

ENERGY TRANSFERENCE

Morris Bradley 1991

Transference of etheric and physical energy happens from one person to another. Scientific tests we conducted show how valuable this can be and how it can have an element of danger attached to it. At some time in most people's life they have had the experience where they have gone to a meeting, a movie theatre, to a concert or a church and have sat beside another person and have come away feeling either depleted and very depressed or conversely very energetic. This is called Vampirism.

This means that it is possible to draw the energy from another person or to replenish their own energy. This is a natural function and follows the Laws of Physics. It could be said that this is trans-conductance or is transference of one type of energy from one cell unit to another. All human beings are made of trillions of little cells that are like little batteries and they have a positive and a negative phase in them. They develop a charge from one cell to another. This is what constitutes the bio-electrical field of all living tissue. This can also be measured by very finely tuned electronic equipment and meters. It can also be seen psychically by people who are gifted in seeing auras, which is the radiation field.

On diagrams of a magnet with the north and south poles these show curves and circles going away from each pole. The same thing happens to human beings and animals and such. They have this radiation that exudes from them with different colours representing different energy levels and contra-rotating energies. This is what people refer to when they say, 'I can see your aura.' Some people use what they call Aura Diagnosis. They can look at a person's aura and they can tell by the colours and the whirls and the way the aura is moving that there is sickness prevalent in that person's or an animal's body. They can even define what the sickness is, which part of the body it is in also. Some can even define what the sickness is and in which organ.

The phenomenon whereby when you are sitting next to someone in a room and you feel either depleted or refreshed, it just means that there is a transference of energy following the normal Laws of Physics from that being into you. You may be negatively polarised and the person next door to you may be positively polarised, full of energy radiating out through the auric field, and as your aura and that of the other person coalesce, the energy is transferred from the positive person to you. This can increase your energy levels and if it is very strong, it can bring you back into a state of positive polarity. If you've got quite a balanced personality yourself and are feeling reasonably well and you sit next to a very sick person, they then reverse the procedure. They withdraw your energy. It is done automatically under the Laws of Physics, and they will start to feel a little better, and you may feel a little worse, even have a slight headache and feel very tired. When we understand how this works, it can be used very beneficially.

Take a person who considers themselves to be a healer, a touch healer laying-on-of-hands, who has the desire to do it, the spiritual aptitude, yet they themselves have very poor body polarity. If they go into a hospital or similar situation and place their hands upon another person to give them healing, they can withdraw some vital energy from that person's body, which may lead to the depletion of that other person's Life Force. At the worst that person may die. Another case is with acupuncture. If the acupuncturist who inserts the needle into your body has a negative polarity and you have a charged positive polarity, then some of the energy that is in you will go back into him or he can transfer his negative vibrations into your meridians. This is the same with all forms of touch treatment - osteopathic manipulation, massage, needles. All these people should make some point to determine whether they have good or correct body polarity. You do far better when you are positively polarised and can actually help people.
