

What is a Girl Scout Volunteer?

A Girl Scout volunteer is someone who:

- Used to have a little time to spare.
- Saw something that needed to be done, and couldn't persuade her conscience to let someone else do it.
- Wages a constant battle to keep her Girl Scout Stuff confined to one corner, then one room. then one house.
- Cheerfully endures inroads on her own pleasure and convenience because she is beckoned by a goal that overshadows them.
- Is young at heart because youth comes, not from a fountain, but from exposure to those who have it.
- Gives to fill inner needs, be it with hamburgers, hugs or encouragement.
- Has a pet conservation project that is our young people, because she considers them to be our greatest natural resource.
- Sees the beauty in the budding personality of a child and wants to preserve and enhance that beauty as it comes to full bloom.
- Is willing to give of her time, patience, and herself to leave the world better than she found it.
- Is the living fulfillment of the phrase "...to help where I am needed."
