

The Life Is In The Blood

Morris Bradley

The Bible tells us the “the life is in the Blood” and that the blood is holy and sanctified, and there were strict rules laid down on the use of blood both animal and human. Because of these laws the Jehovah’s Witness group preach that blood transfusion is wrong and against the law of God. On the other hand medical science uses human blood for a variety of things and passes it on at times from one human to another via transfusions, and often has unwittingly passed on Hepatitis and of late, AIDS. One must ask, what else in there that could be transmitted from one human to another through blood that science has yet to discover. Is this religious law about the sanctity of blood correct? Should we use it?

Science states that there is a whole system of genetic coding programmes incorporated in human blood, similar to the way a computer tape is made up. This information is only pertinent to the person whom the blood comes from. and this master tape in the blood is responsible for triggering off response and changing biological patterns and structures within the human body as one ages. Such biological changes occur at different intervals in ones life such as puberty or menopause and the similar functions.

Now the next question is, does this chemical coding remain in the blood after it has been passed from one person to another and could this foreign type of information not compute with the recipients blood and give false information triggering off unnatural biological changes, that would normally not take place if that person’s blood was undiluted by that of another? What other forms of pollution is going on during these blood transfers? As well as physical characteristics that could be altered, what about moral attitudes, could these be affected also, for after all, science now tells us that intelligence and learning is partly chemical, and soon they may be able to inject learning into people. (Perish the thought.)

Medical researchers say that once a person receives blood from another it is all absorbed into the one system after six to eight weeks for they claim that in every person the blood is completely replaced about six times yearly. Maybe the physical structure of the blood is refreshed and replenished, but the chemical coding system remains the same as what it was when one was born, for this is what the “law of i” is all about, and as science is moving more into the experimentation of “genetic engineering” much new information and theories are being collated and studied, The Russians found out during some of their own Cancer Research programmes that this coding system can exist up to ten years after the blood donor has passed away even when the blood has been artificially stored and stimulated. Humans are born with biological inclinations called Miasms which we have inherited from our ancestors and these are passed down through the “coding system”. Some have a Cancer Miasm, showing a tendency towards developing that complaint, while others have a Tuberculosis Miasm, or a Syphilitic Miasm, or Arthritis Miasm and so on. When one has these inherent weaknesses it means that they are more prone to that type of illness or disease than others, and this is due in part to the fact that many of our ancestors “tainted their flesh” and as the Bible says these things can be passed down to the second and third generations, but I personally believe it can go further down the scale than that.

All blood forms and carries the characteristic genes that determine our physical being and its growth and health, and most people know by now what happens to humans or animals when mutations occur, which may be due to toxins absorbed, or from radiation and fallout, and what about some other person’s blood?

At Radionic Research Associates we use Dowsing and other electronic equipment to “divine” illness and other body malfunctions. From a spot only it is possible to determine what ails the person concerned using this method. We also find that we can test whether a person has had a blood transfusion during their lifetime from the code of the other person’s blood that still remains in the patient’s system. We believe that it is the foreign coding system of another’s blood that we pick up during these tests and even when we have a blood spot that is several years old, we can still use it for dowsing purposes to determine the current health conditions. So the life is in the blood even after it leaves the body, as the body gets healthier or sicker, the radiations seem to be transmitted out to that little spot of blood as long as the donor is still alive, and no matter where they are living at that time in this World.

Our own private research indicated that by taking in the blood of another person could allow one to inherit a Miasm that could affect the genetic coding, and at a later date trigger off a disease or illness that the recipient may never have had without that transfusion. It is possible that though the donor of the blood was very healthy when parting with his own vital fluid, that if he say contracted or developed Cancer in a later stage of his life, then his donated blood which was in another persons body could alter by its nature and allow the recipient to develop Cancer as will. "Seeds of serious illness could be passed, one to another through the genetic code and detrimentally affect the other person and maybe their future offspring as well.

Perhaps the Jehovah's Witnesses have been inspired by the Holy Spirit to bring this warning to Man through their teachings and there could be a sound scientific reason for this "blood Taboo," that science has not as yet discovered. After all over the centuries many types of Drugs and treatments have been used to save the life of Man, and some have worked, but there are those that have produced serious side effects with their usage and all sorts of deformities amongst children at birth. Maybe blood is especially sacred to each individual and should not be interchanged, however if there is no other way at the time to sustain a life without the ingestion of another's blood, than the recipient should be made aware of all the possible consequences of the action. and science should speed up the research in this area in order to find out all the facts and look for other alternatives, It is obvious that the particular type of "matter" that goes to make up human tissue has already been tainted by our forebears so we should try to avoid any further corruption of these physical building blocks and with God as a guide to our scientists and others we may be able to purify the body and walk once again in perfect health and glory as God meant us to be at the initial Creation.
