

Contraception – Does it inhibit soul development?

Morris Bradley

During its many stages of progression and development Man's Soul will traverse the Universe and incarnate in other Star systems in order to gain the maximum of experience of various humanoid life forms, and not all souls start their first incarnation on the planet Earth according to the "Spirit Guides." The process of Soul learning is likened to the human child who can spend a lifetime growing up and attending many different types of learning institutions, For example, at the age of five years old, the child will embark on primary school, or junior preparatory classes where the first processes of reading and writing commence. The child will move into the higher grades, then to intermediate schooling, then to College and finally to University where it is hoped the child now a young person will graduate.

Many Souls start this journey on Earth and move away through their lives to other dimensions and then may return to this planet for their final graduation (Soul completion) before moving on to a higher order, while others start their first "physical breath" in other universal climes and may incarnate on this Earth for certain experiences and then move off unto their own places of origin to graduate. "In my house are many mansions sayeth the Lord", and the soul will visit these "heavenly premises" as required for its spiritual illumination.

As a planet in one particular Star system becomes more evolved technologically and more populated then many more things can be experienced, so more Souls will wish to incarnate on that particular Planet therefore the population will increase over the centuries as the souls "climb up" the development scale. Souls are only born into the physical World through the sexual act performed by Men and Women and apart from humans enjoying this act its prime purpose given to us by God our Supreme Creator, was to "be fruitful and multiply, and propagate the Earth," says the "good book. Now we cannot fulfill that commandment by being celibate or by practising contraception, for by doing this we are preventing other souls from "taking upon the flesh." that God given gift that aids Man's soul growth, and thereby inhibiting their opportunities to move up the Spiritual Evolutionary Scale.

What are the alternatives, one will ask do we allow over—population that brings crime, squalor, famines, etc., or do we practice self control instead of birth control. In the initial stages of Man's physical growth and development, passions in the main, override reason, for God created the animal part of Man with a strong instinct to survive and perpetrate the species, and hoped that with age, the “passion~~ would cool, and that Man would see other requisites for an ideal existence such as Law, Social order and other humanitarian principles, that would aid Nan to survive in a more intelligent type of environment. It was also hoped that with each incarnation Man would genetically hold onto the lessons learned in his eternal consciousness and this would inevitably lift him from the realms of the primitive animal to an intelligent God-like being. If reason prevailed amongst Mankind, and all of the Worlds’ resources were shared equally then there would not be famines and squalor etc., for there is adequate land mass for people to live on and even the most barren and arid places could be made liveable if just a fraction of the resources that are wasted on Wars and other vainglorious and selfish ventures, were utilised with discrimination.

God does not let people starve, or suffer, it is people who let other people starve. While one section of the World is dying from famine another section has that much food, that it is being dumped just to keep up the market prices to line the pockets of the “money Barons.”

The next issue is the one that covers abortions, many excuses are used for this action, but one must remember again, that to stop a life in the foetal stage is to inhibit a soul from entering into this World, and it is worse than that, for that Soul has chosen its parents while still in “spirit.” What if early diagnosis of the foetus show some deformity, should not the child be aborted for humanitarian reasons? Just think of the suffering that some mentally and physically handicapped children go through is the statement that is often made. Death, they say in these circumstances would be a blessing. For the answer to this question it is best first to look at some of the reasons for such hapless and sad births, Once again deformities are not God’s plan but Man’s fault and only Man by enlightenment is able to find the answers.

Take for example a loving spirit decided to be born so that other members of their spirit family, already on Earth could gain from that bad experience and eventually be brought unto God because of the suffering of some other loved one, Yes this does happen. Jesus died and suffered for us and many other beings born into this physical World of ours do so by choice as a form of sacrifice so that some other soul whom they love, can be given an opportunity to “return to the light of God” during that particular incarnation. Many things that one does in this life can affect the second and third generation says the Bible, so our selfish acts, upon ourselves and others can be reflected in future generations. Surely such things flash on and off like a neon sign warning us that all is not well. God created us perfect and if we follow God’s laws from life to life then all people will be born in a perfect state, and there will be no need to abort a foetus and no need for people to starve or die of thirst, because through understanding the Love of God, all the needs of Mankind will be met first and when people are happier on the physical level, they will be able to seek their God and Creator on the spiritual level and the “voice of God” will rule all Men and the animal passions will be relegated to the levels to which God designed them for. Physical creation through pure sex is a divine gift from God, this is why the act of Homosexuality is not only a mortal sin, but an abnormal act only possible through the “fall of mankind into sinful ways and an obscene act that demeans God and denigrates all souls in their efforts to “sit at the right hand of God.”

Considering all of this could one conclude that the married couples in this life who sorely desired to have children of their own may have been karmically denied this “gift from God” because they inhibited a Soul from entering into this world in one of their previous existences? Is it also possible that one may suffer some birth deformity, or have such suffering in their own family because they “visited this problem on someone else” in another life? Is it reasonable that we in turn should suffer the same as that which we do unto others at some stage of our development? “An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth” could be the law of Karma. So think about it now.
