

MAGNETISM: A SOURCE OF HEALING

Morris A Bradley

There is much conjecture and mystery concerning the use of magnetism in healing work. It is apparent from scientific reports that magnetic fields have some effect on all living cells, both vegetable and animal which can be detrimental or beneficial according to the type and strength of the magnetic field currents. Bio-magnetism is the study of the magnetic fields of living tissues which results from the electro-chemical reaction in all cells that produce an ionization registering as a magnetic field within each cell. When all of these cells are combined they produce an electrical magnetic radiation called the auric field by psychics, a field that can be affected by counter magnetic activity when like poles are placed too close together.

For example, if one gets two bar magnets and tries to place both of the north poles together there is a violent reaction and the magnetic field of each magnet becomes disturbed and tries to eject the other magnet outside the perimeter of its own field of activity. When opposite poles of a magnet are placed together they attract each other and there is a balanced current flow and harmony within the field of radiation. From this one could conclude that if all living matter radiates its own magnetic field then the introduction of opposing currents or forces within that field could seriously jeopardize the correct functioning of the said matter.

Radionic Research Associates conducted a variety of experiments using a wide variety of electro-magnetic radiation in the stimulation of cellular activity in animals, humans and vegetation. This group has compiled some very interesting factors in relation to these experiments where healing work is concerned and has had some remarkable results when using these techniques. Many of their studies seem to indicate that all living tissue has to be positively polarised to function correctly and this can be determined by dowsing. (See: Polarity)

These alternative care therapy researchers concluded that when any organ or part of the human body indicates a negative polarity then this indicates an electro-chemical imbalance in turn suggesting a disease or the onset of some health imbalance. The eyes, the ears and the mouth are all considered to be minor chakra points, so are the breasts and ovaries in women and the gonads on a male. Consider also the liver, spleen, pancreas, and kidneys as well. If any of these are negatively polarized then they are in a state of malfunction. The imbalance may be due to a growth, a virus, strain or inflammation.

However it seems that if we subject these incorrectly polarised areas to a magnetic field of south polar current by using the south pole of a magnet or an electro-magnet, the affected area will change its polarity to become positively aligned and some healing process instituted by the body function commences.

The human body has the power and ability to manufacture its own antibiotics that are capable of fighting off the germ intruders. These are known as the lymphocytes. However it appears that when these miniature 'soldiers' go in to do battle with the invaders in the bloodstream they are immediately affected by the wrong polarity that has affected the bio-magnetic field and diminishes their power to combat the 'aliens'.

Once the diseased or affected area has been restored to the correct magnetic polarity, the lymphocytes have a better opportunity to do their job and the cell tissues are able to restore and repair themselves much quicker. Medical research has found that the healing time for mending broken bones is drastically reduced when the affected area has been saturated in a south pole magnetic field.
