

PRINCIPLES OF RADIONICS ..

Morris A. Bradley

People who are interested in studying Radionics must first understand some basic principles of the subject, firstly that Radionics is the 'integration of MIND and MATTER' and to be successful in this field of research one must be attuned on all three levels, the physical, mental and spiritual. Fulfilling these three basic requirements is essential for success.

Many alleged scientists in the past have investigated Radionics and given negative reports on their test work. This is to be expected in this new field of subtle emanations. In the main, these investigators are not properly equipped to carry out an investigative programme, because they do not know what they are looking for nor how to measure it.

Radionics can only be judged on what it produces. In many cases some of these 'machines' can be connected to scientific test gear and there appears to be a 'nil reaction'. The main reason for this is that Radionics works mainly in the fourth and fifth dimensions, which we suspect exist but is yet to be defined in terms of real science. What we have in Radionics is a machine that seems to work on a physical level but is actually shaping etheric currents combined with a PSIONIC output (the spiritual thought projection from the practitioner).

Conventional scientists doing an in depth study of this new energy force is rather like a professor of zoology giving a lecture on dressmaking. These people can only understand things that they can visibly measure. To them 'if you cannot see it, then it does not exist'. This was exactly the case with the author who had some background experience in electronics and when he first saw a Radionic Machine and the schematic diagram, was bewildered to say the least. To him the circuit and principle did not make sense according to our present understanding of physics. After many years of practical application of the Radionic principles and his own private research, the author is now totally convinced of the validity of the practice.

It is believed by many that there are seven dimensions. This is often termed by occultists as the 'seven levels of the ethers', or as other sacred works put it, the seven heavens. Radionics works on the first four levels of the ethers and the other three levels are the vehicles on which psionic energy traverses. So the first four levels are physical and mental, and the last three are the spiritual degrees. To be a good Radionic Therapist one also has to be a good dowser (diviner) for this is the only way at present that one can measure 'subtle energies' and it is only through these means that one can determine whether or not the 'machine' is functioning correctly.

The main difficulty at the moment in trying to measure radionic emanations is because the 'current flow' is so minute that one does not have equipment calibrated fine enough to register the Bio-electric-magnetism and the Bio-psychic energies that are transmitted and received on a broadcast Unit. One could loosely say that Radionics is in reality 'electric divining' and on the same principle that allows one to receive the 'vibrations' from the source that one is seeking, it is possible to transmit a harmonious response back to the source and stabilize the condition.

As an example, let us consider the action of the Thyroid gland in the human body. When perfectly healthy it would have a resonating frequency of 220 cycles per second. If this organ is tested by dowsing and it registers higher or lower in frequency response one may conclude that it was hyper or hypo functioning. The malfunctioning of this gland could produce a variety of other imbalances in the body. However, this would be known as the source of the imbalances, so the practitioner would try to apply treatment to this sector. The therapist would then place a witness (i.e. blood spot or hair sample) onto the 'plate' on the machine. (Radionic Nine Dial Broadcaster) and set the dials to the number representing the thyroid.

When the unit is 'switched on' it would broadcast out a bio-energetic frequency relating to the thyroid's wavelength and the patient would receive these emanations through the sensitivity of the auric field which would return the gland back to its correct resonance. It is believed that this broadcast wave can be picked up by the chakra point (endocrine gland centre) that relates to the thyroid and redirects the 'force' to the origin of disturbance. This is another reason why the chakra function of the body must always be rotating in a clockwise positive motion otherwise the energy received through Radionics is immediately dissipated and the patient receives no 'healing effect'

Frequency response and resonance is one of the basics of Radionics and in a Radionic handbook, each organ, sickness or disease is relegated to a frequency rating and the 'machines' are designed to detect the frequency imbalances in all sectors of the animal, vegetable and mineral worlds combined with 'divining'. The restoration of the offending disturbance through sympathetic frequency responses can bring harmony and stability as God intended for all things great and small. Radionics is the science of the future, and, for want of a better description, is part-science and part-magic and it is our sincere wish that all the students that study this text will receive the same joy and enlightenment out of the work just as the author has over many years.
