THE TRUTH ABOUT WAL-MART:

Wal-Mart forces the outsourcing of your job. Wal-Mart buys enough of a product to become the major source of income for its suppliers, and then forces the suppliers to lower their prices. The only way companies like Levi, Heinz, and Vlasic reach these lower prices by moving manufacturing jobs out of the U.S. into foreign sweatshops.

Wal-Mart lies about sweatshop sources. Garments carrying a "Made in the USA" label generally indicate products made by American workers protected by U.S. labor laws, but some of Wal-Mart's "American made" products are made in sweatshops in Saipan, a U.S. territory not subject to labor laws.

Wal-Mart uses sweatshop labor. Workers in Honduras work 88-hour weeks in 14-hour shifts. They make 43 cents an hour, only meets 54% of survival costs.

Wal-Mart's annual sales are 98 times greater than the entire national budget of Honduras, yet Wal-Mart doesn't even pay any taxes there.
