGER AMERICA

The Happy Hour Election 2004 Special Coverage

POINT / COUNTERPOINT: I SHOULD BE PRESIDENT

JOHN F. KERRY

GEORGE W. BUSH

Leading the greatest nation in the world is an honor the American people should not bestow without great deliberation and serious reflection. Our grand tradition of Democracy and the glory of its founding are responsibilities we carry heavily and joyfully toward the future. Freedom, responsibility, and hard work are values we hold dear - as are fairness and compassion. I believe that as President I will reflect these values - not just for our citizens, but for the people of the world. Today in our great nation people are working harder for less than they've ever earned. Our elderly are without the care and compassion they've long ago earned. Our children and schools are under-funded and abandoned. It's time to restore America to the promise of the shining city on the hill - a messenger of hope and optimism to all freedom loving peoples. Together with your commitment and support, I can make America stronger at home and respected throughout the world. Together we can fly on the wings of freedom and hope to a brighter tomorrow for all.

America kicks ass. As a country, we are the best. There are people who hate us and our glorious freedom. I hate them. I was talking to Jesus the other day, and he told me I should be President. I am a man of faith, and so are Americans. Who would argue with Jesus? So America kicks ass, and if you don't agree with that, then get out. If you do agree with that, you should vote for me—a God-fearing patriot, to be your President. I wrote this without help from Dick or Dad.

Karl Rove demonstrates where the Bush administration has led America.
