THE COURT: Good morning, everyone. Before we proceed I just want to remind everyone that this is a Court of law. We are not out on the street. This Court will not tolerate any outbursts. If that should occur, the Sheriffs are instructed to remove that person immediately and they will not be allowed back into the Courtroom. Everything must be proper and decorum must be maintained.

Counselors.

MR. WEINGLASS: Thank you, Your Honor. My name is Leonard Weinglass. I am one of the attorneys for the Petitioner Mumia Abu-Jamal.

This is a matter which belatedly came to our attention, which came to our attention this morning. I am serving the District Attorneys representing the District Attorney's Office of Philadelphia.

And that is the question, the preliminary question and the threshold question, of whether or not Your Honor has the jurisdiction or the jurisdictional capacity to sit on matters which are before the Court. In the papers we cite to the Court the fact that under Article 5, Section 16B of the Constitution of the State of Pennsylvania, all jurists of the Commonwealth are mandatorily retired at the age of 70. And as we indicate in Exhibit 7 attached to our petition, Your Honor has passed that date. I believe your date of birth is 1920 -- although the Court is free to correct me if I am in error.

THE COURT: I know my birthday.

MR. WEINGLASS: So the Court has been stripped by virtue of the Constitution of jurisdiction.

I also understand under Article 5, Section 16C the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania is empowered to restore temporarily, I emphasize the word temporarily, judicial authority to the Court by order of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

It's my understanding -- and again I could be corrected by the Court -- that the Chief Justice of Pennsylvania restores temporary authority to this Court on a month-to-month basis and that an order has been signed for the month of July 1995. But in that order the Court is authorized in a limited capacity to only sit on those matters, quote, as directed. And principally to assist the Common Pleas Court of Philadelphia in reducing the backlog of both civil and criminal cases.

And so our first position on the jurisdictional issue is whether or not this Court has been directed as the Supreme Court order indicates to sit on this matter. And if the Court has not been so directed, the Court is without authority to sit on these proceedings.

MR. BURNS: Your Honor, do you wish us to address that threshold question now?

THE COURT: You might as well.

MR. BURNS: Thank you, Your Honor. Hugh Burns for the Commonwealth.

Your Honor, we just received this filing this minute. However, it is very similar to a filing which you reviewed in the Fahy case a couple of weeks ago and I prepared for you on that. And I am here today with Mr. Eisenberg, the Deputy of the Law Division, and Mr. Grant, the Chief of the Homicide Unit.

As far as the order of the Supreme Court appointing you as a Senior Judge, as you know, it states, as Mr. Weinglass stated, that you are to serve as directed. That means, of course, as directed by Judge Bonavitacola. And there is an order attached to the defense filing which says very plainly that PCRAs are to be disposed of by the trial Judge. And in this case that's you.

By the way: That doesn't go to jurisdiction. Any Judge of the Common Pleas Court, as you are, has the same jurisdiction as any other Judge of the Court of Common Pleas Court. So this motion is frivolous.

Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. WEINGLASS: If I just may answer that. Counsel only read part of the order that governs the local proceedings here in Philadelphia. The rest of the order -- and I am reading from it -- provides, in the event the trial judge is no longer an active member of the judiciary, these matters will be assigned for disposition to other judges assigned to the homicide program at that time.

Your Honor, we feel that this Court is not an active member of the judiciary.

THE COURT: Do you mean --

MR. WEINGLASS: Temporary.

THE COURT: Do you mean I have been sitting as a Common Pleas Judge, I am not active?

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, I am not talking --

THE COURT: That is what you are saying.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am not talking about your physical movements, I am talking about your status in law. The Court has been stripped of the authority by --

THE COURT: No, because in the Fahy case, and I was a Senior Judge at the time, the Supreme Court sent the matter back to me to hear as the trial Judge. There's never been any change to that rule. I have all the powers of a Common Pleas Judge that I had before I was mandatorily retired. As long as I am certified by the Supreme Court to sit as a Common Pleas Judge, I have all the powers of a Common Pleas Judge.

The motion is denied, Counselor.

Page 7.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, we will submit to the Court a written order denying that motion. And I would ask the Court to certify that issue so that it may be appealed.

THE COURT: I am not going to certify it. No. It will take it's due course.

MR. BURNS: For the record, we would object to certification in any case, Your Honor.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, so the record is clear: I would like to provide through the Court Crier a copy of the order which we would request the Court to sign, to enter in the record, giving a copy to the Commonwealth. And I understand the Court is refusing it, I just wanted it to be clear on the record.

(Handing) If that could be marked as an exhibit in this hearing, as Petitioner's Exhibit 1.

THE COURT: All right, that matter has been disposed of. What is next?

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, before I begin the argument on the two issues that are before the Court, I would like to introduce as a courtesy to Counsel, Co-counsel, and to the

Daniel R. Williams, a member of the bar of New York.

Steven Hawkins, a member of many bars.

THE COURT: Including Pennsylvania?

MR. WEINGLASS: He is not from Pennsylvania. No, I think he served his clerkship here in Philadelphia with the Federal Court of Appeals.

MR. HAWKINS: Yes.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: And Paul Messing, who you know. And David Rudovsky the Court also knows, local counsel.

If the Court please: On June 5th, a little more than five weeks now ago, Mr. Jamal filed with this Court his first post-conviction relief application. Those documents included a very lengthy petition setting forth 19 separate grounds upon which a new trial should be granted, attaching 47 exhibits and 13 affidavits. This petition was accompanied by a memorandum of law, also rather lengthy, specifying the issues of law pertaining to the 19 grounds he alleges as a basis for getting a new trial.

In addition, a motion was filed for discovery, a very lengthy motion because ample discovery is necessary under the circumstances and allowed for under the relative provisions of the post-conviction statute. And a motion for recusal. These documents, some 500 pages in length, which the District Attorney's Office referred to as a telephone directory in terms of it's volume and scope, has been lodged with the Court now for over one month. As I understand it, initially the Court or whoever assigns these matters set this case down to be argued on July 24th. We objected to that as being too long a passage of time because a warrant was signed on June 1st and the execution date is set for August 17th. And pursuant to our objection, this Court moved the hearing date up to today, July 12th. Which we appreciate. But the prosecution did not serve us with papers until just last week. And we have had occasion to examine those papers. But if the Court agrees -- and I think the Court has already agreed -- there are only two issues to be argued today, and they have to be taken in the following order of necessity.

First is the issue of whether or not the Court should disqualify itself based upon the papers that have been filed. And secondly is the issue of whether or not, if the Court does not disqualify itself, a stay of the execution date should be granted.

Now, addressing recusal is not a legally complicated matter. Because I think if you read the papers -- and over a hundred pages on this issue has been submitted to the Court, including 10 exhibits attached to our moving papers for recusal -- the law is fairly clear-cut as I understand it in Pennsylvania. And I sense no disagreement from the District Attorney's Office. The law provides that a Court should disqualify itself according to the canons of judicial ethics where certain factors appear. Namely -- reading now directly from the canons of judicial conduct -- a judge should disqualify himself in a proceeding in which his impartiality might reasonably be questioned. In other words, it doesn't have to be proven, it merely might reasonably be questioned. And the Pennsylvania Supreme Court adopted that standard in the Commonwealth V Boyle case in 1982. So we are talking about a very low standard, a threshold standard for when the Court should recuse itself.

Well, what do you look at to see whether or not the Court's impartiality might reasonably be questioned? And we are also told that by the case law. We are to look at factors and circumstances which reasonably question the Court's impartiality. And Justice Roberts of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court set that forward as the standard.

Now, in looking at that we have gathered, I believe, a total record here that's unprecedented in size and scope respecting the factors and circumstances that ought to be considered on whether or not this Court could reasonably be labeled as lacking in impartiality.

The District Attorney's papers claim that we are engaging in rumor, innuendo and speculation. But I want to point out to the Court that what we have set before Your Honor is not rumor or innuendo, what we have set before this Court are sworn statements of members of the Bar of Philadelphia. What we have put before the Court is the results of a poll taken of members of the Bar of Philadelphia. We have put before the Court a commentary by one of the leading scholars in Pennsylvania on the issue of the death penalty, Professor Bruce Ledowitz of Duquesne University of Pittsburgh. We have put before the Court the results of a serious investigative effort by the Philadelphia Inquirer, the leading newspaper in the community, which has examined 35 cases tried before Your Honor.

So we have gathered before this Court a complete factual record. And it is a public record, and I emphasize that, because what we have here is a public perception gathered from reports from the Bar, reports from lawyers, indeed reports from even prosecutors and judges, all of whom have commented publicly and under sworn statements as to the performance of this Court. The record I feel is not a rumor, the record is undeniable.

And in the final analysis it's that public record which should lead to a determination by this Court that it can not sit on a case involving an African American Defendant who was convicted before this Court of killing a white police officer in this City and now seeks a new trial through post-conviction relief.

The papers that we have submitted to the Court include -- and I don't want to limit the sworn affidavit which Your Honor is familiar with -- of attorney Weinberg, a member of the Bar, who, as I understand it, is a partner and associate of a former prosecutor Richard Sprague. In his affidavit he contends -- and we have attached it -- that he has the statement of six former prosecutors of the District Attorney's Office in Philadelphia who would testify to the fact that this Court is uniformly biased against criminal defendants. A very serious allegation, not easily made, I assume, not made without considerable thought and reflection.

In addition to that we have attached the result of a study of one of the leading journalists in the City, Mr. Tulsky, who has examined 35 trial records in which this Court presided and has come to the conclusion -- again I believe a very studied and careful and thoughtful conclusion -- that this Court is a criminal defendant's nightmare.

We have provided to the Court the report of a poll of members of the Bar of Philadelphia which was conducted shortly after Your Honor sentenced Mr. Jamal in which one-third of the members who responded to the poll indicated that the Court was unqualified.

We have recited a report that again appeared in the Philadelphia Inquirer that lawyers, judges and prosecutors all agree on one thing, that matters tried before this Court are tried differently than they are tried before other judges.

The statistical record is also not rumor but fact. As I understand it, 31 Defendants before this Court who were tried before Your Honor received, as a result of a trial by jury, 31 death sentences. Now, as I understand it, no other judge in the City of Philadelphia has presided over 31 death sentences. No other judge in the State of Pennsylvania has presided over 31. And significantly, no other judge in the United States has presided over as many death sentences following trial as Your Honor has.

And lastly, we have attached the fact 17 that this Court has also compiled a record on these kinds of proceedings, post-conviction proceedings -- and we recite the cases in which Your Honor has been involved in -- and in which Your Honor has dealt summarily and, I say respectfully, injudiciously with post-conviction proceedings which death row inmates have brought before this Court.

The Pennsylvania Capital Resource Center has provided us -- and we have attached it -- a computer printout of these cases which Your Honor has sat on indicating not only that this Court has sat on more death penalty sentence cases than any other judge in the United States, but that this Court has been reversed by appellate courts more than any other judge. And not just the State of Pennsylvania but in the United States.

So this is not rumor. We are talking about factual records. We are talking about the sworn statements of respected members of the Bar. The considered opinions of the press. Which must indicate to this Court it reflects the considered opinions, reflects and shapes the considered opinions of the public at large.

And lastly we talk about a matter which might not ordinarily be an issue, a factor or circumstance but is in this case. And that is the fact that Your Honor has served prior to becoming a Judge of the Commonwealth for 16 years as an Undersheriff in Philadelphia. And while you were in that capacity the Court was a member of the Fraternal Order of the Police, as I understand it, and the Court was a member of the Police Chiefs' Association, and a member of the Sheriffs' Association. And we don't know what this Court's relationship is to those organizations, but we do know that one of the organizations that this Court has had a long-standing relationship with is the Fraternal Order of the Police, and that association is now currently, today, actively involved in a campaign to see to it that Mr. Jamal is executed. That he doesn't get the relief that we are here in Court seeking.

Now, Your Honor's association with an organization that is dedicated to that proposition clearly raises in the public mind at least a question of impartiality.

THE COURT: If I may interject for a second, Counselor, with your permission: I am no longer a member of the Fraternal Order of the Police. When I was elected as a Judge I withdrew.

MR. WEINGLASS: And then I understand Your Honor has no association whatsoever with the Fraternal Order of Police?

THE COURT: I am not a member. Not a dues-paying member, not a free-paying member, no member, period.

MR. WEINGLASS: I appreciate the Court stating that on the record, and I accept that. I just know in my own experience being a member of an organization for 14 years, although not currently a member of the organization --

THE COURT: I don't know if I was a member for 14 years. I dispute that. Because the Sheriffs were not taken in with the Fraternal Order of Police at that time. It was not until later on. I think I was only a member, an active member for a few years.

MR. WEINGLASS: For how many years?

THE COURT: I don't remember how many.

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon --

THE COURT: Just for a few years. Because the Sheriff was not recognized. They are today recognized by the Fraternal Order of Police. And they are members of the Fraternal Order of Police.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, I don't want to quibble, I feel --

THE COURT: Well, I don't want to quibble either, I just want to correct the record, that's all.

MR. WEINGLASS: And I appreciate that, and I accept the correction.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: However, in this panoply of facts, factors and circumstances, I saved that for last because I felt that was the least important. Ordinarily that would not reflect one way or another on the impartiality of the Court, but given this Court, and all the other matters I cited, which the Court has not interrupted me --

THE COURT: I understand that. But to accept what you say, then no assistant district attorney should ever be a judge.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, oh, no, I don't agree with that proposition.

THE COURT: Why?

MR. WEINGLASS: I don't quite agree with the Court.

THE COURT: Why?

MR. WEINGLASS: The factor of membership in the Fraternal Order of Police does not per se disqualify this Court, I hoped I had made it clear.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: It is the other which I had cited. It is --

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: It is the record of performance as reflected in undeniable facts here which we are concerned about. I just put in the Fraternal Order of the Police as the last issue.

Now, it is against that backdrop which I have set forth, that backdrop of factors and circumstances that we must now turn to consider briefly the 17 events which we set forth in our recusal motion, all drawn from the record of trial and one from pre-trial, in which this Court sat and made rulings and rendered judgments that we contend reflect that very bias and lack of impartiality that all of the public matters reveal are part of this Court's conduct in the performance of your official duties.

We cite 17. I don't want to go into all of them. They are responded to by the Commonwealth. But these 17 include issues which directly impacted the fact-finding process which resulted in Mr. Jamal being convicted. One of them Your Honor will probably recall clearly.

And if I am reciting it in error, Counsel I am sure could correct me.

The prosecution 's case included a claim that Mr. Jamal had admitted, more than admitted, had openly proclaimed in the hospital where he was brought for treatment, this man who had been a court reporter for years and knew court proceedings and evidence, had nonetheless, according to their case, openly proclaimed that he had shot the officer. But the peculiar thing about that part of the prosecution's case is that the two witnesses they produced, the deceased officer's former partner and best friend Gary Bell, and a hospital security guard Priscilla Durham, both failed to tell anyone about this admission, this very damming admission, for over two months. Indeed, Officer Bell was interviewed, as he should have been, by the homicide investigators one week after the shooting in which he told them all kinds of things. Speculated on why his partner was shot. But he didn't say anything about the so-called admission that he claimed two months later, after Mr. Jamal had filed a complaint against the police officers for abusing him in the hospital, a complaint that was backed up by independent witnesses. So two months later he remembers. He said he never told his wife, he never told any police officer that he heard this damming admission, just never told anyone.

And Priscilla Durham, the security guard, she said yes, I heard it also, but I didn't tell anyone. Even though I see police everyday, six days a week, I just never told anyone. But I did write it down that night in my own longhand. That longhand note that she claimed was never produced, mysteriously disappeared. But what kind of an answer could Mr. Jamal give to this? His answer was simple, clear-cut and definitive. The officer who was guarding him in that hospital, Officer Gary Wakshul, did write a report that night, an official police report. And what did he say about Mr. Jamal? He said the male Negro made no statements.

Well, that's a very critical defense witness to answer these charges of an admission. So when the defense case began, Mr. Jackson, Mr. Jamal's back-up attorney at that time, asked to have Mr. Wakshul brought in to testify to this report. And the Assistant District Attorney at that time said we object, it's too late, using a kind of a technical defense. Well, the Court said why don't you try to look for him, maybe he's on vacation. And sure enough, after a 10 minute recess the Assistant District Attorney comes back in and says to Your Honor, Judge, you were right, he's on vacation and he is unavailable.

Well, this is a critical defense witness. And so Mr. Jamal and Mr. Jackson together implore the Court to just ask the Assistant District Attorney to find out if this Officer is on vacation at home here in the City of Philadelphia or if he's left the jurisdiction. Or find out where he is.

But this is a critical witness. And the Court's reply was I'm not going to take the Court's time to go looking for a witness. They were only looking for a telephone call to ascertain his whereabouts. And the defense case was cut off and Officer Wakshul was never produced, the Jury never knew this. And Mr. Jamal brought to the Court's attention the fact that written on the report of Officer Wakshul was a notation that he was not to be permitted to go on vacation. And yet he was on vacation.

And what was Your Honor's response to this? Did Your Honor say to the police that was a wrong thing to do? Did you say to the prosecutor this man should not have been allowed on vacation? Your response was, you turned to Mr. Jamal, who faced the death penalty, and you said to him, almost casually, but kind of cruelly, you and your attorney goofed. And that was the end of the issue.

THE COURT: Well, shouldn't they have subpoenaed the Officer?

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, Your Honor --

THE COURT: Should they not have subpoenaed the Officer?

MR. WEINGLASS: The answer to that is of course.

THE COURT: Well, then he wouldn't have been able to leave.

MR. WEINGLASS: But, Your Honor --

THE COURT: You see, that is not my responsibility. I don't take the Commonwealth's position, I don't take the defense position. That is something they have to do.

MR. WEINGLASS: We have a claim here which has to be factually litigated in post-conviction proceedings wherein we are going to examine the ineffective assistance issue of Counsel. And that is going to be one of the issues which the defense will raise, and on that ground alone the Court should grant post-conviction relief. If Your Honor feels you've done nothing wrong, but it was Counsel who was in error, Mr. Jamal has to be given a new trial either way, either way you cut it. Either the Court was wrong or Counsel was wrong. But Mr. Jamal was injured and irreparably. And that's why he must have a new trial. The Court does see the importance of this witness, I'm sure. And now the Court is saying well, then Counsel was wrong. You might be right, but in any event Mr. Jamal gets a new trial on just that issue. But there are 16 other issues.

THE COURT: All right, let's get through with the 16.

MR. WEINGLASS: I will be brief, I won't deal with 16, I just want to tell the Court I am only going to deal with two or three.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: The other one that concerns us greatly about the performance of the Court, the Court will recall an episode occurred here that was very unusual. Mr. Jamal began by being his own attorney. And in the two days that he conducted the questioning of Jurors --

THE COURT: Go ahead.

MR. WEINGLASS: -- one Juror was seated. To refresh the Court's recollection, her name was Jenny Dooley or Dawley.

Page 26.

THE COURT: I am familiar with the case.

MR. WEINGLASS: And after the entire Jury was selected, the Court sequestered the Jury, they were put up in a hotel. And Miss Dawley communicated to the Court, as I understand it, by note, or through the marshals or attendants --

THE COURT: She didn't communicate with me, Counselor, let's get that straight. I didn't know a thing about it until the Court Officer relayed the information to me.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, the record of the trial indicates that the Court Officer brought before the Court the question of this Juror's personal problem. And the Juror asked the Court if she could be excused to take her cat to a vet who was ill, and not during Court time but in the evening from about 6:00 to 9:O0. So that there would be no break in Court time, and presumably she could go with the Court attendant and take care of her family emergency.

The Court shot back to this Juror through the attendant no, you can not go. The Court never asked Counsel to come into chambers and let's discuss this problem and let's talk about whether or not this Juror should be helped here so that we can save this Juror. The Court summarily rejected her request and the Juror, finding that she had no other alternative, went and took her cat to a vet and returned to the hotel. That was reported to the Court. And when that was reported to the Court, the Court had in it's chambers Mr. Jackson, and there was a discussion about this Juror. She was not brought in and questioned. Mr. Jamal was not there, he was absent. The only Juror who he had selected. An African American woman who sat in seat number one. And she was in Mr. Jamal's absence summarily removed.

THE COURT: No, she was not summarily removed, Counselor. But I will let the Assistant District Attorney answer that. Go ahead.

MR. WEINGLASS: There was discussion.

THE COURT: Wait awhile. You are right, there was discussion, that's right.

MR. WEINGLASS: Summarily removed in Mr. Jamal's absence. But who was present?

THE COURT: The attorney.

Page 28.

MR. WEINGLASS: Mr. Jackson, Mr. McGill, the Assistant District Attorney. And this was, the Court gave the opinion about this Juror, and I must say respectfully --

THE COURT: I gave?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, it is in the record. It is cited.

THE COURT: If it is in the record, okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: It is in the record. And what did the Court say? And I believe, respectfully, this is what motivated Your Honor. You said I didn't like this Juror's attitude from the beginning. And you turned to the two lawyers and you said I don't know why you let this Juror on the Jury. But it was Mr. Jamal who selected this Juror. And so because Your Honor didn't like a Juror, who Mr. Jamal had selected, and the prosecution accepted her, this Juror was dealt with in a fashion that I could only describe as summary.

And why do I say that? I say that for the simple reason that later on in the trial another Juror had a problem. That Juror's problem was much more threatening to the case than Miss Dawley's problem. That Juror wanted to take a civil service exam during Court hours. Well, when the Court got that information, what did the Court do? Unlike Jenny Dawley, you called in both lawyers and now you said, and I think quite properly, what do we do with this Juror. And there was a decision and the Court offered to send a Court attendant with this Juror to take a civil service exam and the Court was suspended for half a day despite the fact that you had this Jury working two consecutive Saturdays, one Saturday until six o'clock at night. Time was very important to the Court, that's why you wouldn't grant an hour so Officer Wakshul could be found.

THE COURT: Well, this was in the evening, Counselor, and there was no way for me to contact the attorneys to come back into Court so we could discuss the issue. I said she was sequestered and she is sequestered, period.

MR. WEINGLASS: So was the other Juror.

THE COURT: Right. But wait awhile. We didn't do anything until the attorneys were there present. I wasn't going to do anything on my own. The attorneys were present and they discussed the matter. But when she did what she did, and, Counselor, she said I don't care what the Judge says or what anybody says, I am going to do it, okay, but this was in the evening, there was no way for me to get in touch with the attorneys to call them in, come into Court and say let's discuss it, what are we going to do with this person. If you remember, they agreed to excuse her, not me.

MR. WEINGLASS: They being not Mr. Jamal, who never knew this.

THE COURT: No.

MR. WEINGLASS: It was his Jury.

THE COURT: Well, he didn't want to participate in the proceedings.

MR. WEINGLASS: He wasn't invited into that chambers.

THE COURT: Because he wasn't, he didn't want to participate. That was from the very beginning he didn't want to participate. But go ahead, Counselor, I'm sorry for interrupting you. But go ahead.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I just want to take exception with one observation.

Page 31.

Miss Dawley, according to your Courtroom attendant, who did testify on the record --

THE COURT: Hmm-hmm.

MR. WEINGLASS: -- and asked to take her cat to that hospital throughout that day, in the daytime hours.

THE COURT: Unfortunately, I didn't know about that. I didn't know about that.

MR. WEINGLASS: That is in the record.

THE COURT: Well.

MR. WEINGLASS: It wasn't at night.

THE COURT: Well, I thought you just said a while ago it was at nighttime that he called me. But go ahead. Maybe the Commonwealth looked at the notes more carefully. But go ahead.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, the undeniable fact is what happened here, not going back into it, is that Juror Number 1, an African American woman picked by Mr. Jamal, was removed in his absence and replaced by Juror, first alternate Juror Mr. Courchain, who said he subconsciously felt he didn't think he could be fair. And Mr. Courchain ended up being Juror Number 1.

Page 32.

THE COURT: But -- not to cut you short, Counselor -- didn't the Supreme Court on direct appeal go into that matter?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT: Well, if they went into it it is resolved.

MR. WEINGLASS: But they didn't go, they went into half of it. They went into the question of whether or not the Court's discretion as a matter of law was violative of Mr. Jamal's rights. I am now arguing not that issue, I'm arguing the way the Court handled this issue, apart from your discretion as a matter of law, indicated a lack of sensitivity to the fact that this man is on trial for life and he picked a Juror who the Court removed in his absence.

THE COURT: That is the same issue, Counselor, that they have already resolved.

MR. WEINGLASS: I beg to differ. They never were even asked because appellant Counsel never read the record of what happened to Jenny Dawley; it was not even raised in the Supreme Court. The only issue was, was it proper to seat Mr. Courchain. That was raised, but not the whole business about the Court removing a Juror, which as Your Honor well knows is a very serious matter in law. You can not take from a defendant, particularly a capital defendant, his jury. You can't touch that jury unless there is adequate grounds. And that was done here.

And I want to say just in passing and move off this: In their response to our argument on that issue, where we say and say accurately that an African American Juror was removed and replaced by a middle-aged white Juror who said he wasn't sure he could be fair to Mr. Jamal, and another Juror was given great leeway who happened to be a young Caucasian Juror, male, the Assistant District Attorney tries to say we are attempting to create a racial issue where none exists. And they hide behind a technical subterfuge that nowhere in the record is the race of these Jurors indicated. And therefore they try to inform this Court that we tried to make racial issues where none exists. But what they overlook, maybe inadvertently, is an affidavit which their Assistant District Attorney filed with the Supreme Court when the case was over in which he stated the race of these Jurors. And Assistant District Attorney Joe McGill said I have a distinct recollection that Jurors Number 1, 7 and 10, Jenny Dawley, Savannah Davis, and Basil Malone were black. So it is in the record. And he goes on: Juror Number 1 was removed and replaced by the first alternate who was Caucasian.

So their own Assistant District Attorney in an affidavit informs the Supreme Court of the race of these Jurors. And when we raise it before this Court they say we are trying to create a race issue where none exists. But they just overlook the record, which they have done often. And their response is that -- and I don't want to get into it because I don't believe in argument among Counsel: I think issues ought to be addressed on their merits -- but that's nonetheless the way they deal with the issues that we raise about these Jurors.

Your Honor, I just want to talk about discretionary rulings that you made. A cab driver, an alleged eyewitness by the name of Robert Chobert, confessed to this Court at sidebar that he had a felony conviction for throwing a Molotov cocktail into a public school for pay. A rather serious felony I think everyone would agree. The Jury was never told that. And they were never told that because the Assistant District Attorney objected.

THE COURT: No, not because he objected. But because the felony has to be crimen falsi. That's the law here in Pennsylvania, Counselor. I don't know what the law is in New York. Maybe that would be admissible in New York. But in Pennsylvania it's not admissible unless it's crimen falsi.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, and I quite understand the law in Pennsylvania, and I appreciate it. But the law in Pennsylvania also is this. Under the case of Commonwealth V Murphy, where a case tried before Your Honor was reversed so I am sure you remember it, in Commonwealth V Murphy what was kept from the Jury was the fact that the witness was still on probation, which Mr. Chobert still was. And the Jury in Mr. Jamal's case was never told that. That reversed the Murphy case. And that's the part that was error. So the Jury never knew this. And as Mr. McGill then argued in summation, these witnesses had no reason to lie. Of course they did. That witness was on probation and the Jury was never told it.

You also cut off the questioning of witness Veronica Jones. She was attempting to tell the Jury that their key witness -- a young woman who, unfortunately, lived a life as a prostitute, had 38 arrests, had three pending cases in Philadelphia, was serving 18 months in Massachusetts on another related prostitution charge -- Veronica Jones attempted to say to the Jury that I was offered the same deal by the police as was given to this prostitute, and that is if I would talk against Mr. Jamal I could work my corner unmolested by the police. Your Honor felt that had nothing to do with the case. But, Your Honor, it had everything to do with the case. It established the motive of the chief prosecution witness, her deal. And now we know by way of affidavit from an investigator, an investigator Mr. Greer, that not only did she have a deal to work her corner unmolested, she was always under the watchful care of two plainclothes officers of the Police Department of the City of Philadelphia. Incredible that that witness was accorded those privileges in return for her testimony. But the Jury was never told that.

So these rulings, Chobert, Veronica Jones, removing a Juror, denying a continuance, all of these, Your Honor, impacted this Jury. And that's why of course a conviction would follow.

I don't want to go into the others, the other 14, but I will say this: There was an interaction here, for better or worse, fortunate or unfortunate, between this Court and Mr. Jamal in which Your Honor used, I think regrettably and possibly you regret it in hindsight, inappropriate language in addressing Mr. Jamal. When you banished Mr. Jamal from the Courtroom for whatever reason, the Court injudiciously said to him -- it is on the record -- take a walk. You do not say that, I submit, to someone who faces a death penalty in a trial and is trying to defend himself. He is not to be addressed in that fashion. In addition, as already mentioned, to him you said you goofed. And when he asked to have Mr. John Africa seated at his table you casually said to him why don't you send him to law school, and there were exchanges of that nature which are utterly inappropriate but reflective of the lack of sensitivity that the Court had with respect to Mr. Jamal's situation.

Your Honor, so we come full circle around. Do all of these factors and circumstances taken together, including the background factors, do all of these raise just a reasonable question, no more than that, a reasonable question about the impartiality and the fairness of this Court to preside over proceedings in which the life-and-death issue of Mr. Jamal's situation will be resolved.

We have raised in our petition, Your Honor, very substantial and factually intensive issues pertaining to questions, as I have already indicated: The way the Jury was selected, 11 peremptory challenges exercised against African Americans to purge the Jury of as many African Americans as possible. I know Your Honor is going to say that was raised in the Supreme Court. Indeed it was, but it was raised on the basis of a statement which the District Attorney's office gave to the Supreme Court, which turns out, we believe, to be inaccurate and false. They told the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania that they only used eight peremptory challenges against African Americans. We now have reason to believe that they used 11, or about 80 percent of all their challenges, an unacceptable number, as our memorandum points out. The United States Supreme Court said we are well past the day when prosecutors in a city that has a large population of minorities can use the office, their public office, their public trust, to purge a jury of the peers of the person who is on trial. That's what happened in this case. And it happened more than they told the Supreme Court.

We'll have an evidentiary hearing, I hope, and we'll bring before the Court what they did there. We will also bring before the Court how Jenny Dawley was removed.

And Your Honor is correct: There might be factual arguments here. You might disagree with me, the Commonwealth will disagree with me. We ought to have a hearing, we ought to have sworn testimony under oath with witnesses testifying about what did happen so that when this case is decided it will be decided on the facts, not anybody's recollection.

There was also, as I pointed out, major issues of ineffective assistance of Counsel. We have an affidavit from Mr. Jackson. Major issues they disagree with. You have to hear from Mr. Jackson. You have to hear from his appellate attorney, who we have an affidavit indicating the appellate attorney never read the trial record. People say Mr. Jamal had an appeal. He had an appeal like he had a trial, but he had an attorney which never read the record. That's why the issues I am talking about right now weren't raised.

And lastly but most importantly, there are many new factual issues here that we have recently come across. Because evidence was suppressed, evidence was kept from his defense Counsel. Evidence is still being suppressed. People were driven out of this City who said someone else shot the Officer. People were given polygraph tests who wanted to testify on Mr. Jamal's behalf. The tests were torn up. People were shown photo line-ups. Defense

Counsel were never told that. Presumably they identified someone else because they were never brought in here. So the case, the evidence, the so-called evidence was a one-sided show of evidence. Only the evidence that the police and the District Attorneys wanted to lay before the Jury was laid before the Jury. The other evidence which we now have some indication of was never brought into play. We have to have a hearing on that. A serious hearing.

Mr. Jamal never had a pathologist. There is one now. What he has to say is critically important to this case. It completely belies the theory on which the case was tried.

We now have a firearms expert. He should also testify, it is very important what he has to say.

We now know, and I think probably Your Honor now knows for the first time, that the medical examiner who they put on the stand wrote in his report that the bullet removed from Officer Faulkner was .44 caliber. Mr. Jamal's gun was a .38 caliber. You can not fire a .44 caliber bullet with .38 caliber gun. The Jury was never told that. Never brought out.

So all these issues have to be brought to the surface in long hearings. But what happens in these hearings? Your Honor sits as the Judge finder of fact. The sole finder of the law. We have no jury to turn to with this hearing. Only this Court. And that's why it's so important that this Court sit free of the taint of partiality and unfairness.

Particularly, Your Honor -- and I will just close with this -- particularly in a case which all the media has reported has had a polarizing effect on the City, for better or worse, and now I think it could fairly be said in the nation as well. And even internationally.

I just want to say, I don't think Your Honor is aware of it, but we have two attorneys here from Japan, and two attorneys here from Germany, who were sent by lawyers' associations in their home countries because their countries are concerned about this. I myself have had a call from the Consul General of Italy who said the foreign office in Rome wants a report on these proceedings.

So it's important in every case, because there is always a life on the line. And it's critically important. It's also even more important in a situation where the life of the City, the peaceful life of the City, and the peaceful sense of unity in the nation, is on the line as well.

Judge Ribner, your colleague, his first comment when he heard of this case, even before all of this, his first comment was this is a case that has explosive tendencies in the City.

For all these reasons, including matters I didn't argue, the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, the 8th Amendment which requires heightened scrutiny of a case where the death penalty is involved because it's so final, the precedence of law which I cited in Pennsylvania, I would ask the Court on behalf of Mr. Jamal, for the Court to reflect on all these matters, and because of the public perception, because of the reason this Court can't give what the Pennsylvania Supreme Court has said is the essential ingredient of every proceeding, namely, the appearance of fairness, I would ask this Court to step aside so that another jurist in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania may consider these proceedings.

MR. BURNS: Good morning, Your Honor.

Mr. Weinglass said that we agree on the law. I don't think that's true. I would like to direct your attention as I have in my filing to the case of Reilly versus SEPTA, a Supreme Court decision of 1985 which was recently reaffirmed by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court just last month. June of 1995. It is cited in our answer to the stay petition. I am going to quote what Justice Cappy wrote in that case, a reiteration of what the Court decided in Reilly. Justice Cappy wrote that whether a judge has the ability to be impartial is, quote, a personal and unreviewable decision that only the jurist can make. Once satisfied by that self-examination, the jurist must then consider whether or not continued involvement in the case would tend to undermine public confidence in the judiciary in reviewing a denial of his disqualification. We recognize our judges are honorable, fair and competent. Once the decision is made, it is final.

Now, the Court said something else in writing Reilly. It said that a judge hearing a recusal motion has to remember that public confidence in the judiciary depends on the knowledge the judges will not be swayed by unfounded charges of unfairness made by, and I quote, bold and unscrupulous advocates.

There's been a lot of representations made. Most of them concern what happened during the trial. Some of them concern matters which are not of record, and I would look forward to hearing that evidence presented by the defense in the event we get to the stay motion today. I would like to see witnesses presented.

But as to the recusal motion, the bulk of the complaints seem to be referring to matters that occurred at trial that are matters of record. And in referring to those matters, I suggest to you that there has been a consistent strain of misrepresentation taking place here.

One of the things that was mentioned -- I am going to try and answer all of them -- one of the first things that was mentioned was the matter of witnesses Priscilla Durham and Officer Bell. Those were two witnesses who heard the Defendant when he was brought into the hospital admit that he had shot the victim -- I am not going to repeat the exact words -- and express his wish that the victim die. And during cross-examination of Miss Durham -- and again this is all part of the trial record -- as the defense attempted to show that Miss Durham had not told anyone about this statement until months after the event, until after the Defendant had made an accusation of brutality against the police -- and that investigation of course proved to be unfounded -- but during that investigation, the defense claimed was the first time that Miss Durham had mentioned this to anyone. And at that time she revealed that she had given a statement to her superiors the next day. And she produced a statement in writing that she had given to her superiors which totally refuted the idea that she had not told anyone. And this is on the record at trial.

Officer Bell, it is true, did not tell anyone about the statement when he was first interviewed. He was later interviewed again and he explained that he was watching his best friend die on the operating table and that when he heard the Defendant say this, and he was interviewed about it immediately after the event, he was simply too upset to recall it. This supposedly sets up the situation in which Officer Wakshul was not called.

Now, the record shows that at various points in the trial Mr. Jackson, the Defendant's attorney expressed his discomfort because he didn't even know who the witnesses were going to be because the Defendant would not tell him who they were. This trial had been in progress for over a month, since June lst, when on the day that closing arguments were supposed to take place the defense stated that it wanted to call Officer Wakshul. And Mr. Weinglass now tells you that Officer Wakshul is a critical defense witness. Well, Officer Wakshul too had given a statement saying that the Defendant had made this admission that he had shot the victim, that he hoped the victim would die. So if anything, Officer Wakshul was a prosecution witness. And if anything was written on his report about him not going on vacation it was for the purpose of calling him as a prosecution witness.

The defense had both of these reports. It had the report of Officer Wakshul saying that he had guarded the Defendant and the Defendant had not made any comments. And it also had his later statement in which he said I said he didn't make any comments while I was guarding him, but he went on to explain that after he had been released of guarding the Defendant he heard the Defendant make this statement. So Officer Wakshul could have been called as a prosecution witness. Now they portray him as an example of your bias in not allowing the defense to hold up the trial because when they finally did decide to call Officer Wakshul, after the prosecution had long ago rested, after he had already gone on vacation, he was not available. He would not have been available until July 8th when he returned from vacation. That's what the record says. It is not what you hear being said here but that's what the trial record says.

Let me move on to the suggestion that Jenny Dawley or Dooley was improperly removed from the Jury. I think it's interesting that many significant facts were left out of Mr. Weinglass' presentation. The first being that the Defendant yes, indeed, selected this Juror. In fact, he personally voir dired her. And the record of the voir dire showed he offended her: She didn't like some of his questions, she expressed her displeasure. He nevertheless selected her as his first Juror.

On the first day of trial the Defendant completely derailed the proceedings. He made it impossible for the opening statements to take place. The Jury eventually had to be taken out, he had to be removed and the entire first day was simply derailed by his actions. On that same day this Juror chose to violate the sequestration order because she wanted to take care of her cat. She had already mentioned that she had a husband at home who, evidently, could have taken care of the animal. Well, be that as it may, she didn't get the Court's permission to go, she simply chose to go. And the Crier reported it to you -- and this is a part of the record -- when he told her that she should not leave, she said I don't care what Judge Sabo or anybody says, I do what I have to do, nobody is going to stop me.

Well, when this was brought to the attention of defense Counsel -- and it is true, the Defendant wasn't in the room because of course he had been removed for his misconduct so he wasn't present -- but the defense attorney took that opportunity to let this Juror be removed for the reason that she had broken sequestration and because he agreed with the prosecutor who observed that this Juror appeared to hate the Defendant. And the Court noted that she appeared to be mentally unbalanced. So the defense attorney felt it would be a good thing if this Juror who appeared to hate the Defendant was not on the Jury and he agreed that she should be removed. And this is presented to you as an example of your bias.

The defense says that you terminated the questioning of Veronica Jones. Well, the record shows that the questioning of Veronica Jones ended when defense Counsel had no more questions. That's June 29th, 1982, page 179. I don't recall Miss Jones attempting to testify on the motives of another witness but if she did that would have been inadmissible: A witness can't testify about what is in the mind of someone else.

It's been said here that you banished the Defendant from the Courtroom. The record shows that time and again the Defendant intentionally disrupted the proceedings. This happened on a daily basis, from June 18th to the end of the trial. Each time the Defendant did this you would later send for him, ask him to behave properly, he said he would, each time he went back on his word, had to be removed again. So the use of the word banished I think is not particularly accurate. And it certainly has nothing to do with any question of recusal, certainly has nothing to do with your personal bias. In fact, removing the Defendant under those situations was approved by the United States Supreme Court in Illinois versus Allen.

The defense has claimed in their filings that because of the tension between the defense attorney Mr. Jackson and the Defendant, that you should have taken some sort of remedial steps, you should have investigated the situation further and this is an example too of your bias. Of course the record shows that the Defendant was not prepared to cooperate with any attorney. He stated repeatedly on the record that he was following the so-called strategy of John Africa by disrupting the proceedings and portraying himself as a political figure being persecuted by the system. He stated that he had no intention of cooperating with any, quote, legal-trained lawyer because any such attorney would be an employee of the court system who would be conspiring with you in the prosecution in order to, quote, hang him. Well, the Defendant made it impossible for any attorney to correctly represent him, yet he presents this to you as an example of your bias.

It is interesting too some of the mention that was made in the defense filings of the appellate record. Mention was made today of the fact that Mr. Chobert's record was not used. Of course the record shows that his record was offered as crimen falsi; and there was argument at sidebar about whether or not an arson conviction constitutes crimen falsi, and you correctly decided that it did not. That's the purpose for which it was offered; you correctly ruled that it was not admissible for that purpose. There is no bias in that.

Mention is made, though, of a case in which a witness' record should have been admitted. Commonwealth versus Murphy was mentioned. Now, the defense refers to this case as though it was a criticism of your decision by the Supreme Court, whereas in fact the Supreme Court's decision was reviewing an issue of whether or not Murphy's Counsel was ineffective: Something that you had no control over. So the Murphy case has nothing to do with you as a Judge. Again it has nothing to do with you being biased.

They mention in their filings the case of Commonwealth versus Reed in which they portray you as denying a capital defendant the assistance of a psychologist to assist him in his defense. What they don't say, and which is mentioned of course in the Reed opinion by the Supreme Court, is that this Defendant had two murder cases and had already been examined by three court-appointed psychiatrists when that request was made. And that at the time this of course was made, you offered to give the defendant in that case yet another examination by another Court-appointed psychiatrist. But the defense said no, I have a handpicked psychiatrist, or psychologist, rather, who will act not as an expert witness, not as an objective witness, but rather as an advocate, rather as a hired gun. You said well, the State's not going to pay for that. And this was brought to the attention of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania and they said you ruled correctly. It was brought to the attention of the United States Supreme Court, and they denied review.

It is said in the defense filings that you did not allow the defense to ask jurors what their race was, potential jurors while they were being voir dired. They cite the notes of testimony, June 7th, 1982, page 20. On that page of the record you are on the record saying to the defense if you want to ask that, go ahead. The record says the exact opposite of what the defense claimed it says as an example of your bias. The exact opposite. Totally misrepresented.

The defense states that it has presented you with an unprecedented record. I mean that's true, but it is certainly not in the way they intend. I don't believe that there is any case in Pennsylvania indicating that reliance on newspaper articles or hearsay opinions of disgruntled defense attorneys can stand as a basis for recusal. Your own self assessment is what is important.

But there is another issue here I think which is important too. And that is, as I have already mentioned, the integrity of the judiciary. Because the issue in this case is whether a judge may properly be driven out of a case by a campaign of public pressure. I think the record should show when the Defendant was brought in there was applause in the room. I think the record should show there was chanting in the hall outside. It should show there was chanting in the street outside that is audible here in the Courtroom. And Mr. Weinglass went on television three days ago, on Issues And Answers, a local television show, and he stated that this case outraged the Supreme Court of the United States.

Now, I thought that was interesting because I handled the Commonwealth's response to the Defendant's petition for certiorari in the Supreme Court, and they didn't express any outrage. They didn't express any outrage at all. As a matter of fact, they said petition is denied, period. Some outrage. Yet this man goes on television and tells the world that the United States Supreme Court is outraged at what happened in this case. Untrue. Falsehood.

Mr. Weinglass said on television, and he said it again in this Courtroom, that you had been reversed more than any other judge in the United States. That's absolute nonsense. I don't know where that comes from. In fact, he said in his filing -- and he based this, by the way, on a newspaper account -- that up until 1992 you had been reversed 18 times. I don't know whether or not that's true, but I believe you came on the bench in 1974. And since that time you have been hearing mainly homicide cases, certainly the most difficult, most challenging cases in this Court system; and if you were reversed less than once a year, I think that's an enviable record for someone in your position. Assuming that that's true. I have certainly no way of determining that.

There was reference to your interaction with Mr. Jamal on the record. Well, we cite a plethora of situations, of places in the record where the Defendant was taunting the Court, was refusing to cooperate, was making gestures and demonstrations of disrespect. And throughout you maintained your equilibrium in what I must say is a commendable manner. The record in this case is truly unprecedented to the extent that the Defendant attempted to portray himself as a political victim and attempted to disrupt the proceedings on a daily basis. And there was nothing that this Court did during the proceedings that was in any way improper.

The bottom line in regard to all of the statements that have been made that are contradicted by the record, refuted by the record, refuted by appellate decisions, that the defense attempts to rely on is this: It demonstrates that the defense in this case does not care about the truth, does not care about the law, does not care about the record. What it cares about is making inflammatory statements which are intended to inflame and feed an atmosphere of public pressure which is directed at you, which is intended to pressure you. And the question of public policy in this case is whether you should entertain the notion that a judge should be driven out of a case by a campaign of public pressure like this.

I have seen, in addition to all else I have seen fliers distributed by I do not know who, in which they include your FAX number, and they say put pressure on this Judge, send him a FAX. And I wonder if we could ask you for the record, Your Honor, if you have received any FAXs?

THE COURT: (Indicating).

MR. BURNS: You are indicating by spreading your arms wide, indicating that you have received quite a few. I expect. I suggest that that is all part and parcel of the strategy that's been adopted by the defense in this case. As a matter of public policy, only you can tell us? Can decide whether as a matter of conscience you can be unbiased in this case. And the Supreme Court has said that that is something only you can decide and that is unreviewable.

The public policy question, the additional question is what is a person to do in terms of this attempt to put pressure on the judiciary, on you personally by making these false statements. And I suggest that the proper response is to deny the motion for recusal. Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. WEINGLASS: Just very briefly: I'm new here and I am an outsider, I am aware of that.

THE COURT: That's all right.

MR. WEINGLASS: But I am somewhat disconcerted when the representative of the District Attorney's Office, which has I assume many attorneys and many fine attorneys, stands before this Court and talks about matters that are not of record: Fliers, television appearances where I did appear with Assistant District Attorney Joe McGill because I thought it was important for both sides to be heard, and references are made that are inaccurate, that are outside the record. Indeed, in the written submission, Your Honor, you must have seen as I did that in response to the sworn affidavits that we filed with our Exhibit, Counsel just willy-nilly recites in his response that well, these are all sworn affidavits of lawyers. But I want to tell this Court, and put this in writing, that I know a lot of lawyers, presumably fellow members of his office, who think Judge Sabo is very fair. But they don't attach any exhibits, no affidavits, no respect for this Court. They come and they make this plea but when they perform as attorneys, they perform outside of all acceptable rules and bounds of propriety. I just want to say that's shocking.

Now, I don't want to go into a point-by-point rebuttal because I think our position has been amply made, but I do want to talk about some things. Counsel refers to the record where the defense asked Your Honor to put the race of the jurors into the record so that an appellate court could see what they then predicted would happen and indeed did happen, and that is, namely, representatives of the District Attorney's Office did what they ordinarily do, and that is they struck 11 of 15 jurors who were African Americans to reduce the number of Jurors on that Jury. But when that request was made to the Court, Your Honor denied that request. And you said instead what he now reads from the record. You put it on the record, I'm not going to do it. But, you see, the plea with the Court was Your Honor, don't make us turn this into a racial issue. There are racial issues here but we think the Court ought to state for the record so that Counsel doesn't have to the race of jurors that an appellate court could review it. They were trying to reduce the level of --

THE COURT: Counselor, you have to understand that at that time that was not the law. But I did say to them if you want to ask the juror his race. I can't look at him and say his race is a certain race. Ask him. And if they had asked then they would have it on the record.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, but you put the defense Counsel in a difficult position.

THE COURT: No, it is not difficult. You just ask.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, lay people come into a courtroom, they don't know the rules. They sit in the witness chair and the lawyer says to them first question, what race are you, they seem ridiculous, if not inflammatory. If not provocative. It undermines the credibility of the lawyer.

THE COURT: I don't care who asked, whether it would be the Commonwealth or the defense, I said be my guest.

MR. WEINGLASS: The defense is the only one interested, Judge. The defense was the one who asked for it.

THE COURT: Well, if they are interested then they have to. Or if they could have waited until the juror left the Courtroom, because we had individual voir dire, they could have waited until the juror left the Courtroom and then put on the record the race of that individual. I have no objection to that.

MR. WEINGLASS: The fact of the matter is this, Your Honor: You refused the request.

THE COURT: I didn't refuse the request. I said --

MR. WEINGLASS: You refused to put the race --

THE COURT: I don't think it's my responsibility to do that.

MR. WEINGLASS: Precisely.

THE COURT: And that wasn't the law at that time, Counselor. So if you want to put it on the record you wait until the juror leaves the Courtroom.

MR. WEINGLASS: I'm very glad Your Honor said that wasn't your responsibility.

THE COURT: It isn't.

MR. WEINGLASS: Because what happened is, in Mr. Jamal exercising his rights, he excused one juror peremptorily, who was an African American male.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: And what happened when he did that? Your Honor put on the record --

THE COURT: Right.

MR. WEINGLASS: -- the race of that juror.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. WEINGLASS: So that an appellate court could see that Mr. Jamal had excused one juror. But when the prosecutor excused --

THE COURT: They could have done the same thing after the juror was excused. He could have done the same thing. He didn't have to ask the juror if he didn't want to.

MR. WEINGLASS: But the question remains why did Your Honor intervene at that moment.

Page 64.

THE COURT: Because he was making an issue of race and that's why I figured they ought to know the race of the person that he is striking.

MR. WEINGLASS: So you were correcting the record for the benefit of the Commonwealth.

THE COURT: No, I am not correcting the record for anybody; I am saying they could have done the same thing. I didn't stop anybody from doing that.

MR. WEINGLASS: But you didn't do it for any of the 11 that were struck by the prosecution.

THE COURT: Because nobody asked me to do it.

MR. WEINGLASS: No one asked you to do it when Mr. Jamal struck a juror but you did it on your own.

THE COURT: Okay. After the juror had left. But not while the juror was here.

MR. WEINGLASS: You did it but you didn't do it for any of the 11 that they struck. Af --

THE COURT: I don't even remember, if anybody had complained I would have made a record of it. If the defense had said I want to make a record of that juror's race that has just been excused, if they had they would have done it.

MR. WEINGLASS: Let me ask you: Your Honor says you made that record against Mr. Jamal with no one asking you.

THE COURT: I didn't make the record.

MR. WEINGLASS: You put it on the record.

THE COURT: I put it on the record, sure, because everybody was making an issue, at least the defense was.

MR. WEINGLASS: You didn't put it on any of their 11 strikes.

THE COURT: Because nobody asked me about that. If the defense --

MR. WEINGLASS: For the Defendant.

THE COURT: Counselor, please, I am not going to argue with you about it.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I just want to say a few other things. They bring up the Reed case where the court refused the defendant the right to have a psychiatric exam. They explained why the court did it. I don't want to quarrel with that. The problem and the reason why we submitted it was because the comment that Your Honor made when you denied this Defendant his right to a psychiatrist. You recall your comment? Your comment was you might as well mine for gold while you're at it.

THE COURT: Well, because the Court has to look where it could spend it's money. We don't have, we don't have OJ Simpson here who could afford to spend millions of dollars, and the court can't spend millions of dollars on every case. We have Court psychiatrists that are impartial and they examine all Defendants.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am not quarreling with the substance of your decision. Although I do take issue with it.

THE COURT: If you are not quarreling with the substance of my decision then what are we arguing about?

MR. WEINGLASS: I am quarreling with the insensitivity of the comment.

THE COURT: No insensitivity, Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: A man is on trial for his life.

THE COURT: Fine, I realize that. He was on trial for his life. He wanted to disrupt the proceedings. And his attorney came to me before the case even started and said he doesn't want me to participate. He doesn't want me to even cross-examine the witnesses. And I said to him, as the Supreme Court has already ruled, that you must disregard such an instruction, you must defend that Defendant to the best of his ability. And I said to him you are legally, morally and ethically required to defend him to the best of your ability. And I said if you don't I am going to hold you in contempt and I am going to commit him, and that's what I told him.

MR. WEINGLASS: And you did hold him in contempt.

THE COURT: If he doesn't follow that instruction, yes. I don't remember what contempt I held him for. And this was, I don't even know if this was on the record, because this was as I was beginning to leave the Courtroom, Joe McGill, the Assistant D.A., and Anthony Jackson came up to me, and that's when they explained to me what the Defendant wanted him to do. And I said I don't want you to follow those instructions: You are legally, morally and ethically required to defend him to the best of your ability. And you better cross-examine every witness that is put on that stand to the best of your ability.

Now, if that show bias on my part so be it. I was interested in seeing that he got a fair trial.

THE COURT OFFICER: Order in the court.

THE COURT: Please, I told you before we are not out on the street. You are in a Court of law. You will maintain proper decorum here. If you act up you will be excluded from the Courtroom.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, there was one comment made by the Assistant District Attorney which I think ought to be responded to. He indicated that Mr. Jamal said that he intended to disrupt the proceedings. Your Honor can look through the 18 volumes as I have and you will not find one single reference by Mr. Jamal to the fact that he ever intended to disrupt the proceedings. You find the opposite.

He kept reassuring the Court I have no intention of disrupting this trial, I only want to have my interests protected. That's what he kept saying to Your Honor. So for Counsel to say that, that's Counsel's own imagination. If he can find one reference in maybe 4,000 pages of transcript where Mr. Jamal ever said he wanted to disrupt these proceedings, then I will retract that.

THE COURT: All right, I will let him answer that.

MR. WEINGLASS: But I don't think there is a single reference where he said that.

MR. BURNS: Your Honor, I am not saying that there is any place where the Defendant stood up and said I am going to disrupt the proceedings now, no. What the Defendant did was he said I am following my personal strategy of John Africa and then he would proceed to disrupt the proceedings. And of course he constantly denied it. You know, you brought him in one time, and I don't know whether it was the fifth time or the tenth time, and you said will you please be courteous now and not disrupt the proceedings. The Defendant said I've never been disruptive. Laughable. Laughable, Your Honor. Really.

THE COURT: He was making a -- and I don't know if the record shows this but he was making frequent contacts with a female MOVE member, I forgot her name.

MR. BURNS: The record shows he was constantly conferring with, one was Theresa Africa, and there may have been another individual. But you allowed him to refer -- confer, pardon me.

THE COURT: And he was following their orders.

MR. WEINGLASS: He was?

THE COURT: I said he must have been following their orders.

MR. WEINGLASS: I beg your pardon?

THE COURT: Well, because he came back in, I guess they told him to come back.

MR. BURNS: Whether or not he was following someone else's orders or what he was following -- what he said was his personal strategy, the strategy of John Africa -- the fact is the Defendant proceeded on a daily basis to disrupt the proceedings. Now, whether or not he affirmed that by saying I am going to disrupt the proceedings now, no, that is not our claim. Our claim is that he went ahead and did it, that his actions speak more loudly than anything else he could have said.

THE COURT: In other words, you're saying his actions tell us what his words were.

MR. BURNS: Yes, Your Honor.

MR. WEINGLASS: Now that we have brought the question of the record to the fore, Counsel has receded somewhat and said that well, the record doesn't show that he ever said that. But Counsel did represent to this Court ten minutes ago that he said that, and he never said that.

As a matter of fact, he never said that he is following the strategy of John Africa, he never said that either. That is another one of Counsel's inferences.

MR. BURNS: The record will show that he did, Your Honor.

MR. WEINGLASS: Innuendo.

THE COURT: Did you say something? I thought he answered you. Did you answer him?

MR. WEINGLASS: Please.

Page 72.

MR. BURNS: Your Honor, I would say that the record shows that he did say that he was following the strategy of John Africa.

MR. WEINGLASS: Really? Again I will stand corrected. I would appreciate that.

MR. BURNS: We will prepare a memorandum later today with the reference.

MR. WEINGLASS: That is not the record, Judge.

MR. GRANT: I could help Mr. Weinglass.

Charles Grant on behalf of the Commonwealth.

With Your Honor's permission: On June 2lst, 1982, during the course of the trial, Mr. Jackson, his previously back-up attorney, then forced into the role because the Defendant refused to participate as primary Counsel, stated to Your Honor --

MR. WEINGLASS: Mr. Jackson.

THE COURT: Just a minute.

MR. GRANT: Quote, quote, there may be additional comment from Mr. Jamal that I would like. My consultation with Mr. Jamal results in my representing to the Court that, indeed, notwithstanding the Supreme Court order, notwithstanding Your Honor's order, Mr. Jamal will continue to act according to the strategy of John Africa, and that is consistent with his consultations with Theresa Africa as well as my participation in his defense.

Then on June 26th, transcript page 37, notes of testimony, Mr. Jackson again addresses the Court.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, this doesn't respond to my request --

THE COURT: Counselor, please.

MR. WEINGLASS: Mr. Jackson said a lot of things.

THE COURT: I just want to hear what he is going to say. I will give you another chance at it.

Go ahead. Go ahead. Sorry for the interruption.

MR. GRANT: Quite all right, Your Honor. Mr. Jackson, quote; I just consulted with Jannet or Janet Africa, who has advised me to tell Mr. Jamal that he should come into Court and not say anything, not interrupt the order and process of the trial. Mr. Jamal has indicated to me that he plans to act consistent with the advice of Janet Africa in that he will remain in Court and not interrupt and will be quiet.

MR. WEINGLASS: Which shows that Mr. Jamal was obviously not into disrupting the proceeding. If in fact he was following the strategy of John Africa. But, Your Honor, my position stands.

THE COURT: This is his attorney saying that.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, it is not his attorney. Your Honor, you know it is not his attorney. It's his --

THE COURT: It was his attorney as far as the trial is concerned.

MR. WEINGLASS: The attorney who you imposed on him who didn't want the case and who he didn't want.

THE COURT: Who didn't want him?

MR. WEINGLASS: Mr. Jamal didn't want him.

THE COURT: I know that but sometimes we have to have an attorney appointed for him whether he wants it or he doesn't want it.

Page 75.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I just wanted to say a few other things. There was no statement in writing from witness Priscilla Durham who claims she heard Mr. Jamal's statement in the hospital. That was a misstatement of Counsel. She testified I hand wrote a statement that night but that statement mysteriously disappeared. What the prosecution produced was a statement which she denied knowing anything about, which was typed up allegedly by someone else, who was never produced. And that statement is the statement he is referring to.

THE COURT: Counselor, here we are talking about recusal. This is something, what has that got to do with recusal?

MR. WEINGLASS: No, what it has to do with recusal is Your Honor allowed it although it was improper.

THE COURT: Well, it was a legal decision and the Supreme Court reviews these things.

MR. WEINGLASS: They didn't review that one.

THE COURT: Well, we don't know. They reviewed the entire record.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, his own Counsel never read the record.

THE COURT: They don't have to because if you read the Supreme Court's opinion, they have gone into matters that were not brought up and were technically considered as waived but the Court said in fairness they would still make a decision on it. Which they did. When the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania speaks, I follow. That's it.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am going to hold you to that, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Absolutely. Whatever they tell me is what I do.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor was reversed last Friday, July --

THE COURT: Last Friday by what?

MR. WEINGLASS: By the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

THE COURT: When did they reverse me?

MR. WEINGLASS: Fahy case.

THE COURT: They didn't, they just granted a stay and they sent --

MR. WEINGLASS: To Your Honor's --

Page 77.

THE COURT: Because there was no reason for me to grant a stay at that time.

MR. WEINGLASS: And he took an appeal.

THE COURT: He took an appeal.

MR. WEINGLASS: And the Supreme Court --

THE COURT: The Supreme Court decided that they wanted him to have the PCR matter that they had previously denied him. Because if you went into the record, when it came down to me it came down with one issue only. And I had the Defendant's attorney in there, and the D.A., Assistant D.A. in my room, and I suggested that they go back, because the D.A. wanted them to present the entire issue at that time. And I said look, the Supreme Court is telling me one thing, I can't deviate from this. I suggest you go back to the Supreme Court and ask them for permission to do this. They did and the Supreme Court denied it. So I couldn't do anything else. I don't consider that reversal.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, the simple fact is you denied the stay.

THE COURT: I denied the stay at that time and I said send it immediately to the

Supreme Court, let them decide what they want to do with it.

MR. WEINGLASS: What did they decide?

THE COURT: Well, they decided to send it back for a PCR hearing. That's perfectly all right for me. And then they stayed it because they said that the Defendant would have 30 days to file his petition. And then the Commonwealth has a right to answer and they want me to decide it within 60 days. It's all right with me. Now; if you say I don't have jurisdiction, why are they sending it back to me?

MR. WEINGLASS: The simple fact is you denied the stay, the Supreme Court ordered the stay.

THE COURT: Fine. Because I had no reason to grant the stay at that time. As far as I was concerned, I heard the matter and I could make a decision, which I did within the proper time. If someone else needs additional time, that's up to them to stay it. That doesn't mean anything.

MR. WEINGLASS: You didn't think he needed additional time.

THE COURT: I didn't think so. But if the Supreme Court thinks so, fine.

MR. WEINGLASS: Fine, I will rest on that.

THE COURT: Fine.

MR. BURNS: Your Honor, the Supreme Court decided to grant a stay in a case in which you decided not to. If that has something to do with recusal, I don't know.

THE COURT: I don't know.

MR. BURNS: I don't know either.

THE COURT: I don't know either.

MR. BURNS: I think we are finished as well, Your Honor.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Could we indicate Judge Sabo laughing on the record.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, and correct me if I am wrong on this, and this is my last observation: I had been told by those who studied the record that your entire tenure on the bench you have not granted a stay.

THE COURT: I don't know. I probably didn't have a reason to grant the stay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, you can't remember one instance where you granted a stay.

THE COURT: Counselor, it is not up to me to do that. If the appellate Court needs more time to stay a case, they can grant the stay. The Governor can grant the stay. They could even give him a pardon. It is out of my jurisdiction, it has nothing to do with me.

MR. WEINGLASS: You have the power.

THE COURT: I may have the power, if I think I need it. In other words, if I need to grant that stay because I can't make my decision within the proper time, yes, I could do it. Or send it up immediately to the Supreme Court and they could grant the stay.

MR. WEINGLASS: But you have never done it.

THE COURT: I don't know whether I have or I haven't. All I could say is if I needed the time I would grant it. If I didn't need the time I wouldn't grant it. The United States Supreme Court refuses stays also. Does that mean that somehow they are wrong? The Pennsylvania Supreme Court has denied stays also. Does that mean they are wrong?

MR. WEINGLASS: No, I just know of no other jurist who has an unblemished record. Who has never --

THE COURT: Counselor, I don't answer for any other judges, I answer only for what I do. I have no control over what other judges do. Each judge must decide for himself.

MR. WEINGLASS: We are only asking Your Honor to answer for what you do.

THE COURT: That's right, that's all I am going to do. I am not going to answer for anybody else. I can't answer for anybody else.

I have given serious thought to this, gentlemen, and I see no reason why this Court should recuse itself. I feel that I was fair to him during his trial and I could be fair to him at this time. For that reason I deny your motion for recusal.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I have a copy of the order denying the motion. May I hand it to the Court Crier? A copy to Counsel (handing).

THE COURT: What is your pleasure, gentlemen? Do you want to break for lunch or whatever you want to do.

MR. WEINGLASS: I think we could go on with the writ. I won't be long on that.

THE COURT: All right. Go ahead.

Page 82.

MR. WEINGLASS: Is Your Honor going to sign the denial of the recusal?

THE COURT: I will do what I have to do, Counselor, don't worry about it. Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, sir. It's just that --

THE COURT: I know, Counselor. I will do what I have to do. I have already told you what my ruling is. I will do what I have to do.

MR. WEINGLASS: Now, as the Court has already been told, with respect to the granting of a stay on the date of execution which is set for August 17th, 1995, approximately one month and one week from today, give or take a few days? In that one month and one week that's left there is a great deal of litigation that must occur.

First, the Assistant District Attorney must answer a very lengthy discovery motion which we filed five weeks ago, which they have told us they will not even begin to answer until after today's proceedings. I assume that's going to take a considerable amount of time to answer. Then, under the PCRA discovery must be done by both parties. We are going to have to examine the materials they provide us, we are going to have to bring before this Court matters that perhaps they will refuse to provide us. There will have to be hearings on those issues.

There will have to be a full discovery proceeding which is contemplated by the post-conviction statute. And then following that there has to be what is referred to in the case law as a full, fair and adequate hearing on the 19 issues that we raise in our petition. Your Honor's going to have to hear from lawyers, from experts, from witnesses. You are going to have to hear new evidence that's been provided. You are going to hear from investigators. And that full, fair and adequate hearing is going to consume a number of weeks, as I presently estimate. And I haven't even received the discovery yet which I am sure when it is made is going to increase the period of time of a hearing.

This is Mr. Jamal's first post-conviction application. And it's his first attempt to exercise his rights to discovery and to a full hearing. And neither of those events can occur in the remaining five or six weeks to the execution date, so a writ to stay the execution is absolutely essential for an indefinite period of time so that these matters could be adequately and properly and carefully considered in many ways.

I will just say -- this is an editorial comment -- from our perception we have reached this point because adequate care wasn't taken in the first place. Sufficient monies weren't provided, resources weren't provided. The case was moved rather quickly.

THE COURT: Well, money was provided, Counselor. Judge

Ribner provided money.

MR. WEINGLASS: A hundred and fifty dollars.

THE COURT: Well, that's all we were allowed to do at that time unless they would file a petition that they needed more money, why they needed more money.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, there were -- constant -- and I don't want to get into an argument on this -- there were constant requests through the months of March, April and May --

THE COURT: Written requests?

MR. WEINGLASS: -- by Mr. Jackson for more money.

THE COURT: Written requests?

MR. WEINGLASS: Oral requests.

THE COURT: Well, he has to provide the Court with what he has done with the money that's been allocated to him so far and why he needs additional money. He is supposed to do that in writing so that the Court, the Commonwealth could answer and the Court could make a decision.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I don't want to get into arguments over whether or not the Court --

THE COURT: Well, don't tell me it wasn't awarded. Initially Judge Ribner did award this money. And that was under the rules that we operated under.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right, but I don't want to get into an.argument at this point as to whether the Court erred or whether his Counsel erred. But as I pointed out before, either Mr. Jamal's rights were compromised through a rush through for time and lack of resources and -- I am only saying this -- I hope it doesn't happen again. Finally, we are at the point where no shortcuts ought to be taken. Things ought to be done properly, promptly, and set before the Court promptly.

THE COURT: Promptly?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Mr. Jamal is not asking for a dime from this Court, he is asking no money from the taxpayers of Pennsylvania.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: But he is asking for the least thing to which he is entitled to, which is time to examine the discovery materials, time to prepare his witnesses, time to put on fact-intensive hearings, all of which he is entitled to and none of which can occur in the next five weeks.

Now, Your Honor, five weeks have passed. We put our papers in Court on June 5th, but it was the Commonwealth, or the Assistant District Attorney, that hasn't been able to respond in time.

THE COURT: If he wasn't able to do it, a stay will be considered. Let's hear from the D.A. What is your position?

MR. BURNS: Thank you, Your Honor. On the stay question, as to that last comment, I think we've had about half as many weeks to answer these filings as the defense has had years. I think our filings were done in a fairly rapid fashion.

In order to obtain a stay the defense has to show you that there is a likelihood of success on the merits. And it is the Defendant's burden to do that. The PCRA requires the Defendant to plead and prove that each one of their claims is not waived or barred under the PCRA statute. Specifically, the claim wasn't raised at trial or direct appeal. The Defendant has to plead and prove why that waiver is excused. And if it is a claim that was litigated on appeal in the Supreme Court, the Defendant has to show that there is some justification for raising the claim again, and generally such claims can not be raised in the PCRA.

The defense presents us in the stay petition 10 separate items, and every one of them falls under the category of either having been raised, not raised at trial, not raised on direct appeal, or having been litigated on direct appeal in the Supreme Court. Such as, well, such that every single one of these claims would be barred on the PCRA.

Now, today in argument the defense has made some rather broad references to ineffective assistance of prior Counsel, either trial Counsel or appellate Counsel. Well, that is not in the stay petition but let's not quibble about it, if they have some evidence that such ineffectiveness took place -- remember, they must prove ineffective assistance -- well, now is the time. Now is the time for them to present witnesses to show that there is a likelihood of success on the merits sufficient for them to have a stay to have this extended litigation of the PCRA petition which Mr. Weinglass has described to you.

Incidentally, mention was made by Counsel that there has to be a delay for discovery. My understanding is that we advised the defense that there wasn't going to be any discovery. The trial is over, and pre-trial discovery is one thing. There is no provision for discovery under the PCRA. And I believe that would be our position as to the discovery motion. So there is no need for delaying matters in order for us to provide discovery: We are not going to be providing any discovery.

As far as the stay petition goes: Far from showing that there is a likelihood of success on the merits, it would be fair to say that the stay petition demonstrates the opposite, that there is no likelihood of success on the merits, because the petition fails to show that any of the claims are even cognizable.

Now, the stay could be denied on that ground alone, and properly so. But there is also the question of intentional delay. The Defendant's own filing, his own stay petition indicates that as early as 1989 his attorneys began working on the current PCRA petition. That was six years ago. That is something that the Defendant says in his own petition.

This Defendant is also different, I would submit, than other defendants who may have come before you, who stated that they had been unrepresented up until the point that the death warrant was signed and that they now realize that they had to proceed with the PCRA. This Defendant represents that he was represented. In fact, Mr. Weinglass -- and this is part of our filing -- told the Philadelphia Tribune, I believe it was in February, that the defense did not intend to file it's PCRA until the Governor signed the warrant of execution. And sure enough, I don't know how many years it was after the direct appeal, after the cert petition was denied in 1990, which is when the defense was first procedurally able to file a PCRA, nothing was filed until this, well, this past month of 1995. The Governor announced that the warrant had been signed on Friday, I believe it was June 1st or 2nd, and the defense filing took place the following Monday. And it was a stack of papers this thick (displaying). I think this is about 6 inches. This wasn't put together over the weekend. So I think it is clear that this matter was being worked on for a considerable period of time, possibly a matter of years. Certainly what we have on the record now indicates that. Yet the defense literally chose not to file until now, until the warrant of execution was signed, until time had been compressed. That's not a basis for granting a stay; that is a basis for denying the stay.

Now, the defense filing offers some excuses for, purported excuses for not acting more quickly. I would like to go over them, and I submit that they are spurious. The first thing it says is that the record was with the Governor. Indicating, I suppose, that they couldn't get a look at it. I just received, no, I received a lot of papers from the defense today for the first time, and one of them indicates that the defense was actually offering to -- you could look at the attachments yourself -- one of them indicates that the defense was actually offering to supplement the record for the Governor. According to the Supreme Court Prothonotary, when they send or certify the record to the Governor they don't send it away, they keep a copy. It was available here in the Supreme Court. There is no indication that the defense asked to see the record in the Governor's possession, there is no indication that the defense asked the Court to see it's copy, no indication that the defense asked former Counsel to see their notes of testimony. They certainly did not ask us. That is not an excuse for a delay.

They state that the record was in some way incomplete. They don't explain why the record wasn't in some way complete. And they don't specify why that impeded them from filing the PCRA or why it stopped impeding them when the warrant of execution was signed. Because it's been filed and apparently the record is still incomplete in whatever way it was incomplete before.

They have stated that evidence was suppressed by the Commonwealth. They say that they have evidence to this effect. Well, now is the time to put on the witnesses to establish that, if they can.

They say that they had difficulty getting information from the FBI. Now, you can go through this stack of papers (displaying), Your Honor, and you can try and find the claim that has something to do with the FBI. It's not here. What the FBI has to do with this case I really do not know. This was a Philadelphia murder, investigated by the Philadelphia Police, prosecuted by the Philadelphia District

Attorney's Office. What does the FBI have to do with the case? Why was it necessary to delay filing the PCRA until they had received information from the FBI? That is totally unclear.

THE COURT: I thought you said they already filed a PCRA.

MR. BURNS: No, they stated that they delayed filing the PCRA because they were waiting to get information from the Federal --

THE COURT: We have their PCRA now.

MR. BURNS: We do now. But this is their reason that they state in their stay petition, their reason for not filing it sooner. Even though they had stated elsewhere that they intentionally didn't file it until after the warrant of execution had been signed.

Finally, they say that prison officials were intercepting the Defendant's mail. I don't know the details about it, I would like to see the witnesses testifying about it. I do imagine that a prison is entitled to look in a convict's mail to make sure that someone is not mailing them a bomb or drugs or a gun or some such thing, but how this interfered with the filing of the PCRA petition is not explained. And if it interfered it is not clear why it ceased to interfere with the filing of a petition at the moment the warrant of execution was signed.

So none of these things suggest any excuse for what appears to be a deliberate and calculated delay in filing the PCRA petition, in waiting until the very last possible moment, until the moment that the Governor finally signed the warrant of execution. And of course that took place five years after the original certiorari petition to the U.S. Supreme Court was denied.

Now, the Defendant has said that, one of his arguments is of other defendants who asked for a stay when they are filing the first PCRA: They all got one so I should get one too. And he says that this creates a Constitutional liberty interest. Well, there are two answers to that. First of all, this Defendant is not like all those other defendants. He has indicated that he had representation from as long ago as 1989 in preparing this PCRA. He was not unrepresented as they were.

And also the Supreme Court in the Dumshad case, which we have cited in our filing, has held that the fact that other defendants who are situated as you are received something does not create any right, no liberty interest, no other kind of right in you, the defendant, in your seeking a similar form of relief.

Now, those are two sound, I submit, bases for denying the stay.

Now, the Defendant has indicated that in order to show the likelihood of success on the merits he is capable of introducing investigators, witnesses. We are not saying they should put on their entire PCRA case, but in order to show that there is a likelihood of success on the merits on at least a couple of claims, on at least perhaps the matter of ineffective assistance, it is their obligation in asking for a stay to put those witnesses on the stand and to put them on the stand today. And I believe the Court should order them to do so in order to make a factual showing that there is a likelihood of success, in order to lay a foundation for their request for a stay. And if they fail to do that, the stay should be denied.

Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, just briefly: It's true what Counsel hinted at in the midst of his argument: No petitioner in the history of Pennsylvania in Mr. Jamal's position has ever been denied a stay. No petitioner who has his first PCRA and has already filed nearly 500 pages of documents, including affidavits, has ever been denied a stay so that he could have a full hearing to make out his claims. If they are suggesting that Mr. Jamal is the first in the history of Pennsylvania to be denied a stay, and Your Honor agrees with it, so be it. But as Your Honor sits there, you know that in 1995 the Pennsylvania Supreme Court has spoken on two cases, neither one of which is cited by the Assistant District Attorney, where petitioners in Mr. Jamal's position, who had not even filed their petitions, yet were granted a stay by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court so that the provisions of the Post-Conviction Relief Act may be exercised by the petitioner before he faces execution. And that one case is the Rolan case -- R-O-L-A-N -- where the petitioner waited not the four years, but he waited six years.

And when a warrant was signed he didn't wait two days, he waited two months. And when his case was called he didn't have a petition, he didn't have a single paper filed in court (displaying), but he asked for a stay anyway. And what did the Pennsylvania Supreme Court do? They granted him a stay so he could file his petition.

We are so far ahead in this case of where Petitioner Rolan was that Your Honor, I think that Your Honor has no alternative but to follow what the Supreme Court did in the Rolan case.

I thought the Rolan case was out of another county. I was shocked to see that the Rolan case is out of Philadelphia, handled by the District Attorney's office. They have an obligation to tell Your Honor about that case but they didn't.

And, Your Honor, we already discussed -- and I don't want to go back over it again -- last Friday the Supreme Court spoke again, this time ordering a stay when Your Honor didn't. Saying no matter what the delay is here, or any other issue, a person in the State of Pennsylvania, Commonwealth, facing execution, who brings before the Court matters that ought to be heard, should be heard before he is executed. How can the Assistant District Attorney take any other position in the name of simple justice and humanity than that? And I will tell you how because it's in their papers. On page 29 is writing that I thought would not see the light of day from a public agency that is so grotesque and cold as to be unbelievable. They wrote -- and I want to quote from their papers -- the death penalty is the law. It is the highest exercise of the State's authority. It should not be lightly disturbed. Defendant would of course contend that he would suffer irreparable injury if he is executed. But this argument assumes that death is an injury. That is improper. And then they go on to say the carrying out of a valid death sentence cannot constitute irreparable injury for purposes of requesting a stay.

To my knowledge, no other public agency of the United States has ever intimated in writing to a court of law that an execution is not an irreparable injury. Their position here is so desperate, is so unprecedented, that they have no alternative but to stoop to the lowest level that is conceivable to argue that executing someone does not constitute an injury.

Your Honor, I discussed the Rolan case and I discussed the Fahy case. Both cases out of Philadelphia. Neither case having a petition filed in Court. Neither case, he discusses we haven't shown waiver. Those cases didn't even show that they had an argument. We have outlined 19 arguments, with affidavits, with exhibits, all calling for a hearing. They say it is a waiver. That is interesting they say waiver. Waiver, Your Honor, is a fact issue. Waiver requires a hearing to see if in fact there was waiver. Have we set out any basis to give this Court an understanding that a hearing will show there wasn't a waiver? Yes, we have given you the affidavit of Tony Jackson where he says I didn't even consider issues. Where he said on a death penalty case I didn't even talk to the two eyewitnesses who I called. Not even talked to them and he called them to the stand.

Your Honor knows that. Midway through Veronica Jones' testimony you stopped Tony Jackson and you said to Tony Jackson have you talked to this witness, this eyewitness you are calling in the defense of Mr. Jamal. He said no, I have never talked to her. You said well, we'll take a brief recess so you could talk to her in the hall. Is this the way a death penalty case is defended under standards of due process in the United States? You have to have a hearing to hear that out.

We have an affidavit here from Mr. Hawkins, who is seated here at Counsels' table, where he informs the Court under oath that the lawyer who took his appeal to the Supreme Court never read the record. Is that conceivable? Is this how we execute a person? That's why we have to stay. That's why we have to --

THE COURT: When can you start producing your witnesses?

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

THE COURT: When could you produce your witnesses?

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I can't answer that question simply but I will try.

THE COURT: I hope you would.

MR. WEINGLASS: Under the PCRA

provisions we are entitled to post-conviction discovery. That they made discovery pre-trial is of no moment.

THE COURT: He says you don't. I will tell you what: Why don't both of you research the law.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, we've had discussions on the law already.

THE COURT: Not discussions. You want me to rule on it. You research the law. You Xerox a case that satisfies your position.

Commonwealth, do the same thing. Okay. And I will hold it under advisement.

MR. WEINGLASS: On the question of whether or not --

THE COURT: Everything. As far as the stay is concerned too.

MR. WEINGLASS: We have already, Your Honor, given this Court over 300 pages.

THE COURT: I know you gave me 300 pages, but I would like to hear something under oath for a change.

MR. WEINGLASS: You have 13 affidavits and 47 exhibits.

THE COURT: I would like to hear that from the witness stand here under oath so that each side can cross-examine. All right?

MR. WEINGLASS: That's what we are asking for.

THE COURT: I was asking you when can you start that.

MR. WEINGLASS: We can start that process --

THE COURT: Tomorrow? Today? Tomorrow?

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor, we are in this position because of the precise thing you are suggesting: The Court's rushing when there is no need to rush.

THE COURT: Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: When we have to have an opportunity to hear --

THE COURT: I am asking you. I mean he says there is no, he said you don't have a right to discovery. I am giving you an opportunity to research the law and give it to me. If you are right I will rule with you. If the Commonwealth is right then I will rule with them. I am giving you time to do that. All I am asking you is when do you think you could begin putting some witnesses on this stand.

MR. WEINGLASS: I will answer that after I see what they turn over in discovery after Your Honor rules in our favor that we are entitled to discovery. And I will answer that.

THE COURT: Okay, I will give you time to research the law. How much time do you need?

MR. WEINGLASS: To research the law on the issue of discovery?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: We will probably need at least 10 days.

THE COURT: 10 days?

MR. WEINGLASS: 10 days.

THE COURT: 10 days? We are only in Pennsylvania: I am not researching the law for the whole 50 states.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, to research the law, to answer our first papers, just two papers --

THE COURT: Not --

MR. WEINGLASS: -- the Assistant District Attorney took five weeks. That's why we are so late. And Your Honor set this hearing down for July 24th. We are here early.

Page 104.

THE COURT: I didn't set that down, the Court Administration did.

MR. WEINGLASS: We are here early because we insisted on it, that's why we are here early.

THE COURT: That is fine. That's what I am trying to do, to get this matter resolved.

MR. WEINGLASS: We are here early because we wanted it.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: And we will proceed if you will give us enough time to allow us to prepare the case. 10 days, Your Honor.

THE COURT: How much time do you need?

MR. WEINGLASS: You gave them five weeks to answer our papers.

THE COURT: I didn't give them anything.

MR. WEINGLASS: They got five weeks.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. BURNS: May I respond, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes, sure. How much time do you need to research the law on that issue?

MR. BURNS: I submit that discovery is not at all an issue in the stay matter. The defense has represented to you that they have evidence right now, that they have investigators, that they have witnesses who will testify the Commonwealth suppressed evidence. What do they need discovery for? This is the basis for the stay, Your Honor. We are not talking about litigating the PCRA. They have to make a good faith showing that they could prevail on the merits in order to get a stay in the first place. And if as they say they have such evidence it should be eminently possible to put the witnesses on the stand right now.

So there is no need for discovery. They claim that they have this evidence already, not that we need to give it to them.

MR. WEINGLASS: We claim, Your Honor --

MR. BURNS: Can I continue, Your Honor? I think I let Mr. Weinglass speak, I have a few more things to say.

THE COURT: Gentlemen, take it easy.

MR. WEINGLASS: Sorry. I thought he was gathering his papers and leaving.

THE COURT: Go ahead.

MR. BURNS: Mr. Weinglass once again

misrepresented something: He stood and read to you what I had written and he read it incorrectly. I wrote that the death verdict is an injury, and that is in quotes, i.e., that it is improper. Meaning that for purposes of looking for a stay, you have to show that the imposition of the sentence is unlawful. Not simply that there will be a sentence imposed. The imposition of a lawful sentence under the law is not improper. And it's not, legally speaking, an injury.

The Rolan case which was mentioned by Mr. Weinglass was a situation in which the defendant was unrepresented up until the time that the warrant of execution was signed, the exact opposite of the situation that we have here. In the Duffy case the Supreme Court denied a stay. And that was, that ruling was affirmed by the Third Circuit. So it is not as though everyone who comes in front of the Supreme Court gets a stay just for the asking.

The situation, the reference to Mr. Jackson in not talking to a witness: Mr. Jackson said on the record the Defendant wouldn't tell him who the witnesses were. He was finding out who the witnesses were when the Defendant revealed that information to him just as they were taking the stand. As a matter of fact, there was 15 character witnesses, not one of which was given to the Commonwealth as required by the discovery rules because the Defendant refused to reveal the names to the Commonwealth or Mr. Jackson.

So it is not surprising that Mr. Jackson didn't talk to the witnesses. What that has to do with the need for a stay is difficult to assess without something coming from the witness stand. The Defendant said they have the evidence now. They should be ordered to present it now.

Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, with respect to applications for a stay, what they are saying is this: If the verdict is legal, then the death penalty is not an irreparable injury. But they are saying let's not have a hearing to see if the verdict is legal. Let's have the death penalty first and the hearing later.

THE COURT: That's why he wanted to have the hearing now. I am asking you when could you bring these witnesses in that you say that you have?

MR. WEINGLASS: We would be prepared --

THE COURT: Tomorrow?

MR. WEINGLASS: We could do it --

THE COURT: Today?

MR. WEINGLASS: Within 60 days after we get discovery.

THE COURT: No.

MR. WEINGLASS: After we get discovery from the people --

THE COURT: Forget it, Counselor. I will take it under advisement but you will have to supply me with some cases on that. I just can't, you just can't ask for 60 days.

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

THE COURT: You can't just ask for a 60-day stay.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am asking Your Honor for discovery.

THE COURT: Counselor, and I am telling you what I want. I want from you and I want from the Commonwealth Xeroxed copies of cases that support your views as to whether you are entitled to discovery or whether you are not. He is saying that you have to at least put some witnesses on there to show that a stay would be justified. And I am asking you when can you do that. And can you do it tomorrow? Can you do it Friday? Can you do it Monday?

MR. WEINGLASS: Mr. Hawkins, Your Honor.

MR. HAWKINS: Your Honor, if I may: I have litigated death penalty cases across the country. The standard for a stay as I understand it, from Barefoot versus Estelle, which is a case from my old office the NAACP in the Supreme Court, says if you can show that there is a reasonable question as to the merits of the issues -- not are issues, not are issues more probable than not, but reasonable jurists could differ on the merits of particular issues -- that is sufficient for a stay in the first instance. I know of no hearing that I've ever had or that exists in the law -- and we can certainly supply Your Honor with law as to that in three days -- that says that in order to get a stay of execution that you must put on witnesses. That is unheard of, Your Honor. If the issues themselves are sufficiently meritorious, that in and of itself is enough for a stay.

THE COURT: How is the Court going to know whether it is meritorious or not?

MR. HAWKINS: Your Honor --

THE COURT: Only by somebody who takes the stand and takes an oath and is cross-examined by opposing Counsel.

MR. HAWKINS: Your Honor, that gets into the factual substance of the petition itself. I can't bootstrap a request for a stay of execution into a consideration of the merits of --

THE COURT: Well, what are you --

MR. HAWKINS: -- an actual factual resolution.

THE COURT: You are saying the stay is automatic.

MR. HAWKINS: As long as there are meritorious issues.

THE COURT: How do I know that unless somebody takes this stand and testifies under oath, that's what I am saying, and is cross-examined.

MR. HAWKINS: Your Honor, if the statements as presented in the habeas petition, if true -- and that's the law; and, Your Honor, I could supply you with law on that in three days -- taking the petition on it's face, if that raises questions that reasonable jurists could disagree on, the law is clear that a stay of execution is warranted. Your Honor, I could give you law on that in a few days.

MR. GRANT: May I respond, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. GRANT: For six years and some months, eminent Counsel have been preparing a submission of 500 pages where they make what, if it were not encased in a Court of law and legal proceedings, would be considered nothing less than slander and libel. They have been engaged in public relations, broadcasting, publication, verbal attacks, banners hanging from City Hall; and now they claim to have 47 affidavits, declarations and exhibits, and that shows on it's face that there is merit to these claims.

Well, I would suggest to you that we wouldn't be asking for evidence to be presented from the witness stand subject to cross-examination but for the fact that after having read their affidavits, their moving papers and submissions, and looked at what actually happened at the trial, there's no comparison between the two. It is as if we are talking about two entirely different events in the course of human history here.

Now, if their representations comported with the record you wouldn't need testimony. But it seems to me -- and I would submit to Your Honor, respectfully, it should be obvious to you -- that these representations can not be relied upon, for if they were able to be relied upon a stay should be decided on the papers moved by the parties. I suggest to Your Honor that these are disingenuous, intellectually dishonest. They misrepresent, misstate and misquote to the nth degree.

As a result of that, I think the only recourse for you is to say Counselor, with all due respect, come on, I don't want to hear it, you made some allegations, now is the time to put up or shut up -- and that's what I suggest we do here.

Page 113.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, let's talk about litigation. We are in a Courtroom. Litigation is where we put into the Court a document. In the ordinary course of litigation the document is answered point by point under oath. The Court then receives both sides' documents, reviews it, enters orders on discovery if they are necessary, and a hearing is set. That's litigation in death penalty cases. That's absolutely essential litigation. You don't have one side presenting you with affidavits and the other side standing up and saying we 're not answering those affidavits because we think they are false, we think that they are not true, and we think they are frivolous and that should end the matter. I think I'm dreaming. I am in a Court of law.

THE COURT: I think --

MR. WEINGLASS: This isn't done anywhere.

THE COURT: I think you ought to put them on the stand.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, I think we ought to get a response. Your Honor, no --

THE COURT: I don't care whether they respond or not. I still think we should put them under oath so that the Court could make an honest decision.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, the Court makes an honest decision after it gets both sides in writing, studies both sides.

THE COURT: No.

MR. WEINGLASS: And then enters an order for discovery.

THE COURT: I don't want to decide what they are going to answer you and they are going to give me something else. I would like to hear from this witness stand whatever witnesses you want to present. And can you do that as of tomorrow? Friday? No later than Monday I want to --

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, the local rules require an answer.

THE COURT: No, it does not require an answer. It says they don't have to answer, it is presumed to be denied.

MR. WEINGLASS: 3O days after the petition is filed there will be an interim common listing. And then it goes on to say how things proceed, exactly as I suggest.

Page 115.

THE COURT: No, it says they may answer. They don't have to answer.

MR. BURNS: Actually, Your Honor, we responded in writing.

THE COURT: Did you respond in writing?

MR. BURNS: We responded in writing to the stay petition, to the recusal petition, answering all of the substantive claims to the extent they concerned the record as it stood.

Now, there are two classes of claims. There are claims that are based on the record, which you could go to the record and look at it and see if they have any substance. And there are claims in which they say we have new evidence, we have investigators, we have witnesses, we have them and we can prove that the Commonwealth suppressed evidence.

Well, we are not asking for a full-blown PCRA hearing. We are not asking the Defendant to prove each and every one of his claims. But he has to make a showing, he has to put at least a couple witnesses on the stand that shows that there is some substance to these allegations.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, we will do that if they could provide Your Honor with law that says we must do that. I challenge them to do that. If they could provide the Court with law to back up that statement we will do it.

THE COURT: I don't care whether he has or not. But I feel in the interest of justice we ought to have somebody come in and testify under oath.

MR. WEINGLASS: And in the interest of justice, that proceeding is had after both sides have submitted to the Court in writing their positions and the Court has examined the evidence.

THE COURT: No, because I am telling you they have already answered it.

MR. WEINGLASS: They haven't answered the petition.

THE COURT: The PCRA --

MR. WEINGLASS: They haven't answered the petition.

THE COURT: He is not talking about the PCRA, he is talking about the stay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, but as Mr. Hawkins points out, the law is you do not produce evidence on the stay. What you do is if the written submissions that are in the petition raises reasonable questions the stay is granted.

THE COURT: Well, I don't know that you could say that's reasonable. You could get anybody, I guess, to sign something. I would like to have them come into Court and testify under oath.

MR. WEINGLASS: You are saying these affidavits are all false?

THE COURT: Well, I don't know. All I am saying is I would like to have them come into Court and be sworn and be cross-examined by the other side so we could have some idea.

MR. WEINGLASS: As Mr. Hawkins pointed out, that procedure which Your Honor just described is simply --

THE COURT: What you are saying, then I don't know why you filed a motion to stay. It should be in the statute itself. It should say there is an automatic stay, period. If it says that then I have no problem.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, the 1995, where there wasn't even a petition filed --

THE COURT: I know, that's the problem, there was no petition filed and they had to give him time to file it. You already filed your petition. You have your petition here. You have your answer to that petition.

MR. WEINGLASS: We don't. They said they never answered the petition.

THE COURT: They only answered the stay. Oh, the stay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Now I am saying they should answer the petition, then the Court must get their answer.

THE COURT: When can you file an answer to his PCRA?

MR. BURNS: Respectfully, that is not the issue, Your Honor. The issue now is the stay.

THE COURT: I know that.

MR. BURNS: And I think it is absolutely astounding that we are asking the defense to produce the evidence that they say they have had for these many years about the Commonwealth, among other things, suppressing evidence. And I would like to hear one or two witnesses.

Why are they refusing to present witnesses? I will tell you what the answer is. The answer is that this is all about delay. This is all about pushing off the time for decision so that the Court will be forced into a situation that they have been trying to force the Court into in which it will have to grant a stay or else face the prospect of having the execution take place without any adjudication or any ruling on the merits. They say well, 60 days to present witnesses on allegations that have already been made in detail, allegations from witnesses and affidavits. If you can get an affidavit you can certainly get the witness in here to testify to it. Otherwise, it is just a piece of paper, it is a piece of hearsay, it has no standing in a courtroom.

THE COURT: Well, let me ask you this. They filed a petition, a PCRA. Are you compelled to file an answer?

MR. BURNS: The rules are not that we are compelled to file an answer. If the Court directs us to file an answer, or we may choose to file an answer. But we are --

THE COURT: If you don't it is presumed to be denied.

MR. BURNS: It is presumed that all of the factual averments are denied if no answer is filed. Yes, that is what the rules say. So there is no obligation to file an answer to a PCRA petition; it is the factual averments therein are presumed to be denied if no answer is filed.

Now, in the event a stay were granted, well, of course we would file an answer to the PCRA petition. We would go ahead and litigate it. But the question now is has the Defendant made a showing that he is entitled to a stay. And this they refuse to do. They refuse to produce even one witness to show that there is some substance to the remarks or the statements that they have been making, which on their face, Your Honor, in light of the record, appear to be rather outrageous.

Now, if they had proof to back up these statements they should produce it. That's all our position is. I think it is amazing that they should come in here and make these statements --

THE COURT: That is all that I am asking them to do.

MR. BURNS: -- and refuse to produce the evidence that they claim to possess. That is all we are asking for. One or two, maybe three witnesses, to lend some substance to this so that there was some justification for the stay.

THE COURT: Why don't you do that, Counselor, so we could have something on the record.

MR. HAWKINS: Your Honor, with all due respect to yourself and the District Attorney's Office's position, that is simply not required by the United States Supreme Court. The Court made clear that as long as a petitioner has a petition and states, just as in a civil proceeding, facts which are to be taken as true on the face of the document, absent an answer to the contrary --

THE COURT: Well, he answered it: They said it's fabricated. They have answered it. They say --

Page 122.

MR. HAWKINS: We have, Your Honor, in answer --

THE COURT: Why can't you put on a few of those witnesses?

MR. HAWKINS: Your Honor, that is not our obligation at this point. Our obligation is merely to supply you with a petition that states on it's face allegations which if true would entitle the petitioner to relief. That's all our obligation is by the United States Supreme Court.

Your Honor, the Assistant District Attorney has not cited law. Your Honor, I am citing law to you.

THE COURT: I don't want you to cite me law; I want you to give me a Xeroxed copy of the case.

MR. HAWKINS: Law is what this Court is about.

THE COURT: Give me a Xeroxed copy of the case so I could read it and interpret it. I don't want to take your interpretation; I don't want to take the Commonwealth's interpretation.

MR. HAWKINS: Your Honor, by Monday we will supply you with United States Supreme Court case law.

THE COURT: Why would it take to Monday? Why can't you get that to me by tomorrow? You say you already know the case. All you have to do is push it in a machine and give me a Xerox copy.

MR. HAWKINS: Friday.

THE COURT: Why do I have to wait until Friday or Monday? You could put that information in the machine and you could Xerox a copy.

MR. HAWKINS: We will give it to you. When would Your Honor like it?

THE COURT: Tomorrow. Somebody ought to have a copy.

MR. GRANT: How about today, Judge? If he has the case we could read it today.

MR. WEINGLASS: Why not by one o'clock?

THE COURT: Well, we haven't had lunch yet.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, this is what happens.

THE COURT: All I am asking, Counselor: At this point you are asking me to make a decision. I want to make a right decision and I want to give you an opportunity to present me cases. I want to give the Commonwealth an opportunity to give me cases. What's wrong with that? Can you do it today? Can you do it tomorrow?

MR. GRANT: Your Honor --

MR. HAWKINS: Your Honor, let me suggest this. Why don't we take maybe an hour-and-a-half lunch break in which both sides --

THE COURT: No.

MR. HAWKINS: We would have to confer on it.

THE COURT: Counselor, I can't have everybody conferring and then telling the Court how to run the Courtroom. You know, let's be practical about this. I am willing to give you time. If you are saying that you can't have the cases to me until tomorrow, but then I have to read the case. Why don't you get it to me today sometime. Let me read the case.

MR. WEINGLASS: Let me put this request in context, it's proper context. This Court set this hearing down for July 24th,

Page 125.

THE COURT: I didn't set it down for July 24th.

MR. WEINGLASS: A Court did here.

THE COURT: Somebody in Court Administration evidently did that.

MR. WEINGLASS: That's 12 days from now.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: We, the defense, the Petitioner requested that it be 12 days earlier.

THE COURT: And we granted that.

MR. WEINGLASS: It was granted.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. WEINGLASS: We are trying to move this case faster.

THE COURT: Well, you are not moving it faster if you are telling me you can't get the cases to me today.

MR. WEINGLASS: But we are not trying to move this case the way it was moved the first time.

THE COURT: It was not a question of moving it. Counselor, you are citing law to me. You should be able to get those cases. As a matter of fact, you should have those cases now and say Judge, here is a Xerox copy of the case, in your leisure read it, it is right on point.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, what we did is we gave this Court -- and I hope the Court read it --

THE COURT: I know that, I don't want --

MR. WEINGLASS: We gave this Court our position in writing.

THE COURT: I know what your position is. I like to have Xerox copies of the cases. I like to read them myself. I like to interpret them to see actually what the Court is saying.

MR. WEINGLASS: On June 5th we gave the Court over 25 cases.

THE COURT: No, I don't mean give me cases, I am asking you --

MR. WEINGLASS: That was five weeks ago.

THE COURT: Counselor, I am asking you for Xerox copies. I am not going to go looking those cases up. That is your responsibility. Give me a Xerox copy and I will take them home with me and I will read them overnight. Why can't I do that?

Page 127.

MR. WEINGLASS: We will give you a Xerox copy of all those cases plus the Rolan case where the Pennsylvania Supreme Court granted --

THE COURT: Give me all the cases you want to, Counselor. I will be glad to read them.

MR. WEINGLASS: Despite the fact it is out of this Office, we will provide you with those copies which you should have been provided by the District Attorney's Office.

One last thing, Your Honor, to show you how things have been stood on their head here and what is true has been turned around upside down. The question has been made and raised here that the Petitioner had since 1989 to come into this Court.

THE COURT: Counselor, I already heard that. We went over that. I don't want to hear that again, please, or we will be here forever.

MR. WEINGLASS: The United States Supreme Court denied him on July 10th, 1991 his petition. That was four years ago. And neither Rolan nor Fahy moved as quickly as Mr. Jamal. And he moved with lawyers --

THE COURT: Fahy moved fast.

MR. WEINGLASS: Not as fast as this. Mr. Rolan waited six years. But, Your Honor, I want to point this out: They are saying that we waited until the Governor signed a warrant before we filed our papers.

THE COURT: Counselor, I don't care what they are saying. They are saying many things, and all I want to get from you is when could you get these cases for me to read?

MR. WEINGLASS: Please hear me out as to what happened. What happened is this. On April 2lst, 1995 I wrote the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and I informed the Governor in April of 1995 that I was preparing my papers for a petition and that I was having some difficulty because the Court reporters had lost, and they are still lost, four pre-trial hearings in this case. So the full record --

THE COURT: By this Court or by somebody else?

MR. WEINGLASS: By Judge Ribner.

THE COURT: Okay. Well, I have no control over that.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am not pointing a finger of blame, I am just reciting the facts.

THE COURT: I guarantee you I would have the notes.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right. I am just reciting the facts. The Court reporter wrote me a letter saying we have lost Mr. Jamal's pre-trial notes.

THE COURT: I never lose my notes.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right. I wrote the Governor and I said Governor, I am preparing this petition, two months before he signed the warrant, and I need your help and I am willing to work with you, let's get these notes so that when Mr. Jamal's petition is presented in Court it will be presented in it's entirety. The Governor was on notice in April that we were preparing the petition. On June lst, before the Governor signed the warrant, I went to S.C.I. Greene and I wrote them a letter in which I said I am coming to see Mr. Jamal -- this is before the Governor signs the warrant -- to see Mr. Jamal so he could verify the petition we are about to file. On June 1st the Harrisburg paper reported that Mr. Jamal was going to file his petition on June 5th. What happened: The Governor moved that night, knowing we were coming into Court, to sign the warrant in an unusual procedure at night, so that a warrant would preempt our coming into Court and put us in the position and allow them to argue the way they are arguing now so that we would be denied a stay. That's what happened. We didn't wait on the Governor. The Governor knew we were coming and he moved just before, the last business day before we came to Court to preempt this, Your Honor.

Page 130.

THE COURT: Counselor, I can't, I can't decide why the Governor did what he did. Whatever he did he did.

MR. WEINGLASS: We provided the record. Do we have copies?

THE COURT: Prior Governors haven't done anything.

MR. WEINGLASS: I have the letter to the Governor. I have the letter from the Court reporter.

THE COURT: Counselor, I can't do anything with that. Let me decide the issue.

MR. WEINGLASS: Could I have it marked as an exhibit?

Page 131.

THE COURT: Let me decide what I have to decide here. I can't decide why the Governor did what he did. Whatever he did he did. And you could go back to him, he might even give you a pardon, I don't know. But that's up to the Governor.

MR. GRANT: I assume --

MR. WEINGLASS: That kind of remark.

THE COURT: Well, it is true: He has that authority.

MR. WEINGLASS: That's what pervaded the trial.

THE COURT OFFICER: Court is in session.

THE COURT: No, it is --

MR. WEINGLASS: That is the kind of flip remark that is inappropriate.

THE COURT: No, it is appropriate. Because I can't control the Governor. He has those powers. And there is nothing wrong with that. He could do that. He could stay it, he could commute it. He could do everything if he wants to: He is the Governor. And there is nothing wrong with that. And I am not saying he can't do that. Of course he can.

Page 132.

MR. WEINGLASS: The Court sits here patiently while they explained why we delayed. When I tried to answer it by saying we didn't delay it --

THE COURT: All I am asking from you at the present time: When could you have these Xerox copies of the cases to me so I could read them? Tomorrow?

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I would like to have today these documents marked as an exhibit which I think an appellate court ought to have. May they be marked?

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, I object. And I object because this is nothing more than legerdemain, slight of hand. You asked for an answer, can you give me the case. I want to argue about six years ago. Can you give me an answer, when can you give me the case. I want to file these documents. I would ask, the vast majority of their witnesses on affidavit are right up Broad Street. Right down the street here. It is not going to take 60 days or six days to get them in here. I would suggest that after we file, after they submit whatever cases they have, Your Honor, they put their witnesses on the stand so we can examine them, Your Honor can judge credibility and make a ruling on the stay. Then we could get on with the PCRA.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: We will provide you with case law indicating that is precisely not the law of this State or any state.

THE COURT: That's right, I am asking you --

MR. WEINGLASS: We will provide you that tomorrow.

THE COURT: Okay. And I said, Commonwealth, if you have anything, Xerox it for me, please. You don't have to make a big brief. Just Xerox the cases, I would be glad to look at and read the cases and make a decision. Then we will decide where to go from there.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, is Your Honor deciding to grant the stay?

THE COURT: I am taking it under advisement. I am giving you an opportunity to present me the cases. I am not going to make a decision on the spur of the moment. He is not being executed tomorrow. If he was I would have to make a decision right today. But I am taking it under advisement. I am giving you an opportunity.

MR. WEINGLASS: Okay. Now we are going to give the Court the law within a day. When will the Court give us his answer?

THE COURT: Well.

MR. BURNS: Your Honor, I object to that. The Defendant has no right to be putting pressure on you as to when you are going to give the answer. Again I want to stress --

THE COURT: I will do it as quickly as possible. Go ahead.

MR. WEINGLASS: As quickly as possible.

MR. BURNS: I want to stress what the issue is. The issue before you is whether you have discretion to order the Defendant to present some evidence to back up factual claims he is making.

THE COURT: That's the cases I want him to submit to me.

MR. BURNS: The reason is that in a part of the argument I thought I heard reference to the defense already having given you cases and their intention to give you copies of a, I suppose a plethora of cases. I want it to be clear that the issue is whether you have the discretion to order the Defendant to produce evidence to back up his claim that he needs a stay. That's what I think the issue is. Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: And we will provide that tomorrow. But will the Court give us a Court date when we are to come back?

THE COURT: Well, if I rule that you have to present some evidence, I would hope you would be able to do that by Monday.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, as I understand it, the ruling the Court will make is whether or not the Court will grant the stay after reading the cases indicating that a stay ought to be granted, Judge.

THE COURT: Counselor, I will reserve decision on the stay. Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: And we don't have a Court date?

THE COURT: We have a Court date for Monday if you wish.

Page 136.

MR. WEINGLASS: Monday.

THE COURT: Is that fast enough for everybody?

MR. GRANT: Friday.

MR. BURNS: We would respectfully suggest Friday since time is of the essence.

THE COURT: Time is of the essence, it is all right by me. You could get the cases to me tomorrow and I will rule on it Friday.

MR. WEINGLASS: Okay, and the ruling will be whether or not a stay ought to be granted.

THE COURT: The ruling will be whatever the Court rules. I don't know at this time. If you could read my mind better than I can then fine. But I can't. I am giving you time to give me the cases. Let me read the cases to decide.

MR. BURNS: If it please the Court: My understanding is that the Court will rule on whether or not it will order the defense to present witnesses.

THE COURT: Well, that too, that too.

MR. GRANT: That will take place, as I understand it that will take place on Friday, if

Page 137.

Friday is the day.

THE COURT: If I so decide that they have to present witnesses, I will give them to Monday to present whatever witnesses they have.

MR. BURNS: Whatever you decide.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, one last thing. Mr. Jamal is here, his family is present, could he have an opportunity to just briefly talk to his family?

THE COURT: Well, you have to take that up with the Sheriff.

MR. WEINGLASS: I meant here in the Courtroom.

THE COURT: You have to take that up with the Sheriff. They have, they have jurisdiction in this Courtroom as far as security. You have to take it up with the Sheriff. Whatever the Sheriff will allow is all right by me.

MR. WEINGLASS: It is okay with the Court.

THE COURT: Whatever the Sheriff wants to do, yes. We could recess, then.

MR. GRANT: May we be excused, then?

Page 138.

THE COURT: Until Friday morning.

MR. WEINGLASS: Friday morning.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. GRANT: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT CRIER: All parties remain seated.

THE SHERIFF: Remain seated until the Defendant leaves the room.

THE COURT: Good morning, everyone. For the benefit of any of the visitors who were not here on Wednesday, I just want to caution you that the Court during this session will not tolerate any outbursts, any screaming, or anything of that nature. If it happens you will be removed from the Courtroom and not be permitted to re-enter. You must maintain proper decorum in this Courtroom.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, good morning, Your Honor. I want to start by bringing us back to Wednesday, July 12th, when the Court requested of all Counsel to provide the Court within 24 hours, the next business day, July 13th, with case precedent on the issue of whether or not the Court should at this time grant a stay and what are the standards that are to be applied.

In addition to that, on the following day, Wednesday, I believe at approximately ten o'clock in the morning, I received a call from the Court's chambers requesting that we also provide the Court with case citations on the issue of what if any discovery ought to pertain in this post-conviction proceeding.

As I understand it, we did yesterday, prior to 4:00 p.m., provide this Court with the cases that we contend stand for the proposition that a stay must be granted at this point. We gave the District Attorney's Office a list of our cases as we were advised to do before the close of business day.

I left my office last night at about 7:30 and I hadn't received anything by that time from the District Attorney's Office. It wasn't until much later that evening, I believe it was about ten o'clock, that I received word from Miss Wolkenstein that she had received materials from the District Attorney's Office; and I went back to my office and at 10:30 I found the materials that the District Attorney's Office was asked to provide us.

In addition to that, I found a 33-page document which I hadn't anticipated with respect to their answer on our discovery.

Now, and I haven't had an opportunity as yet to completely review that document. The point I am trying to make at this point is we are rushing under very strict deadlines, after the District Attorney has had four weeks to file written responses to our two motions, recusal and stay, we've had 24 hours, and then even less than that -- to file on the stay -- and less than that to file responses on discovery.

I just make the observation prior to my argument that this is hardly the orderly proceeding that is contemplated by the case law with respect to a capital case. We simply can not be in a position representing Mr. Jamal where the Assistant District Attorney has four weeks to respond to our papers and we have 24 hours to provide the Court with case law. And in addition to that, we are given another request for additional case law on a separate issue, and get from Counsel for the other side, the Assistant District Attorney, their papers at 10:30 at night before we are coming into Court to argue. This is hardly the way we should be proceeding on a death penalty case. And I am prepared to proceed and I am willing to proceed but I just want to point out for the record that we are doing this under an incredible pressure of time.

THE COURT: Counselor, I said to you I took it under advisement, so don't worry about it. I will give you all the time you need. Go ahead.

MR. WEINGLASS: Now, Your Honor, with respect to the first issue, and that issue is a very important issue, whether or not this Court should entertain and grant a stay of the warrant for execution, now set approximately five weeks from now, for August 17th, 1995: We have provided the Court with the case law that indicates to this Court that there are standards to be applied at this point on the question of whether or not a stay ought to be granted. To be sure, and I think both sides agree on this, that there is no case law in Pennsylvania up to this point in time that deals with that precise issue. So we must look to the Federal case law, because Federal case law, as Your Honor knows, in many ways is incorporated in the scheme of the Post-Conviction Relief Act of the State, the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. So we look to the Federal case law.

Page 6.

And we have provided this Court with the seminal case on this issue, which is the case cited by Mr. Hawkins when we were here on Wednesday, the Barefoot case, decided by the United States Supreme Court in 1983, an opinion written by Justice White, a Justice not known for his over-sympathetic feelings towards persons who are filing post-conviction proceedings, but nonetheless a very long, carefully considered opinion on what standard should apply to all jurists who are in Your Honor's position this morning: Facing a man who has an execution date and deciding the very weighty and important question of whether or not a stay ought to be granted so that the Court may in an orderly process consider the claims that are before you.

Well, what does the Barefoot case say? The Barefoot case says very clearly that there is a single standard, as I understand it, which is annunciated in that opinion. And the standard is if any of the claims, any one of the claims asserted by the petitioner in the petitioner's papers is a non-frivolous claim, then a stay ought to be granted. Why? It ought to be granted so that under the shadow of death, that petitioner will have the opportunity to present in a proper court of law, in a proper fashion, the support for his or her claims. And so there has not been a case since Barefoot which alters that standard, that a stay ought to be granted when any one claim asserted by the petitioner is non-frivolous.

Now, what is non-frivolous? Well, well, that opinion indicates that even if a petitioner makes a colorable claim, based on information and belief, not even evidence, that claim will be sufficient to trigger the stay, if an examination of that claim indicates it's non-frivolous. You do not need affidavits, you do not need evidence. All you'd have to do is make an assertion on information and belief, and if it's not frivolous it's enough for the stay.

Well, we have asserted in very weighty documents 19 claims, and we have given this Court affidavits, sworn statements, and we have provided 47 exhibits. And unless --

THE COURT: Counsel, is that in your PCRA?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

Page 8.

THE COURT: Okay, go ahead.

MR. WEINGLASS: And unless Your Honor finds all of them, every one of them to be frivolous on it's face, a stay must be granted. And that is clearly the state of the law, because that's the only way Your Honor can litigate this case. If there is a stay and then we proceed in an orderly fashion to present evidence, there is cross-examination, there is counter evidence, this is a determination made by Your Honor, that is the only way we can proceed. There was no other way that the Barefoot case can conceive of us moving at this point unless a stay is granted.

Now, what do you look at? I have already indicated this. There is one case we cited out of the Eleventh Circuit, the Bundy case: B-U-N-D-Y. And in that case what the Eleventh Circuit said is when Your Honor is faced, as Your Honor is, on whether or not to grant a stay, you look to the petition, the face of the petition. If on the face of the petition claims are asserted that are not frivolous, you grant the stay. You don't do what Your Honor -- and I say this respectfully -- suggested or hinted at on Wednesday: That is you don't call for evidence. You don't call for testimony. You don't call for a hearing. You read the petition. And if on the face of the petition the claims are not frivolous, a stay has to be granted.

And there is another case dealing with that issue which we have given to the Court. And that is the Blackledge case, and the Wesson case. Now, what did they say, what standard? When you look at this and you read it, how do you know these are not frivolous? How do you know that? Well, you apply a standard which was set forth in the Blackledge case, 1977 opinion of the United States Supreme Court. And the standard is what? The same standard you would apply when one party asks this Court to make a dismissal of the petition. And the standard is what? The standard is the matters alleged are presumed to be true, or accurate. And on that basis you would find on reading our petition that there is asserted non-frivolous claims.

So I urge the Court to read the petition, to read the 19 claims, the memorandum of law. I know it's a lot. It's over 300 pages. And to see that there is at least one -- that's all we need to show -- claim that's not frivolous.

And you have here, Your Honor, 19 claims asserted. Not even like in the Barefoot case where the claim was -- I'm sure Your Honor has read that case -- that psychiatric testimony in the mitigation phase of that case was wrongfully admitted. That's an issue to be sure, but it's nothing compared to the issues that we are raising. We are raising the core issues of Constitutional litigation in death penalty cases. We are raising Brady, we are raising Batson, we are raising Dawson. We are raising Chambers. This case touches them all. And we've supported each of these claims with affidavits and exhibits.

It's inconceivable that Your Honor upon reading these documents could reach a conclusion that they are all frivolous and that there is no basis whatever, accepting them as being true, no basis whatever for this Court to grant a stay. It would be unprecedented. Now, the prosecution has provided this Court with one case, the Mulligan versus Georgia case, Zand, I think Mulligan versus Zand -- Z-A-N-D -- out of the Middle District of Georgia -- a two-and-a-half page opinion by the lowest Federal Court in the State of Georgia, written in 1982. That case has not been cited since in 13 years. And why hasn't it been cited? Because it's been overruled by the Barefoot case which came down the next year in 1983 saying this Federal District Judge in Georgia was entirely wrong and he applied the wrong standard. That's what it says by implication. Because the standard that the Federal Judge in Georgia applied is the standard that Your Honor was given by the District Attorneys yesterday, which is a standard that is not applied anywhere in the United States since that one lonely Federal Judge in Georgia did it, and was by implication reversed the following year by the United States Supreme Court in the Barefoot case.

And what standard did that judge apply which has not been applied anywhere? The standard that the Assistant District Attorney stood here on Wednesday and that Your Honor hinted at before you got the case law, I must say in fairness: That the petitioner must show that he or she has a substantial likelihood of success. That was what was applied in Georgia and never applied since to anyone's knowledge. They haven't cited one case since which has used that standard. And we have given the Court Fifth Circuit cases, Eleventh Circuit cases and United States Supreme Court case.

So I think it's clear on the law at this stage in the proceeding a stay must be issued so that we can then move to the second stage, which is an evidentiary proceeding set out in accordance with the local rules of the Common Pleas Court of Philadelphia, which I am now familiar with, whereby, Your Honor, we have a scheduling hearing whereby the Assistant District Attorney responds for the first time, which they haven't done yet, to our petition, whereby a period of time is allowed for investigation, by implication provided in the rules. Whereby we have to provide 30 days before the hearing, 30 days before a hearing, affidavits.

So we are looking, as I suggested on Wednesday, respectfully, if we follow the local rules and don't make an exception for Mr. Jamal's case, we are looking at a period of 60 days to 90 days whereby we will then begin an evidentiary hearing.

But there is an execution date in five weeks so we must have the stay to begin with. And then we will move under the local rules, we will receive their response, which is required, and a memorandum of law is required. We haven't gotten them yet.

We've gotten their discovery last night at 10:30. We will look it over, we will respond to it. There will probably have to be litigation concerning discovery. There will then be a brief period for investigation and preparation, the preparation of affidavits of witnesses; and then 30 days after that we will go into a hearing. That's what the rules provide. I am only asking and seeking for Mr. Jamal what the rules provide. And that's what they provide, there is no getting around it. Unless the District Attorney's Office position is let's make an exception for Mr. Jamal and let's move this thing willy-nilly, not in an orderly, not in a fair, not in a full proceeding, which is all required by the Constitution, but let's move it quickly as the trial was done.

THE COURT: Well, you don't understand this, Counselor. You know, the Assistant District Attorney is faced with the speedy trial, he must try the case within 180 days, doesn't have any choice in the matter. If he doesn't the prisoner is allowed to go free.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT: So he has to proceed.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes. I understand that, Your Honor. And I have --

THE COURT: So when you say it's speedy, it has to be speedy because it is for the benefit of the Defendant.

MR. WEINGLASS: It has to be speedy, and the trial started on June 7th and that was just within the 180 days, as Your Honor indicates.

THE COURT: That's right.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes. But there is nothing in the rules that require the trial to proceed through two Saturdays, one Saturday sitting at six o'clock. There is nothing in the rules --

THE COURT: The Jury was sequestered, Counselor. I have to show some concern for the Jury.

MR. WEINGLASS: Oh, yes.

THE COURT: They are sequestered and they are not happy about that. And I am not happy about working on Saturday but I worked on Saturday for their benefit. And the attorneys did too.

MR. WEINGLASS: But when one Juror wanted to take a civil service exam, you adjourned the Court for half a day to accommodate that Juror.

THE COURT: Counselor, the Supreme Court already ruled on that, so don't bring up something that they have already ruled on.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor, they didn't rule on that issue.

THE COURT: They had it in front of them. If they thought there was something wrong about it they would have said so.

MR. WEINGLASS: But his appellate Counsel never read the record so it was never brought to their attention.

THE COURT: The Supreme Court reviews it in total on it's own. They went into matters that were not brought up because they must in a capital case review the entire proceedings, whether the Counsel brings them up or not. So let's not argue about simple things like that, let's go forward.

MR. WEINGLASS: I don't want to get into quibbling with the Court. I agree with the Court. I was just concerned, and I wrote the Governor a letter that when the Supreme Court had Mr. Jamal's case they did not have the transcripts for his pre-trial hearings because they are lost. How could they review the record? The record isn't even --

THE COURT: Well, you go back to the Judge that had the pre-trial motions and he will have his Court reporter transcribe them for you if they weren't already transcribed.

MR. WEINGLASS: The transcript notes were lost, Your Honor. I have been trying to get them transcribed for eight months and they can't find the notes. They can not transcribe the pre-trial hearings in this case: They are lost.

Page 17.

THE COURT: I don't know, I have some.

MR. WEINGLASS: You have some and I have some. Four are missing. That is not the way you do a death penalty case, on some. You do it on the whole record.

THE COURT: Counselor, you go back to the Judge that handled the case. I can't control his Court reporter. I don't know what hearings he held.

MR. WEINGLASS: We did advise the Court in the petition. And that brings me to a point that I should have raised at the outset. I am assuming that Your Honor has read the petition. Am I correct in that assumption?

THE COURT: Yes. Your PCRA?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT: Yes, okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: So the Court understands the 19 claims that are all set out with specificity.

THE COURT: And you are proceeding on all 19?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT: Okay. Because I thought last time you said you were proceeding on less

MR. WEINGLASS: No, we will start out with 1 and then go to the others.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: In an orderly fashion.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes. And I think that should be the subject for a scheduling hearing: All sides will know how we are proceeding. Then, I think this is litigation of the most serious sort, and I think we ought to have a very firm understanding as to how we are going and where we are proceeding.

THE COURT: Well, that's what I am trying to do now, Counselor, if you don't mind. That's exactly what I am trying to do.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, yes, yes. So, Your Honor, I think there is no question, given the state of the law that's been provided to this Court -- and I am only addressing now the issue of stay, not discovery -- that the Court should enter a stay today and then we should move to a scheduling order, then we should get the response from the District Attorney's Office. Then we should have a period for investigation and preparation. And then we should have the 30-day period for the affidavits. And then at the end of that --

THE COURT: What affidavits? I thought you attached the affidavits.

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

THE COURT: I thought you had already attached the affidavits.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor, the local rules require that before there is an evidentiary hearing, the petitioner must provide an affidavit in substance of what the witnesses that the petitioner will call at the hearing will say. And then after that there is 30 days and then we are into an evidentiary hearing. In other words, under these rules --

THE COURT: You mean while you were preparing this PCRA you didn't get this information?

MR. WEINGLASS: No, we prepared the petition, Your Honor, to be a petition. Then under the local rules you move into the second phase, which is an evidentiary hearing. We are prepared to do that and we will follow the local rules, which will put the evidentiary hearing 60 days from now. We will follow it exactly.

When Your Honor asked me on Wednesday when would we be willing to go, we will go at the first opportunity allowed by the rules: About 60 days from now. We will be ready then.

THE COURT: District Attorney?

MR. EISENBERG: Thank you, Your Honor.

I think it's important to remember again what the real issue before the Court is at this point. And that is not primarily, yet, whether a stay should be granted at all, but whether there should be some sort of an evidentiary hearing held by the Court, whether the Court has the discretion, the power to hear some evidence at this point. And on the basis of that decide whether there should be a stay, or decide that perhaps the stay will not be necessary because after hearing the evidence the Court will perhaps be able to reach the merits of the claims.

THE COURT: But in order to do that wouldn't I have to hear their PCRA?

MR. EISENBERG: Well, Your Honor, if necessary, and if the Court chooses to do that that would certainly be within the Court's discretion to do.

And I have heard on Wednesday and again today complaints that the Commonwealth didn't answer this or didn't answer that. As you know, we got a large stack of documents. We answered the motion for recusal and stay first. Because the issue of discovery was brought up on Wednesday, we rushed to get an answer out in writing, a very thorough and detailed answer to the discovery demands, which we completed yesterday. And we are also prepared to do the same for the PCRA answer itself: We are prepared to file that answer Monday morning, Your Honor.

And we believe that certainly at that point, if not today, the case is ready to proceed to some sort of an evidentiary hearing where the Court may begin to hear actual evidence about the claims that the Defendant is raising.

The issue here is not whether the Defendant is going to be deprived of a hearing. On the contrary, it is exactly the opposite: It is whether the Defendant is going to have the hearing. What the Defendant is actually asking for is not to have his hearing, but to not have his hearing, to have it later on at some point down the line maybe. But what he really wants is to get that stay, is to get that delay.

He talks about how we had four weeks and he just had a day, but we keep ignoring the real time period that is at issue here. For some reason it doesn't come up. And that is the fact that the defense team has been working on this case, by it's own admissions, for years and years, since apparently 1989, 1990. The documents that were produced that were filed in the beginning of June of this year are the product of five years of work. And now the Defendant says now he wants a period for investigation and preparation and discovery. He has done that. That's why he was able to come and produce these documents.

He says he wants to file affidavits 30 days before the hearing. He did file affidavits. He filed numerous affidavits, and we have them. And if the hearing were to begin today, even right now, the affidavits would have been filed more than 30 days before the hearing.

So there is no technical issue about whether he can comply with the rule about filing affidavits or anything. The reason he was able to do that is because so much work and preparation and investigation has obviously already gone into that. And it is time to test this.

Now what the Defendant is really saying is that warrant of execution doesn't mean anything, the fact that a day is set for execution doesn't mean anything except that now that is an invitation for me to come into Court and start talking about when I am finally going to put on my case and meet the burden. It is the Defendant's burden of proof at this time to overturn the verdict that has been upheld by every Court that has looked at it.

And all we are saying is fine, let's start to do that. We want to move ahead and do that. We take that date seriously, that date set by the Governor. It is not the beginning of the process, so that at some point after that point we will just, you know, talk about when we are going to have a hearing.

We ought to take it seriously and we ought to do what we can to advance the resolution of these issues as soon as possible. The Defendant says they are so serious, they are so important, they are of such public interest. Let's let the public -- and the Court, more importantly -- hear about the substance of these issues. And if a stay becomes necessary during the course of that process in order to have these issues properly resolved, the Court can exercise it's discretion to do that.

THE COURT: What you are saying, then, is the Court has the right to determine when the stay is actually necessary. In other words, there is nothing in the law that says I must rule within 24 hours, 48 hours, 72 hours or anything. As long as I rule on it before the execution date.

MR. EISENBERG: That's exactly --

THE COURT: Is that what you are saying?

MR. EISENBERG: That is exactly right, Your Honor. And there is no reason now to say gee, we are going to throw up our hands and give up and not even try to litigate this case, the case that this Defendant says he so desperately wants a hearing on. Let's go ahead and do it.

Page 25.

He has been working on it for years he says, now should be the time we start to do it.

THE COURT: Is that what you call justice delayed is justice denied?

MR. EISENBERG: Yes, Your Honor. And it is remarkable that the argument is being made that we are rushing willy-nilly on something that has been in the works for years and years. How could that be called a willy-nilly rush for something that we have been working on for years?

The argument that the trial was handled in the same way: As Your Honor has pointed out and Counsel has conceded, the trial was begun six months after the crime. And it is not an accident that it happened to be six instead of five or seven: That's what the rules of procedure call for for the beginning of a trial. And the trial lasted a full month. It wasn't an overnight sort of thing. The trial went on for a month before Your Honor and a Jury. And let's go ahead and hear the evidence now in the same fashion that has been under wraps for all this time, for all of these years, let's go ahead and start testing it.

Now, the Defendant relies on Federal habeas corpus cases for the proposition that you can't do that, that you can't actually hear the evidence that he says he wants you to hear because all you can do is look at his papers. And there are two problems with that. First of all, the cases don't say that; and second of all, if they did, they wouldn't dictate what this Court in Pennsylvania can do.

Barefoot versus Estelle, which the Defendant relies on as his main case, is a case about how a Federal Court of Appeals should handle a last-minute request for a stay of execution after a Federal District Court has denied a Federal habeas petition. And of course there is no issue there in Barefoot about whether the Federal Court of Appeals should hold a hearing on the stay petition or not. A Court of Appeals can't hold a hearing. An appellate court is not a court of record. It doesn't sit in a Courtroom like this and hear witnesses and have a jury or a fact-finder or an audience in this manner. That's not how appellate courts work. And the Supreme Court of the United States wasn't addressing that question in

Barefoot.

But it did say some very important things in Barefoot that actually bear on this question. And what it said in Barefoot is when the Court of Appeals is faced with that sort of request for a stay of execution, the Court of Appeals doesn't have to throw up it's hands and say gee? looks like there might be something here, we've got to back off, grant a stay and send it back so it goes back for months or years to sit in front of some trial judge for a hearing. The Court of Appeals doesn't have to do that. The United States Supreme Court said that the court can look at the merits of the claims that the defendant is raising to challenge it's conviction. On the materials that it has before it it can look at the merits and resolve the merits of the claims.

Now, an appellate court, the only way that a court can resolve the merits of the defendant's challenges to his conviction is to look at the cold record before it, the papers, the transcripts. That's all an appellate court has, those are the only tools that it can work with.

But that is not true for a trial court. Trial courts, as opposed to appellate courts, hear evidence. That is the way in which they resolve issues. And that's why the fact that a Federal appellate court doesn't hold an evidentiary hearing under Barefoot versus Estelle is meaningless.

In fact, even if a Federal District Court, a Federal trial court didn't hold a hearing, that would be meaningless. Because a Federal District Court hearing a challenge to a State conviction is not the trial court. The trial doesn't occur in that case in Federal Court. The Federal district judge sits in like an appellate judge, he is reviewing the lawfulness of the judgment of sentence. And in the general manner, the general case, the Federal district court, even he, even though he is a trial judge for Federal crimes, when it comes to State crimes he is not a trial judge and he doesn't get to hear evidence either. There is a presumption of correctness to the state court findings. It is the state court where the hearing is supposed to occur. And all the rules of Federal habeas corpus make it clear that in the first instance these factual matters are supposed to be resolved in the state court in a hearing and then the Federal court looks over that record. And if there has been some problem for some reason that the record couldn't be fully developed, then maybe the Federal district court gets to hold a hearing too.

But in the main the Federal district court, like the Federal appellate court, is supposed to look at the record of the state court proceedings. And all we are trying to do is start creating that record so that these claims can be resolved. Instead of holding it off, instead of not putting on the evidence that the Defendant says is so powerful, that he wants the world to see so badly, instead of not doing that, we say let's start doing it.

Now, as I said, the Defendant had said on Wednesday they didn't have our discovery response. They have that. They said they didn't have our PCRA answer. They will have that on Monday. Not that any of that should change anything. The Defendant came to the Court Wednesday, filing his papers over a month ago, and said here, look at all that I've got now. It was his burden to proceed and he said hey, I could meet it, I've got this stuff, I've got affidavits, I've got witnesses. So it is not a question of now beginning to have to go out and investigate and prepare. That was already done. It's obvious from the papers. Even the Defendant says look what I've done, look at all of the information that I've already gathered. And we should start hearing it.

Now, in our filing yesterday we analogized the status of the case now to a preliminary injunction hearing. And that is really the closest analogy in the law. Whether this is a death penalty case or not, we are in effect asking to, the Defendant is in effect asking to preliminarily enjoin his execution. He says I am going to want a permanent injunction later on, I am going to want you to vacate that death penalty all together, but in the meantime I want you to vacate it for now so that we can resolve the merits of our claims.

Well, in a preliminary injunction setting in Pennsylvania, as in virtually every other jurisdiction, the court holds a hearing on the merits of those claims so that the defendant can show a substantial likelihood of success on the merits. And Mr. Weinglass says no, that is not the standard, and he talks about Federal cases and he cites Bundy versus Wainwright. But even Bundy versus Wainwright, even in the Federal setting, to the extent that it were applicable here at all, says the standard for granting a stay of execution is a general standard for granting an injunction, including the likelihood of success on the merits. Whether the movant has made a showing of likelihood of success on the merits, on page 1421 of the Bundy opinion that's been handed to Your Honor.

Now, the Bundy court, because it was a Federal court and was dealing with Federal procedures, said we'll make that decision just on the papers in our case, not by having a hearing. But they weren't purporting to bind a state court in deciding whether the state court could have a hearing at that stage of the case. That was a matter of Federal procedure for Federal habeas corpus cases, which, as I have explained, are different.

The Defendant says well, but we incorporate Federal habeas corpus law into Pennsylvania law. And I imagine that this is a reference to a particular provision in the Pennsylvania Post-Conviction Relief Act. But in fact that reference does not support the proposition at all. One of the bases for eligibility for relief under the PCRA in Section 9543 refers to Federal habeas corpus.

THE COURT: B.

MR. EISENBERG: 5, little 5 is the one that refers to Federal habeas corpus. If the petitioner can assert a violation of the provisions of the Constitution, law or treatise of the United States which would require the granting of Federal habeas corpus relief to a state prisoner. In other words, if you've got a substantive claim that would knock out your conviction, that is the kind of a claim that a Federal Court would recognize, then we will recognize it here in Pennsylvania too. In other words, if you've got a claim like they violated my right to counsel or some other sort of Constitutional claim, and it is the kind of claim that the Federal court would hear, we'll hear it.

Page 33.

But that is not what we are talking about now. Now we are talking about a procedural question about whether this Court has the power to conduct an evidentiary hearing on the claims that the Defendant says he so desperately wants a hearing on. And even if Federal procedure prohibited that, those Federal procedures haven't been incorporated into the PCRA. We don't use Federal rules of evidence when we have a PCRA hearing. We don't use the Federal rules that were promulgated for habeas corpus cases under Federal rules, we don't use those, we don't consult those. We don't use the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, we don't use the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure. The only thing that is referred to in the Pennsylvania Post-Conviction Relief Act are substantive claims like a violation of the Constitution that would knock out your conviction. But how we determine that, how we litigate those claims is handled by Pennsylvania procedural rules, not by Federal procedural rules.

THE COURT: Wouldn't we do that when we have a hearing on the PCRA? Don't you do that while we are having the hearing?

MR. EISENBERG: We certainly could, Your Honor, and we would have no objection to doing that. All that we object to is delaying, all we object to is the Defendant being able to say look, we have all that stuff but we don't actually want to get into it yet, we want that stay, we want that delay of the execution that's already been delayed for all these years, but we don't want to actually start having to put our evidence on. And we say let's do it. Let's hear the evidence, let's have it tested in an open, public Court of law finally.

Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, we accept, we accept the challenge that we go ahead. And we intend to go ahead. Counsel from the District Attorney's Office argues here at length but never once cites the local rules. We will go ahead in accordance with local rules.

THE COURT: Well, if the Commonwealth is not objecting to anything, what is there --

MR. EISENBERG: The only local rule that I recall Mr. Weinglass referring to is the requirement that affidavits be filed 30 days before the hearing. That time period, obviously, is to avoid prejudice to the other side. So that I agree with you that the Commonwealth could waive that possibility of prejudice, but it's irrelevant anyway because we have the affidavits and we've had them for more than 30 days.

Furthermore, as Your Honor is probably aware, although we keep calling these local rules, these are just one Judge's, Judge Papalini's, own internal procedures for how he conducts PCRAs.

He is entitled to do it that way. Some judges follow it, some judges don't, but there is nothing about the local rules that prohibits this Court from going ahead and hearing the merits of these claims.

And we have something that we don't have in the usual PCRA case: We have a warrant of execution. And the bottom line of the Defendant's position is let's not take that seriously, that doesn't count for anything. All that means is we have to go through this sort of technical exercise of going into court and getting that knocked away by having a judge grant a stay. And we say that's not what it means.

THE COURT: It is not necessary for me to make a decision on the stay at this moment.

MR. EISENBERG: Exactly, Your Honor.

THE COURT: There is no case law that says I must make it right now.

MR. EISENBERG: That is correct.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, there is five weeks to a date of execution.

THE COURT: I know there is five weeks. And that's why I said I will take it under advisement. I want to proceed with the PCRA matter.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Start taking evidence under that. And if we get close to execution, Counselor, I will rule, okay, on your stay.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor, we can not proceed.

THE COURT: What do you mean you can not? Where does it say we can not?

MR. WEINGLASS: I will tell you where it says that. If you look at the case law we have given you, it is a very different proposition than has just been laid out for you by the Assistant District Attorney. I could put it in a nutshell. This is what the D.A. says. The D.A. says let's hear the evidence first and then the Court can decide the stay.

THE COURT: I could decide the stay at any time.

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

THE COURT: I could decide the stay at any time.

MR. WEINGLASS: But when you look at the cases, Your Honor.

THE COURT: But you haven't shown me a case that says I must do it before I start hearing any evidence about the PCRA.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, it is exactly what we have shown you and exactly what I have argued. Because this is what the cases say. They don't say the evidence first and then the stay.

THE COURT: I am not saying that. I am not saying that, Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: All right.

THE COURT: The only purpose of a stay is to permit you to complete your proceedings under the PCRA. And I will decide that. I would agree with you if his execution date was set for Saturday or his execution were next week, I would agree with you there would not be enough time. I haven't heard anything in this case. What I want to do now is to take it under advisement, you know, and let you proceed with your PCRA matter. And we could take care of it. If we get close to the time, if it takes longer than that, I hope it doesn't, but if it should I certainly will rule on it.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, you are overlooking one critical fact: When you say you haven't heard anything. And that's what the cases point to.

THE COURT: No.

MR. WEINGLASS: You have heard a petition. You have heard --

THE COURT: I know.

MR. WEINGLASS: You have heard 19 claims. You have heard 300 --

THE COURT: I am giving the District Attorney until Monday to file his answer to that. And then I will proceed with taking of testimony under your PCRA petition.

MR. WEINGLASS: Look at what the

Barefoot case says. The Barefoot case says, does the Court look at the evidence before it decides the stay. The Barefoot case says you look at the petition.

THE COURT: I am not deciding it on the basis of the evidence. I am saying if you can complete your PCRA matter within sufficient time then the matter goes directly to the Supreme Court. If the Supreme Court feels that it needs time to resolve it, they will stay it. Or I'11 stay it before it goes there if it is too close for them to make that decision.

MR. WEINGLASS: One thing: You can not overlook the fact that you have a petition which sets forth the claims and that are supported. That's what triggers the stay.

THE COURT: Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: That's what triggers the stay, not the evidence.

THE COURT: I am taking it under advisement. I am not ruling on it one way or the other at this time. What I am saying to you now is let's proceed with the PCRA matter.

MR. WEINGLASS: This is what Barefoot, Bundy and the Blackledge cases say. If a Court has been given the petition, the Court looks at the petition and decides the stay. You have the petition. Now you should decide the stay. Don't wait for the evidence, that's what they all say.

THE COURT: I am not waiting for any evidence.

MR. WEINGLASS: Decide the stay.

THE COURT: I will make it at the proper time. I am taking it under advisement, Counselor. I am not denying you your stay.

MR. WEINGLASS: You are denying us an orderly proceeding.

THE COURT: No. Why?

MR. WEINGLASS: And a full and fair hearing.

THE COURT: I am going to give you a full hearing. What I am asking you is why must I decide that right now?

MR. WEINGLASS: Because, Your Honor, very simply this.

THE COURT: Quiet or you are going to be removed from the Courtroom. All right, go ahead.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor is an experienced jurist. You have received a document over 300 pages in length. It asserts 19 claims. Hear me out, please --

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: -- without interruption. The same courtesy as you gave Counsel.

THE COURT: I gave you courtesy all the time, Counsel.

MR. WEINGLASS: Okay, I appreciate it. If Your Honor can say, in all seriousness can say honestly that these 19 claims can be litigated and appealed and go to Federal Court in the space of 25 working days, then Your Honor can say you have time. But that is a total falsehood.

THE COURT: Well, Counselor, I don't know. I don't know whether this all can be resolved.

MR. WEINGLASS: You are an experienced jurist, there is no way this could be done in 25 working days.

THE COURT: If you have a crystal ball that I don't have I would appreciate it if you give it to me so I could look at the crystal ball and decide it can't be done. You are not even giving it a chance to resolve this matter to see.

MR. WEINGLASS: You have every chance right here in a written petition with affidavits and exhibits.

THE COURT: I know.

MR. WEINGLASS: Anyone looking at this will know this can't be done.

THE COURT: As I told you before, I will take it under advisement. If we get close to the time, if we are not finished, I will then rule on your stay.

MR. WEINGLASS: But, Your Honor, we can't even begin immediately.

THE COURT: Why not?

MR. WEINGLASS: We can not begin immediately because, number one, my investigator, who I had to bring from out of state because I could not get local investigators.

THE COURT: Why? We have plenty of them around here.

MR. WEINGLASS: They are all a little afraid of this case because of the police involvement.

THE COURT: Quiet or you will be removed. If you want me to empty the Courtroom I will empty it. I don't want any outbursts here. Go ahead.

MR. WEINGLASS: We could not get investigators in Philadelphia, and we will put on evidence to that effect, because they were very concerned about their futures as investigators in this City if they got involved in this case. We also had difficulty getting witnesses because the District Attorney's Office eliminated the addresses and the phone numbers of all the witnesses and we have to find witnesses who were on the street 13 years ago. This is a very problematic issue that requires time. And we can not be rushed in this case according to the Court's schedule.

Now, we have tried to move this quickly. We asked this hearing be held on these dates rather than July 24th so that we would have time. And now that we've saved the Court that time, now the Court is imposing upon us a time restraint that is unacceptable.

Page 44.

THE COURT: Your own petition alleges that you have these people who were going to come in here and testify. Bring them in. Bring them in. Yes?

MR. GRANT: If the Court please.

MR. WEINGLASS: Let me correct one mis impression that the Court has...

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: Let me correct one mis impression. It has been said here by Counsel, not this morning, because I think they are becoming a little more careful about what they say, but it was said on Wednesday that I have been in this case since 1989. And they cite Paragraph 3 of the petition, which does not say that at all. As a matter of fact, I was not in this case in '89, or '90, or '91. And I started assembling a team in '92, which took a considerable effort.

THE COURT: '92?

MR. WEINGLASS: In '92. We are now up to our eighth investigator.

THE COURT: It is now '95.

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

Page 45.

THE COURT: It is now '95.

MR. WEINGLASS: That's right, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. WEINGLASS: But it takes to reinvestigate a case that's 10, 12 years old with local investigators who we could not get, and we are doing it on monies that have been raised, takes years. But let me explain what's happened in the interim. I met with Governor Casey's Counsel and we laid out for Governor Casey's Counsel all of our problems so that the Governor refrained from signing a warrant. Then I met with the Governor himself in September of '94 and I said to the Governor we don't have the full transcripts and we can't get them. I am trying but they are lost. And he said well, in that case we can not move this case too quickly because you need the record.

As I stand here today I still don't have the transcripts. And I wrote Governor Ridge this on April 21st -- and you have a copy of that letter -- and I said to Governor Ridge would you help me, I have got an obligation here to move a case, I can't move it because I don't have the transcripts, please use the influence of your office to get me the transcripts. And I got a response saying they wouldn't help me.

Now, that's the way I sit here today in this case. I still don't have the full record and I am still looking for it.

THE COURT: What record don't you have?

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

THE COURT: What record don't you have?

MR. WEINGLASS: I don't have four critical pre-trial hearings where over 12 pre-trial motions were argued.

THE COURT: Who handled them?

MR. WEINGLASS: Judge Ribner.

THE COURT: Well, go see Judge Ribner.

MR. WEINGLASS: I talked to Judge Ribner's clerk. I've talked to the head of the reporters. I've, there are letters back and forth, I will provide them to the Court. They lost them. They found one, they found one.

THE COURT: I will hear --

MR. BURNS: Could I respond?

MR. WEINGLASS: Wait a minute, Your

Page 47.

Honor, please don't cut me off.

THE COURT: You said you don't have them.

MR. WEINGLASS: Please don't cut me off. Please don't cut me off.

THE COURT: Maybe they have the records, will you wait just a minute. Do you have the records that he said was lost?

MR. BURNS: I don't know what particular records are being discussed here. Mr. Weinglass has made a number, a large number of representations unsworn, uncross-examined throughout this morning. He talked to the Governor --

THE COURT: Wait awhile, Counsel.

MR. WEINGLASS: I never said to this Court --

MR. BURNS: A whole variety of facts.

THE COURT: Gentlemen, please. Let him speak now for a minute: I will get back to you.

MR. WEINGLASS: I have a personal privilege. He recited a television program falsely.

Page 48.

MR. BURNS: Personal privilege?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, because he said I misrepresented.

MR. BURNS: Yesterday he was outside trying to incite the crowd.

MR. WEINGLASS: That is on the record.

MR. BURNS: Yes, I want that on the record as well.

MR. WEINGLASS: This is the kind of thing, Your Honor, I come to Philadelphia, I expect lawyerly-like conduct.

THE COURT: I am trying to find out about the records that you don't have.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right.

THE COURT: Is there any records that you have that he doesn't have?

MR. BURNS: I do not believe so. I do not know what record he is referring to.

THE COURT: I don't either. I only have one for April.

MR. BURNS: I know what's in the record, and what's in the record, obviously, is in the record. Lacking some specifics as to what is being missed, I really don't know.

THE COURT: You have to talk to Judge

Page 49.

Ribner to find out when he had these.

MR. WEINGLASS: I talked to his clerk.

MR. BURNS: Furthermore, if there were notes it would certainly be possible --

THE COURT: Talking to his clerk isn't going to help you. You have to talk to the Court reporter.

MR. WEINGLASS: I meant his Court, I talked to the head Court reporter.

THE COURT: Not the head, he doesn't transcribe the notes. Talk to Judge Ribner's Court stenographer.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor --

MR. BURNS: May I be heard, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Ask him what, tell him what days you want.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, the Court doesn't understand, with all due respect, the process.

MR. BURNS: I believe the Court recognized me and wanted to hear from me.

THE COURT: I have been here long enough: I understand the process. That's where you have to go. I can't give you the record.

Page 50.

If it was in my Courtroom I would have it, Counselor, because I keep all my notes.

MR. WEINGLASS: When a case is this old the notes that are taken by the Court reporter are put in a morgue, or in a vault.

THE COURT: Mine are not put in a morgue: I keep mine.

MR. BURNS: Mr. Weinglass is now instructing the Court on civil procedure in Pennsylvania.

MR. WEINGLASS: That's right.

MR. BURNS: If he is going to go on could I say something to the Court, please?

MR. WEINGLASS: I get it from the Court reporter.

MR. BURNS: Am I recognized to speak?

MR. WEINGLASS: No, you are not. Your Honor --

MR. BURNS: Mr. Weinglass is going to be allowed to speak and I am not, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Mr. Weinglass, please.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT: Mr. Weinglass, please. I am the one that decides whether he speaks or not. So let him now.

Page 51.

MR. WEINGLASS: But you should also protect my right.

THE COURT: I will let you speak also, I have listened to you.

MR. WEINGLASS: Please don't interrupt me.

THE COURT: Wait awhile, Counselor. You have you made a statement. I want to know if he has anything that you don't have. That's what I want to find out.

MR. WEINGLASS: Good.

THE COURT: Well, let him speak.

MR. WEINGLASS: Do they have it?

THE COURT: That's what I am asking him.

MR. EISENBERG: Your Honor, I am not even sure what dates we are talking about, but I think there is an important point to make here because the representation is being continually made that these are critical, that they absolutely need them that, that they are holding up the whole case. I don't understand how that is so. If they know they are critical then I guess they know what they are about. How is it we know what they are about? We are talking about proceedings, presumably in front of the calendar judge, which Your Honor is aware of, you know how those lists are handled with 30 or 40 cases before a judge in a day. We are probably talking about something which, if it ever existed, if it was ever transcribed, could be a page or three pages long. The assertion that these are somehow critical to proceeding with the case at all now is ludicrous. We have 19 claims here in the petition. We keep hearing that. Which ones of those claims can't proceed because we are missing four days of transcripts from 1982? I would like some specificity about that. Since the transcripts are being asserted as the reason for delay, let's hear which claims can't proceed without the transcripts and why that is so. Because there have got to be claims, given the nature of the claims in here that are based on witnesses, on extra-record information, not on transcripts, but on things that happened outside of court, there have got to be claims that can proceed. And there is no reason why those claims shouldn't proceed.

And if Mr. Weinglass wants to make a case for the Court why there are other claims that can't proceed without the transcripts he can. But Your Honor is well aware from handling PCRA cases, when the defendant delays for years in filing his petition, sometimes things get lost. If the transcripts are lost right up front, at the period where the case is still on direct appeal, then the burden of that problem may fall on the Commonwealth. Because it is the Commonwealth's obligation in the first instance to create and have in store, on store a record of the proceedings. But when the case goes on for years and years, and when we are looking at 13 years after the fact, then the records are misplaced, that is not something that the Defendant can get up and say here is a reason why I can't proceed. And certainly not without specifying for us why his 19 substantive, weighty claims as he calls them can't go ahead without these transcripts. We are not even hearing what those proceedings were about and what they have to do with each and every single one of these 19 claims. That's the issue here: Whether we can proceed with those claims. And we keep hearing about transcripts.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, all you're hearing, I believe, is, number one, a concession on the part of the District Attorney that they don't have them either. And that, in point of fact, no one has them. Please hear me out, Your Honor. You gave him 10 minutes, I ask for the same privilege.

THE COURT: Ten minutes? No, I didn't give him 10 minutes, but.

MR. WEINGLASS: Whatever you gave him I ask for the same. I provided the Court on Wednesday with a letter I wrote to the Governor on April 2Oth, 1995 in which I pointed out to the Governor that it is most egregious that the Court reporter administration has recently notified me that the notes of four remaining missing hearings have not been located and that they are still trying to locate the notes.

THE COURT: Well, who told you that?

MR. WEINGLASS: The Court reporter administration.

THE COURT: Court reporter administration, bring him in here. Find out what he is talking about.

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon.

THE COURT: Bring him in, let's find out what he is talking about.

MR. WEINGLASS: Absolutely, I have their letters, Your Honor, I could provide the Court with the letters. I corresponded with them, pleading with them to send me the transcripts. Hear me out. They sent me one. They sent me the transcript of May 13th, 1982, 71 pages long.

THE COURT: Let me say this: I could probably help you. Why don't we dig up the pay voucher for Jackson and see if he put in for any particular days to be paid, and where it was and how long he was in there. That will tell us if there were any sessions and what it's all about.

MR. GRANT: I think that may require an order from Your Honor to the Prothonotary or Clerk of Quarter Sessions because we don't have the authority to investigate that matter.

MR. WEINGLASS: I could give Your Honor the days, I could give Your Honor the precise days.

THE COURT: Well, yes, let's bring Mr. Jackson in here to find out what happened on those days.

MR. WEINGLASS: But that is not the transcripts I want.

THE COURT: Well, he will tell us. He may say he just came in there and we didn't do anything except be ready. Whether they wanted any discovery. Now, I have one transcript dealing with the discovery, I think it's in April of '82, those notes. And that's all that was about. And in those notes the Assistant D.A. McGill indicated that he opened his files to Mr. Jackson, so that he had everything that the D.A. had. And the only thing he was complaining about was that he didn't get any discovery back from the defense.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I beg to differ with Your Honor's recollection.

THE COURT: Well, I just read it. I just read it the other day.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right. When he came into Court on that date he asked the Court to appoint another lawyer to assist him because he wasn't on top of the case and he was too busy with other cases.

THE COURT: That's not what he said. No, he didn't like the idea of being back-up Counsel, that's what he said.

Page 57.

MR. WEINGLASS: No.

THE COURT: Yes, he did. He said he wasn't, he never went to law school to become back-up Counsel.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, that occurred on May 13th.

THE COURT: Well, April I think it was.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, April was a totally different hearing. April he was still trying to convince this Court to give him the resources to defend the case. The Court turned him down. And when the Court turned him down Mr. Jamal asked to represent himself.

THE COURT: Judge Ribner did not turn him down. He gave him sufficient funds. As a matter of fact, you talk about that, in May he gave him additional funds.

MR. WEINGLASS: No.

THE COURT: And the D.A. was complaining because they didn't have discovery back from the defense.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right. He, the defense was given a hundred and fifty for pathologists, he gave him not another cent. A hundred and fifty for a firearms expert.

THE COURT: Fassnacht.

MR. WEINGLASS: He was given about another $200. It wasn't enough for Fassnacht.

THE COURT: Wait awhile. He gave him a hundred and fifty and then he gave him 200 more?

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

THE COURT: He gave him initially a hundred and fifty and then gave him 200 more?

MR. WEINGLASS: That is the grand sum of about $350 and Fassnacht could not do anything.

THE COURT: I don't know about that.

MR. WEINGLASS: He did not look at the bullets, he did not look at the gun.

THE COURT: He did look at them and he said that he would be giving Mr. Jackson advice on the whole matter.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor, he did not.

THE COURT: Read the notes again.

MR. WEINGLASS: I have his affidavit, Your Honor has read it.

THE COURT: I don't care about his affidavit. Read the notes.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, in his affidavit.

THE COURT: Well, then bring him in here and let him tell us.

MR. WEINGLASS: In due course you will hear in accordance with local rules unless you make an exception for Mr. Jamal.

THE COURT: I am not making an exception for anyone. You are asking me to make an exception.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am standing on the rules, I am standing on the local rules.

THE COURT: It is not our rules. As he said, they are the rules of Judge Papalini.

MR. WEINGLASS: So you won't follow Judge Papalini's rules?

THE COURT: No, he doesn't handle murder cases or capital cases, he handles the other ones. He's got enough headache just taking care of the non-homicide cases.

MR. WEINGLASS: So Your Honor is saying that in homicide cases lesser guarantees of protection apply?

THE COURT: No, I am not saying that. I am saying that there are no rules on capital cases or murder cases, even if it's life or death, it doesn't make any difference.

MR. WEINGLASS: But there is one rule: There must be an orderly --

THE COURT: That's what I am trying to get to, that's --

MR. WEINGLASS: Orderly.

THE COURT: That's what I am trying to get to: Orderly.

MR. WEINGLASS: We can't have orderly when you are telling me that we have 24 hours to file a brief, that we have half-a-day to file other briefs, that on Monday we are going to hear other things and that you are denying a stay. That is not orderly.

THE COURT: I am not denying a stay.

MR. WEINGLASS: You are.

THE COURT: I said I am taking it under advisement. Don't you understand?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT: Well, that's, I am not ruling against it. I am not saying I won't ultimately grant it. I don't know.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, let me make this request.

Page 61.

THE COURT: If you could show me a case that says I must rule on that before I could hear anything from the PCRA matter, fine.

MR. WEINGLASS: The cases are as follows: Barefoot, Bundy --

THE COURT: Barefoot doesn't say that.

MR. WEINGLASS: It says the Court looks at the petition only.

THE COURT: I know that but --

MR. WEINGLASS: Look at the petition.

THE COURT: -- it doesn't say when I have to make a ruling.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, we asked for a stay.

THE COURT: It doesn't say when I have to make the ruling. That's what I asked you: Must I make the ruling in 24 hours? 48 hours? 72 hours? Can I take it under advisement or am I prohibited from taking it under advisement?

MR. WEINGLASS: Then I ask Your Honor to read Bundy. In Bundy this is what the Court said, very similar to Your Honor: Well, I have the petition but I do want to hear some more evidence.

THE COURT: I am not saying I want to hear -- I don't want to hear any evidence on the petition. What I want to hear evidence on is on your PCRA. That's what I want to hear.

MR. WEINGLASS: That is the petition.

THE COURT: No, that is the PCRA, that is not the petition to stay. You filed two petitions here: The petition to stay and a petition under the PCRA.

MR. WEINGLASS: What evidence do you want to hear on the petition for a stay?

THE COURT: I don't want to hear any evidence on the stay.

MR. WEINGLASS: You don't want to hear any evidence on the stay.

THE COURT: No, I want to proceed with the PCRA.

MR. WEINGLASS: You want to proceed with the petition.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: And we are asking for a stay on this day, which is Friday, July 14th.

THE COURT: I will take it under advisement, Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: But you are denying a request for a stay.

Page 63.

THE COURT: Right this minute, yes, I am taking it under advisement.

MR. WEINGLASS: You're denying the stay today.

THE COURT: I am taking it under advisement, I am not ruling on the stay. Don't try to put words in my mouth. I said I would take it under advisement.

MR. WEINGLASS: But we asked for a stay today.

THE COURT: Well, you could ask for anything you want. I am taking it under advisement. Do you want to say something?

MR. WEINGLASS: Today, Your Honor, we want the stay today.

THE COURT: Wait awhile, Counselor, I heard you already. Let --

MR. EISENBERG: Your Honor, it is clear that the reason that Counsel is trying to put those words in your mouth is that he thinks maybe he could create some sort of an order out of that by which he could block your efforts. Now, they are entitled to proceed in any way in any other court that they want, but I think the meaning of Your Honor's order is clear. And even in all the other stay litigation that we have all talked about, other cases that we have referred to, in none of those cases did the Court rule immediately. They were cases where the Court ruled two days later, four days later, a week later, sometimes several weeks later. In the Duffy case, for example, where the court initially granted a short stay and then decided to hold a hearing, and had a lengthy hearing and then denied a stay. There are other cases where the Supreme Court has not ruled on a stay for several weeks.

It's clear that you don't, as Your Honor says, don't have to rule on the stay now. And the only reason that the defense wants you to rule on the stay now is so that they can try to block the evidentiary hearing which they have been claiming all along that they wanted.

The latest excuse that we have heard so much about today is the transcripts. But nobody goes through these 19 claims listed over two pages in the PCRA petition and explains to us why we can't proceed without these transcripts. Mr. Weinglass is able to discuss the events of those days in great detail, he obviously knows what happened on those days. And if the transcripts come, fine, we'll see them. If they don't come, as often happens in a case that's 13 years old, a few pages may be missing out of several thousand, then we will proceed as best we can as happens in every other case. We will try to bring out what evidence we can and the defense can try to recreate those events as best it wants to and puts on witnesses who will testify to their recollection of what happened. But apparently the position is that until we have every single piece of paper here we can't proceed at all. I suppose that if we never get the transcript we will just have to stay this thing indefinitely, is the defense position. Of course we can't proceed that way. There is no explanation of how these various transcripts are going to relate to any of these claims or block them. There is certainly no reasonable position that we never proceed unless and until we have everyone of these transcripts. It's time to go forward.

THE COURT: How about the discovery issue?

Page 66.

MR. EISENBERG: Your Honor, as --

THE COURT: I think he said something about --

Did you speak on the discovery issue?

MR. WEINGLASS: We filed a brief on the discovery issue.

THE COURT: I mean do you want to say anything? Are you entitled to discovery at this time? That's the issue.

MR. WEINGLASS: We had filed with the Court a lengthy request for discovery. And we filed it on June 5th, 1995. And we got the response last night at approximately ten o'clock on July 13th. And I have not had an occasion yet --

THE COURT: To read it.

MR. WEINGLASS: -- to read that full response.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. WEINGLASS: But this is the way in which we are proceeding in this case. This is not an orderly way to proceed.

THE COURT: We are, we are proceeding very orderly. He gave you the response. It's 11:30. Would you be back here at one o'clock?

Page 67.

Give you an opportunity to read it.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I really do not believe in a death penalty case I ought to be proceeding under this kind of pressure.

THE COURT: Well, you have to proceed as promptly as possible. As I said before, justice delayed is justice denied.

MR. WEINGLASS: But the Assistant District Attorney delayed five weeks in responding to discovery.

THE COURT: Then you delayed until the Governor signs a warrant.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, we haven't delayed at all on the discovery. We filed our discovery at the time we filed the petition.

THE COURT: Okay, so what evidence don't you have that you are entitled to? You had initial discovery, pre-trial.

MR. WEINGLASS: No.

THE COURT: You had that discovery.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor, they were given statements and the addresses and the phone numbers were deleted, and that's why witnesses could not be found and still can not be found. So we want to have at least the addresses.

THE COURT: Well, they may not have the addresses either, I don't know.

MR. WEINGLASS: That's one point. But I haven't read their response and I need time to read it.

THE COURT: Okay, do you want until Monday, then, to read the response? I don't care, I will give you as much as time as you need, but I want to proceed to resolve the matters here as promptly as I can.

MR. WEINGLASS: But so promptly that Mr. Jamal's rights are again being interfered with.

THE COURT: No, justice delayed is justice denied. And I am trying to do it in --

Please, no more comments or I am going to have to clear the room. You understand what I mean: You are not out on the street here, you are in a Court of law. And you are going to maintain the proper decorum or you are going to be moved out, period. I can't tolerate that in a Courtroom.

Go ahead, Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: Oh, Your Honor, I have to consult with -- could I have 10 minutes to consult with my Co-counsel and with Mr. Jamal?

Page 69.

THE COURT: Sure, tell me how much time you need.

MR. WEINGLASS: Because we are operating here where I get papers 10:30 at night and when I am in Court the next morning.

THE COURT: I didn't get your papers until this morning.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, Your Honor left your office early yesterday.

THE COURT: Shame on you.

MR. WEINGLASS: We got it to Your Honor's office before the close of the business day but you were gone.

THE COURT: Close of the business day.

MR. WEINGLASS: I wasn't asking the Court where you went.

THE COURT: You better not.

MR. WEINGLASS: But I think the record ought to reflect that unlike the District Attorney's Office, we provided you and the Assistant District Attorney with our papers before the close of the day.

THE COURT: All right.

Page 70.

MR. WEINGLASS: We did not get theirs until after the close of the day.

MR. EISENBERG: I just have to put a few additional fact on the record. I received a list of cases at some time after five o'clock. I was told earlier that there would be a list and a memorandum. I received the memorandum this morning. According to the FAX of that memorandum, it arrived at my office FAX machine about five to 1l:OO p.m. last night. Now, I am not saying that to complain that they didn't give me enough notice. Under the circumstances I think that it was admirable that they got it to me last night at all. Because if I had been able to still be in my office at eleven o'clock last night, I left at lO:OO, I would have been able to start looking at it.

MR. WEINGLASS: And you didn't give us your papers until ten o'clock.

MR. EISENBERG: The idea that --

THE COURT: It is not a question of --

MR. EISENBERG: The question that somehow the Commonwealth delayed here is ludicrous. This is how death penalty stay litigation goes. I've had several already this year. Everyone of them was a matter of running around in front of Federal judges and State judges and filing things the next day and the day after. That's how it goes all around the country. We don't just sit back, kick up our heals and say sure, who cares about the scheduled execution date, we will just put that off and take it easy.

MR. WEINGLASS: Then, Your Honor, it is time we do it better. And Mr. Jamal is entitled to due process.

THE COURT: He is not the only one facing death. There are other people here and they have the same rights.

MR. WEINGLASS: Mr. Fahy had a right to a stay two weeks ago.

THE COURT: He got his stay.

MR. WEINGLASS: The Supreme Court had to come in and give him a stay.

THE COURT: And the Supreme Court will come in here and give him a stay if they need it. I am taking it under advisement. You are not satisfied with that, you do whatever you have to do.

MR. WEINGLASS: But we are asking for the stay today.

THE COURT: I am telling you I am taking it under advisement. That's all I could do, that's all I could tell you.

MR. WEINGLASS: We are not making the request today. We want the Court to make the order today.

THE COURT: I don't care what you want, I am telling you I am taking it under advisement.

MR. WEINGLASS: You are denying my request.

THE COURT: I am not doing that, I am taking it under advisement.

MR. WEINGLASS: You are denying the request.

THE COURT: I am not denying the request, I am taking it under advisement. If you don't understand English, Counselor, I'm sorry. Yes?

MR. WEINGLASS: I understand all too well.

THE COURT: Well, wait awhile.

MR. BURNS: Pardon me, Your Honor.

Page 73.

THE COURT: Go ahead.

MR. BURNS: If it please the Court: This is becoming extremely repetitive. Mr. Weinglass is making the same arguments over and over again. I believe you have made your position clear. I would respectfully suggest, Your Honor, that we adjourn and reconvene on Tuesday, if that's appropriate, to start taking testimony.

THE COURT: Well, I want your answer in. You are going to have your answer to the PCRA?

MR. BURNS: Monday morning, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. What about this discovery? He has a motion here for discovery. I've had a chance to look over the Act and I have tried to find cases and I could find none.

MR. BURNS: Well, the Defendant has filed a written motion for discovery. We filed a written answer. That certainly gives the Court a basis to rule. And if the Court wants to rule on that, fine.

THE COURT: Does anybody have any cases on it? I had my law clerk use a computer and couldn't find any. And I have looked at the statute itself and there is no provision in there for it.

MR. BURNS: It is controlled by the rule of criminal procedure which specifies that discovery is given before trial.

THE COURT: And I checked on Ribner's notes there: The entire file was turned over to Mr. Jackson, so they already have that. They had the discovery pre-trial. And I don't know that there is anything, if anybody could give me any cases. But at this moment I am ruling that the motion for discovery is denied. But I will give you --

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor was going to give me 10 minutes to confer.

THE COURT: No, on the discovery.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, discovery.

THE COURT: But if you could give me any cases on it, I will be glad to reconsider my decision on that.

MR. WEINGLASS: The Court has indicated that we will come back after a 10-minute break and I will consult with my Counsel.

Page 75.

THE COURT: On the --

MR. WEINGLASS: On what we are going to do with respect to argument on discovery.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Because we got papers too late for me to read them last night. Now Counsel --

THE COURT: Well, Counselor, I don't care whether you read his or not, the D.A.'s. I have tried on my own to find some excuse or some rulings on this point. I could find none. And I have gone over the statute itself, the PCRA statute, but it does not make any provision for discovery. And there are no cases that I could find in Pennsylvania that did that. You have to understand that if he is entitled to discovery, so is every other person entitled to discovery. And this may be a matter that the Pennsylvania Supreme Court must resolve.

Now you could talk to your Counsel, I will take a 10-minute recess, but I am telling you I could find nothing on it. Unless you could find something on it. I will be glad to consider it. Or reconsider it, either way.

Take a 10-minute recess.

Page 76.

THE COURT OFFICER: This Court stands recessed until the call of the Crier.

- - - - -

(Brief recess.)

- - - - -

THE COURT OFFICER: Court is back in session.

MR. WEINGLASS: Thank you for the opportunity for us to consult. I want to thank the Court's personnel for making a telephone available for us to call New York. And I think it's been fruitful because we now have the precise dates on which transcript notes have been lost. And the dates are December 2lst, 1981. February 22nd, 1982. March 18th, 1982. And April 1st, 1982. Those are the four dates that the Court administrator has informed me the notes are lost.

And if the District Attorney's Office could check their file, and if they have any of those dates, then we could move on from there. If they don't, then I assume we'll have as the Court suggests a reconstruction proceeding where we will attempt to reconstruct matters that were heard before the Court on that date and replace the reconstruction with the actual transcript.

But I think, Your Honor, given the fact that we are facing an execution date, I don't think we can proceed until we have the full record, including the pre-trial hearings. I do not know what happened on those dates. I've talked to Mr. Jackson: He can't recall with spec, with any specific, he can not recall specifically --

THE COURT: Specificity.

MR. WEINGLASS: -- right -- what happened on those dates. So if the District Attorney's Office has those records.

THE COURT: Well, maybe Judge Ribner might be able to help you, I don't know.

MR. WEINGLASS: It's possible, or personnel in his office. I, as I mentioned, I dealt with the Court administrator because I was referred to the Court administrator -- I am an out-of-state attorney -- and I dealt with a person who I was told had the notes. And indeed that person found one hearing, 71 pages for May 13th, and that was helpful to me. They gave it to me in November of 1994, that's when they came up with it.

Page 78.

THE COURT: That's when they were talking about discovery.

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

THE COURT: Discovery.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, now I want to answer the Court's request on discovery. I have talked to my Co-counsel, and I haven't had the principal responsibility for discovery, but we did file a 22-page request which is specific requesting various specific items. And we've gotten the response which is over 30 pages, I think 33 pages, response to each and every paragraph of the request. There are matters that are going to have to be argued and reviewed, there is case law.

I have talked to Counsel because the Court has indicated a proposed schedule of dealing with those matters on Tuesday. The best we can do, Your Honor, we can be back on Wednesday. And by Wednesday we will have the District Attorney's response to our long petition.

THE COURT: Well, no, I want the District Attorney's response by noon on Monday. All right, gentlemen? I want that back here on noon on Monday. And we will reconvene here on Tuesday. In Courtroom 253.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, Your Honor, please, some of the Counsel cannot make it and some of the attorneys who are important for discovery cannot make it. Today is Friday. It's not unusual --

THE COURT: Counselor, as I said --

MR. WEINGLASS: Conflicts.

THE COURT: Counselor, I said to you before, I'm denying the motion for discovery. If you can give me any law that says that you are entitled to it in a PCRA matter, I will be glad to consider it, and I will reconsider my order. I have checked the records, I could find no cases on it. It is not a part of the PCRA statute. You had, the Defendant had a right to discovery pre-trial, which he had. He had the entire file. I don't know that you are entitled to a second look at it. So unless you could come up with a case that would say that in a post-conviction matter such as this, that you are entitled to discovery -- and I say this honestly to you -- I think that is going to have to be resolved by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court. Because I could find no cases on it.

Page 80.

MR. WEINGLASS: Let me try to help the Court in one particular. To give you an example of what the problem is. We have alleged on page...

(Discussion was held off the record at this time.)

MR. WEINGLASS: Page 8, the bottom of 7, the top of 8, that we have examined the letters that were sent to Mr. Jackson pre-trial, indicating an enclosure of certain statements of witnesses. We have gone through all the files that are available to Mr. Jamal. We have found that approximately 12 of those statements are missing. And we list them by name. Frank Allen, Beulah Campbell, Sharon Cook, Delores Fox, Pasquale Marcovecchio, Anthony Merrone, Robert Schmidt, William Stapleton, Reginald Thompson, Mark Turnock, et cetera, I don't want to list them all. These statements are missing. We have no basis for determining whether or not there was an ineffective assistant of Counsel in the review of these statements because we don't have them. We need the statements. Now, I think the Assistant

District Attorney has them. And I think they can copy them.

THE COURT: I think what you need now is to put the attorney on the stand and let's find out what he did with them, if anything. I don't know.

MR. WEINGLASS: But, Your Honor, before we put the attorney on the stand, we are representing a Petitioner who faces a very serious consequence. Don't you think Counsel ought to have a copy, just a copy, D.A. can make a copy of these statements so we can know what it is that the attorney representing Mr. Jamal at the time did or didn't do? We are just asking for documents.

THE COURT: According to my reading of the initial notes the attorney didn't know who Mr. Jamal wanted to call until he told him.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, these are prosecution witnesses.

THE COURT: No, I don't care whose witnesses they are. But the thing is did he want to call them, did the defense want to call them?

MR. WEINGLASS: The defense wants to be able to assert it's claim on ineffective assistance of counsel. In order to do that we have to have all of the documents.

THE COURT: What do you mean, what did he do that was ineffective?

MR. WEINGLASS: Perhaps he overlooked something in these statements.

THE COURT: Well, we are not here as a Monday morning quarterback. What did he do?

MR. WEINGLASS: Not Monday morning quarterback. Ineffective assistance of counsel, as Your Honor well knows, is a clearly recognized ground, and we have asserted it, on which post-conviction relief is based.

THE COURT: I know, but exactly what didn't he do that he should have done? That is what I mean.

MR. WEINGLASS: He received these statements.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. WEINGLASS: We don't know what's in these statements. In order for us to assert the claim that he was ineffective we must have those statements. That's pure discovery.

THE COURT: Wait awhile. Did you talk to the attorney Jackson and ask him?

MR. WEINGLASS: We've asked about these, yes.

THE COURT: Does he have them?

MR. WEINGLASS: He does not have them.

THE COURT: What did he do with them?

MR. WEINGLASS: I don't know.

THE COURT: Well.

MR. WEINGLASS: I don't know.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor.

THE COURT: Wait awhile. Let me see if we could clear this up.

MR. GRANT: To the extent that Mr. Weinglass would make that list available to me I will look to find out whether we have any of these documents. We will reproduce those that he wants. And I know for a fact based upon the reading of the record itself that at some point Mr. Jackson gave his entire file to Mr. Jamal. And he was not able to look at those statements thereafter at any point in time. And he had to find out from Mr. Jamal which witnesses he should call next based upon Mr. Jamal's reading of the 49s and the 483s that were presented to him...

Page 84.

MR. WEINGLASS: Now we are making some progress in discovery. If Counsel will turn them over we will receive them, there are about 12 or 14.

MR. GRANT: If we have them. I don't know, I don't recognize any of those names of any of those witnesses. They were not Commonwealth witnesses, they were never called to testify.

MR. WEINGLASS: Exactly, that's why we are very curious about them.

THE COURT: Well, he says if they have them they will give it to you. But the discovery generally is denied.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes. Now, Your Honor, we are making some progress in the direction of an orderly proceeding. We have a claim, they have responded, I think we resolved it. Mr. Jamal has the documents he ought to have. When we put Mr. Jackson on the stand, which we will do --

THE COURT: What did he do with the things that he had, that Mr. Jackson gave him?

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

THE COURT: Let's find out what he did

with what Mr. Jackson gave him. He gave him his whole file.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor is accepting carte blanch what they represented, Judge.

THE COURT: He said it is in the notes, I don't know. And he is going to answer your thing and if it's there it's there.

MR. GRANT: I do have the reference to the notes of testimony wherein Mr. Jackson states that, Your Honor. If I may.

(Pause.)

MR. WEINGLASS: I also, also I could reveal this to the Court while Counsel is looking: I've had conversations with Mr. Jackson. Whatever he turned over to Mr. Jamal he kept a copy for himself.

THE COURT: Well, then he should have a copy of these.

MR. WEINGLASS: He doesn't have it.

THE COURT: Well, find out what he did with them.

MR. WEINGLASS: That's part of what these proceedings are going to be about.

THE COURT: But the thing you are asking for is a general discovery.

MR. WEINGLASS: No. Very specific. We named everyone we are looking for.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. WEINGLASS: We didn't say give us all the statements. These are the ones we are missing.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. EISENBERG: Your Honor, while Mr. Grant is looking through the notes let me just point out something about this, about these witnesses and these statements, since Mr. Weinglass, after we have offered to give a copy of something that we already turned over is now turning this into a discovery issue and proof that we need some big, extended, lengthy proceeding. The point here is that as a matter of courtesy when things that have already been turned over to the defense are lost at some point in the transition, there are times when, if the Commonwealth is able, if we are the only source for these materials, we try to give them over. But that's not discovery. And that's the crucial point. Because when Mr. Weinglass uses the word discovery, what he is saying is that he has a legal right to these things.

THE COURT: Well, I have already ruled that he doesn't.

MR. EISENBERG: That's why I want to make it clear that when we talk about discovery, we shouldn't be using that word in reference to these documents. As far as discovery is concerned, these documents are already done.

THE COURT: That's right, and I have already ruled as a matter of law that he is not entitled to discovery. But if you have them, you want to give them to him, fine.

MR. EISENBERG: I think another point is important also. Mr. Weinglass says he needs what is in them because he can't proceed without them because maybe they are going to be claims of ineffectiveness as to Mr. Jackson. In order to substantiate any such claims, if they ever need to come up with them, they need to put witnesses on the stand to testify as to what their testimony on issues relevant to trial would have been.

THE COURT: I understand that.

MR. EISENBERG: Since they know the names of these people then at some point they are going to have to talk to people anyway. And again, this is something, this information was in the possession of the defense, could have been investigated. If they want to investigate it in the future, if there is time and the Court permits that, fine. But the idea that they couldn't do anything on this until now is simply untrue.

MR. WEINGLASS: As I understand it, we were granted a recess so I could consult with Councel so I could indicate to the Court when I would be prepared to argue discovery. We are not at that stage yet.

THE COURT: No, I ruled on discovery already.

MR. WEINGLASS: You ruled.

THE COURT: I ruled that it is denied because I have done my own research on it.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I haven't read their papers. Your Honor has heard from me orally. You are denying it.

THE COURT: Counselor, I heard from you.

MR. WEINGLASS: I didn't argue discovery.

Page 89.

THE COURT: Counselor, give me a case, I said to you.

MR. WEINGLASS: I asked until Wednesday.

THE COURT: Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: Give me until Wednesday.

THE COURT: Counselor, I said to you I am denying the motion for discovery. If you are able to come up with a case that says that you are entitled to that, I will reconsider my decision. But for the time being I am denying your motion for discovery.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, on June 26th of 1982, Mr. Jackson was addressing the Court at page 139 and 140 of the notes of testimony. At that time he stated to Your Honor, one of the difficulties that I have in determining what witnesses to call is that I have to reflect and search my notes as to the statements of witnesses. Since I no longer have a copy of the statements. Mr. Jamal has copies of the statements. I think that I indicated I showed you all the names.

32 and 33 of the notes of testimony of the transcript, Mr. Jackson again addresses Your Honor. When asked what witnesses he will put forth for the defense next he states to you, to Your Honor, we have now found that there is another police officer that we would like to have testify. Mr. McGill, the prosecutor, just advises me that he is not present today. I would ask that of course he be called in.

THE COURT: You knew about this before. I'm not going to hold up this trial.

MR. JACKSON: I did not.

THE COURT: What do you mean you didn't? Didn't you get statements regarding -- and there are words missing from the photocopy -- didn't you get the statements of -- I assume it says police and detectives -- months and months ago.

MR. JACKSON: Absolutely. Then he states I was forced to try and remember everything that everybody said and I couldn't do it.

MR. MCGILL: interposes: I object to this. I think if Mr. Jamal, the Defendant in this case, decides he is not going to give statements until the very last minute to his attorney, that's on him. I don't see any reason why this trial should be delayed.

Now Mr. Jackson has said expressly and implicitely that he didn't even have the statements of the witnesses who were taking the stand, and he further opines during the calling of character witnesses, I don't know what to tell the Jury the name I am going to call next because Mr. Jamal tells me who to call next and until that moment I am unaware.

Full discovery has been granted in this matter. But as a courtesy to Mr. Weinglass, we will provide whatever we have that he doesn't have.

THE COURT: Okay, good enough. We will adjourn until, well, first of all, I said you will have your answer to the PCRA by Monday noon.

MR. BURNS: Monday noon, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Serve a copy on the defense. We will reconvene on Tuesday. And we will reconvene in Courtroom 253. All right.

MR. WEINGLASS: May I have just a moment, Your Honor. I am going to be losing one of my Counsel because the Court wouldn't give us one day. If the Court will give me a moment, just a moment to consult with Counsel.

(Pause.)

MR. WEINGLASS: If the Court please: On Wednesday I handed up to the Court two orders: The order denying jurisdictional authority and another order denying recusal. Has the Court had an opportunity to review these and sign these?

THE COURT: Yes, I don't know if I had one for the jurisdiction. I ruled in Court on it. But I know I had signed the one on the motion for recusal. Is there one for the jurisdiction?

MS. FURIA: You haven't signed it.

THE COURT: Do you have it there?

MS. FURIA: Yes.

THE COURT: Counselor, the date that you mentioned, you said you don't have notes for December 21st of 81?

MR. WEINGLASS: That's right.

THE COURT: Well, what that was, according to the docket entries, it was a petition to photograph the Defendant while in custody at Philadelphia County Prison was filed. And on 12-21-81 the order was granted by Judge Ribner. So there are not going to be any notes, it may be a one-page thing that he granted the thing and the dockets will show that.

MR. WEINGLASS: It might be and it might not be.

THE COURT: Well, that's all it is according to the docket entries.

On 2-22-82, what happened then was omnibus motions were filed. And on, on 3-18-82, that omnibus motions were granted. And in addition, the petition to distribute questionnaires to proposed venire persons was filed. And on 4-1, what's that, 4-1-82, in Courtroom 613, defense request for a line-up of witnesses, Robert Chobert and Albert McGillity is hereby denied. The Court also denied defense attorney's request to submit questionnaires to prospective jurors. That was all done by Judge Ribner.

So basically that's all it is. You are not going to find any lengthy notes in that thing.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, I assume that there was argument on the line-up issue.

THE COURT: There was no argument, the Judge made a ruling. If you want to know why he ruled, go see him. And he must have filed some sort of an order.

MR. WEINGLASS: We prefer to read the official record, with all due respect.

THE COURT: Well, read it, it is in the dockets.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, but we don't have the transcript of that meeting.

THE COURT: Well, you don't need the transcript. As far as the Supreme Court is concerned, they could interpret that. They know what that means. I know what it means. I don't need the notes in order to determine what that means. I don't care what the arguments were, the Judge made a decision, period. That's it.

MR. WEINGLASS: You don't need how the Judge made the decision or what comments --

THE COURT: Well, go ask him. I don't know how either. I am not here to, but this case went up on appeal, and the Supreme Court had all of that. If they thought it was an issue that needed any further explanation, they would have asked Judge Ribner to explain.

MR. WEINGLASS: They didn't have the transcript of the proceeding.

THE COURT: They don't need it, they see the order.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, with all due respect, I believe the case law requires that they have the transcript.

THE COURT: Well, save that for the Supreme Court, because I don't have that idea.

MR. WEINGLASS: Could we have a copy of the Court's order denying the recusal?

THE COURT: I will have to make a Xerox copy. Unless you have a copy there, I will sign another one for you.

MR. WEINGLASS: I have copies, yes. Both of them: Jurisdictions and recusal.

THE COURT OFFICER: You want to conform these copies?

THE COURT: I will sign it for him and that's it.

MR. WEINGLASS: There is another order which I am tendering to the Court denying discovery.

MR. EISENBERG: Could I see a copy?

Page 96.

(Pause.)

THE COURT: Okay (handing).

THE COURT OFFICER: Counsel (handing).

THE COURT: Today's the 14th, right. Does the Commonwealth want a copy of these things that I'm signing?

MR. EISENBERG: Yes, we do, Your Honor.

MR. BURNS: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT OFFICER: I will get you copies, Judge. I will go get a copy.

THE COURT: All right. How about getting them copies for the other two. Frank.

MR. WEINGLASS: While we are waiting: There is a matter which I would like to bring to the Court's attention.

Seated at our table is Mr. Jonathan Piper at the far end of the table. And a member of the bar of Illinois.

There is one other matter, Your Honor. The Court knows, Mr. Jamal is in what is referred to as a Phase 2 status on death row at S.C.I. Greene. As I understand it, he is entitled to be counseled by a spiritual advisor. And he does have a spiritual advisor, Mr. Steve Wiser. W-I-S-E-R. Wiser. And he is a member of the Bruderhof -- B-R-U-D-E-R-H-O-F -- Community, which is a religious order that has been in the Commonwealth as I understand it several hundred years. And he has served as his advisor, but he needs an order of this Court in order to see Mr. Jamal during this period of time. And I would ask the Court to indicate it's agreement that Mr. Wiser may visit with Mr. Jamal while he is in Phase 2.

Page 97.

MR. BURNS: No objection to that, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right, do you have any kind of an order for me to sign? I will be glad to sign it. If you don't have it now, give it to me whenever you can. All right.

MR. WEINGLASS: Later this afternoon.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Also, Your Honor, seated at Counsel's table is a legal runner who has been recognized and accepted as my legal runner in the City of Philadelphia. Miss Jennette Patton.

THE COURT: Who?

MR. WEINGLASS: Jeannette --

Page 98.

J-E-A-N-N-E-T-T-E -- Patton -- P-A-T-T-O-N. And she has been working with me because I'm unfamiliar with the City, and assisting me in terms of my investigation. And she has been recognized and accepted by the Department of Corrections as my runner. And has been accorded privileges to visit with Mr. Jamal on that basis by the Department of Corrections.

THE COURT: If they allow it there is nothing for me to do. As long as they allowed it it's all right by me.

MR. WEINGLASS: I believe while Mr. Jamal is here, and he has being kept at Graterford temporarily, we would need an order from the Court to allow her --

THE COURT: I don't think you need that. If they already recognized her. What do you need an order from me for? If the Corrections has a problem with it let them call me.

MR. WEINGLASS: This is the problem that Corrections does have. Under the rules of Phase 2 an inmate is only allowed to see his Counsel and his immediate family. And I would just ask while we are about to proceed here with a hearing, that Mr. Jamal be permitted, because I am in New York, to meet with my legal runner.

THE COURT: Well, you have a lot of Counsel here. I don't know how many you have here.

MR. WEINGLASS: None of them are from Philadelphia.

THE COURT: It doesn't make any difference whether they are from Philadelphia. They could go there and see him. Look, I can't get into a squabble with the Department of Corrections. If they have a certain rule, that's it. If they won't bend on it. Let them get in touch with me. I don't know, I am not going to get into a squabble of how they run the prisons. If that's their rules that's their rules.

MR. WEINGLASS: The Court is suggesting I should have the Department of Corrections call Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes, if there is a problem. I am not going to get into a squabble with the Department of Corrections. I don't run the prisons. I don't let the prisons tell me how to run the Courtroom, and they don't let me tell them how to run the prisons. I am not going to get involved in that. If that's what Phase 2 says then that's what Phase 2 says.

MR. WEINGLASS: Phase 2 only requires that we get a Court order, and that's what I am asking.

THE COURT: Well, then let the prison call me and let me see what they need. If they have a problem with it, let them give me a call. I don't know what their problem is. We will adjourn, then, gentlemen, until Tuesday morning.

MR. GRANT: Yes, Your Honor.

MR. BURNS: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: The defense ought to submit to the Court a list of your potential witnesses.

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

THE COURT: Could you submit to me on Monday afternoon sometime the list of the witnesses as you are going to call them. So that everybody knows who is going to be called so that they don't at the last minute, I don't want the Commonwealth at the last minute to say we didn't know they were going to call them. So just in the order that you are going to call them.

MR. GRANT: May we also have Counsel's requested additional discovery names so we can have that done over the weekend?

MR. WEINGLASS: Page 8 of the motion.

THE COURT: He said it is on page 8. All right?

MR. WEINGLASS: Fine.

THE COURT: Okay.

THE COURT CRIER: This Court stands adjourned until 1O:OO a.m. Tuesday morning, Courtroom 253.

(At 10:25 a.m. the hearing was convened in the presence of the Court and the attorneys.)

- - - - -

MR. PIPER: Good morning, Your Honor. Jonathan Piper on behalf of the Petitioner Mumia Abu-Jamal.

I have presented to Your Honor and to Mr. Banks Petitioner's emergency motion to reconsider the order scheduling a hearing date to certify orders for interlocutory appeal and to stay a hearing pending appeal.

Mr. Banks I think would like a moment to read it?

MR. BURNS: I think Your Honor would perhaps also.

THE COURT: I don't want to even read it because we don't have the Defendant here. We didn't make arrangements to have him brought down today and I am not going to go into any proceedings without him.

MR. PIPER: Your Honor, we will --

THE COURT: We will take that up tomorrow when he is going to be here.

Page 3.

MR. PIPER: Your Honor, one of the problems that we've had is that we haven't been able to meet with the Defendant over the weekend.

THE COURT: Well, that is your problem, Counselor.

MR. PIPER: What I would suggest is that we continue the hearing at least one day.

THE COURT: Well, I said tomorrow because he is going to be brought in tomorrow.

MR. PIPER: Then we should continue the evidentiary hearing at least one day so that this motion could be presented.

THE COURT: You could present it first thing in the morning, I will take it up.

MR. PIPER: We would also then plan to appeal to the Supreme Court.

THE COURT: I don't know how you are going to appeal it. I am not certifying anything.

MR. PIPER: Would you continue the hearing for at least one day, the evidentiary hearing?

THE COURT: I don't know, take it up tomorrow. Tell me what your problems are tomorrow, okay.

MR. PIPER: Would you stay these proceedings while we take our appeal?

THE COURT: Counselor, will you bring it up tomorrow when we could have the Defendant present? That's all I am going to do now. Since he is not here, I am not going to hear it.

MR. PIPER: Your Honor, we will be appealing. Would you stay these proceedings while we appeal?

THE COURT: You could do anything you want. If the Supreme Court wants to listen to you, that's fine. I can't tell you what to do, Counselor. I am not here to represent you or anybody else. I'm here to make a decision. And I have already made a decision in this matter. But I said if you can give me any cases that would justify my reversal of that decision, I'd do it. If you have cases, give them to me and I will read them today. If you don't have them, too bad.

MR. BURNS: Thank you, Your Honor. May it please the Court: My name is Burns, not Banks. That's all. Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Counselor, do you want to put your name down too for the record.

MR. GRANT: I believe he knows my name, Your Honor.

MR. BURNS: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. PIPER: Your Honor, one other housekeeping matter which is really just a presentment of the order you granted Friday appointing a spiritual advisor from the --

THE COURT: Yes. And I waited all day Friday for you.

MR. PIPER: We called Friday afternoon and we were advised that --

THE COURT: You did not call.

MR. PIPER: Yes.

THE COURT: We were here until 4:30. Don't give me that.

MR. PIPER: I called at 4:00 o'clock and there was --

THE COURT: Well, yes, that's not true, Counselor. You should have had it over. See how small that is (displaying)? You could have had that over at ten o'clock in the morning, eleven o'clock in the morning, any time.

Page 6.

MR. PIPER: Your Honor, the order was not even granted until after twelve o'clock and we called your office and you were not there.

THE COURT: You have one paragraph, roughly one paragraph here? Do you see how small it is. What's the big deal, why didn't you get it to me? You could have probably seen him over the weekend.

I will sign that right now. I have no problem doing that. Today's the 17th?

THE COURT CLERK: That is correct, Your Honor.

THE COURT: But I didn't even know why you need it because he has already been appointed spiritual advisor to the Defendant. And you told me it was in Greene Prison, out in Western Pennsylvania there.

MR. PIPER: Your Honor, I don't know the details. Mr. Weinglass would. But you did indicate --

THE COURT: You mean he didn't tell me the truth?

MR. PIPER: I said I am not familiar with that.

THE COURT: You were there, weren't

you?

MR. PIPER: That's what he said, yes.

THE COURT: That's wrong?

MR. PIPER: Whatever he said is true. Whatever you granted the order based on is what is true.

THE COURT: It is based on his telling me the truth, and I assumed that's what he was doing.

MR. PIPER: Exactly.

THE COURT: Okay. Now, it reads as follows: And now this 17th day of July, 1995, upon consideration of Petitioner's motion for Steve Wiser to be appointed spiritual advisor to Petitioner, and Respondent 's lack of objection thereto, it is hereby ordered, adjudged and decreed that the Petitioner's motion is granted.

Is there anything wrong with that, gentlemen?

MR. GRANT: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. See that.

MR. PIPER: Your Honor, if we could have copies of the orders we would appreciate it.

THE COURT: Well, I will tell you what

Page 8.

I will do: I will sign your copies for you.

MR. PIPER: Thank you.

THE COURT: But if they have to be certified you better take it to the Clerk.

MR. PIPER: Thank you, Judge.

THE COURT: Let me give copies to the D.A. also so that they know what I'm doing.

MR. GRANT: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Give this to the D.A. so he will have his copy.

THE COURT OFFICER: (Handing.)

THE COURT: Here is a copy for the defense. And I am going to keep a copy for myself and I am going to hand the original to the Clerk of Court. This is the original for the Clerk of Court.

Okay, that's all for today, gentlemen.

Do I have to sign these?

THE COURT CLERK: Yes.

THE COURT: All right, we will adjourn.

THE COURT OFFICER: There being no further business, this Court now stands adjourned.

Page 9.

THE COURT: Until tomorrow morning, gentlemen.

THE COURT: Good morning, everyone.

I just want to remind the spectators once again that while in this Courtroom everyone will respect the proper decorum. Any outbursts of any kind, the person will be evicted and not be able to return.

MR. PIPER: Jonathan Piper on behalf of Mumia Abu-Jamal, presenting our emergency motion to reconsider the order scheduling the hearing date.

Your Honor, we have said from the beginning that if this Court handles this hearing it will not be fair and will be perceived by the world as an unfair hearing. After two days in this Court the world has already spoken. The Inquirer Sunday said the behavior of this Judge in this case was disturbing the first time around and in the hearings last week he did not give the impression to those in the Courtroom of fair-mindedness. Instead, he gave the impression damaging in the extreme of undue haste and hostility towards the defense's case.

And Senator Arlen Spector told the Republican National Committee that this case is being handled as a rush to judgment.

Specifically, he noted that Judge Albert Sabo yesterday ordered that a hearing on Mr. Jamal's post-conviction appeal proceed, quote, but the hearing's going to be on Tuesday, without sufficient interval for review of documents and preparation. He said that you can not maintain a penalty as severe as the death penalty without being meticulous in how it is being applied.

So as we predicted, Your Honor, there is, to say the least, an appearance of impropriety in all of the orders that the Judge entered last week. We were scheduled for a hearing on Wednesday, the correspondence was clear that the only issues to be presented, the only issues were the recusal motion and the stay of execution. Your Honor denied the recusal motion on Wednesday and continued the stay motion for briefing on Friday. Then on Friday you insisted on proceeding to discovery, when we had not had a chance to even review the Commonwealth's papers or to present argument. Mr. Weinglass was not even allowed orally to argue the question. And our discovery motion seeking the suppressed evidence which is necessary to prove Mr. Jamal's innocence which has been suppressed for 15 years by the Commonwealth needs to be ferreted-out. But Your Honor will not permit that.

Then, with no prior notice that a scheduling issue would be presented, Your Honor peremptorily ordered a full evidentiary hearing on every one of the 19 claims raised in this Petition (displaying) on two Court days notice. That we were supposed to prepare the many witnesses we will need to present these claims, to find them, to subpoena them, to bring them into Court on just two days notice. That is completely unreasonable and everyone knows it.

What is happening these two days? Well, for one thing, although Your Honor refused to grant us any discovery of the suppressed evidence, we got a handful of the witness statements that had previously been in the possession of Tony Jackson which were sent to us by the Assistant District Attorney, including the key statement of Officer Gary Wakshul, proving that the State's confession claim is a fabrication. Officer Wakshul was there in the police van and he was there in the hospital. You may recall Inspector Alphonse Giordano at one point put forward the story that Jamal confessed in the van. Giordano, who has simply since been thrown off the force after he pled guilty to corruption, who was known as one of Mayor Rizzo's favorite cops in the civil disobedience surveillance of the Black Panthers and other left organizations in the early '7Os, but Gary Wakshul was there and he says, quote, the Negro male made no comments. Then we have the alleged confession in the hospital, cooked up by Officer Gary Bell two months later, again Wakshul was there, quote, during this time the Negro male made no comments.

We've asked for the logs of Officer Bell from the night when he supposedly heard these comments. The Commonwealth says there are no such logs and they won't produce them. We are entitled to that evidence.

Your Honor says you are not required to follow the local PCRA rules of this Court. But I believe you will not dispute that you are required to follow the Pennsylvania Rules of Criminal Procedure, specifically Rule 1508, which says an evidentiary hearing will be on the material issues of fact raised by the petition and the answer. Well, we did not even get the answer framing the issues in their view until an hour late yesterday afternoon. So we've had about 15 hours to have it in our possession. That is not by any means enough time to review the factual or legal assertions that they have made. And at the same time Your Honor is requiring us to try to find and subpoena witnesses. As Mr. Weinglass tried to explain to you on Friday, our investigator is not here this week because his wife is hospitalized for surgery. That did not faze Your Honor so we found another investigator, who was willing to cancel his vacation with his family in North Carolina to come in. And he arrived Sunday afternoon and has been working full-time with sleepless nights to try to get this case ready on such short notice. But this is an impossible task and a complete denial of any kind of due

How can we get the witnesses we need on this short notice? What about prosecutor McGill? His legal office balled up the subpoena that we served and threw it out the door. Then Mr. McGill called the Court directly to say that he will be tied up in Federal Court and not available until next week.

How about Officer Wakshul? What do you know, again he has disappeared. He called in sick to work yesterday and could not be found at home. This is the man who Your Honor found was, quote, on vacation at the time of the trial and so he was not allowed to testify about this phony confession theory.

Your Honor, the only way that a fair hearing could possibly go forward is with a 60-day continuance to permit the defense the, quote, reasonable opportunity for investigation and preparation which is required by the rules. That we be allowed to take discovery, to get at the suppressed evidence, that we be allowed to get at the ballistics evidence, to examine it since the proper tests were not done before the trial by the Commonwealth and since the defense

We need to get at the medical and autopsy evidence which was not provided to the defense which shows the incompetency of the autopsy proceedings, which shows that the examiner thought this was a .44 caliber bullet, not a .38.

We proceeded yesterday before the Pennsylvania Supreme Court and Mr. Eisenberg and myself had a teleconference with the emergency Justice of that Court. He said it was premature to decide this question on appeal because Your Honor may continue the hearing today. But that if Your Honor does not continue the hearing, the issue will be ripe for decision in the Supreme Court.

We were not even allowed to visit with our client over the weekend to discuss the preparation of witnesses. And Mr. Eisenberg has the gall to assert well why do we need to talk to our client about his case. The same attitude that this Court and the prosecution took during the trial when he was excluded from the Courtroom, denied any means to follow the details of what was going on in the Court.

THE COURT: Counselor, I don't like to interrupt you, but didn't you tell me that the attorneys were allowed to -- are you telling me that attorneys weren't allowed to meet with their client, has somebody denied you that right?

MR. PIPER: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Who?

MR. PIPER: The prison.

THE COURT: Why didn't you call me? All right, anybody acting up, you're going to go out of the Courtroom. I am not kidding. We are going to maintain decorum in this Courtroom.

This Court is not going to be intimidated by mob pressure. Understand that. If the day ever comes that the mob can control the courts, then, indeed, we are in dire circumstances. I will not tolerate it. No threats, nothing is going to intimidate this Court. No mob pressure is going to intimidate this Court.

MR. PIPER: Let the record reflect there was only a low murmur in the Courtroom.

Page 11.

THE COURT: Well, if it is a low murmur, I don't want a low murmur. I don't want a loud one. I don't want anything. I want quiet in the Courtroom.

All right, Counselor, but I will take it up with the Commissioner if that's what you want me to do.

MR. PIPER: We have tried to present that to you, Your Honor, yesterday.

THE COURT: You told me that you were entitled to see him. You said so. I signed an order for his religious man to see him, his minister, why wouldn't I allow you to see him?

MR. PIPER: Your Honor --

THE COURT: Please don't. Please.

MR. PIPER: Could Miss Wolkenstein address this issue in more detail in terms of what happened?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Yes, Judge, I attempted to see Mr. Jamal over the weekend on Sunday. And I made several phone calls to the prison, both starting at nine o'clock in the morning and continuing until four o'clock in the afternoon. I spoke to the supervising lieutenant and captains on the morning shift and the afternoon shift. Phone calls were placed to the assistant to the superintendent by the name of Alan Lafay, who supposedly, I was told, tried to contact, he would try to contact the superintendent. In any event, Mr. Lafay, who what I have been told is the person who grants such a permission, so called special permission for attorneys to visit, said he would not allow an attorneys' visit even though all the details were put before him. The fact that we were compelled to proceed with the hearing on Tuesday, the fact that we had just received new materials from the prosecution over the weekend, that we were under this very tight schedule, not to mention the fact that the date for execution --

THE COURT: Why didn't you call me?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Judge, to be very honest, I didn't call you because I knew that you would be unavailable as early as three o'clock.

THE COURT: No, there is a City Hall operator that will contract me.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: The idea that you would be able to be reached, very honestly, given what was going on in the Court absolutely was beyond the capacity --

Page 13.

THE COURT: You had a parade in front of my house: You knew I had to be home.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, what I understood from Mr. Piper, the question --

THE COURT: I don't care about Mr. Piper. I am telling you if you have a problem, you call me.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Next time I will, Your Honor. But I want to make the point since you asked the question why not: Mr. Piper relayed just further confirmation of the problems here, but when he produced the order to you on the question of Steven Wiser being appointed spiritual adviser you gave him a hard time about it.

THE COURT: I gave nobody a hard time. I signed it.

MR. PIPER: After giving me a hard time.

THE COURT: When did I give you a hard time, Counselor?

MR. PIPER: Yesterday, after I told you we were not permitted --

Page 14.

THE COURT: No, yesterday you wanted to proceed with these proceedings and I said Mr. Jamal wasn't here, we would not do it, I would continue it to today when he was here because I don't want him to accuse me of having some hearings out of his presence.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, in point of fact --

THE COURT: In point of fact I didn't give him a hard time. I signed the order. When it was given to me I signed it.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Excuse me, Your Honor, the point of fact is that we had a Court date to begin testimony in --

THE COURT: I know that, I know that. But he is talking about you didn't have permission to see him. And I am saying to you next time it happens call me.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, point --

THE COURT: The telephone operator here at City Hall will contact me.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Would there be a standing order entered as of this moment to the Department of Corrections that as attorney for Mister --

Page 15.

THE COURT: Did you give me such an order?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Could I finish?

THE COURT: You don't have to finish. Give me an order and I will sign it.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We can have an order --

THE COURT: Give me an order and I will sign it.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: -- on the record. The order that you will be requested to sign. I will handwrite it out.

THE COURT: Don't handwrite it. Print it or type it.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Would be that Defendant Jamal should have access for legal visits in the evening, daytime and the weekend upon phone call to the institution. Will you agree with that, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Counselor, prepare an order for me.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Would you sign such an order?

THE COURT: Prepare an order and let me call the prison, I want to find out what their problem is.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: You will sign --

THE COURT: Counselor, I will sign an order permitting you to see your client. All I want to do is to have the courtesy to call the prison. I want to know why they didn't allow you and if there is some problem of which I don't know. After all, I don't run the prisons.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Everything had to be negotiated from nine o'clock to four o'clock on a weekend. And that was the reason. Since it hadn't happened during the weekday they were not going to allow it, despite all of the emergency nature of these proceedings and how quickly we were going.

THE COURT: Counselor, prepare an order. I will contact the prison: I want to find out if there is a problem. If there is a problem I am going to have them come into this Courtroom and see what the problem is.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I will make an appropriate order. I will present it this afternoon.

MR. PIPER: To clarify the issue of calling you on the weekend: Over the weekend, we tried to present this matter on Monday and not only did your clerk tell me you were very upset that we were disrupting your scheduling --

THE COURT: No.

MR. PIPER: But that --

THE COURT: Nobody speaks for me, Counselor. Didn't I come into the Courtroom?

MR. PIPER: And you told me you would hear it today.

THE COURT: Right. I asked you did you have Mumia Abu-Jamal brought down and you said no. And I said I was not going to go forward unless he was in the Courtroom and I said so we will continue it to today. So now you have your opportunity. He is present.

MR. PIPER: Your Honor, to summarize -- and the New York Times Magazine again confirms --

THE COURT: Are we going to try this case on the news media or are we going to try it in this Courtroom?

MR. PIPER: Your Honor, the issue --

THE COURT: I don't care what the news media says about me or about anything else. Try the case in this Courtroom under the law and under the rules as they now exist, okay.

MR. PIPER: The legal standard is whether these proceedings appear to be fair to the public at large, and it is incontrovertible that the answer is no.

THE COURT: Well, that's your opinion. And as I said to you before: Mob pressure will not control the courts. If the day ever comes that that happens, boy, we are in real trouble, all right.

MR. PIPER: Your Honor, it was the Fraternal Order of Police which began sending telegrams to the judges saying that Mumia should not even been allowed out on bail. Mr. Jamal, when he was first arrested. So you don't need to tell us about the mob. And we do not think that Arlen Specter or the Philadelphia Inquirer or the New York Times editorial board are generally considered to be the problem.

THE COURT: Well, Arlen Specter wants to make political hay out of this case. That's fine, he's running for president, that's his business. But Arlen Specter is not the Judge and is not a Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania or the United States.

MR. PIPER: The issue is how these proceedings can have any appearance of fairness before Your Honor given not only your history generally, but your history in this particular case and your history last week.

THE COURT: Counselor, you can be as insulting as you wish, but that's not going to move the Court, okay.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, if I may: I believe this is nothing more or less than a thinly veiled attempt to revisit the recusal issue which Your Honor so aptly decided. Can we get on with this hearing or not, Judge?

THE COURT: I would hope so.

MR. GRANT: Why do we have to rehash the history of the proceedings?

THE COURT: Why don't you just stick to whatever you are trying to prove now.

MR. PIPER: The point, Your Honor, is that these proceedings will not be fair if Mr. Jamal is required to go forward on two Court days notice for reasons of due process in this capital case where heightened scrutiny, the most careful consideration is required. There must be a continuance and our motion should be

MR. EISENBERG: Your Honor, Ronald Eisenberg for the Commonwealth.

I believe that the authority that has been cited, the only authority, quote unquote that has been cited by the defense on this motion for reconsideration establishes that the true nature of the defense proposition, the piece of, quote unquote, authority that the Defendant talks about is a comment from the media, from the press. No law is cited to Your Honor for the proposition that you can not hold a hearing as Defendant requested in his PCRA Petition, merely comments from the press, in order to make the point that the world is watching and we should do what the world thinks is the right thing here. It's precisely because the world is watching, Your Honor, that it is time to hear these complaints, these charges of an unfair trial, of a conspiracy. The defense PCRA Petition makes out claims that this Defendant has been railroaded through some gigantic law enforcement conspiracy going back to his teenage years, and it is time now to hear these allegations and to put evidence on concerning them.

Now, the Defendant says that he is not being allowed to do that in a fair way and he keeps talking about two days were the applicable time period here. It is not, and it is beyond me how the defense can ignore the true period of time that we are talking about.

The defense has admitted beginning to work on this case, on these allegations at least as early as 1992, three years at the very least; and they produced immediately after the warrant was signed a 300-page Petition which detailed affidavits from fact witnesses who the defense said would show that he was improperly convicted and that he was really innocent. And those affidavits were almost uniformly dated at the end of May of 1995. The Defendant had those witnesses and their statements, that evidence, in 1995 in May, and filed a Petition on June 5th, after three years of work. And now he says suddenly that we are talking about a two-day period. It was three years before the Petition was filed and it's been six weeks since the Petition is filed. We are not talking about two days. We are talking about three years and then another six weeks since the Petition was filed in order to hear evidence that the Defendant said he had then, not that he has to develop now. Evidence that he said that he had then and he submitted to this Court affidavits to show that he had that evidence.

Now the Defendant says that he hasn't really had a fair chance, he hasn't been allowed to argue discovery. This Court made it clear what it saw as the discovery issue here: Whether there was a right to discovery at the Post-Conviction Relief Act stage. The Defendant ducks that issue, they refuse to confront that issue. The Court said I don't know how many times in hearings last week, you bring me some law on that to show that there is a right to that sort of discovery and I will reconsider my ruling about the discovery. There has been no law offered, the subject is not even mentioned by the defense. They studiously ignore the Court's invitation, yet go on and on complaining about how they were denied discovery, despite the exact words of the Court inviting them to present you with legal authority.

The discovery, as we have pointed out, is a pre-trial rule. These materials were turned over to the defense before trial. Not only were they in possession of the defense attorney, but we know from the record which was recited, quoted last week, we know that these materials were turned over to the Defendant himself. And that indeed trial Counsel had difficulty because he did not have ready access to the materials that were in the Defendant's possession. Yet the defense says here today and complains that they haven't had enough time because we are talking about materials that they say that they have a right to now that were actually in the Defendant's personal possession 13 years ago.

And as the primary example of these documents that they say that they need, they refer to a statement of Officer Wakshul that they say that we just turned over to them. And this is a particularly disturbing allegation since the defense knows full well that they had the statement of Officer Wakshul at the time of trial 13 years ago. Not just from documents and correspondence between Counsel, but because that statement was referred to in the trial record by the Defendant himself. They had that statement 13 years ago, and they come into Court today and say that this hearing is too rushed because they just got it two days ago.

As Your Honor recalls, last week the defense said we want some materials which we know you already turned over but which we can't find again. And out of courtesy we said fine, we will give you those materials, tell us which ones. And they told us, and that same day, Friday, we sent to them every document that they requested at that point. Every statement that they said we know we had them before but now we don't have them, please give us a copy, we gave it to them the same afternoon. And another copy of the Wakshul statement they had 13 years ago was in that package of materials. And the allegation that there is some reason for delay because they are just seeing this is preposterous and offensive.

Now, the defense also argues that the Court is not following the local rules. That they need these 60 days that the local rules provide. This mysterious 60 days: There is no such thing in the local rules. The local rules don't say we get 60 days from whenever we declare that we want 60 days. The local rules say -- and I will quote here -- if fact witnesses are to be called in an evidentiary hearing, you must supply affidavits of those witnesses to the Court and the Assistant District Attorney setting forth the substance of his or her testimony. Such affidavits must be filed at least 30 days prior to the date of the hearing. The affidavits were filed on June 5th, 1995. Today is July 18th, 1995. That is more than 30 days ago.

The local rules go on: If an evidentiary hearing is granted, you must make immediate arrangements to have your witnesses present for the hearing. That is what is happening. The Court has informed the defense that it is willing to have an evidentiary hearing on the PCRA Petition. The Defendant asked for that kind of hearing. He said here are my affidavits right here; right now. And the Court said fine, I will give you a hearing, and the hearing is to occur more than 30 days after the filing of the affidavits.

I am getting tired of hearing

repeatedly about the violation of the local rules when there was no such violation. Even assuming that it mattered. Even assuming that the non-capital, PCRA judge's procedures, which is what we are talking about, were binding on this Court, even assuming that this Court were bound by those procedures, there has been no violation of those rules.

THE COURT: Isn't that rule for the benefit of the Commonwealth?

MR. EISENBERG: It certainly is, Your Honor.

THE COURT: And if you are willing to waive it, why do I care?

MR. WEINGLASS: If it had been less than 30 days, Your Honor, that is absolutely right. The reason that that period of 30 days is built into the rule is to give the Commonwealth adequate opportunity to investigate the defense allegations. Now, as it happens, it's been more than 30 days. But even if it had been less, the Commonwealth could choose to proceed earlier. We have a certain number of days to file an answer, for example, to the PCRA petition. I believe we have 90 days under this set of procedures in the normal --

THE COURT: I didn't give you 90 days.

MR. EISENBERG: The Court didn't give us 90 days. We got less time.

Why is it important to move ahead? Two reasons, Your Honor. First of all, because as I said, it's the defense which puts these allegations out about the rule. They stand here today and repeat them. Even today they go into detail about the various reasons why their client is really innocent and how he has been railroaded by the system. And yet when we say fine, let's hear the evidence, they say no. They want to continue to argue the merits of their claims in the press. They want to refer to the New York Times and the Daily News or The Inquirer, whoever, and say here, here is what's wrong with what happened to our case. They are not standing back from giving the details of these allegations to the press. They are not telling the press, oh, excuse me, Mr. Reporter, Ms. Reporter, we haven't had enough time to investigate our allegations yet, give us a chance, give us 60 days and we'11 come back to you so that you could write your story. They are telling the press right now and last month and the month before and for months the details of these allegations that show that their client is wrongly convicted. And they have filed those detailed allegations in Court filings on paper, and yet now they say we can't proceed. They are ready enough when it comes to talking about it to the press, but when it comes to talking in Court, suddenly they are not ready.

Now, Mr. Piper also refers to the Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 1508, which say that the hearing shall be held on the basis of the defendant's PCRA petition and answer. But the Rules also say that the Commonwealth need not file an answer at all. The Rules do not require the filing of an answer. A hearing can proceed without any answer. And again, as usual, we hear no specifics from the defense about what it is about the answer or about not having an answer that somehow precludes them from going ahead with the hearing.

The Court didn't order them to have 19 witnesses here in Court today, or 25. The Court didn't say you are having a hearing starting Tuesday and Tuesday afternoon it is going to be done and you have to have everything ready to go on Tuesday or you're out of Court. What the Court said is we are starting on Tuesday. We are started. So what the defense position is in effect is that they shouldn't be required even to be able to get a single witness, anybody at all to come and testify today. Nobody. Despite having detailed factual affidavits dated in, May of this year, suddenly these witnesses are not available for a hearing.

The defense obviously believes that they don't have to prove their allegations, that the setting of the execution date merely means that all they have to do is come into Court and say Judge, we've got all these allegations, therefore you've got to overturn the Governor's setting of the execution date. You've got to ignore that, you have to put it aside like it was worth nothing. But that's not the case, Your Honor. That was a solemn legal act on the part of the Governor setting the execution date. He didn't rush to it. It's been sitting there waiting for years and years. The Governor could have signed an execution warrant as soon as the litigation in this case was over.

There hasn't been anything, any litigation in this case since 1992. It was, actually, basically over even earlier than that. And nobody acted. Nobody rushed them. Nobody signed a warrant. They had their years to investigate, to draft their Petition, to get their affidavits. And then all of a sudden when the warrant is signed and they file they say now we don't have enough time anymore.

They admitted to the press, to which they wish to address their claims so freely, that they would not file their Petition until after the Governor signed the death warrant. And presumably if that had been a year from now we wouldn't have this PCRA Petition for another year. If it had been earlier, that's when we would have had the PCRA Petition. They intentionally waited until the death warrant was signed and now they say that because we waited, because we delayed, because we chose strategically not to show the Court the claims that we were showing the press, the Court has to back off of the execution date, the Court has to let us control the scheduling here. And it's not up to the defense to control the scheduling.

We are talking about a period of years. And it is appropriate for the Court, given that period of years, for the Court to schedule this proceeding, for the Court to control the scheduling. And when the Court knows that the defense has had a minimum of three years to put this together, when the Court knows that the defense indeed did put this together and was able to file it the day after the warrant became public, it is appropriate for the Court to proceed with a hearing.

Now, the defense has made a reference to going before the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, as if somehow the Pennsylvania Supreme Court is eager to act in this matter. And I thought that that point also deserved comment. What happened was that I received a call from the Court yesterday at 5 p.m. asking me for my response to the defense motion. The defense motion, however, had not been served on the Commonwealth at that point. And the Supreme Court Justice was very concerned about that. He said I have a certificate of service here signed by the defense attorney which says that you have already served this on the Commonwealth but you now concede that you haven't, and I'm unwilling to proceed on your motion which you concede has not been served on the Commonwealth. And it is understandable how the Supreme Court Justice at five o'clock at the end of a business day, on a alleged emergency motion, would be reluctant to proceed where both sides had not had notice of the proceedings.

The Court also said, however that it wondered what it was that the defense had been doing with this case since June 5th when the Petition was filed. And I think that is a very good question, Your Honor. They came to Court on June 5th after three years of work and said we want a hearing; and now Your Honor wants to give it to them and they say oh, no, we don't actually want a hearing, not now, maybe at some point down the line.

And all we are trying to do is start that process. To advance the process, given that we have an execution date, which just shouldn't be thrown out like so much toilet paper. We have a signed warrant of execution. We have allegations that are being made daily in the press around the world, and the world should begin to hear the evidence on those claims.

Now, the defense also argues that they can't possibly proceed because, as yet another example of the system's efforts to railroad their client, they are not being allowed to see him in prison. And I think some details need to be added here as well, Your Honor.

As the defense knows, the procedure of the prison is to allow freely counsel visits during weekdays; weekend visits require special permission. The procedure is you call on Friday, you get that permission. When Ms. Wolkenstein called over the weekend she said yes, I didn't call on Friday, I was busy, let me try to see the Defendant. And the prison said we can't arrange that consistent with our procedures.

Now, I understand that Ms. Wolkenstein was busy. We've all been busy. Everybody gets busy when a case goes into litigation just before the execution date. Every death case in this State and the country results in a flurry of activity when the defense waits until the execution date to begin litigating. That's the way it works. And if they say that they've had experience in handling other death cases then they know that perfectly well: It's going to be busy in this period. Your Honor has already offered to make arrangements to allow access in a freer manner if that is what is necessary, but there is certainly no allegations, no explanation of why it was necessary to see the Defendant on Saturday or Sunday versus Friday or Monday in order to be able to proceed today. He is not one of the listed witnesses. There is no affidavit from the Defendant. He's been in Court and with Counsel throughout. Ms. Wolkenstein has been visiting him in prison frequently. The prison records show, indeed, that Ms. Wolkenstein's visits to the Defendant begin in, I believe, 1987, eight years ago. And there is certainly sufficient opportunity to consult with the Defendant in order to at least begin these proceedings. That's all we are talking about is just starting.

Now, the defense says they couldn't deal with the Court because they've tried to deal with the Court and you wouldn't let them yesterday when they came before you. And I think again some details need to be stated for the record here.

On Friday afternoon we received a call and a letter from the Defendant, from the defense saying that they were in effect declaring a hearing for Monday morning. There was no Court proceeding scheduled for Monday morning, the Court was scheduled to reconvene today, Tuesday morning. But they said we're going to file something, we'll FAX you a copy over the weekend, Saturday or Sunday. And we are going to appear at the Judge's chambers Monday morning for a hearing. The Court had not agreed to schedule any such hearing. But despite the fact that the defense in effect was scheduling the Court for itself, the Court did agree to have a hearing, not in chambers but in an open, public Courtroom.

And in fact, despite the Defendant's repeated claims today, last week, for months and years, that he has being excluded in these proceedings, no arrangements were made to have the Defendant present for this supposedly crucial hearing that the defense scheduled for itself yesterday. And so the Court said let's do it tomorrow when we know the Defendant is going to be here. It's hard to see how there is something inappropriate about scheduling a hearing in a matter to allow the Defendant the access to the hearing that he is claiming he is being denied. And the argument that they couldn't come before the Court is ridiculous.

I think it's important to remember in the end, Your Honor, the basic facts regarding the starting of this motion. The Defendant worked on his case as long as he pleased with his lawyers, with a whole team of lawyers and investigators for years and years and years, deciding to withhold those papers until the Governor signed the warrant, filing those papers the day after the warrant became public. And then, even then, six weeks later, claiming that he has not had the,opportunity to investigate and prepare.

It is the defense that has delayed here. They have been allowed to delay. Now is the time to stop delaying and to put on in Court the allegations that they are so happy to make in detail in public.

Thank you, Your Honor.

We filed a written answer to the defense motion which was served on the defense this morning. I don't know whether the Court has yet received a copy. May I hand up a copy of that (handing)?

Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. GRANT: In addition, Your Honor, preliminarily to their submission of witnesses, Your Honor asked them on Friday or rather. . . . . ordered them, to present to the Commonwealth a witness list with the order of witnesses they intended to have here today. We have the names of witnesses. And as Your Honor knows, under the Pennsylvania Rules of Criminal Procedure, 1508, we are entitled to the affidavits of any witnesses and the Petition that is their basis for moving forward in this matter. There is a Lydia Wallace, a Ruth Ballard, Ken Hamilton, E. Steven Collins -- none of whom were mentioned in the Petition. No affidavits appear or are forthcoming from these people. I would like to have an offer of proof and then I would like to reserve the right to move to preclude.

In addition to which, since they can't find all their witnesses in such an untimely fashion, since Your Honor is rushing the procedure, the Commonwealth has taken the liberty to subpoena their witnesses for them and bring them to Court so they could present their claims before the press and Your Honor.

One Dessie Hightower, who is alleged to have taken a polygraph examination on 12-9-81 and to have passed, which information was apparently not given to the defense, which they perceive as exculpatory and Brady material, was subpoenaed for this date, this room, two hours ago. He has failed to appear. I would ask that Your Honor issue a bench warrant for his arrest. I have the original and copies of the signed warrants.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Objection.

MR. WEINGLASS: Here we go again with the intimidation tactics of the prosecution which was so evident during the trial and which formed the basis of our allegations. In the dark of night the prosecution as an aid to us subpoenas one of our witnesses and then comes before Your Honor and has the gall to say that this individual should now be arrested. I could almost rest the case of harassment on just what the gentleman has said in the last 10 minutes.

Page 39.

This is so typical.

THE COURT: Counselor, I have been harassed too so what is the difference.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, if that is the Court's response --

THE COURT: No, Counselor, he is just trying to help you. And can you have the witness in here on your own?

MR. WEINGLASS: The difference is a man's life is at stake. Need I remind the Court.

THE COURT: Counselor, I understand that, and I know when August 17th is coming, Counselor. I have it on my calendar, don't worry about it. What I am saying to you: Do you need any help in getting any of these witnesses in?

MR. WEINGLASS: Not the kind of help that has them subpoenaed in the middle of the night and arrested the following morning.

THE COURT: Well, nobody is arresting anybody yet. I am just asking, can --

MR. WEINGLASS: There has been a request made.

THE COURT: Did you make

Page 40.

arrangements --

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, he was subpoenaed last week in the middle of the day, for Counsel's edification.

THE COURT: You see, Counselor, I would appreciate it if you do not give me statements that are not true. I don't appreciate that. If you don't know say you don't know. But don't deliberately tell me something that is not true. I will not tolerate that in this Courtroom.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, Your Honor --

THE COURT: I look at you as an officer of the Court. And I am expecting you to be honest and true with me.

MR. WEINGLASS: Let me provide the Court with a piece of information also. One of our witnesses was subpoenaed.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: His name is Mr. Fassnacht. I believe it's George Fassnacht. He called me, he spoke to me last night. And he said to me that he was a little surprised, having been retained by the defense in this case, to find that he was being asked whether or not he would now work as an expert for the prosecution. Mr. Fassnacht felt there might be something a little unethical going on here when he files an affidavit for the Petitioner, then he is subpoenaed by the prosecution and in a conversation they asked him if he will change sides and begin working for the prosecution. I represent to the Court I had that conversation.

MR. GRANT: And I represent that is a total falsehood.

THE COURT: See. Why don't you bring him in here?

MR. WEINGLASS: We will hear from Mr. Fassnacht.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: I will stand by it.

THE COURT: Okay, let him take the stand and under oath let him tell us.

MR. WEINGLASS: Let me say --

MR. GRANT: I don't think we should go any further without hearing that exposed. Mr. Fassnacht was one of their affiants who says the ballistics were so botched, the firearms examination was so poorly and ineptly done, had I been the expert, had Your Honor or Judge

Page 42.

Ribner paid me more money, this is what I would have exposed. So since he is an affiant and they seem to have problems getting their witnesses in, I subpoenaed all their witnesses, and I will have them here for them whenever they want.

In addition to which I asked Mr. Fassnacht, well, since you believe that this was so ineptly done, sir, I don't think you got the evidence, do you think you could go and check it out now and come up with a better conclusion. That is certainly not working for me. He is still working for them, but I challenged him to back up what he says, just like we are doing for the defense. Of course he doesn't want to do that.

That is the conversation, since you didn't participate in it.

MR. WEINGLASS: Mr. Fassnacht's perception of that conversation was that was unethical, that he shouldn't be asked to perform a test since he was retained by this side. It is an elemental procedure. And that's what happened. I think Counsel just acknowledged that. They asked him to do a test for them when he was retained by this side.

Now, I want to address the obfuscation here. This Petition --

Which, incidentally, includes the affidavit of Lydia Wallace, Counsel, you haven't read the full Petition. It is attached as an exhibit.

This Petition, which was filed an June 5th, 1995, is akin, and I will make the analogy, to a civil complaint. We did not go to the media; we filed a Petition which was a public document and the media read it and questioned us about the public document. And it's all contained, as they say, specifically and in great detail.

Now, what happens after that in the ordinary course? In the ordinary course the Commonwealth files an answer to the document. And they did. When did they file it? They filed it at one o'clock yesterday afternoon. And what did they say their answer does? They say that their answer -- I will get it in a moment. This is what they said. Well, I'm I sorry. The primary purpose of this answer is not to discussion the legal merits of the Defendant's claim, to the extent the underlying claims may be cognizable, but to identify, and here I have put in the primary answer, is not to discuss the legal matters that the Defendant claims, but to identify to the extent the underlying claims may be cognizable any disputed issues of fact.

So we go to the answer yesterday.. Now we are proceeding on track. A complaint has been filed, an answer has been filed (displaying). They have defined the issues of fact. They do, for 163 paragraphs of this Petition, they say certain paragraphs are denied, certain paragraphs are admitted.

Now, in the ordinary course, Your Honor well knows this, in civil litigation, we now have the issues joined. What happens? The hearing doesn't happen the next day. Never. What happens is discovery occurs.

THE COURT: Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: Investigation occurs.

THE COURT: Counselor, as I said to you before, that is pre-trial. We are now in PCRA. And as I said to you, Counselor, if you could show me a statute, a case, a law, anything that would justify that, fine, I will reconsider my order. But you haven't done that.

MR. WEINGLASS: We have done that.

THE COURT: No, you haven't.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, and Mr. Piper will give it to the Court, which we did give it to the Court on Thursday last. We will repeat it. The local rule provides for discovery. The word discovery --

THE COURT: The local rule does not provide for discovery in a PCRA matter, Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, well, I will allow Mr. Piper to address that.

MR. PIPER: Your Honor has all the authority in the world to permit us discovery. And given the allegations we have made it's clearly appropriate and necessary. Rule 1508 says that we --

THE COURT: Is that the Criminal?

MR. PIPER: Rule 1508 of the Criminal Rules of Procedure.

THE COURT: That is pre-trial.

MR. PIPER: Governing post-conviction relief. Rule 1508, Your Honor, states that we must have a reasonable opportunity to prepare and investigate before the hearing and that the Court shall enter any order necessary in the interest of justice to let us prepare and investigate. Of course there are many other statutes which give this Court the power to enter any order necessary to preserve and facilitate it's jurisdiction. And the case law from Pennsylvania and from the Federal courts and other state courts are clear, that regardless of whether there is an express discovery provision set out in the post-conviction rules, discovery should be entered where there are allegations of suppressed evidence, Brady issues, issues of favorable evidence that was concealed by the police and the prosecution. That should be discoverable. We have cited the Federal cases, such as Mayberry versus Petsock. We cited this to you Thursday. Which says that in determining whether to grant discovery you just need to look at the four corners of the petition.

There is also the Pennsylvania case of Commonwealth versus Bryson, 421 PA Superior, 618 A.2nd 420, which says that, which quotes New York cases, saying that even though New York doesn't provide for discovery in it's rules, of course it should be allowed in post-conviction proceedings when necessary. And that's a Pennsylvania case approvingly citing that standard.

So to answer your question, Your Honor, we have cited you amp1e authority showing that you have the power to grant discovery. And if you would like to now turn to the specific discovery requests which should be entered, we would be happy to address those.

THE COURT: Well, let me first hear from the Commonwealth. What is your answer to that?

MR. EISENBERG: Your Honor, I am shocked and amazed to hear the allegation now as compared to the allegation a half an hour ago that authority has been presented to Your Honor on the question of discovery. When Mr. Piper first spoke this morning, you will recall that he said that they were denied any opportunity at all to argue about discovery and therefore they couldn't proceed today because Your Honor wouldn't even hear argument about discovery.

And now they said oh, yeah, we already gave all that to you last week. But if they already gave it all to you last week then they weren't denied the opportunity to argue about discovery.

The point is that what they gave to you last week, which wasn't given to you for the purpose of arguing discovery at all, doesn't establish that they are entitled to discovery. They cited Rule 1508 last week, sure. Rule 1508 doesn't provide for discovery. It doesn't say, as Mr. Piper just purported to quote, that the Court in the interest of justice can grant discovery to let the defense investigate and prepare. What it says is the Court shall enter such interim orders as may be necessary in the interest of justice, no reference whatsoever there to investigating or preparing.

In fact, the point at which Rule 1508 comes into play is after a petition has been filed and a hearing is going to proceed. There is no reference here to using that interest of justice language in the rule in regard to discovery. There's no practice of it, there is no precedent for it. They don't cite a single Pennsylvania case applying this vague, general language to say gee, when we talk about interests of justice, what we really meant is giving us discovery. They don't say that. They don't give you that.

Now, last week on Friday, as Your Honor will recall, after we presented our response to the discovery request, and pointed out that these materials had been given over to the defense before trial 13 years ago, the defense said there were some things that they didn't have anymore even though they were originally given over to the defense and as far as the record shows were in the Defendant's personal possession. So we said tell us what those things are and we will give them to you again. And they told us what they were. They gave us a list of those statements and we gave them to them again, even though they already had them and even had referred to some of them at trial. And now they say that there is some sort of right to discovery. None of the cases that they have cited in support of their request for a stay said that they had a right to discovery. These were all Federal cases that were cited to Your Honor, Federal habeas corpus cases which dealt with the issue of a stay of execution, not discovery. There was one case that they talked about, I believe it was McClesky versus Zant, here they referred to the word discovery. And when you look in the opinion, what you will see the opinion discusses, of the United States Supreme Court, is that that defendant can't use his failure to discover evidence as an excuse for delaying his request to have his execution put aside. If the evidence could have been discovered, was discoverable, then the defendant should have gone out and found it and presented it to the court in support of his effort to put his sentence aside.

Now, that use of the word discovery is hardly what Counsel is talking about today. Discovery in today's context is a legal term of art, a special word in the law. And what it means is not just finding something the way that Columbus discovered America. What it means is when is there an obligation on the part of the other side to turn over information that it has to you. Not when do I have an obligation to discover things on my own, to investigate on my own, but when can I force the other side to do it for me. That's what discovery in the technical-legal sense means.

That's not what the cases on which they relied for another proposition talked about, as the cases that they gave the Court last week. What those cases made clear when they speak about the defendant having to discover information is that. It is the defendant's obligation at this point to go out and investigate his case, discover evidence, if he believes that it exists, present it to the court, and on that basis ask for the execution to be put aside. That is an opposite meaning of the word discovery from the purpose for which it is being cited to Your Honor today. A complete twisting of the cases.

And the Defendant has done that, he said he's done it, and so one of two things must be true. Either he did it, like he says in his Petition that he did it, like he had at least three years to do, in which case his present claim today that he hasn't had a chance to do it yet is false. Or he didn't do it, he didn't investigate and prepare like he was supposed to and like he had years to do. In which case his claim today that he hasn't done it may be true, but the claims in the Petition filed on June 5th are false. Those can't both be true.

And this is not a civil case. This is not the beginning of a civil case, as Mr. Weinglass attempts to analogize. A civil case drags on in court for years. A case in a civil matter, a car accident, products liability may come to trial 10 years after the filing of a complaint. It's absurd to suggest that that's how we should proceed here. It's absurd enough that we are still arguing about this case 13 years later, even in a criminal case. But to say that we should treat this proceeding like a civil trial where the hearing can occur 10 years later is truly absurd.

We've already had the trial here. We had it 13 years ago. At that point it became the Defendant's burden to try to overturn that trial if he wanted to. He messed around in the Courts for years: He went to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court directly, he filed a petition for rehearing in the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, a filing which is virtually never granted. It got him some delay. No relief, of course. He went to the United States Supreme Court. He filed a petition for rehearing there again, a filing that is never granted, virtually never granted by the Court, but he filed it anyway, got some delay. Got his result denying the rehearing. Waited six months, which you are not allowed to do, and filed for rehearing again. Virtually unprecedented to ask for a hearing again; and of course the Court summarily dismissed that petition as well.

That brought him to 1992. Even with all of that going back and forth in the Courts it brought him only to 1992. And here we are in 1995. He has been working on all of this since that time and he says now gee, I've got to discover things. Well, he did discover things, and that's what the cases, even his own cases, put the burden on him to do, is to discover things. And he says he did, and now it is time for us to hear them. Not just for the press to hear them, but for us in Court on the witness stand to hear them.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, Rule 1508, which Counsel cited but only in part, there is another part that Counsel didn't cite. And that part addresses the very issue that's before the Court this morning. And that issue is this: When should a hearing be scheduled. When. Should it be within one day after we get the answer, two days after the Court tells us we are going to trial. Or should we be given a reasonable opportunity to prepare, Your Honor, for the hearing. Counsel knows --

THE COURT: Not hearing, hearings. I am assuming you are not going to do it in one day, or a half a day.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right, hearings.

THE COURT: Hearings.

MR. WEINGLASS: Does Rule 1508 address what is immediately before the Court? And it does. But Counsel didn't read it. Let me read it.

The Judge shall schedule the hearing for a time that will afford the parties a reasonable opportunity for investigation and preparation and shall enter such interim orders as may be necessary in the interest of justice. The judge on motion or request shall postpone or continue a hearing to provide either party a reasonable opportunity if one did not exist previously for investigation and preparation regarding any new issue of fact raised in an amended motion or amended answer.

Now, the words that stick out are the words reasonable opportunity in the interest of justice. Have we had an opportunity to investigate claims. The answer is we have and have produced our Petition of June 5th. Have we had a reasonable opportunity to prepare for a hearing. And the answer is no, because we got the answer yesterday afternoon. Preparing a case for the presentation of claims is one thing. Preparing a case for a hearing, as any lawyer knows, and as Your Honor knows, is a totally different exercise. And we have started that. But we are just at the beginning and we are in no way prepared for a hearing. And so that's the distinction.

Now, they try to string those things together.

THE COURT: Suppose the Commonwealth had decided not to file an answer, just denied it?

MR. WEINGLASS: We would still need the time to get our witnesses.

Page 56.

THE COURT: You have been doing this for three years.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, three years is of no moment. As I just explained --

THE COURT: What do you mean of no moment?

MR. WEINGLASS: Let me give Your Honor an example. One of our witnesses is Mr. McGill, the former District Attorney.

THE COURT: Yes, okay, and I understand he has a problem.

MR. WEINGLASS: We all have problems.

THE COURT: All right, fine, we could deal with his problem and I will help you on that.

MR. WEINGLASS: And deal with ours as well.

THE COURT: That's right. But you can't tell me you don't have anybody, that you just can't start the proceedings.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, when you put it that way, it would be malpractice and I would confess it for me to put on the stand a witness I haven't talked to for purposes of a hearing. I have talked to witnesses for purposes of filing a claim (displaying) in a petition. That's very different than preparing a witness for a hearing.

Why? Your Honor, when you prepare a witness for a hearing you review with that witness potential areas of cross-examination which you never review when you file an affidavit. You review with the witness the rest of the record.

THE COURT: Let me ask you this, Counselor: Do you want to call one witness a day? So that you could prepare him the night before?

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, it's --

THE COURT: I will do whatever you want to. If you want to do it that way, fine.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, what I have asked for is this: A continuous hearing going non-stop, day-to-day, after we've had an opportunity to meet and talk to our witnesses and to subpoena them. And we can do that but we can't do it today. We can't do it today.

THE COURT: Let me hear from the Commonwealth.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, if Counsel

does not wish to present those people that support his claims today, I would suggest respectfully and request that Your Honor bifurcate the proceedings, allow the Commonwealth to put on witnesses that it has which can rebut the assertions. And I am sure that they will find that some of those witnesses are the witnesses that they claim were going to exonerate the Defendant. They are here today in this building. I would ask for the opportunity to put them on. Because we don't need forever and a day to prepare them: We could ask them what happened, they are going to tell us.

MR. EISENBERG: And, Your Honor, I could point out that it is a very common situation in Post-Conviction Relief Act hearings for the proceedings to occur in that fashion. They don't necessarily, like a trial, start on day one and go through without stop on day five or whatever. They are frequently separated in order to accommodate the availability of witnesses.

Mr. Weinglass refers to the witness Mr. McGill, the trial prosecutor. Assuming that that witness has relevant testimony to present, the witness informed the Court, I understand, that he received the notice last, late yesterday afternoon, that he is on trial before a Federal judge right now, and that, accordingly, he can't come here. This Court's subpoena does not have the power to override the Federal Court which has Mr. McGill before it trying the case. The Court doesn't have that power, but Mr. McGill said I can be available Monday.

Now, this Court, to my hearing, never said to the defense you've got to be done by Friday, we can't hear any witnesses next Monday.

THE COURT: No, I never said that.

MR. EISENBERG: The Court said we are starting now.

THE COURT: Just start, that's all.

MR. EISENBERG: So the fact that a witness is not available today but Monday --

THE COURT: We take him on Monday.

MR. EISENBERG: Is not remotely an impediment to beginning these proceedings.

Now, Mr. Weinglass says that the rule provides for a reasonable opportunity for investigation. Now we stopped hearing about the local rules because the local rules make it clear what we mean by that. In the normal case the petitioner often files the petition first without affidavits. He makes his claims out. He may not have investigated them all to the point where he can file affidavits. The rules allow him to do that. At some later point, then, if he hasn't already done it he has to file those affidavits. And at that point is when the rules say the hearing can occur 30 days thereafter, in order to give the Commonwealth an opportunity to look at your actual evidence, your affidavits. It's that period before the filing of the affidavits when the case has to be investigated and prepared, not after.

How can you file affidavits, how can you present sworn material before the Court about detailed pieces of evidence if you haven't investigated and prepared already? You can't do it.

And that's why the local rules make it clear that after the affidavits are filed you don't have a year or 10 years or even 60 days. You have 30 days to give the Commonwealth an opportunity which, if the Commonwealth didn't need it, the Court could take less time. As it happens, it's been more than 30 days and so we've had the opportunity.

Now Mr. Weinglass says well gee, I have been able to investigate my claims but not prepare for the hearing. All that shows is the defense's arrogance in relation to the execution date which has been set by the Governor. We know, they say, that the Governor signed an execution warrant saying that the date is August 17th. We want a hearing before that execution is carried out, but we don't care what date the Governor sets for it, you will have to reschedule that execution to a date that is convenient for us so that we could have our hearing.

The bottom line is they asked for a hearing before the execution, the Court is trying to give them that hearing, and they say oh, no, it's not actually the hearing that we want now, it's just rescheduling the execution date.

And their entire argument about delaying the hearing is not really an argument about the hearing at all. It's just further argument about a stay of execution. The whole purpose for the stay of execution is not supposed to be to delay the execution in and of itself. It's not for delay itself, it's not supposed to be for delay. It's supposed to be about airing the claims before the execution. And when Your Honor tries to do that they say gee, we don't have enough time. Even when Your Honor says fine, put on a witness and prepare the night before, put on the next witness the next day, Mr. Weinglass says oh, no, I can't even do that.

Well, Your Honor, even in a trial lawyers have to work, they have to work hard, they have to prepare. They don't get to do everything six months or a year in advance, file it all away and then pull it up at some leisurely pace during the trial. That is not how a trial runs, let alone a hearing being held under the shadow of an execution date which the Defendant waited to be set before he filed his Petition. You have to work in that situation. You don't get to just say gee, I don't think I have enough time. I specifically waited to come to you and begin the process until after the Governor set the execution date, and now lo and behold here is the execution date. Well, of course here is the execution date. Because they waited for it. And even if there weren't an execution date, a Court would properly say to the lawyers now is the time to go ahead. You don't get to go, in a trial, even in a civil trial you don't get to go before a judge and say judge, I am just not ready yet. The judge gets to set a date and have the hearing proceed and the lawyers have to work to get it done. And when that date comes, whether it is three years later, as it has been since Mr. Weinglass got involved here, six weeks later, as it has been since he filed his PCRA petition, or 10 years later, at a certain point it is going to be time to do the work.

And if it were 10 years later no lawyer is going to do the work 10 years in advance anyway. Of course there will be last-minute things to be done. And to trivialize this, the execution date by saying that the fact that they have to do last-minute work means we can't proceed and have to put off the execution is to misunderstand that this is a Court of law. And I think that we should

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, just so that one thing is clear, because we have already informed the Court but evidently it hasn't made much of an impression: The Pittsburgh, the Harrisburg Patriot reported on June 1st in their morning edition that Mr. Jamal's attorneys would be filing a Post-Conviction Relief Petition on June 5th. And that was publicly announced. It was after we announced that we would be filing the Petition, it was after I informed the Corrections Department that I would be coming in to see Mr. Jamal for the purpose of signing a verification that the Governor's Office moved quickly to get a warrant signed before we could come to Court with our Petition. We did not file the Petition after the warrant. The Governor signed a preemptive warrant knowing the Petition was coming in. That's how we got here. And we have subpoenaed --

(Discussion was held off the record at this time among defense Counsel.)

MR. WEINGLASS: We have subpoenaed the appropriate people in the Governor's Office to come in here and testify under oath that that is precisely what happened. And we intend to show that.

But Counsel keeps insisting that we waited until the Governor signed the warrant. The Governor moved preemptively to sign a warrant, knowing we were coming to Court. And I must say, as a matter of practice, no prior governor, knowing that the petitioner was coming into court to have his claims litigated, would move preemptively to sign a warrant. They would wait until the court had an opportunity to examine those claims and if the court denied them, then the governor would sign the warrant. But the process was reversed in the case of Mumia Abu-Jamal. And the Governor moved quickly to get his warrant in as we were literally on our way into Court. And that's why we have the dilemma we have today.

THE COURT: We don't have any dilemma. But go ahead.

MR. WEINGLASS: We have this dilemma.

THE COURT: He doesn't have any dilemma. I said, I know when the execution date is set for. And I tell you don't worry about it. I have taken it under advisement, don't worry about it. Let's just start the hearings. Let's get some testimony from somebody. That's all I am asking you to do.

Could you tell me when you will be able to do that? Are you able to start today?

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

THE COURT: Are you able to start today?

MR. WEINGLASS: No.

THE COURT: Just yes or no.

MR. WEINGLASS: We are not able to comply with what the law requires us to do today. And that is a full and fair hearing.

THE COURT: Well, you are going to get a full and fair hearing, and I wouldn't be able to do it all in one day, as I told you. You are going to have to take one witness at a time. And I don't know how long it is going to take you to do that. Don't worry about it. Take as much time as you need. But get the witnesses in here so that we could start. Let's stop trying it in the press. Let the press get it from the actual witnesses who come in here and testify. Let's do it that way.

MR. WEINGLASS: The press has gotten

it from the public document that is the Petition.

THE COURT: Well, the public document is not your Petition, it's the notes of testimony: What transpired in the past, and what will transpire now. Whatever the witness is going to say when he gets in here. All I want to do is start it.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor give me five minutes to confer with Counsel?

THE COURT: Sure. Five minutes he wants.

THE COURT OFFICER: Court stands in recess until the call of the Crier.

(Brief recess.)

THE COURT OFFICER: Come to order, please, Court is in session.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, after consultation with Mr. Jamal and my Co-counsel, and the investigator who just came into town, we feel that we could be prepared to proceed with the hearing two weeks from today. That's August 1st. And we would be prepared to put our witnesses on, to proceed in an orderly fashion with the hearing at that time. We also welcomed the offer by the District Attorney's Office to assist us in locating those witnesses who we have been unable to serve, particularly Officer Wakshul and Mr. Harkins, who was another witness. But we would prefer Counsel on the other side, working together we could be prepared to go on August lst, two weeks from today.

MR. GRANT: Can we proceed? The burden here is the preponderance of evidence, Your Honor, which means more likely than not their claims have merit and should prevail. And I think the Commonwealth has a right to present evidence that they should not prevail.

Since they need help in finding Mr. Harkins I would like to call him right now to the witness stand. We would like this bifurcated to put on the witnesses we have here who have been waiting since this morning. And for the Court to allow us the opportunity to do that.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, see, Your Honor, when a reasonable offer is being made, immediately the District Attorney's Office moves to take advantage of the offer. And we are not prepared with Mr. Harkins or with any other witness for a hearing.

MR. GRANT: We are, Your Honor.

MR. WEINGLASS: We will be in two weeks. This is the way things were done, unfortunately, in the earlier proceedings where things went quickly and willy-nilly.

THE COURT: Yes, but that was for his benefit. Speedy trial is not for the benefit of the Commonwealth. The Commonwealth is ordered to try him within 180 days or he goes free. It's for the defendant's benefit. It is not to the defendant's detriment, it is for his benefit.

MR. WEINGLASS: I wasn't referring to that.

THE COURT: Well, that's what you said.

MR. WEINGLASS: I was referring to the fact that in the midst of trial Mr. Jamal asked for a brief continuance so that Officer Wakshul who was sent on vacation, despite the fact he wasn't supposed to be --

THE COURT: Let's see if it would have made any difference. Bring him in, let him testify.

MR. WEINGLASS: Officer Wakshul?

THE COURT: Yes, bring him in.

MR. WEINGLASS: We will bring him in in two weeks time.

THE COURT: Why can't you bring him in now?

MR. WEINGLASS: We tried to subpoena him last night.

THE COURT: Don't worry about it. Commonwealth, will you make him available?

MR. GRANT: We are going to look for him tonight, Judge. And he will be available, we will find him and bring him in.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, Officer Wakshul, who is a Court attendant in this building, did not come to work yesterday, called in sick. We sent our investigator to his home. He was not at home either. We don't know where he is, but this was precisely, ironically, the dilemma in the trial: Wakshul was never found.

MR. GRANT: We will find him, we will find him.

MR. WEINGLASS: We need time.

Page 71.

THE COURT: The Commonwealth says they will find him for you.

MR. WEINGLASS: But this is no way -- and maybe they will, and we will be ready to go with him in two weeks.

THE COURT: You could be ready with him in two weeks, but how about somebody else? You mean you don't have any witnesses that you could put on? Even if you took one witness a day?

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, that --

THE COURT: One witness a day?

MR. WEINGLASS: That is not the question.

THE COURT: That is my question to you.

MR. WEINGLASS: Could we produce a full and fair hearing? The answer is no.

THE COURT: Yes, you can. You take all the time you need. But at least you could bring in one.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor, it is being gradually led into a position where Mr. Jamal's rights are compromised.

THE COURT: Nothing is being

compromised. All I am asking you to do is let's bring a witness in here. Besides you people talking and lecturing and trying this case in the news media, let's try it in the Courtroom. If you have to have one witness a day, you have to skip a day because you couldn't find them, fine. Let's do something.

MR. WEINGLASS: With all due respect to the Court's offer, which I appreciate, it is not the way to grant a full and fair hearing to a petitioner, Judge, who faces the death penalty.

THE COURT: Counselor, all the people that face the death penalty are confronted with the very same issue. You know, I am under orders in the Fahy case to try that and to have it completed within 60 days. And because they did not file their petition like you did, the Supreme Court is giving them 30 days to do that. But that's because they didn't file their petition. But once they file their petition, I have only 30 days to get rid of that case. So don't tell me. This is a death penalty case too. It is the same thing.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right now we are not asking for 30 days, I am asking for two weeks.

THE COURT: But you already had --

MR. WEINGLASS: I am asking for two weeks.

THE COURT: You already had your 30 days.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: They filed, they gave Fahy 30 days to file his petition because no petition was filed.

MR. WEINGLASS: But, Your Honor, we've had one day. We got the answer yesterday.

THE COURT: Don't worry about their answer.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, the answer is, as they say, identifies disputed issues of fact.

THE COURT: All I am saying to you: Why can't you present at least one witness? Do you want to bring one witness tomorrow? Fine. Get him, talk to him overnight, prepare him, bring him in tomorrow. I am not saying that you, have to have 10 witnesses a day, 20 witnesses a day, five witnesses a day. I will give you even one witness a day. As long as we could get this thing moving, that's all.

Page 74.

MR. WEINGLASS: You see, Your Honor, but that, with all due respect, is a prescription for disaster. It is --

THE COURT: No, it is not a prescription for disaster. It is a prescription for getting something done that the Court is obligated to do.

MR. WEINGLASS: The Court, as I understand it, is obligated to give us a reasonable opportunity.

THE COURT: Well, you've had that reasonable opportunity. You've had three years at the very minimum to prepare for this thing.

MR. WEINGLASS: Not to prepare for the hearing. I've had three years to investigate the claims.

THE COURT: Well, you investigated. What other investigation do you have to do?

MR. WEINGLASS: Anyone who files a lawsuit of any nature investigates, files a lawsuit, and then there is a hearing, not within 24 hours or not within two days, but after a reasonable opportunity is afforded.

THE COURT: Counselor, when this case was initially tried the Commonwealth was under the same burden. They didn't have any leeway.

MR. WEINGLASS: They had six months.

THE COURT: Six months. That's because they had to get ready for the trial, and if they didn't they would be out of luck. But that is for the trial. We are now in an PCRA hearing. It is altogether different than preparing for a trial. And the burden was on them, the Commonwealth. They are forced. I didn't force them, I didn't tell them how many witnesses they have to give in one day. They gave me whatever they had. And if the defense needed time for his witnesses, he had that too.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor, the defense was denied a continuance for Wakshul. You know that, that is part of the record.

THE COURT: I know that, but that was unreasonable. And there was no necessity for that. But if it is that material, bring him in. Bring him in. And if you can't find him, they will try to find him for you.

MR. WEINGLASS: But I want the time, reasonable opportunity to prepare for a full and fair hearing.

THE COURT: Counselor. Counselor, if

I gave you to August the 1st you are still going to be having trouble. Even if I gave you to August the lst, you are still going to tell me you have a problem locating somebody. All I am saying to you is if you have a problem, name the witness that you have a problem with. If the D.A. can't, if I can't find him, the D.A. will look for him. If he is able to find him, turn over him over to you and you will proceed.

I am not saying that you have to try to bring all of these 19 witnesses or however many you have, I am not saying that you have to do that just in one day. I am giving you leeway. All I want to do is to at least start the proceeding. Let's find out where we are going. We won't know where we are going until we start. I don't know that you have a problem but let's start it and see if we have a problem, if we have to continue it.

MR. WEINGLASS: We were told that we had to begin this hearing on Friday.

THE COURT: No, I said to begin to listen to at least some witness. I didn't tell you which one. Whichever one you have that's handy.

Page 77.

MR. WEINGLASS: Friday night I got the 38 pages.

THE COURT: Don't worry about his, I am not talking about his answer to anything.

MR. WEINGLASS: I didn't get that until yesterday.

THE COURT: I am not talking, about that. Because they didn't have to file an answer. I forced them. They had a right to complain and say Judge, you are not giving us enough time to answer this thing. If they had said that I would have given them a little bit more leeway. But I am trying to move this case along. And I said to them file it by Monday. They filed it by Monday.

MR. WEINGLASS: They had six weeks to file an answer.

THE COURT: Well, they had other motions that you filed, and they had to answer them.

MR. WEINGLASS: They had six weeks.

THE COURT: But they can't concentrate on all of them at one time.

MR. WEINGLASS: They have ample manpower, I'm sure.

Page 78.

THE COURT: You had three years.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor, I had to investigate.

THE COURT: Look at all the lawyers you have here. I don't know how many you have here today but you have a gang of lawyers, you have investigators, and I don't know what else you have.

MR. WEINGLASS: They came in on Sunday. I came to Philadelphia on Sunday.

THE COURT: Well, Counselor, I am going to ask you one more time: Can you start tomorrow? One witness? Any witness?

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I, the Court puts me in this position.

THE COURT: I don't put you in any position.

MR. WEINGLASS: You are asking me to compromise Mr. Jamal's rights.

THE COURT: I am not asking you to compromise anybody's rights. All I am saying to you is give me even one witness. And if you can't start him tomorrow, you could start him the next day. Give me one witness. I am not saying that you have to bring them all in. If all you could do is get one witness a day, fine. That's all right. I will give you that time. All I am asking you is that you start to move. I told you before: Justice delayed is justice denied. So if you want to confer with your --

MR. WEINGLASS: If I could have just a moment.

THE COURT OFFICER: Court will take a short recess until the call of the Crier.

(Brief recess.)

THE COURT OFFICER: This Court will now come to order. Court is again in session.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, with all due respect to the Court's invitation, after consultation with Counsel and Mr. Jamal, I have to respectfully represent to this Court that it is the Petitioner's position that we simply cannot do a hearing on two days notice in a piecemeal fashion as the Court suggests and without discovery. It is a denial of a full and fair hearing.

THE COURT: I said to you discovery was denied. And I said to you if you could come up with any case, any statute to permit you, I would reconsider at any time. But so far you haven't.

Well, I think the only thing to do is to entertain the Commonwealth's motion for, bifurcation. Let the Commonwealth proceed. They seem to be ready to proceed.

MR. WEINGLASS: We also object to doing a hearing in reverse order because a hearing in reverse order we are not prepared for and we haven't had two days notice, we haven't had one days notice, we had 15 minutes notice.

THE COURT: You haven't given me any assurance that you will ever be ready.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I am assuring you --

THE COURT: No.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, then, let me say it, because if I haven't it's my error. We will be prepared to put on an orderly hearing with witnesses, evidence and exhibits, commencing on August lst, two weeks from today. And we will do it within the full confines of what our obligations are under the relevant rules to put on a hearing.

MR. GRANT: We are ready to proceed, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes, go ahead. Go ahead.

MR. GRANT: We call as our first witness Miss Deborah --

THE COURT: No, wait awhile. If you are going to do that, it is twelve o'clock, people have to have their lunch.

MR. GRANT: That is true, except this lady has a child in day care. If we could accommodate her and put her on we would appreciate it.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, we object to this proceeding. We ask the Court to enter an order denying our continuance, denying our discovery and give us --

THE COURT: I already denied your discovery, I don't have to do it again.

MR. WEINGLASS: And give us another day to go to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court which invited us to return.

THE COURT: If they invited you I can't stop them from hearing it. I am not certifying anything to the Supreme Court. Every time I make a ruling I am not going to certify it to the Supreme Court so that you could run up there and have them decide everything that I am doing as I do it. That's not the way to do it.

But if they want to entertain it, I can't control the Supreme Court. If they want to hear it, I can't stop that.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am only asking the Court for a reasonable opportunity for us to go to the Supreme Court today because they invited us to come back. And we would like to come back now that we've had the Court's decision refusing a continuance. And we will do it today. I ask for an adjournment.

THE COURT: Could we adjourn until tomorrow morning?

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, with all due respect to Counsel, every time he stands up he is saying let's not do it. And I am saying we have witnesses here that will verify or dispute their claims. I would ask, Your Honor, they can file, they could go to the Supreme Court, there is nothing stopping them from walking down the hall and up the stairs. I am only asking that proceedings not be stayed, that we be allowed to present the witnesses that we have here today. We will bring more for them, for ourselves, tomorrow and the next day. Until the Supreme Court rules. In the meantime why should everybody sit around twiddling their thumbs waiting for the Supreme court to decide? We don't know if they will. They went to the Supreme Court yesterday and no decision was forthcoming because they were not prepared to do what they wanted to do.

I am asking to proceed today, proceed with the witnesses we have. We subpoenaed Mr. George Fassnacht, who claimed that the firearms examiner did a poor job. We have Mr. Harkins, whose house they visited yesterday on two occasions, that they seek to have here in Court, we have him here in Court in the next room.

Deborah Kordansky, this missing witness who will show that some other person killed Officer Faulkner, despite the fact that the Defendant was found seated within 4 feet of the Officer with a bullet in his chest, right there at the scene. We brought her in anyway just to make sure that they understand we are not trying to hide anything from anyone. We are going out looking for them because we know when they get on the stand the truth is going to be told here, and it is not going to be inuring to their benefit. I would like to proceed.

THE COURT: What is that first witness?

MR. GRANT: Deborah Kordansky.

THE COURT: Is that the witness?

MR. GRANT: This was a witness who according to the one paragraph statement she gave to Homicide nineteen years ago said I heard some gunshots, about five, I thought they were firecrackers, and then I heard some sirens, then I looked out my window and I saw the police vans, about two of them, 10 police cars over on the south side of my street, and I saw some person running on the south side of Broad Street. Which would mean either you would be running into the arms of the police or running past the police. And they are suggesting that that is the phantom shooter; and I am suggesting that is nonsense. And we have the witness here, they could examine the witness and they could verify their claim.

Page 85.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor will recall at the trial, because it is in the record, that Mr. Jackson did telephone and talk to Miss Kordansky once from Your Honor's chambers in the middle of the trial, and she indicated to Mr. Jackson, as he reported on the record, that she doesn't like black people and she didn't want to help his client.

THE COURT: Well, then ask her that when she gets on the stand.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, but that is in the record.

THE COURT: Ask her when she gets on the stand.

MR. WEINGLASS: That is the kind of witness they are calling.

THE COURT: If you are not ready to go I will bifurcate the case and let the Commonwealth present their witnesses. At least we will move forward.

MR. GRANT: Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. WEINGLASS: We were in the Supreme Court yesterday at 5:00 p.m.

THE COURT: You will go back there again, okay.

Page 86.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am only asking Your Honor for a day for us to go back to the Supreme Court.

THE COURT: Counselor, we already have witnesses here ready to take this stand and testify. I will listen to those witnesses.

MR. WEINGLASS: I had less than one hour notice that these witnesses are coming. I don't even have my witness file for Miss Kordansky, to give you an example. We have been looking for her, we haven't found her.

MR. GRANT: You could use my file.

THE COURT: He has one here for you.

MR. WEINGLASS: I have my own file.

THE COURT: You will have a chance to cross-examine her.

MR. WEINGLASS: Without a file.

THE COURT: You don't need a file to cross-examine.

MR. GRANT: I have a file, Judge, right here.

MR. WEINGLASS: This is not how cases are tried. I don't defend a petition with the prosecutor's file. This is outrageous.

THE COURT: I understand when somebody is trying to snowball me.

MR. WEINGLASS: I can't believe this suggestion by the Court, that I should use their files in defending Mr. Jamal. And that I don't need a file to even --

THE COURT: He has everything.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, he doesn't.

THE COURT: Oh, yes he does. He has that.

MR. WEINGLASS: He was given everything and it was burned in the house when the MOVE house was bombed. That's why we didn't have the documents they gave us last week.

THE COURT: What was it doing in the MOVE house?

MR. WEINGLASS: He gave it to them for storage, he was in prison.

THE COURT: They store it in prison.

MR. WEINGLASS: Only some of it. And the rest of it had to be moved out. And it was stored there and it's been destroyed. That's why we didn't have these witness statements which they gave us Friday night at ten o'clock, because Mr. Jamal's statements were destroyed in the fire. That's the way we are working here,

Page 88.

Your Honor.

THE COURT: That is the way you are working and I am trying to get some orderly proceedings here.

MR. WEINGLASS: That's what I am looking for.

THE COURT: Right, and I can't wait until August the 1st. If I do that in this case, I'll have to do it in every capital case. And I don't have that leeway with Fahy. He was on death row too. And the Supreme Court has given me a definite time. And I have to follow their orders. It's got to be done in that time. Supreme Court has not given you any time in this case.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, they have.

THE COURT: Not in this case.

MR. WEINGLASS: Not in this case.

THE COURT: Well, okay, if you want to run to the Supreme Court and ask for them to give you a schedule, fine. If they want to schedule it and tell me Sabo, I want you to do it this way, okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, I will.

THE COURT: I will do it.

Page 89.

MR. WEINGLASS: I will tell the Court what the Supreme Court said about this case. Yesterday at five o'clock they said to Mr. Piper reapply for a continuance and if Judge Sabo denies it come back.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: That is an invitation.

THE COURT: It is an invitation, you want to go back, go back.

MR. WEINGLASS: And we can not go back while we are litigating in this Court. I respectfully ask the Court to respect the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court.

THE COURT: Oh, I always respect the jurisdiction. I understand that. I am not a Justice, I am only a poor old Common Pleas Judge in the battlefield here.

MR. WEINGLASS: Then give us the opportunity to file papers with the Supreme Court.

THE COURT: If the Supreme Court wants to hear you I can't stop that.

MR. WEINGLASS: I know.

THE COURT: But I am not certifying anything to them. Get that straight.

Page 90.

MR. WEINGLASS: I hear that, I got it straight from the Court. But all I ask for is time and not --

THE COURT: Okay I will continue this until tomorrow morning. Okay, gentlemen, I'm sorry, but I will do that.

MR. GRANT: I would respectfully object, of course, Your Honor, but I understand Your Honor's ruling.

THE COURT: But tomorrow morning, unless the Supreme Court stops me, we are going forward. If you are not going to present any witnesses I will allow the Commonwealth to bifurcate and they could put on their witnesses.

All right.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, there is one other matter.

THE COURT: What's that?

THE COURT OFFICER: Quiet, please. Excuse me.

MR. GRANT: I do have the lawfully-issued subpoena for Mr. Hightower to be here today. And I would like to at least bring him before the Court to explain his failure to appear, because he is a key witness and an affiant supporting their Petition which they claim allows for a Constitutional claim. Now he is subpoenaed, he is subpoenaed last week to be here today.

THE COURT: All right, I will tell you what you do: Get in touch with him, tell him be here tomorrow. If he is not then I will issue one.

MR. GRANT: Very well, Your Honor.

THE COURT OFFICER: Court is adjourned until 9:30 a.m. tomorrow.

THE COURT: I hate to have to keep reminding everyone that we are in a Court of law: Proper decorum will be maintained at all times. If you can't live up to that, then please leave.

Counselor, we are here today to set up the agenda.

MR. WEINGLASS: Because there are several matters. The question of the availability in the evidence room, I understand that it's here in this building, for the Petitioner's attorneys to examine the evidence which is maintained in the evidence room pertaining to this case. And Miss Wolkenstein will address that.

I understand there is a question about subpoenas to the Police Department in Philadelphia. And Miss Wolkenstein will address that as well.

There is an issue pertaining to one subpoena which is outstanding, which is a subpoena to Dessie Hightower. And he was subpoenaed to appear yesterday and he called Mr. Grant, as I understand it, yesterday and indicated that he would appear whenever he is wanted. He called my office and assured me of the same. And he gave me Detective Cobert's number, who served the subpoena, and asked me if I would call Detective Cobert and tell him the same. And I called the Detective Cobert but he was out yesterday evening. And I tried to convey that message to him as well.

This morning before Court began I conveyed to Mr. Grant that Mr. Hightower had called me after he had spoken to him and he wanted to assure both of us that whoever wants him in Court, he will appear at the designated time. He is in a very precarious position, Your Honor. And his employment literally is on the line if he has to come down today.

THE COURT: Well, we are not starting today so forget it. We are not starting today.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, I know, and I assure the Court that I had that conversation with him and with Mr. Grant and tried to call

Page 5.

Detective Cobert. But I think this man will appear and I don't see any need to cost him his job today.

MR. GRANT: I would like to respond. Yesterday Counselor stated to the Court and to everybody in this room that pursuant to the Court's order and the subpoena for Mr. Hightower' s appearance, that we are attempting to intimidate the witness, to drag him out in the middle of the night, and then to lock him up when he didn't show up, when all the time he knew very well where this man was. He was subpoenaed, he contacted Mr. Weinglass, and he told Detective Cobert yesterday that Mr. Weinglass told him not to come into this Courtroom.

MR. WEINGLASS: That's false, absolutely false.

MR. GRANT: I have the witness here.

MR. WEINGLASS: Let's put him on. Let's put him on.

THE COURT: Do you want to take the stand too?

MR. WEINGLASS: Sure, sure.

THE COURT: Okay, continue.

MR. GRANT: Thereafter, Mr. Hightower called me and I advised him that the Court is holding in abeyance a bench warrant for his arrest unless he appears here this morning. There was no agreement, because that was not my place to make the Court's agreement, that he show up whenever he's needed. He thereafter called Mr. Weinglass and now he is not here again today. And I presume, although Mr. Weinglass represents that the understanding was that whenever he is needed he will show up, there is no such understanding because I don't understand it and he has no such right. And I ask that Mr. Hightower be brought in to determine whether Counsel misrepresented to the Court by not stating that he knew where this man was the entire time.

MR. WEINGLASS: If I may, Your Honor, just respond to that briefly. In a great show of vigor, yesterday Mr. Grant accused me of misrepresenting -- it is a daily occurrence -- to the Court about Mr. Hightower being subpoenaed while he was asleep and brought down here. Mr. Grant then stood right over there and said I want to inform the Court that he was subpoenaed in the daytime. Well, now we know the truth. And the truth is -- and I am going to ask for an apology from the Court -- he was subpoenaed while he was sleeping on Friday night, not in the daytime. He was sleeping at eight o'clock at night, he was ill.

And he was awakened by the detective, Detective Cobert, who subpoenaed him at eight o'clock Friday night. I ask for an apology from Counsel, and I ask the Court to admonish Counsel who misrepresented. It was his detective who subpoenaed him, he gave the Court the wrong time.

MR. GRANT: In Philadelphia --

MR. WEINGLASS: It led to my ad --

MR. GRANT: In Philadelphia at 8:00 p.m. it is the daytime. Because he retired early it is still daytime.

MR. WEINGLASS: He told me he was sleeping, he was awakened. And I represented that to the Court and I was castigated for that.

THE COURT: He may have been sleeping at eight o'clock.

MR. WEINGLASS: He was ill.

THE COURT: He may have been ill, he may not, I don't know, I am not a doctor, and I am not here to decide that issue. As I said before, it's moot now because we are not going to start until as Justice Montemuro says Wednesday, I think, July 26th.

MR. WEINGLASS: That's right. And I quite agree with the Court, I think the issue is moot. I think Mr. Hightower will be here, and I ask --

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: I ask the Court to just abide by that and allow him to come at that time.

THE COURT: Counselor, let him come when you want him to be here to testify, okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Thank you.

THE COURT: But when you talk about misrepresentations, I think you misrepresented something to me also.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, I am aware of this problem.

THE COURT: You are aware of this problem?

MR. WEINGLASS: I was told by my Co-counsel of what the Court's reaction was yesterday.

Page 9.

THE COURT: As to what?

MR. WEINGLASS: About Mr. Wiser as a spiritual advisor.

THE COURT: Because they FAX'd me a letter that says at no time did I or any of my staff authorize or recognize Steven Wiser as a spiritual advisor. It is a letter here (displaying) that's FAX'd to me by --

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, could you speak into the microphone?

THE COURT: Oh, I'm sorry. It's not on.

It's signed by James S. Price, the superintendent, State Correctional Institution at Greene, which is in Waynesboro, Pennsylvania. And I will have this letter made a part of the Court's records. Not that it is material, but the reason I am bringing it up, Counselor, if you are going to quote me something be candid and exact.

MR. WEINGLASS: Did I quote? I didn't quote.

THE COURT: Well, you said to me that Mr. Wiser was recognized as a spiritual advisor by the institution at Greene, Greene institution in Waynesboro, Pennsylvania. And I said well, if he is recognized by them, I don't see why I have to even sign an order because the prison at Graterford can call them and find out. But you insisted on an order, and based on your statement that you gave me, I signed that order. I didn't question you. But I got a different story. I didn't ask for this; he FAX'd it to me. And he also FAX'd to me a letter, evidently, that he got from a Malvin L. Wulf threatening to go to Court if he didn't allow Wiser to be his spiritual advisor.

Now, I don't like to get involved with institutions. They have their rules, and I have my rules. But you talked me into that one. And I signed it, and I am not going to revoke it, but I am not going to necessarily break my back about it.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, I am pleased the Court approaches that in the manner that it is. Because I'm glad the Court represented on the record that I said that he had been approved by the institution, because we'll have the transcript and I can assure the Court now that the Court's representation is in error.

Page 11.

THE COURT: Okay, I have the FAX.

MR. WEINGLASS: I never represented that. What the Court said I said I never said. And we will have the transcript.

THE COURT: Okay I but do you want a copy of this?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Yes, please.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, if we could.

THE COURT: All right, we will make copies for everybody, for the D.A. and defense (handing).

MR. WEINGLASS: And when we have the transcript I will correct the record, because the Court is misrepresenting what I said.

THE COURT: Okay, that's my understanding. And let me say this: That was the reason I signed the order. Believe me. I don't care how you phrased it, but that's the impression it left with me and that was the reason I signed it. If I knew that there was any kind of a dispute with the institution, I would let you go to Court and resolve it. I am not going to get involved in these things. But be that as it may, you will get a copy of what they sent me.

Page 12.

What was your next thing that you were --

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: There are a couple of technical matters, Your Honor. The first was the question of legal visits with Mr. Jamal at Graterford Prison.

THE COURT: Oh, yes. Yes. I will settle that for you right away. They said that you could visit him in the evening or on the weekends if you call them in advance and let them know so that they can prepare for you. To me that's perfectly all right. Call them in advance and they will make the arrangements for you.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I am perfectly prepared to call them in advance, Judge. The question --

THE COURT: Okay, then we have no problem.

MR. WEINGLASS: I did speak to Superintendent Vaughn yesterday afternoon and he did indicate a limitation in terms of weekend visits that I need to address the Court about. He said that we would only be able to visit on Saturday, absolutely not on Sunday, and only until the hours of 2:30. Now, consideririg our schedule and that we are going to be coming back and forth to Philadelphia in preparation for this hearing, we actually are going to need to be able to come in to see Mr. Jamal on Sunday in order to do preparation.

THE COURT: Well, you must have a good reason for that, Counselor.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: It has to do with our trial, our travel schedule.

THE COURT: I am talking about the institution. They must have a reason why they can't do it. And unless you could tell me what the reason is, I am not going to get into a fight with the correctional institution.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your inclination, your statement is we should be able to get in there over the weekend.

THE COURT: I said you should get in there, that the impression they gave me was if you called them in advance they would try to make arrangements for you. And I am leaving it at that.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I will address this issue Saturday with Superintendent Vaughn and get back to your office.

THE COURT: Because I don't know, they may have a good reason for no visits on Sunday. I don't know.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: If they --

THE COURT: Maybe they are short of staff. There could be a lot of reasons why. And I am not, you have to understand one thing, I am not here to run the prisons. I don't see why you can 't see him every evening during the week and on Saturday. That's six days out of seven. Somebody ought to be able to rest on Sunday.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Unfortunately, we don't, so we are going to need to be able to see him on Sunday.

THE COURT: That's what you say, but maybe you should, it would do you good to rest a little bit on Sunday and maybe you would be in a better position to proceed.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, if we got a further stay of these proceedings and stay of the warrant I can assure you we will be glad to take off both Saturday and Sunday.

THE COURT: Well, do whatever you think you have to do. I am doing what I think I have to do. At this moment they told me that if you call them in advance, they will make special arrangements. Now, they are giving you more than they ever give any other inmate on death row.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Well, I don't believe that is accurate, Your Honor. In fact, that raises another question.

THE COURT: Well, tell them. Tell them to let other attorneys come in there on Sunday.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I believe so. In fact, Mr. Weinglass and I have both visited Mr. Jamal previously on Sunday.

THE COURT: Well, then take it up with them and say look, I visited him on Sunday before.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: There is another possibility here, Your Honor, which is this. Is that I understand that Mr. Fahy, who was also a stage two capital case --

THE COURT: Not anymore.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Not anymore. Okay? I am glad to hear that, but he was a stage two defendant and he was housed at the PICC, at the county correctional institute, I don't know...

THE COURT: Where.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: The Pennsylvania County or Philadelphia County Industrial Correctional, known as PICC, I am told. There is an institute that is the county jail.

THE COURT: Philadelphia prison here?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: The county jail. Mr. Fahy was there for two weeks and I actually think that would actually be much better accommodations in terms of being able to meet with Mr. Jamal.

THE COURT: I don't tell the State where to keep him. At this moment he is a State prisoner. I don't transfer people around, I don't have that authority.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Mr. Fahy apparently was there and appeared before, he was before you as well, as I understand it.

THE COURT: Counselor, he may have but I didn't send him there.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I would request an order from the Judge to transfer him to PICC so that we would be able to better meet with him.

Page 17.

THE COURT: I can't just transfer people around in a State institution. You show me that I have that authority. Why don't you take it up with the Superintendent at Graterford and ask him if he could transfer him over there. I don't transfer prisoners. That's not my job.

What is your next problem?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: So that's denied, Your Honor?

THE COURT: It is not denied. I am saying, I am telling you how to do it. Talk to the Superintendent over there at Graterford. I don't transfer prisoners. I don't decide where -- as a matter of fact, there was an order we couldn't put him in Philadelphia because they are overcrowded and they didn't want to take him.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: This is Mr. Fahy.

THE COURT: He is a State prisoner, put him over at the State.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: This is Mr. Fahy we are talking about now?

THE COURT: We are talking about any prisoner. That was the order.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: It was about three weeks ago that Mr. Fahy was there for two weeks.

THE COURT: Talk to Mr. Fahy. I don't know how he gets there. I didn't put him there, that's all I am telling you. I don't know how he got there.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Okay.

THE COURT: He is a State prisoner, he should have been in Graterford. How he got to Philadelphia, I don't know. Because by putting him there then they are forcing somebody else out. They have a cap over there. And I am not going to fight about the cap. That's already been decided by other judges. I am not going to get involved in their cap. The State says, or the City says look, he is a State prisoner, keep him in a State institution. Now, if you could get that resolved somehow, be my guest. But I am not going to get involved. They have a cap over there, they are only allowed so many prisoners there.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I just raised that as a possibility because it causes a problem with us being able to visit.

THE COURT: Counselor, I am telling you to research it and see if you could get something done. It is not within my province to say where people should go. At one time it is true we used to keep our State prisoners in Philadelphia when they were on trial. But that has been discontinued because they have a cap from the Federal Courts on how many prisoners they could keep in the City detention center. And I am not going to fight with the Federal government or anybody else about the issue. And we have been told to keep State prisoners in the State institution. Now, if you could get the Superintendent at Graterford to talk to the Superintendent in Philadelphia and they want to transfer him, hey, no problem with me. I am not stopping you. But you do the leg work, I am not here to do that leg work.

What is your next problem?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Okay, the next issue is this. There are trial Exhibits that are, as I understand it, with both the Court files and also in the evidence room in the Courthouse. We tried yesterday to be able to get access to them to take a look at them, see what's there. We want to view those in preparation for a hearing. We were informed that it was not possible to do that without either the District Attorney accompanying us to do that, or we needed an order from the Court.

THE COURT: Okay? what is the situation on that, Counselor? Do you know?

MR. GRANT: I don't know what Court files. We have to have some specificity. She may just want paper documents, that's all the Prothonotary would have.

THE COURT: No, no, she is talking about the evidence room I think up on the 7th floor.

MR. GRANT: We could make an arrangement at her convenience. We will have the evidence custodian available, they could inspect the evidence.

THE COURT: There, just talk to the D.A., you could get a lot.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We were on a conference call with Mr. Eisenberg and we were told we had to raise that today. That's why we are raising it today.

THE COURT: He said if you contact them they will make arrangements. You tell them when you want to go there.

Page 21.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We could be there without someone from the D.A.'s Office.

MR. GRANT: No.

THE COURT: He says you can't without the D.A.'s Office.

MR. GRANT: And we would like some specificity of what you want.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: First of all, everything that was on the list of Exhibits at the trial that was available to your office. I could make a copy if you don't have an Exhibit's list.

MR. GRANT: For the Court's information and Counsels' edification: What is in the evidence room is physical evidence.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We are also interested in looking specifically at the physical evidence: The guns, the bullets, the bullet fragments. The police officer's jacket. In other words, all the physical evidence that's involved in this case.

MR. GRANT: That's all that is going to be there. Exhibits like diagrams, sketches, photographs et cetera are not housed in the evidence room.

Page 22.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Where are those housed?

MR. GRANT: Well, tell me what you need.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I want everything that was presented as an Exhibit at the trial.

MR. GRANT: Could we have a copy --

THE COURT: Why don't you give him a copy and why don't you work it out. Why do you have to get the Court involved in something?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Because the District Attorney's Office yesterday indicated in a phone conference that we would have to work it out here before Your Honor.

THE COURT: You could work it out. Whenever --

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Is there a problem with getting access to the Exhibits that were presented at trial, that are part of the official Court record?

MR. GRANT: Give me a copy of your list, Counsel, and we will accommodate. Just give me a copy of your list.

Your Honor, these Exhibits are either part of the Quarter Sessions file or pursuant to the letter that was sent to the Governor in 1989, which I am sure the defense has, the file which was sent to the Governor and has been available there for all this time.

MR. WEINGLASS: As Mr. Grant says, I am sure we can work it out.

MR. GRANT: It was not our assumption that these allegations were made without any of these materials having been reviewed already.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We were told we could not review them until the PCRA was filed. That's what Mr. Weinglass was told when he attempted to review them previously.

MR. GRANT: PCRA was filed on June 5th, Your Honor, and these Court documents are either part of the Quarter Sessions file or part of the official record that was sent to the Governor's Office. I am sure that these paper documents exist and can be located for review and I am sure we can work it out.

THE COURT: Okay I all right.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: So we will talk this afternoon. We can work out times and whatever to do this.

Will you do that? Can I call you at one o'clock?

MR. GRANT: Yes, you may. I would like to have a copy of that list, please.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I have to make a copy. I presumed you had a copy of the trial Exhibits.

THE COURT: We will make a copy for you right now.

MR. GRANT: Thank you, Your Honor.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Okay, the next issue is the question of service of subpoenas for various, these are subpoenas duces tecum for various records in the possession and control of the department of police. And they are of several different forms. I am not here to discuss really the content of them or whether they are going to be quashed. There will be a motion or that discussion. There is a technical problem which is as follows. It is our understanding when we tried to serve these subpoenas that in fact they can not be served with the terminology on them for the duration of the proceedings. That we have to serve them with a date certain. And that for that date certain for each subpoena there is a fee of $38.

Page 25.

That's my understanding. And that if we don't use them, that that witness is not available or the trial schedule is such that we can not use that witness that particular day, they have to be re, they have to be re-subpoenaed and pay another $38. And if we needed them on call for a period of time, that would be $38 times whatever number of days. Again we were told that there was only one way to get around that, or two ways, which was either an order from the Court appointing one of our staff to sort of issue these subpoenas -- I don't quite understand it myself -- or to get the cooperation of the District Attorney's Office so that we could give, say, a date certain with the understanding that that, that those files would be returned to Court on the appropriate day. Again we need the cooperation of the Court and the District Attorney's Office to do this. And that's the relief I'm requesting.

THE COURT: What is your problem? Did you hear what she said?

MR. GRANT: Yes, Your Honor. I don't know what, Counsel is continually wanting us to do work for them and I don't know what it is this time but Mr. Domzalski represents the City.

MR. DOMZALSKI: Good morning, Your Honor. Dave Domzalski, Counsel from the City Solicitor's Office for the Police Department.

What Counsel is representing with regard to police procedures for subpoenas: It is true that they do not accept on-call subpoenas, they want a subpoena for a date certain. Obviously, officers have to be called in off the street. Officers may be on audio status. It costs the City money to have these officers here. Basically, a $38 fee is a nominal fee, in that it doesn't really carry the true expenses of the Police Department. That issue basically is a coordination matter, Your Honor, that the Police Department asks all attorneys to do. It even asks the City Solicitor's Office. I have tried cases where I've had the same problems in trying to figure out what my witness list is and with how I could schedule witnesses to fit in. But it is a basic procedure with the Police Department that they only accept subpoenas for that particular day.

Now, in addition, Your Honor, the subpoenas that were served, they were just served in an envelope and placed at the security desk of the Police Administration Building. The basic practice for the defense bar of Philadelphia and most do know it is to file subpoenas in Room 142, City Hall, where the appropriate fees and appropriate instructions will be given.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We served those subpoenas, Your Honor. That is not an issue here, we will serve wherever is the appropriate place.

THE COURT: 142, he said.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Right, I heard that, we will certainly do that. But again, in order for us to do that we need to clarify this question of date certain.

THE COURT: No, you see, what the problem is, he told you: They have to take police off duty somewhere.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: These are subpoenas duces tecum.

THE COURT: That's all right but the police --

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: These are administrative officers, Your Honor. All of them are people who are in control of files. That's what they are. They are not taking officers off the street, that is not the type of subpoenas that they are.

MR. DOMZALSKI: Your Honor, it all depends what documents Counsel is seeking. Yes, it may not be necessary for a police officer to appear, for example, if it is just certain documents. For example, one subpoena is asking for records of the intelligence division of the civil disobedience unit for the period of 1968 through 1981.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: This pertains to Mr. Jamal.

MR. DOMZALSKI: As it pertains to Mr. Jamal, that is correct. Whether those files still exist, Your Honor, I have no idea. I did receive these subpoenas and I asked the Police Department to look into the matter anticipating that the matter would be clarified at some point in time.

But a couple scenarios developed. There may be no files there, at which time I would just submit an affidavit.

MS. WOLKHNSTEIN: You should take care of that at that point. I would really like to resolve the question of how to serve these subpoenas.

THE COURT: Counsel has already alerted them.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I appreciate that. What I would like to do: I am perfectly prepared to pay the normal $38 fee for one time service. The question is whether or not we are going to be required to pay that many, many times over the course of this, or we can work this out that we will make arrangements over when the officers are necessary to come to Court.

MR. DOMZALSKI: I believe that could be worked out.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Then this issue is resolved. Thank you very much, I appreciate that.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. DOMZALSKI: While we are here do you want to --

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: No, I don't. We will... Do you want me to give the subpoenas now?

THE COURT: No, 142.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We are not ready to discuss the content of the subpoenas.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time.)

MR. DOMZALSKI: Thank you, Your Honor. That concludes our business before the Court today. May we be excused?

THE COURT: You may be excused. Any other problems, Counselor?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: No, that resolves the issues that I have.

Yes, Your Honor, I'm sorry, there is a possibility of seeing the physical evidence out of the presence of the District Attorney's Office. It requires a Court order.

THE COURT: I am not going to sign such a Court order. I am not signing such a Court order. If they want to let you see it, you will do it in the presence of the District Attorney's Office, period.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: That is the end of this discussion.

THE COURT: That is the end of this discussion. You will get to see it. They want to be there present when you see it.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, Miss Pasquariello and Mr. Domzalski were here today specifically to address the issue of whether or not these subpoenas are even valid and whether --

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor --

MR. GRANT: Excuse me... As to whether or not --

THE COURT: Let me hear what the problem is.

MR. GRANT: As to whether or not these subpoenas would even be honored, Your Honor. And she has indicated in a colloquy with Counsel at the bar of the Court sotto vote that she does not wish to litigate those issues today. Why, I don't know. But --

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: They haven't been served yet, to begin with.

MR. GRANT: But I think that issue should be addressed.

THE COURT: Well, I think, I think somebody ought to teach them --

You are from New York, aren't you?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Yes.

Page 32.

THE COURT: Okay. Somebody here, well, you must have somebody here that's from Philadelphia.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: No, no luck.

THE COURT: What do you mean? What happened to all those Counsel that you had here?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: (Indicating).

THE COURT: They disappeared.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: You scared them away, Judge.

THE COURT: What happened to them? They disappeared, all those learned Counsel that you had here.

Well, I tell you what, why don't you talk to them and they will tell you what kind of subpoena to use.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: That is fine, I would be happy --

THE COURT: Because I am not here to hold classes in the practice of law here.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: That is fine.

MS. PASQUARIELLO: Your Honor, for a moment: Anne Pasquariello, also Counsel for the City, specifically the Medical Examiner's Office. We were served with two subpoenas yesterday. My supervisor John Straub spoke with Counsel --

Page 33.

-- not you, with someone else --

-- and accepted service. Just for the record, I would have the subpoenas declared null and void so that we are not under subpoena. Counsel made a representation to the Court that they were not served. In fact, the City of Philadelphia accepted the subpoenas. So I just would --

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: That particular subpoena, okay.

THE COURT: She said she is going to get new subpoenas.

MS. PASQUARIELLO: Fine. So the subpoenas for the Medical Examiner's file and --

THE COURT: She is going to get new subpoenas.

MS. PASQUARIELLO: Fine. Thank you.

THE COURT: Somebody will instruct her.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We will get some help to do it.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time.)

Page 34.

THE COURT: All right, that was nice and easy. What else do we have?

MR. WEINGLASS: Nothing further.

THE COURT: Anything else? Anything for the Commonwealth?

MR. GRANT: Yes, Your Honor, there are two things. Since the Supreme Court has ordered the hearing to proceed, I would like an order and a list of witnesses, as well as an offer of proof. Unless Counsel is willing to state that the affidavits that are submitted pursuant to attachments or as exhibits to their Petition is the offer of proof, then I will accept that. But absent that stipulation, I would like an offer of proof as to their witnesses.

THE COURT: Well, we ought to have a schedule as to who is going to come, what the order is that you are going to present them. Could you do that?

MR. WEINGLASS: We will provide them with an order of Wednesday witnesses on Tuesday.

MR. GRANT: We would like to have that.

THE COURT: You ought to have it.

MR. GRANT: They have those five days,

Page 35.

we would like to have that five days also.

MR. WEINGLASS: We will have five days to prepare our hearings. We asked for two weeks. At the end of it we were only given one week.

THE COURT: Let me say this: If you need a little recess to look them over, I will grant it. If they don't care about pushing the case I am not going to worry about it.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, with all due respect, I'm worried about it because I have to cross-examine these people and I would like to know. I don't want to stay up all night preparing for witness number 19 when they are putting witness number one on. And I think it is only common courtesy and practice traditionally.

THE COURT: I think he ought to give you the order in which he is going to call them and if for any reason you can't call them in that order let them know. No big deal.

MR. GRANT: Can they let us know sometime this week? I mean we have a lot more days this week.

THE COURT: I agree they should do that. Well, you should have that by this week, yes.

MR. GRANT: Could we have it by tomorrow, at the end of the business day?

MR. WEINGLASS: No, that is quite --

THE COURT: Let's say Friday.

MR. WEINGLASS: That is quite impossible.

MR. GRANT: Friday in the morning, Your Honor?

MR. WEINGLASS: Quite impossible.

THE COURT: Why is it impossible?

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, because we said -- let me, before I say that, let me say this. Counsel worries about time.

THE COURT: No, I am worried about procedure.

MR. WEINGLASS: He is worried about his time.

THE COURT: No, I am worried about procedure.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT: We should have some idea who you are going to call when. In other words -- and I am not going to hold you to that to the very minute -- but the thing is, we don't know how many witnesses we could get through on Wednesday the 26th, how many we could cover on the 27th. But I think there ought to be at least a list and an order.

And if you are telling the Commonwealth that, he is asking for an offer of proof, but if you say they are going to testify to what they put in their affidavit, he is satisfied with that. All he wants to know is the order so that they could sort of prepare.

MR. WEINGLASS: If the Court will hear me out. Yesterday at about this time the same attorney who makes the plea for time to prepare for cross suggested -- please hear me out without interrupt.

THE COURT: I know that, but, Counselor --

MR. WEINGLASS: I ask for the same privilege.

THE COURT: Counselor, just one thing: I don't care about the time for preparing for cross-examination. I'm more concerned with some order. So you should send me a copy too. I would like to know what order you are going to call these people.

MR. WEINGLASS: We do not presently know that. I told the Court yesterday it would take two weeks for us to prepare. We are now given one week. We will know it probably Tuesday. And I want to say this: We have already, the day before yesterday, or yesterday, served Counsel with a list. He has one.

THE COURT: Do you have a list?

MR. GRANT: I had the list that they gave me in the morning and then they said they didn't have those witnesses here to testify. And I think that was merely --

THE COURT: I guess that's the ones he is going to call on Wednesday.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right.

MR. GRANT: That was the ones he was going to call.

MR. WEINGLASS: He has it for a week. He could sleep all weekend if he would like.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, they gave me a list that was nothing more than a falsehood: None of those witnesses were here. Because you heard him say they don't have any witnesses, but they gave me a list of witnesses. So I want to know the real deal. And I would like to have it in a tixnely fashion.

THE COURT: Well, why don't you get it over to them. You ought to know, for instance, what witnesses you are going to call on Wednesday the 26th.

MR. WEINGLASS: I will know on Tuesday.

THE COURT: You will know that even before Tuesday.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor.

THE COURT: You will know that before Tuesday.

MR. WEINGLASS: We are operating under extraordinary pressure here.

THE COURT: What pressure? Hey, you went to the Supreme Court and they said start on Wednesday.

MR. WEINGLASS: We wanted two weeks, we got one week.

THE COURT: Well, I'm sorry about that.

MR. WEINGLASS: Two weeks puts us under great pressure, one week puts us under extraordinary pressure.

Page 40.

THE COURT: That reminds me of the old Biblical story of Solomon, you remember, the women that were claiming the baby. And Solomon says cut the child in half and give a half to that woman and a half to that woman.

MR. WEINGLASS: We felt like that child.

THE COURT: That is basically true.

MR. WEINGLASS: We have been cut in half.

THE COURT: So do I, because I wanted to start today and you wanted to start August 1st. And the Supreme Court broke the bone, gave you a piece, gave me a piece, and said now you lawyers chew on it, okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, we are suffering.

THE COURT: I didn't chew on mine, I ate it.

And if there are any reporters in here, that's spelled A-T-E.

I ate it, okay. So we'll start on July the 26th. Go ahead.

MR. WEINGLASS: We will try to be ready and we will have a list on the 25th.

Page 41.

MR. GRANT: I object.

THE COURT: All right. If you need time too, if he wants to delay things.

MR. GRANT: Delay them.

THE COURT: Anything else?

MR. GRANT: Just a moment.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time.)

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, just one minor point.

THE COURT: What's that?

MR. WEINGLASS: I want to state for the record this morning when the Court came into the Courtroom, and the Crier asked people to rise --

THE COURT: Right.

MR. WEINGLASS: -- there were some in the audience who did not rise.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. WEINGLASS: But remained seated quietly and non-disruptively. I want to state that for this reason. It is my understanding that in the United States, no civilian, no citizen need to rise when a judge enters a courtroom. We do not impose that on any citizen of the United States.

THE COURT: We don't?

MR. WEINGLASS: Provided they don't disrupt.

THE COURT: We don't?

MR. WEINGLASS: We do not.

THE COURT: Did you ever hear the United States Supreme Court?

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

THE COURT: Did you ever attend the United States Supreme Court when they come in, the Justices?

MR. WEINGLASS: The United States Supreme Court comes in, those who want to rise rise, those who do not want to rise remain seated quietly and it is totally acceptable. In any Court in the United States.

THE COURT: Any court?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes. We are not compelled in this country to show respect to anyone in authority. If the President of the United States walked into a room --

THE COURT: You are not showing respect to me, you are showing respect to the Court itself. The Court system.

Page 43.

MR. WEINGLASS: That is not required.

THE COURT: Not me. Well, I stand up.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor is welcome to stand or remain seated. As everyone else in this country.

THE COURT: Do you remain seated? Well, Counsel, I won't argue with you.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am an officer of the Court.

THE COURT: Counselor, in this Courtroom here, they will stand.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, Your Honor, people have been ejected.

THE COURT: Let them stay outside, okay. Stay outside.

MR. WEINGLASS: It is a public trial, they want --

THE COURT: It is a public trial. They could come in later. Stay outside. But when this Court opens, they will rise like anybody else. And if they feel they don't want to rise, let them stay outside. And when the Court is in session and they want to come in, fine, let them come in then. I don't care.

MR. WEINGLASS: About if they wait outside they won't get in because there is a long line.

THE COURT: Well, that is not my problem.

MR. WEINGLASS: But it's wrong, Your Honor, to --

THE COURT: No, it is not wrong. That's the way I will maintain order in this Courtroom. Period. Everybody will have to do that in order to maintain the decorum of this Courtroom.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, it doesn't detract from the decorum.

THE COURT: Go argue that to somebody else. That means nothing to me, that argument means nothing. If they want to stay outside, they don't want to rise, fine, stay outside. After the Court is in session then maybe they could come back in.

MR. WEINGLASS: With all due respect, I have been through this many, many times, and every court has recognized the right of a citizen of this country to exercise the right to remain seated provided they don't disrupt the proceeding.

Page 45.

THE COURT: Fine, I heard your argument.

MR. WEINGLASS: And it is denied.

THE COURT: Well, I told you, this is my procedure here to maintain the decorum in the Courtroom. If they don't want to rise, stay outside.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, the only disruption it causes --

THE COURT: They could come in afterwards.

MR. WEINGLASS: The only disruption it causes is when you send Court Officers out into the center of the Courtroom to remove them. That does cause a disruption.

THE COURT: That's what they want to do, fine, then we will have to confront that. That is my order, okay, in this Courtroom. Now, if they want, if they don't want to rise, fine, stay outside. After the proceedings start, then they could come in.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, you are denying Mr. Jamal a public trial.

THE COURT: I am not denying anybody. I am saying that is the decorum that I want carried out in this Courtroom, period. Counselor, I am not going to sit here all day and argue with you about it. You made your point, I have made my decision, that's it. I am not going to argue forever. Anything else that you have?

MR. WEINGLASS: I just want to put in a legal frame one sentence.

THE COURT: Well, a legal frame, I put it in a legal frame too: Maintain the decorum in this Courtroom, period.

MR. WEINGLASS: And I just want to say I am making this motion on behalf of Mr. Jamal who is entitled to a public trial of those who --

THE COURT: He will have a public trial.

MR. WEINGLASS: -- those who won't respect the institution of the Court.

THE COURT: Those who do not show respect to this Court during these proceedings will be outside.

MR. WEINGLASS: And he is being denied a public trial.

THE COURT: No, he is not. There are a lot of people here. There is news media here, there is everybody here. This is a public trial. No one is entitled to a trial solely of his exclusive membership. Nobody is entitled to that.

MR. WEINGLASS: And he is not.

THE COURT: All you have to do, Counselor, is to tell them to stand up. If they don't want to stand up, stay outside, wait until it starts, and then come in. Anything else, gentlemen?

MR. GRANT: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right, we will adjourn until Wednesday, July the 26th, 1995, Courtroom 253.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: 653 next week. A public trial would require the other Courtroom that we had.

THE COURT: Counselor, I could only use the Courtroom that the Court has available for me. I'm lucky they are giving me this Courtroom. They are liable to give me one on the seventh floor or sixth floor, where you won't have anybody in there.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I know we need a

Courtroom that has security access to it and I know --

THE COURT: Counselor, you go over and see Court Administration, tell them you would like to be in 653. I don't care, I will go to whatever Courtroom they send me. I've checked with them, I say what Courtroom am I going to be in so I could let the public know. They said, 253. This is what you got, 253, all right.

THE COURT OFFICER: The matter at the bar of the Court will now stand in recess until 9:30 a.m. in Courtroom 253, July 26th. Thank you.

(At l0:25 a.m. the hearing was convened in the presence of the Court and the attorneys.)

- - - - -

THE COURT: Good morning.

Take a seat back there (indicating). She is not a lawyer. I am asking her to take a seat back there.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: She did legal work with the defense team. This is Jeannette Patton.

THE COURT: I know. This is not an attorney. This is the attorneys (indicating). I have to keep track of who is here. Let her take a seat right back there.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, the record should show that --

THE COURT: The record should show that I asked her to please remove herself from the attorneys' seats. Move her back over there. Right there. There is a seat right there.

MR. WEINGLASS: Miss Patton was not seated at defense table.

THE COURT: As far as I am concerned,

Page 4.

she is right behind Mumia Abu-Jamal, that is the defense table.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: She sits behind Mr. Jamal and myself and assists me as she has for the last several years.

THE COURT: I don't think anybody has to assist you, Counselor. You are a well known attorney and I don't think you need assistance from anybody that is not an attorney. So please. Let's not argue about that.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, I think it should also be noted that she has sat there without disruption of any kind for the last Court session.

THE COURT: I am not talking about disruption; I am saying that is not the proper place for her to sit. Right back there. Right back there, okay. She had too much to say in the last trial and that's why we had a lot of trouble. Let her sit back there. Any outbursts and you will be evicted from the Courtroom. You are not out on the street. What you do on the street I don't care, but in this Courtroom you will show proper respect for the proceedings that are going on

Okay, Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, the Court's last comment about the first trial role of Miss Patton is reflective of an attitude.

THE COURT: It is not reflective of anything, I am just telling you plain ordinary facts that occurred. Counselor, please. I understand you subpoenaed the Governor and his staff.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT: I have a motion to quash and I think by agreement between you and the State that is to be taken up on Monday, July the 3lst?

MR. WEINGLASS: That's correct, Your Honor. We have subpoenaed the Governor and four members of his staff and now the Governor's Counsel has moved to quash that subpoena.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. WEINGLASS: We have been served with papers yesterday.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. WEINGLASS: And I understand there is an agreement reached between all parties that the question of quashing the Governor's subpoena will be argued next Monday, July 31st.

THE COURT: Okay. That's all. I just want to put it on the record, okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: I. just wanted to note for the record that we have received papers and we are reviewing them. We know that the Governor's Counsel has cited among other cases the United States versus Nixon, which comes as somewhat of a surprise: I don't think executive privilege was upheld in that particular case.

THE COURT: Counselor, you will take it up on Monday, okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, the first matter that we would like to bring before the Court this morning is the question of whether or not the Court should continue to sit on this case. And we renew at this time our motion for recusal and we base it on facts that have occurred since the last time we have argued that motion. And the facts that have occurred of course as Your Honor well knows is the extraordinary intervention of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania which stopped this Court from proceeding in a way that disadvantaged Mr.

Jamal's rights and ordered the case adjourned for one week so that the defense could get adequate time to prepare for the hearing. That action by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, we contend, reflects the fact that this Court is unable to maintain the standard which was set out in Re: Buchenson by the United States Supreme Court in 1955.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, I have the Supreme Court's order right here. The Supreme Court's order is right here. It says this trial Court is ordered to commence the hearing on Wednesday, July 26th, 1995. Counsel has also been apprised that his motion before the Supreme Court for your recusal is denied. His motion to remove Your Honor because of jurisdiction is denied. Motion for discovery at the Post-Conviction Relief Act stage: Denied.

Today the hearing is to commence and I would ask that Your Honor order them to do so.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yeah, Your Honor, I appreciate the interruption, but, Your Honor, what Counsel overlooks --

THE COURT: I don't like anymore delays. The Supreme Court has said I am supposed to start today.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yeah.

THE COURT: Let's start today, let's obey the Supreme Court.

MR. WEINGLASS: And we will. And we will.

THE COURT: Okay, let's go. The recusal request is denied. For the 10th time, the 20th time, the 30th time, it is denied, okay. Let's proceed with the case.

MR. WEINGLASS: We will.

THE COURT: Call your first witness.

MR. WEINGLASS: I just ask that the Court accept exhibits which go to our recusal request this morning, exhibits which include headlines from the local newspaper.

THE COURT: We are not trying this in the newspaper, Counselor. It is now time to try it in this Courtroom. Put on your first witness as the Supreme Court has ordered you to do. If you don't obey me, at least obey the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. They gave you the privilege of coming here from New York to try this case. Now at least show respect to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania and proceed with the trial as they have ordered you to do. That's all.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yeah. And in order to do that I want to complete the record for Mr. Jamal and I ask that the Court receive these articles which reflect community sentiment concerning the ability of this Court to sit fairly.

THE COURT: Community sentiment does not, this Court does not buckle under community pressure. If that ever occurs we might as well close up the court system entirely.

MR. GRANT: May the Commonwealth call it's first witness, then, if he declines to do so?

MR. WEINGLASS: Pennsylvania Supreme Court, Your Honor, has said that it's the appearance of fairness. The appearance to the community.

THE COURT: They already held their emergency request you had there and they have denied it; so let's proceed as they have ordered us to do.

MR. WEINGLASS: Now we are renewing it on the basis of new evidence.

Page 10.

THE COURT: That is not new evidence. That has been in the news media from time immemorial. They had that.

MR. WEINGLASS: Date of the article is July 19th.

THE COURT: They had it before that.

MR. WEINGLASS: And July 21st.

MR. GRANT: I move to proceed out of order if Counsel does not.

THE COURT: One way or another we are proceeding.

MR. WEINGLASS: It is the same hurry up --

THE COURT: It is not a hurry up. The Supreme Court has given you an order and I am here to see that you obey that order.

MR. WEINGLASS: And we will proceed in the regular fashion.

THE COURT: You will proceed as the Supreme Court has ordered you to proceed today.

MR. WEINGLASS: The Supreme Court has ordered this Court to stop hurrying us. That's why we got the extra week.

THE COURT: I told you the Biblical story about the little baby before Solomon where the two women were claiming a baby and he wanted to cut it in half and give each one a half. In effect, that's what the Supreme Court has done for you.

They have taken a bone and broken it and given you a piece and given me a piece. And as I told you before, I ate my piece. Now let's proceed.

And that's spelled A-T-E, for the news media. Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I just wanted to tender these for the record without comment.

THE COURT: Put them down there.

MR. GRANT: I object: Totally irrelevant. I ask that a witness be called.

MR. WEINGLASS: May I have these marked as exhibits?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Exhibits 1, 2 and 3.

THE COURT: I am not marking anything. If you wanted to leave it over here you leave it. If the Supreme Court wants it when they get the case I will be glad to send it up. I will send it up with all the other paraphernalia that they have.

Page 12.

MR. WEINGLASS: We can't proceed with the hearing unless exhibits are marked.

THE COURT: That is not true. Put your witnesses on. And you know that. Let's put your witnesses on the stand and let them start testifying. Let them start testifying under oath.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, there are other preliminary matters before we could start. One is to note for the record that the Department of Corrections has granted spiritual advisor status to Steven Wiser.

THE COURT: That's all right.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: It is necessary for the record. And on that basis we are withdrawing the order and ask the Court to vacate the order which was entered previously on this question.

THE COURT: All right, the order that I had issued appointing him as the spiritual director, you are asking me to vacate that order?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Yes.

THE COURT: All right, the order is vacated.

Page 13.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: It's vacated because it has already been granted. It is not regranted by the Department of Corrections.

THE COURT: Whatever you work out -- I told you before -- whatever you work out with the Department of Corrections is okay with me.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, the other preliminary issue is one we raised the last time we were in Court, which was the defense request to examine the exhibits from Mr. Jamal's trial. Arrangements were made through your offices to grant an order for Counsel to be able to look at those exhibits which were then put in the custody, I believe, of Joseph Walsh from the Homicide Division or working out of the D.A. 's Office. I had some opportunity on Friday afternoon to look at some of the physical evidence which was there. And which was a preliminary review of said evidence subject to further review by the defense Counsel, including experts who might test the, conduct tests of this physical evidence.

However, during the four hours I was there going through several boxes of physical evidence, it was clear that quite a few items which were exhibits at the trial were not there.

I have submitted a list to the District Attorney's office dated July 25th itemizing those trial exhibits which were not there as part of the evidence that was shown to me. And also requested as well copies of tapes which were available. Only one of which I had the time to listen to in a very quick fashion. Given the time, the time of going through this. I wanted to submit to the Court as a record the correspondence on this and to indicate that the current instructions from the District Attorney's Office is for defense to go back to the Quarter Session file and to see if various written documents are there as part of the Quarter Session files. And I'm told that the District Attorney's Office as well has to make some arrangements to provide the photographs -- there were a substantial number of exhibits at the trial which are photographs of Mr. Jamal, of William Cook, of the hospital, of the scene; all of which are necessary for review prior to this proceeding, and which were of course all a part of our pre-trial discovery motion which has been denied by the Court.

Page 15.

So I want to renew the request for the prosecution to help expedite this matter and provide us with the copies. I was told by Detective Walsh that in fact these photographs in their blown-up and their developed stage were missing. They are looking for them. That they have the proofs but that arrangements would have to be made.

So I would ask at this time whether or not those photographs have been found by the District Attorney's Office and to ask for them to make arrangements to turn them over this afternoon. Or for me to at least look at them and to make photocopies of them.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, everything's been taken care of that can be. The Commonwealth, although it is not our obligation, went to the Clerk of Quarter Sessions, where the evidence was kept -- as Counsel can do -- and before that went to about five repositories going back 10 to 15 years looking for everything they needed. We found it here in City Hall, we provided it to them, she was there photographing each piece of evidence for four hours on Friday. We don't keep documentary evidence because it's documents, exhibits admitted during the course of the trial. They are attached to the Quarter Sessions file, the Quarter Sessions notes. She should go look in the Quarter Sessions file. We are not the repository. I think we bent over backwards to help her. Now she wants photographs. I think she should look at the Quarter Sessions file to see if they are attached.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I was already told by Detective Walsh that these photographs are not there, that they are missing.

THE COURT: Then somebody from the D.A.' s office had been trying to locate them for you, right?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Is that the case: Are you trying to find them?

MR. GRANT: Don't address your comments to me. Mr. Walsh does not have possession of any photographs. They are documentary exhibits. They can been found in the Quarter Session file. If, if not, if there is a proof sheet available we will have them made at Counsel's expense. Simple.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Well, the question is whether or not they are there. I was told already --

MR. GRANT: You will find out.

THE COURT: He has to look.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, there was already a representation of an officer who works for the District Attorney, Detective Walsh --

THE COURT: I know that.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: -- to me that says that they do not exist.

THE COURT: Well, if they don't exist they don't exist.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I am asking this Court to instruct or request the District Attorney to print the photographs from the proofs. I was told that there are proofs.

MR. GRANT: If she just goes and looks in the Quarter Session file, if they are not there we will make arrangements. There is no need to argue about this matter, we are trying our best.

THE COURT: There is no need to argue this, you work it out with the District Attorney's Office.

Page 18.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I have copies of correspondence between the District Attorney's Office and myself on this matter. I would ask it to be marked Exhibit 4.

Your Honor, there are numerous subpoenas which are outstanding for documents, records. To my knowledge, nobody has come to Court, we have not been informed that they have come to Court in response to these subpoenas.

THE COURT: Well, you can't bring everybody in at one time. Why don't you put on who you have now. And if you are having trouble with somebody, we will take that up at that time.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, the Office of the District Attorney, the commanding officer of the Department of Police and the Commissioner of Police are all under subpoena from the defense.

THE COURT: So?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: The subpoena was returnable for this morning.

THE COURT: Well.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I am asking whether or not any of these designees are here, have come to the Court with the documents.

THE COURT: You sent me a notice that says that you have the following witnesses for today. A David P. Richardson, Junior. E. Steven Collins. Ken Hamilton. Lydia Wallace. Ruth Ballard. Joe Davidson. Anthony Jackson, Jeremy Gelb.

Now, are any of those witnesses here now?

That's the witnesses that you said that you would have for Wednesday, July 26th. The list of witnesses that you said that you would have here today. That's why I kept telling you to give us a list.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: And you have the list, Your Honor. And we will call --

THE COURT: You say you have all of these people here now?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We will call our first witness after we go through the preliminaries.

THE COURT: No, we are not going -- Counselor, you are not going to waste the Court's time.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: There are subpoenas.

Page 20.

THE COURT: The Supreme Court has said this is to commence as of today.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We are not, Your Honor, getting a full and fair hearing here.

THE COURT: You will get a full hearing. Put your witnesses up for a change.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: The Department of Police and the District Attorney's Office are under subpoena from the defense to turn in documents.

THE COURT: They will be here when you say you need them. All right.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We said we needed them this morning, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You gave me a list. Now, you gave me a list, I just read them off to you. Do you have those witnesses?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: These are subpoenas duces tecum.

THE COURT: I know, fine, I know what that is. You didn't put that on the list. You didn't tell me you wanted them today. You gave me a list: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: With all due respect, the Court does --

Page 21.

THE COURT: With all due respect, I asked you for a list and you gave me a list. Now let's start calling those witnesses.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, with all due --

THE COURT: When it gets to a time that you give me a list and say that you need this officer or that officer, I will see that they are here. Okay.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, what the Court, it is my understanding of the practice of law, at least in the State of New York, is that if there is a subpoena outstanding --

THE COURT: You are not in New York now, Counselor, you are in Pennsylvania.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: -- the Court assists the party who has done the subpoenaing to enforce that subpoena, not to obstruct --

THE COURT: You gave me a list of witnesses. Are there any of them you want me to issue a warrant for? Do you want me to issue a warrant for any of these?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: This is an obstruction of the defense.

THE COURT: You are obstructing us

from proceeding, Counselor.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: To give Mr. Jamal a full and fair hearing. I wish to object.

MR. GRANT: I would like to proceed. If she wants to talk, I would like to put witnesses on.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I would like to be informed at the point at which if at all anyone appears here in response to the subpoena duces tecum and if they are not here by noon I am going to make a request that the Court so order them.

THE COURT: You will make a request for any of these that you gave me on the list that you were going to call today. If they are not here I will issue a warrant for their arrest, okay. Now let's proceed.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We need the documents.

THE COURT: I am not going to tell you anymore about outbursts. Anymore outbursts and you will go out and you won't come back in. Now let's cut this out: You are not out on the street now.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: These documents were all requested as part of our discovery motion.

THE COURT: I know that, but I told you --

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: The Constitution gives you the right to receive information favorable to the defense per Brady versus Maryland and per Kyles V. Whitley, both Supreme Court decisions which guarantee due process rights to a criminal defendant in a post-conviction proceeding in order to provide and assure fundamental due process and fairness in a proceeding such as this.

THE COURT: I told you before --

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: These actions by both the Court and the prosecution obstruct those rights.

THE COURT: You are obstructing his rights. Proceed with your witnesses.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We are not going to have a full and fair hearing.

THE COURT: Proceed with your witnesses, Counselor. I told you time and time again. Counselor, that's it, I am not going to hear from you unless you will call a witness.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, Daniel R.

Page 24.

Williams.

THE COURT: Did you enter an appearance?

MR. WILLIAMS: I am entering it now.

THE COURT: You are not entering it now. Where do you practice law?

MR. WILLIAMS: New York City.

THE COURT: I'm sorry, we already have two from New York City. If you have anything to say you tell it to them.

MR. WILLIAMS: I am on the Petition as Counsel.

THE COURT: I don't care if you are on the Petition. You did not enter an appearance here, this Court. You have to seek special permission. You should go to Judge Davis.

Okay, Mr. Weinglass and...

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Wolkenstein.

THE COURT: ....Miss Wolkenstein are being his Counsel here. You are not going to delay any longer, Counsel.

MR. WILLIAMS: I am prepared to call a witness.

THE COURT: Well, call him. Which one do you want?

Page 25.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, the Petitioner calls David P. Richardson.

THE COURT OFFICER: Your Honor, the only two witnesses that have shown up are Mr. Ken Hamilton and Mr. E. Steven Collins. They are the only two that we have at this time that have appeared.

MR. WILLIAMS: Mr. Richardson is here.

THE COURT: Tell your witnesses to check in so we know who is here and who is not here.

THE COURT OFFICER: Are there anymore witnesses in the Courtroom who have not checked in yet?

MR. GRANT: I move for sequestration of any other witnesses here in the Courtroom this morning, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right, all witnesses that are called for the day are sequestered to remain outside until you are called. Is there a Lydia Wallace here?

THE COURT OFFICER: She is back in security.

THE COURT: She is outside.

Ruth Wallace?

Page 26.

THE COURT OFFICER: Outside.

THE COURT: Joe Davidson? Joe Davidson?

MR. WEINGLASS: Tomorrow. I'm sorry.

THE COURT: He is not here today?

MR. WEINGLASS: I'm sorry.

THE COURT: Tomorrow?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes. And Mr. Jackson is on call. As is Jeremy Gelb.

THE COURT: On call.

MR. WEINGLASS: Both are practicing -- sorry, Mr. Gelb isn't practicing.

THE COURT: Oh, on call. Okay. All right.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, if Counsel is not admitted pro hoc vice, has not been recognized by any Court in this jurisdiction, I would suggest that it's error to allow him to ask these witnesses questions because that's going to be the subject of appellate grounds.

THE COURT: Yes. As far as I know, if I am wrong, Mr. Weinglass and this young lady here are the only two that have been admitted. Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, Mr. Jamal waives any issue respecting Mr. Williams' qualifications. He has absolute confidence in Mr. Williams, who has been working on this case with me for quite some time. And is eminently qualified, is a member of the bar of both California --

Page 27.

And New York?

MR. WILLIAMS: (Nodded affirmatively.)

MR. WEINGLASS: -- as a matter of fact, was a clerk for the Chief Judge of the Ninth Circuit, Chief Justice Browning. So he is a very qualified person and he has prepared our witnesses. And he is prepared to proceed on Mr. Jamal's behalf. Mr. Jamal expressly waives any question concerning Mr. Williams' qualifications.

MR. GRANT: Mr. Weinglass expressly waives it for him. It calls for a colloquy from Mr. Jamal.

THE COURT: Okay, Mr. Jamal.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time.)

MR. GRANT: In any event, no matter whether Mr. Jamal likes him or not, he is not a lawyer recognized in the State of Pennsylvania, that is the bottom line.

MR. WEINGLASS: The Court has discretion to permit him to proceed, I believe.

MR. GRANT: If that is true, Your Honor, could we have a colloquy from Mr. Jamal expressly waiving any appellate rights?

THE COURT: Mr. Jamal, would you come up here, please.

Mumia Abu-Jamal, appearing at the Bar of the Court, having been duly affirmed, was examined and testified as follows:

THE DEFENDANT: I have full confidence --

THE COURT: Wait awhile. Wait until you get a question.

MR. GRANT: Mr. Jamal, Mr. Weinglass has made representations that Counselor here before the Bar of the Court Mr. Williams has worked with you in this matter and that you are fully cognizant of the fact that he is not an admitted member of the Bar either by Court's permission or by examination to appear before us here today. Would you waive and be willing to waive any errors occasioned by his actions here in this proceeding from further appellate review?

THE DEFENDANT: I do hereby waive any question with regard to the statement made by Counsel for the Commonwealth. I have --

MR. GRANT: Sorry, go ahead.

THE DEFENDANT: I have absolute and full confidence in the representation offered by Mr. Daniel Williams.

MR. GRANT: Mr. Jamal, there are only a few questions which may seem rather simplistic to you but they are required here to be asked.

What is the highest level of education you have completed, sir?

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, this is all unnecessary.

THE COURT: He wants to make sure that he understands that he is capable of making this waiver.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, this is another attempt by the prosecution --

THE COURT: It is not, it is a requirement by our appellate courts. It is a requirement, Counselor. Please. If you want

Page 30.

Mr. Williams to handle this thing, please let us get the colloquy on that satisfies the appellate court.

Go ahead, Mr. Grant.

MR. GRANT: Could you tell us the highest grade of education you completed, Mr. Jamal?

THE DEFENDANT: Two years of college.

MR. GRANT: And you read, write and understand the English language, do you not?

THE DEFENDANT: I do.

MR. GRANT: And you are not today suffering from the effects of any intoxicating beverages or any narcotic substances, are you?

THE DEFENDANT: Not to my knowledge.

MR. GRANT: You have discussed this with Mr. Weinglass, your primary Counsel in this matter, have you not?

THE DEFENDANT: I have.

MR. GRANT: And you are satisfied that he is competent to handle your matters?

THE DEFENDANT: I am.

MR. GRANT: And you are confident and satisfied that his representation as to the qualifications of Mr. Williams is correct; is that right?

THE DEFENDANT: Absolutely.

MR. GRANT: I have nothing further, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Then the Court will allow Mr. Williams to proceed.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, I appreciate that.

THE COURT: Okay. You have to follow the proper procedures. I don't know what they do in New York or California.

THE COURT OFFICER: May I swear the witness in now?

THE COURT: Yes, please.

Q. And how long have you been a State Representative?

A. I have been a State Representative for 23 years.

Q. And in those 23 years, how many times have you faced the electorate?

A. Twelve consecutive terms.

Q. And I take it you have won every time?

A. I won every time.

Q. Now, are you a member of any committees in connection with your being a State Representative?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. Can you tell the Court what those committees are?

A. I presently serve as the chairperson of the House health and human services committee for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. I served as the chairperson of the Black Elected Officials of Philadelphia. Also served as a ward leader of the 59th ward in Philadelphia. And the committee person for the 59th ward, 5th division. I serve on the executive committee of the National Conference of State Legislators and also the executive committee of the National Black Caucus of State Legislators.

State Rep. David Richardson - Direct

Q. Mr. Richardson, are you affiliated with any organizations that bear directly, any other organizations aside from what you just mentioned, that bear directly on your status as a State Representative?

A. Yes, sir. Several committee organizations that exist. As well as being a former president of the National Black Caucus of State Legislators in the USA. And also served on the 1997 committee that will host the NBCSL conference here in Philadelphia. And community organizations such as the Greater Germantown Youth Corporation. Board of directors of the Germantown Settlement organization. Pennsylvania Council of the Arts. And also the Afro-American Historical and Cultural Museum here in the City of Philadelphia.

Q. Have you received any awards in these past 23 years while you served as a State Representative?

A. I received numerous awards related to numerous dimensions here in this particular trial.

Page 34.

State Rep. David Richardson - Direct

Q. What are some that you are most proud of?

A. I guess the 1994 Political Action Award given by the Teamsters here in Philadelphia, Local 502. Also, the Outstanding Service Award by the CAP, which is the Community Action for Prisoners here in Pennsylvania. Distinguished service award from the AME Union Church here in Philadelphia. And a number of other certificates and awards from community organizations for outstanding services to the community and political activities as well as community activities and activism here in the City of Philadelphia.

Q. Thank you, Mr. Richardson. Now, you are aware that you are here in connection with a Petition that Mr. Jamal has filed for a new trial?

A. That is correct.

Q. Okay. I want to ask you some questions concerning your knowledge of Mr. Jamal. Do you understand?

A. Yes.

Q. First of all, do you know this man: Mr. Jamal?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And about how long have you known him?

A. Going back to the late '60s or early '70s here

Page 35.

State Rep. David Richardson - Direct

in the City of Philadelphia.

Q. And are you aware and were you aware back in 1982 that this man was under indictment in the State of Pennsylvania for murder?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And can you tell the Court when you became aware of that?

A. In Philadelphia it was certainly a widespread news item in Philadelphia for a long time, as well as hearing it over WDAS radio here in the City of Philadelphia, and personal knowledge of the indictment myself.

Q. I take it you became aware of it initially through the news accounts?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, did you attend, Mr. Richardson, any of the early pre-trial proceedings in connection with Mr. Jamal's case?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Okay, which ones did you attend? That you can recall.

A. My recollection is that I attended the bail reduction hearing for Mr. Jamal and as well as proceedings that took place during the trial, at the time of the trial.

Page 36.

State Rep. David Richardson - Direct

Q. Now, okay, let me turn your attention to the bail proceeding that you mentioned. Did you play a role in the proceedings at all other than observing the proceedings?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Tell the Court what role you played?

A. I testified at the bail reduction hearing on behalf of Mr. Jamal to ask that bail be reduced on his behalf.

Q. How were you contacted to come to Court to testify in that bail proceeding?

A. I was contacted by Mr. Anthony Jackson to appear at the hearing on behalf of Mumia -- Mr. Jamal, on behalf of the Court for the bail reduction hearing.

Q. What was your understanding of Mr. Jackson's role in the proceedings?

A. My understanding at that time was that Mr. Jackson was the Counsel for Mr. Jamal.

Q. Okay. Now, on that proceeding, and when you were asked to appear for that proceeding, were you reluctant in any way to appear?

A. No, I was not.

Q. Were you reluctant in any way to testify in any way in that bail proceeding?

Page 37.

State Rep. David Richardson - Direct

A. No, I was not.

Q. All right. Now, you mentioned Mr. Jackson. Did you know Mr. Jackson prior to his representation of Mr. Jamal?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Tell the Court how you knew him?

A. I knew Mr. Jackson through his activities through Pilcop, which is an organization here in the City of Philadelphia that has tried cases concerning abuse relevant to police abuse here in the City of Philadelphia.

Q. Did you consider yourself friends with Mr. Jackson?

A. I knew Mr. Jackson and had several conversations and interaction with him throughout my career here in the City of Philadelphia, political as well as personal.

Q. So it would be your understanding and it would be safe to say that he knew you as well?

A. That's correct.

Q. And obviously Mr. Jackson knew how to contact you, I take it?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, let me direct your attention now to the trial itself. Okay?

Page 38.

State Rep. David Richardson - Direct

A. Hmm.

Q. In the summer of 1982. Did Mr. Jackson ever contact you to testify as to Mr. Jamal's character and uprightness as a human being in connection with any proceeding in the summer of 1982?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you in Philadelphia in late June and early July of 1982?

A. If I wasn't in Philadelphia, I certainly was in Harrisburg in session. Because we normally are in session through June 30th. And then we are back, normally, in the City of Philadelphia or the surrounding areas after the session is over.

Q. Okay. Well, let me ask you this. Was there anything that would have impeded you in any way to appear in a court here in Philadelphia if you were asked to do so in late June or early July of 1982?

A. Nothing.

Q. And aside from being available, were you willing to testify had you been asked?

A. Yes.

Q. Now let me turn to the circumstances under which you know Mr. Jamal. Do you understand, Mr. Richardson?

A. Yes.

Page 39.

State Rep. David Richardson - Direct

Q. Okay. Can you explain to us those circumstances under which you began to know Mr. Jamal? Not simply when you first met him but when you began to know him?

A. Well, yes, from several activities. One is I began to know Mr. Jamal through my community activism here in the City of Philadelphia because before I became an elected official we were very actively involved in the community through a number of organizations, groups, to try to help promote and direct our attention to trying to help give what we believed at that time was an important direction to help motivate the community around cultural and positive aspects of the African-American community here in the City of Philadelphia.

Q. Okay. Can you put some kind of a time frame on that?

A. Yes, I can go back to 1965, after we graduated from high school here in Philadelphia to a demonstration of 1967 at the Board of Education to demand that African-American history and African history be taught in the public school system here in the City of Philadelphia. And then in 1968 with the struggle here in the City of Philadelphia to continue to motivate and try to fight on behalf of citizens who were being shot down in the street here in the City of Philadelphia by police officers who at that time, Pilcop's organization was very much involved in trying to bring those cases to light.

Page 40.

State Rep. David Richardson - Direct

So we were involved in a lot of struggles related directly to those issues that impacted on our community. So our community activism was very high. And as I told you before, I was elected to office here in the City of Philadelphia.

Q. I take it from your answer, then, that during this time frame you were active in issues of vital concern?

A. Yes.

Q. And your path crossed Mr. Jamal's path quite frequently because he shared that concern; would that be safe to say?

A. That would be safe to say. I interacted, though, because many of the activists here in the City of Philadelphia during the late '60s and early '70s were very much in the same circle, so many of the meetings and many of the activities that did take place allowed us to converse a lot and to interact a lot.

Q. Now, what about when you became a State Representative: Did you have any occasions to interact with Mr. Jamal at that phase of his life?

Page 41.

State Rep. David Richardson - Direct

A. On several occasions. I became elected in January of 1973. And I can't remember which station, but either WHYY, or WKDU, or WDAS in Philadelphia, Mr. Jamal worked for. And on many occasions when we were actively involved in activities and demonstrations it was Mr. Jamal who would actually do the interviewing of us with respect to those particular issues that were being confronted with at that time.

Q. Okay. For the benefit of the record: You specified various letters. Are those call letters for radio programs?

A. I'm sorry, they are call letters for radio stations here in the City of Philadelphia.

Q. Okay. Again for the benefit of the record: How do those call letters that you have mentioned a moment ago relate to Mr. Jamal?

A. That he either directly or indirectly worked for those particular radio stations at the time I was elected. And at that time that we were dealing with issues that were being confronted with within the community. And I had an opportunity to encounter him as a result of those interviews that were given by him at the time.

Page 42.

State Rep. David Richardson - Direct

Q. Okay. So the capacity in which you interacted with Mr. Jamal was as a journalist, he was a journalist?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now, as you sit here today -- and I also ask you to do a difficult thing -- as you place yourself back in 1982, do you feel now and do you feel that you felt back then that your exposure to Mr. Jamal permits you to share your thoughts and your impressions about his unique qualities as a human being, do you feel equipped to do that?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Can you tell the Court why you feel equipped to do that?

A. Well, several reasons. One is that I believe that Mr. Jamal was a special gift that had a unique voice to Philadelphia. In fact, his melodious voice that many people heard over the radio stations here in the City of Philadelphia would be identified first by his voice even before they would hear his name. And many individuals grew to respect that name here in the City of Philadelphia and also his works as a journalist, but also as an activist who was actively involved in the community on issues that did impact directly on the community.

State Rep. David Richardson - Direct

Q. Let me isolate your comments about Mr. Jamal as a journalist for the moment, okay. I take it that in hearing Mr. Jamal's broadcasts and interacting with him directly as a journalist, he left a certain kind of impression on you as a human being.

A. Yes.

Q. Am I right?

A. That is correct.

Q. Okay. I would like you to explain to us how his skills as a journalist impressed you as a human being, how it affected you?

A. Well, you know, it's not often that you see someone who has come through the ranks of the struggle that grows among you. And that Mr. Jamal was one of those persons that had an opportunity to really grasp the issues within the community and, notwithstanding his profession as a journalist, was also able to work with the community organizations and groups who would listen to his wisdom and knowledge. And we grew to know him -- and I'm speaking now on behalf of many other people whom I know who know Mr. Jamal -- we grew to know him as being a peaceful, law-abiding citizen and a person who had a lot of compassion for people and compassion for those issues that did impact directly on vital issues, such as housing, such as health care, such as feeding the homeless. And also at a time in starting a breakfast program for needy children within the community. So there were a lot of attributes that seemingly tied directly into this individual, Mr. Jamal, as being someone conscious and concerned about the community, and not a phony, as many would describe in Philadelphia that they can depict in the first 10 to 15 seconds that they meet somebody.

State Rep. David Richardson - Direct

Q. These qualities that you just mentioned about compassion and dedication to the community, was that evident, was that evident in the way Mr. Jamal used his skills as a journalist? Aside from what you knew of him personally.

A. Yes, it was. I mean it had to stem above and beyond -- you see, some, some people that just get a call, some people are just gifted and some people are just given a gift. So Mr. Jamal, I saw Mr. Jamal as just being one of those persons who was given a gift and had an opportunity to use that gift in the community to help promote, and also to educate as a teacher. And a leader for the community, which a lot of people looked up to him.

Q. Well, Mr. Richardson, I think we all know that some people have enormous gifts and they use it to

Page 45.

State Rep. David Richardson - Direct

amass great fortunes, and some use their gifts for other things. Can you enlighten us a bit about what direction, as far as you can tell, Mr. Jamal used those gifts that you just talked about?

A. Well, if you are talking about monetary gifts and looking for something monetarily, certainly that was not Mr. Jamal's mission. And I can certainly indicate that on a number of times he would work extensively into the wee hours of the morning on cases and issues that we all seemingly hooked up at the same time in. And certainly it was not for any pay. It was not for any money. It was certainly not for any personal human enhancement, but it was for a belief and conviction he had inside of him which seems to be more important than anything else in this day and time. If people don't have a conviction they don't have anything. And he had that and a lot of people recognized that.

Q. You used a word in your answer earlier: Struggle. That Mr. Jamal used his gifts in the struggle. Can you help us to understand what you meant by that term?

A. Well, for many of us who understand the struggle for African-American and poor people every single day, it is to continue to strive to try to help better the conditions of life within our City and within our nation. And a lot of individuals such as myself and others try to promote that no matter what profession you may go into, so that is not lost.

Page 46.

State Rep. David Richardson - Direct

For example, I see myself as a human being, an African American first, and then a State Representative. I don't see myself in a different context. Many people saw Mr. Jamal as Mr. Jamal and Mumia in the community, as he was called, Brother Mumia, as he was called, but not a journalist first. And I think that that makes the difference in a number of cases for a number of us whose struggle is being something that is continuous and ongoing, is not part time or individually --

Q. So when you used the term struggle, and then you described certain issues that Mr. Jamal would focus on as a journalist, what segment of the population primarily did it seem that Mr. Jamal had a concern for in using his skills and gifts as a journalist?

A. Well, you know, one thing about being a humanitarian, you have concerns for all people. And I would have to say that while our emphasis was directly related to the African-American community, certainly emphasis was on all struggling people, all the restless people all around the world. And I think it transcended the kind of narrow focus that a lot of people have. He was more worldwide than what people thought and he was more universal than what people thought. And he also carried that out in his professionalism as well as his community activism.

State Rep. David Richardson - Direct

Q. By the way, do you know if Mr. Jamal was a member of any professional organizations connected with his --

A. Yes, I do. I do know that he was a member of the Association of Black Journalists here in the City of Philadelphia and that he was president of that organization at one time. Because I know that he was succeeded by Mr. Joe Davidson, who worked at the Bulletin, after that.

Q. So Mr. Jamal at one time was the president of the Association for Black Journalists?

A. Of the Philadelphia chapter.

Q. Of the Philadelphia chapter. Okay. Now I'm going to ask you to search your mind here. Are there any broadcasts that you heard by Mr. Jamal that stand out in your mind? That touched you in a particular way, that you think illuminates the character, the character and unique attributes of Mr. Jamal, any particular broadcasts?

State Rep. David Richardson - Direct

A. I guess if there were any I would have to cite the time when there was a missing child, in Northwest Philadelphia, I'm not sure, and the appeal came across the air by Mr. Jamal to ask for anyone who did see or did have an opportunity to know the whereabouts of this 12- to 13-year-old child. If they would call the number to the station and try to reach out directly to anyone who might have seen him to call into the station. The reason why it sticks out more so than a lot of other cases, and I have been involved in demonstrations and other activist things, was because it was the compassion that was shown directly as it related to a human life. And the fact that this child was missing, but that the parents who had called into the station seemed to be not getting any help from the City of Philadelphia in trying to locate the child. And you know how any mother or father misses their child or feels that they have been lost have emotional pain as a result of that.

This was an opportunity for Mr. Jamal to make an appeal over the public airways, over the station, and as a result heard his compassionate plea to ask that people call in and try to give the whereabouts of where this child was because the parents were very upset.

State Rep. David Richardson - Direct

Q. You, I take it, detected the compassion in Mr. Jamal in his voice?

A. You can feel it. It transcends voice, it actually vibrates through you and you can feel it. If you heard him speak you would know what I was talking about. Others who have heard him would know what I'm referring to. So therefore it transcended just the compassion that they heard, but also the fact that it was felt very closely because of his relationship to this situation and how he felt about it. So it was very evident.

Q. Let me see if I could understand you. Sometimes, when you hear somebody speak, they speak with the full force of their humanity. Is that what you are talking about?

A. They speak to such a tone that you could tell whether a person is sincere or not or whether they are just doing it because that's their job. A saying a lot in the community is that people speak with fork tongue, or that people speak a lot just to hear themselves speak. And in this situation you could feel it. And therefore the humanitarianism, but also the compassion and the vibrant feeling, that there is a person here that's really concerned about my situation. And therefore I would like to make sure that the mother and father know that somebody is really trying, that came across loud and clear.

State Rep. David Richardson - Direct

Q. Have you ever heard Mr. Jamal speak on other occasions that touched you like that?

A. Oh, when Mumia speaks to me, if you don't know Mumia and you have never had a chance to meet him, which in this instance I would say that yes he has touched not only my life but many other lives for those who have heard him speak because of the way he comes across. And I think that that's probably the major point for many of us who knew him back then in the day for what he stood for. That he came across that way and that's what people will remember.

Q. Now, in your personal exposure to Mr. Jamal's dedication to the community, did you get a sense or did you ever witness expressions by Mr. Jamal concerning his desire to use violence, has that ever occurred?

A. Never.

Q. Never. Have you come to learn in your dealings with Mr. Jamal what his attitude is about violence?

A. Well, I know what his attitude is about peace.

Q. Yes, please tell me?

Page 51.

State Rep. David Richardson - Direct

A. I know that he was a strong advocate to be a peacemaker in many situations that were involved in the black community, African-American community when there were struggling differences between various groups. Many times that the Church of The Advocate at 52nd street, the parish St. Thomas, St. Thomas Parish Church I think it was called, and also 50th and Baltimore Hickman Church AME, that there were several rallies that were called and many times there were struggles and fights that would erupt. And it was Mumia's voice that sort of like quelled and got order back to those settings to try to get people to realize the importance of why we must not be fighting against one another in a unity sense.

And I can say that we had many situations where there have been toe-to-toe confrontations in the community and it has been Mumia that has stepped in to be the peacemaker.

He, he was one of those that not only abhorred violence but he was for trying to make sure that all the time we saw peace and unity within our community and we would not use the divisiveness or the division of seeing the fights that erupted in our community has taken us away from the struggle and kept us on those points. And I think constantly over and over again that you will find that it was Mumia who stepped in and was an advocate. Plus the fact that he did that on an ongoing basis. I mean it was not just something that was just during the period of time when he was a journalist, but also as an activist in the community.

Page 52.

State Rep. David Richardson - Direct

And I can say to you that I do not know of any time, place -- and I have been in his company a lot of times where he has been locked up or arrested. I have been locked up and arrested more times than Mumia has ever been locked up and arrested here in the City of Philadelphia during the struggle and I think it should be pointed out that we have been in the middle of a lot of controversy. But it was always Mumia that stepped up to speak in the voice that others did not have to try to quell the peace of the community.

Q. Were those occasions where you were locked up and arrested, and occasions that you referred to regarding Mr. Jamal being locked up and arrested, was that in the grand tradition of people like Dr. Martin Luther King?

A. Well, it was the compassion and the heart and feeling of Dr. Martin Luther King but the tenacity of a Malcolm X, and also the conviction of a man like

State Rep. David Richardson - Direct

Medgar Evers. And I think if you tied them together and you look at what we have here today you would have that in a total, comprehensive sense in Mr. Jamal, who has been actively involved in our City and struggle for a long time.

Q. Okay. Now, you have described in considerable detail about Mr. Jamal's dedication to the community. Are you in a position to tell us anything about Mr. Jamal's dedication to his family, to the inner sphere of his life?

A. Yeah, I would think that if you were to look at Mr. Jamal, he is definitely a family man and has been for a long time. If you had been around him and knew him like we knew him, I think that you could picture Mumia with his son on his shoulders and his microphone in his hand interviewing people in the community as he was actually out in the community doing his work. So he embodied that with respect to his family. And his conviction for his own young son and the fact that that had meant a lot to him. So therefore he carried, therefore he carried him a lot with him everywhere he went. He did that with his professional job as a journalist most of the time that we saw him.

Q. Thank you. I am struck by the image that you

Page 54.

State Rep. David Richardson - Cross

just described. You described Mr. Jamal as having his young son on his shoulder and tapings of his --

A. His tape recorder, his shoulder holster on the side that had a microphone where he would be interviewing people, and have his son on his shoulder and interviewing people at the same time.

Q. Now, tell me, with that image in your mind of Mr. Jamal, how did that speak to you, what was it saying to you?

A. Well, it was saying that, number one, he not only understands what it means to be a journalist, but he also understands what it means to raise a family and also raise his son; and that he wanted his son to be a part of what he was doing. And he saw that as his responsibility and he did not shun his responsibility. And therefore, 24 hours a day, seven days a week when he was out there in the community he had his son with him.

MR. WILLIAMS: Mr. Richardson, thank you very much.

Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. GRANT: May I, Your Honor?

CROSS-EXAMINATION

- - - - -

Page 55.

State Rep. David Richardson - Cross

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Good morning, Your Honor.

A. Good morning.

Q. State Representative, you indicated that basically you became aware of Mr. Jamal early in his career as a budding journalist and as a community spokesperson; is that right?

A. Community activist, yes, sir.

Q. And at the time when you were first being elected to State-wide office in 1972, Mr. Jamal was just a teenager, was he not?

A. I don't know his age at that time. I just know that he was outspoken. This was in the early '70s.

Q. Now, Mr. Jackson, speaking of Mr. Jackson: He contacted you and asked you to come and be basically a character witness at the bail hearing for Mr. Jamal; is that right?

A. No, that's not correct.

Q. He contacted you and asked that you appear before the Court of Common Pleas for a bail reduction hearing?

A. That is correct.

Q. And did he discuss with you what he wished you to testify to?

Page 56.

State Rep. David Richardson - Cross

A. If I remember correctly, it was the fact that he wanted to have someone talk about the fact that they needed to have the judge know that bail should be reduced on behalf of Mr. Jamal so that he could be put out on the street while his trial was going to be called at some later date.

Q. And how did you know Mr. Jackson that he could call you up and ask you to do this?

A. Because he was a member of the Pilcop organization here in the City of Philadelphia. And we had had many dealings with Mr. Churchill and Mr. Thomas Gilhool and other members of the Pilcop organization here in the City of Philadelphia. And I had been down to the office and we had been actively involved in numerous cases in the City of Philadelphia that led us to know that that's the office where many people were, where officers referred many cases down there. So I got to know all of the lawyers inside of the building, not only on a first name basis, but also because we were actively involved in a number of other issues here in the City of Philadelphia.

Q. What does Pilcop stand for?

A. I think it stands for Philadelphia something about cooperating with police. I am not sure of the acronym of the name any longer. Pilcop, I know that it exists and I know it is an organization that specifically was designed to go out and help people who had cases where there were police involvement. And we went down there because many people called us and asked us what organization is dealing with that. And we always said Pilcop so I never knew necessarily the full name.

Page 57.

State Rep. David Richardson - Cross

Q. And when you say the organization helped people out who had cases involving police practices, brutality, abuse, what have you, did you mean that the members of this organization that were actually lawyers actually went to court and represented people that had these needs?

A. Some of them did, yes.

Q. And Mr. Jackson in fact was a director of, at one point, of that organization, was he not?

A. I don't know what his title was, sir.

Q. And how long had you known Mr. Jackson to be active in Pilcop? Before the date of December the 9th of 1981.

A. I don't know the exact amount of years, all I know is that he was there because he was also a practicing attorney himself here in the City of Philadelphia. And I knew him also in that capacity.

Page 58.

State Rep. David Richardson - Cross

So I don't know directly what first year he went to Pilcop.

Q. Mr. Jackson was not only professionally associated with organizations like Pilcop and came to the aid of people who needed his services in the community, but he philosophically also believed in those types of issues, did he not?

A. Oh, yeah, Mr. Jackson was actively involved for a number of years himself out in the community. I think even before he went to Pilcop.

Q. And the organization members and the people who came to Pilcop for their services considered Mr. Jackson a top flight attorney, did they not?

MR. WILLIAMS: I am going to object to that question, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Objection is overruled.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. You may answer, sir.

A. I guess that when you say, when you say he was a what?

Q. He was considered by the people in the organization Pilcop, both members and those who sought their services, as a top-flight attorney, is --

A. I don't know how they felt about him because I

Page 59.

State Rep. David Richardson - Cross never asked them about that.

Q. How did you feel about him?

A. I thought he was a good lawyer.

Q. Now, in any event, he contacted you and you appeared and testified at a bail hearing, and that would have been in January, specifically January the 11th of 1982. And I know it's been 13 years, I am not trying to hold you to dates.

A. I can't, I wouldn't remember even if I tried.

Q. I wouldn't ask. But in fact you did appear to testify at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Jackson represented Mr. Jamal at that point in time, did he not?

A. Yes.

Q. And then five months later, roughly around June the 19th of that same year of 1982, the trial involving the indictment -- as Mr. Williams calls it -- of Mr. Jamal began. Did you attend those proceedings?

A. Some of them I did.

Q. And when you attended those proceedings in this very Courtroom, Mr. Jackson was seated over there at Counsel's table as the lawyers are arrayed here today, was he not?

Page 60.

State Rep. David Richardson - Cross

A. He was at the table.

Q. And did you acknowledge him or did he acknowledge you in the Courtroom on those days that you did show up?

A. No, there was no acknowledgement at that time. There was a lot of activity in the Courtroom and I don't think that I was ever acknowledged personally by him because he was handling the case. I did not talk to him and I did not have any communication with him at all.

Q. We are having a little competition: Do you think that you could either --

A. Speak up a little louder.

Q. Yes, sir, or you could simply pull your chair a little closer to the mike, that's probably the easiest way. Thank you, sir.

Now, you indicated that there was no opportunity, basically, for acknowledgement because there was a lot of activity about the periphery of the trial and in the Courtroom itself; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you said that Mr. Jackson was handling the case at that time?

A. I didn't say that.

Page 61.

State Rep. David Richardson - Cross

Q. Oh.

A. You said was he sitting at the table. I said yes he was sitting at the table. I don't remember because I don't recollect back that far to remember the case. I was in and out of the proceedings, that's why I attended some of them and I was not there for the full extent of the hearing.

Q. So you don't know whether or not he was handling the case?

A. No, I do not know whether or not he was handling the case or not, no.

Q. At the time of trial?

A. At the time of trial.

Q. Or at the time of sentencing?

A. Or at the time of sentencing, because I wasn't there.

Q. Did it puzzle you that Mr. Jackson would call you when the issue was a bail release of Mr. Jamal and have you come to court and testify on his behalf but then throughout a month-long trial and a day-long sentencing hearing, you would have no contact with him whatsoever when you knew Mr. Jamal intimately?

A. We raised the question later on to Mr. Jackson after the case was over why we never were called. In fact, we were probably in several meetings after that proceeding was over to ask why we were not called to testify, as well as other people in the community that knew Mr. Jamal at that time.

Page 62.

State Rep. David Richardson - Cross

Q. And did you know what had changed between January the 11th of 1982 and the beginning of Mr. Jamal's trial on June 19th, 1982 involving his attorney status?

A. No, I think that there was a number of discussions about whether or not Mr. Jackson was going to continue to represent him or whether Mr. Jamal was going to represent himself.

Q. On the occasions when you appeared during the course of trial proceedings, did you not hear Mr. Jamal tell Mr. Jackson to sit down, that he doesn't want him as a lawyer, that he wanted John Africa, and that Mr. Jackson, you don't represent me; did you hear any of those statements?

A. I never heard that, no, sir.

Q. Did you know that Mr. Jamal himself was actually installed as his own Counsel by his own request beginning on June the 2nd of 1982 and that Mr. Jackson was thereafter not his lawyer as far as Mr. Jamal was concerned?

A. I did not know the date. I did hear about it just like others in news accounts that everyone else would hear that there was a discussion about the fact that Mr. Jamal was going to hear his -- was going to try his own case, but I don't know the circumstances that surrounded that, what made that happen, so I can't speak to that at all.

Page 63.

State Rep. David Richardson - Cross

Q. And after you knew that Mr. Jamal was representing himself and in fact he was for all intents and purposes the lawyer, did you contact him to tell him I'm available if you need me to be a reference or a witness or to testify on your behalf?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did he ever contact you and ask you to appear and testify on his behalf?

A. No, he did not. He was incarcerated.

Q. Yes, but he has access to phone service, I assume?

A. I don't know that, sir, I can not answer that question.

Q. Had you ever been to visit Mr. Jamal while he was incarcerated or awaiting trial?

A. Only here in this City Hall.

Q. I'm sorry?

A. Only here in City Hall.

Q. And when you, how many times, approximately, do you recall that occurring?

Page 64.

State Rep. David Richardson - Cross

A. Twice.

Q. Did you ever discuss your status as a potential witness for him on those occasions?

A. No, I did not.

Q. On those two occasions, was that before or after he became his own lawyer?

A. See, I don't know when he became his own lawyer. All I could say to you is that the times that I saw him have been since he has been incarcerated after he was found guilty and not before then. So it's been after, since the trial has been going on here in City Hall.

Q. Now, since you knew Mr. Jackson, he was a long-standing member of Pilcop, Mr. Jackson had every interest and every motivation, from what you could tell, to defend Mr. Jamal to the full extent the law permitted?

A. I can't determine.

MR. WILLIAMS: Objection, Your Honor, to what Mr. Jackson's interests were.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: I can't determine what is in another person's mind, because we never did have any full discussion other than the time I appeared, sir, at the hearing, at his bail reduction hearing. There was no other time that I had any accounting with Tony Jackson until after the case was well over in 1982.

Page 65.

State Rep. David Richardson - Cross

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Do you know that none of Mr. Jamal's immediate family testified at his sentencing hearing, or in the trial?

A. No, I did not know that.

Q. Do you know why that was?

A. I didn't inquire because I was only concerned with Mr. Jamal and what he stood for for many of us who were actively out in the community talking about his particular case. I did not get into his family situation at all and I did not know whether they did testify or did not testify at the time.

Q. And so because Mr. Jamal was so beloved in the community for his activist voice and for his ability to stand up and take the heat when other people may have turned around and shirked their duties, is that why they erected after his arrest the Mumia Abu-Jamal Defense Fund to raise monies for his defense team?

A. My understanding was that there were some committees that were put together. There was a transportation committee, there was a fund-raising committee. There were speakers bureaus committees.

Page 66.

State Rep. David Richardson - Cross

There were a number of committees that were formed after that on behalf of Mumia, so I can't speak directly to the fund-raising committee because I was not involved in that, sir.

Q. Since you are very aware of Mr. Jamal's journalistic and community activist background, I assume you are aware that at some point those journalistic organizations that had had and enjoyed a relationship with Mr. Jamal felt it necessary to sever their relationship with him prior to the time of the homicide charges in this case, are you aware of that?

A. If you are speaking about a dispute -- and I don't know which radio station you are referring to, whether it was WKDU or WHYY or WDAS, because those are the only two stations that I am aware of -- I am not aware of any personal disputes that exist between their management and Mr. Jamal.

Q. But you are aware that he was no longer employed by any of these stations on December the 9th of 1981, are you not?

A. No, I am not aware. I thought that he was still participating as a journalist at one of those stations, that's why I can only remember those three stations. But I don't know if he had any involvement in any other radio stations then at that time.

Page 67.

State Rep. David Richardson - Cross

So you are saying December 1 of 1981. I don't have any recollection of December 1 or December the 9th of that same year.

Q. Yeah, I am not trying to confuse you with dates, Mr. Richardson. What I am trying to refer to is the date that the murder in this case happened. And I am using that as a benchmark for recollections both before and after. And I prefer not to mention the fact of the murder but that's why I tried to couch it in terms of the date.

A. Okay.

Q. Okay? Now, were you aware as to whether or not Mr. Jamal was employed as a cab driver?

A. I did not find that out until later on after the broadcast came across that Mr. Jamal had been driving a cab, as a result of the, of the newscast that I heard about the incident that occurred on that date.

Q. And were you aware that he was actually not driving a cab, but he borrowed a cab from a cab driver when the cab driver was asleep so that he could make some money because he was unemployed?

A. I have no knowledge of that, sir, and I could not speak to that at all. I only can speak to what I know of Mr. Jamal and what I knew of him as an individual person who worked together in the community on issues that impacted directly on our community. Those were items concerning the police, cab drivers, et cetera, et cetera. I can not answer that yes.

Page 68.

State Rep. David Richardson - Cross

Q. Did you participate personally in any of the groups that were erected to come to Mr. Jamal's defense, which is the transportation committee, the fund-raising committee, the defense committee?

A. Speaking of that, I have been involved in most of them with respect to his case with demonstrations and speaking all across this country. Including activities that we have participated in in New York and California. And recently Wisconsin.

Q. And you did this because you knew that Mr. Jamal was not only a community activist but peace-loving person and you staunchly have defended him throughout these years?

A. Without question. I believed in Mumia because I knew Mumia and knew what he stood for.

Q. And did you know that he stood for the purchase in 1979 of a .38 caliber snub-nose and a shoulder holster to go with it?

A. Because he bought a gun, many people buy guns

Page 69.

State Rep. David Richardson - Cross

in the City of Philadelphia. Certainly I know you are aware of that. And I don't know what that has to do with me knowing Mr. Jamal. I know many people who are in this Courtroom that have permits to carry guns.

Q. Well, it goes to your representation that in your view he was a peace-loving, nonviolent person?

A. That's correct, because a person carries a gun does not mean that they are not peace-loving and law-abiding.

Q. Now, since 1982 when Mr. Jamal was convicted in this matter, have you been in contact with his lawyers -- Miss Wolkenstein, Mr. Weinglass, Mr. Williams -- regarding testimony here today?

A. Yes.

Q. And when were you first contacted?

A. Concerning?

Q. Concerning your representations that you were available for the penalty phase, you were not contacted by the attorney and you know not why.

A. I was contacted by Mr. Weinglass I guess about a year-and-a-half ago when he came to Philadelphia and met with the organizing committee at the Friends Services Center at 1501 Cherry Street.

Q. And when you say the organizing committee,

Page 70.

State Rep. David Richardson - Cross

what did that committee organize?

A. It organized the friends and family of Mumia Abu-Jamal.

Q. And did Mr. Weinglass or one of his associates assist you in preparing this affidavit which has been marked as part of their exhibits for the Petition in support of a Post-Conviction Relief, exhibit number 8? Did they assist you in preparing this, sir?

A. Yes.

Q. To what extent?

A. That after I wrote this they checked it for errors and edited, I guess, for the proper way to submit it to the Court.

Q. And paragraph number 3 there says, on July 3rd, 1982 I was available and willing to testify as a witness on behalf of Mr. Jamal at his trial during the penalty phase of his trial. Were you not available to testify at the guilt phase of his trial, that is whether he would be found guilty or innocent of these charges?

A. Well, as I understood it, I was indicating that I was available to testify at whatever point in time it would be necessary on behalf of Mr. Jamal if I had been called. I think they fixed the dates to them because I don't know the dates.

Page 71.

State Rep. David Richardson - Redirect

Q. So you are saying you would have been available to testify at any time and every time that you were needed, not just at the penalty phase?

A. Exactly. In other words, if I had been called.

Q. And what would you have been called for at the trial, can you give us an idea?

MR. WILLIAMS: Objection, Your Honor: He is not competent to answer that question.

THE COURT: Oh, I think so. Overrule the objection.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. What testimony could you offer at the guilt phase?

A. If there was a guilt phase I would answer as a character reference.

MR. GRANT: I see. Thank you. I appreciate it. Nothing further, Your Honor.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, just a few questions.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Mr. Grant asked you some questions about

Page 72.

State Rep. David Richardson - Redirect

remarks that Mr. Jamal made during the course of the trial. Do you remember those questions?

A. About Mr. Jackson? Yes.

Q. Okay. During your time that you observed the trial, were you ever present when His Honor Judge Sabo instructed Mr. Jackson that he had a moral and ethical and legal duty to represent Mr. Jamal to the best of his ability? Were you ever there for that?

A. Umm, no, I was not. I do not recall those comments. I heard similar statements made but I do not recall that statement.

Q. Okay. And the last question is: You were asked about various committees that were formed in connection with the case against Mr. Jamal, right? Was it pretty obvious from your standpoint as a person in the community that there was considerable support for this man during the course of his trial?

A. Overwhelming support. In fact, one of the things that many recognize is the fact that that's why there is so much confusion out in the hallways and out in the streets today: Because there's been that support all along. And he has received that internationally as well as locally.

Q. So if an attorney was sitting in this seat here during the course of that trial, it would be

Page 73.

State Rep. David Richardson - Redirect obvious to that attorney that there was considerable public support for his client?

A. I would certainly think so.

MR. WILLIAMS: Mr. Richardson, thank you.

MR. GRANT: I have nothing further, Your Honor. Thank you.

THE COURT: All right, you are excused.

THE COURT OFFICER: Watch your step, sir.

(Witness excused.)

THE COURT: Your Honor, the next witness that the Petitioner calls is E. Steven Collins.

MR. GRANT: Since Mr. Collins is not an affiant supporting their Petition and we have received no items to indicate what he would testify to, I ask, A, for an offer of proof, and then I would ask Your Honor to entertain a motion to preclude.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, the offer of proof is it is a continuation along the lines of the testimony we have just heard. Mr. Collins was a colleague of Mr. Jamal, he also is in the field of radio broadcast journalism and will describe his relationship to Mr. Jamal in connection with being a colleague of his. Along, with being a friend.

Page 74.

E. Steven Collins - Direct

(Discussion was held off the record at this time.)

MR. WILLIAMS: I also would like to remind the Court that they've had his name for eight days.

MR. GRANT: That doesn't make him a part of the Petition or an affiant in the matter, but if this will expedite the process let's have him.

MR. WILLIAMS: I appreciate Mr. Grant's concession.

E. Steven Collins, having been duly sworn,
was examined and testified as follows:

DIRECT EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Mr. Collins, thank you for coming in this morning. You are aware that you have been asked to testify in connection with a Petition that has been

Page 75.

E. Steven Collins - Direct

filed by Mr. Jamal?

A. Yes.

Q. And that's a Petition for a new trial: You are aware of that?

A. Yes.

Q. By the way, Mr. Collins, are you a resident of Philadelphia?

A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been a resident of the City?

A. My entire 40 years.

Q. And do you work here in Philadelphia?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. What kind of work do you do?

A. Host a talk show on WDAS radio; I also do sales at WDAS radio.

Q. How long have you been working at that radio station?

A. It will be 19 years in June.

Q. By the way -- I will allow you to do a little promotion for the radio -- what station, what kind of a listenership does it have?

A. It's the number one 25-54 radio station the last four Arbitron books. Focus is on adults, African Americans in the Philadelphia area.

Q. Now, by the way, what is your educational

Page 76.

E. Steven Collins - Direct

background, sir?

A. I have a degree from Temple University in radio, television, film; and I graduated West Catholic High School.

Q. And are you a member of any professional organizations? Community organizations?

A. I am a member of the Association of Black Journalists in Philadelphia. I am a board member of the Philadelphia Ad Club. I am involved in a variety of community organizations: Concerned Black Men, Police Athletic League, a number of them.

Q. By the way, Mr. Collins, have we met, you and I?

A. Just once to discuss this.

Q. This proceeding?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. Do you remember when you and I met?

A. It was about a week ago.

Q. And that's the only time?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, do you know Mr. Jamal?

A. Very well.

Q. Did you know him back in 1982?

A. Better.

Q. You did?

Page 77.

E. Steven Collins - Direct

A. Yes.

Q. And were you aware that back in 1982 he was under indictment?

A. Yes.

Q. And were you aware that there were proceedings that were conducted in this Courthouse in connection with that indictment?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you attend any of those proceedings, Mr. Collins?

A. No, I did not.

Q. You did not. Did you know a man by the name of Anthony Jackson back in 1982?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you know him to be?

A. He was an attorney, I believe he worked for the Philadelphia Public Interest Law Center.

Q. Did you know if Mr. Jackson had any connection with the proceedings related to Mr. Jamal?

A. Yes, I did. He was, he was a Court-appointed attorney at that time. For a period of time.

Q. Now, in late June and early July of 1982, were you here in the City of Philadelphia?

A. Yes.

Q. You were living here?

Page 78.

E. Steven Collins - Direct

A. Yes.

Q. Were you working here back then too?

A. Yes.

Q. Where were you working back then?

A. WDAS radio.

Q. Okay. So I take it you were available, you had the ability to come to court if someone were to ask you to come to court?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Back in 1982?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Had somebody asked you to come to court and testify on behalf of Mr. Jamal as a character witness, would you have been willing to do that?

A I would have jumped. I definitely, positively would have been available and would have been willing to do so.

Q. When you say you would have jumped, I take it that you would have no reservations at all?

A. At all, none whatsoever.

Q. Okay, now let's turn our attention to how you knew Mr. Jamal, okay. Can you share with us the circumstances under which you began to know Mr. Jamal?

MR. GRANT: Objection, Your Honor. If

Page 79.

E. Steven Collins - Direct

Mr. Collins would have appeared as a character witness it is instructive for us to know his background but his only testimony relevant to this proceeding would be I knew others who knew Mr. Jamal and their opinion. would be X.

MR. WILLIAMS: That would be true at the guilt phase, Your Honor, but not as a mitigating witness in the penalty phase.

THE COURT: He said he would be available as a character witness.

MR. WILLIAMS: At the penalty phase. I could use the term mitigation witness, but.

THE COURT: We use the testimony of the character witness in the penalty phase. That is used.

MR. WILLIAMS: The term character witness.

THE COURT: Reputation. That is used in the penalty phase. And the Jury is instructed whatever they use in the primary case goes over into the penalty case.

MR. WILLIAMS: Precisely. What I am asking him now and what I am directing his attention to is if he was, if he had been asked to testify in the penalty phase --

Page 80.

MR. GRANT: I withdraw my objection, then.

MR. WILLIAMS: Very well. Thank you.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Can you now explain the circumstances under which you began to know Mr. Jamal?

A. I heard Mumia on the radio when I was a student at Temple University. He was on WKDU, which was Drexel's radio station. And he did a commentary on a young brother who was shot. And I didn't know the brother and I didn't know the circumstances, but in three minutes it felt like I had a keen, a keen insight into what happened and Mumia's conclusion was compelling and it encouraged people to think about the value of life. And I thought I would like to meet him.

Several weeks later a person had a news conference and he coincidentally and I happened to attend and we met. And began for me a mentoring relationship in my pursuit to do commercial news broadcasting in Philadelphia. Mumia was a mentor.

Q. Okay. To be clear: This news conference that you attended, you are referring to Mr. Jamal as the person that you met there?

A. Correct.

Page 81.

Q. And you are referring to Mr. Jamal as the person that you developed this mentoring relationship with?

A. Correct. He was a reporter and I was a student reporter. And that's the basis of our initial relationship.

Q. Was it important to you at that juncture in your life to establish a mentoring relationship with somebody?

A. Yes.

Q. Help us to understand why?

A. Well, the nature of broadcasting in a major market is extraordinarily competitive and therefore you need to know or should know someone who understands that and can direct you in that area.

Mumia was my age but had an exceeding wealth of experience, an understanding and a genuine care about me and other people who wanted to be in broadcasting. He also was an extraordinary reporter at that time. Even though we were, we were not in mainstream broadcasting.

Q. Mr. Collins, what kind of qualities do you regard as being important for a good mentor?

A. Well, I think in this particular field one needs to know writing, needs to understand how to -- one needs to have a real serious grasp on the language, on English. And understand how to write concisely. Must have contacts. Must be involved.

And Mumia had that. But I think the thing that separated him at that time, the way I remember him at that time was a serious concern for people which transcended just reporting a news story. He wanted to know the condition of people. And he told stories. I mean that's basically what he did. He did it in a very professional way. He had an eloquent style, and he had, has a commanding voice. But essentially, he wanted to tell the story of people. All people and specifically African-American people in the City.

Q. Okay. Mr. Collins, I have met many people who have enormous gifts but they would be terrible mentors. Is there something about the fact that he has enormous gifts but he was able to transmit those gifts to you?

A. Oh, yeah, absolutely.

Q. Tell us about that?

A. Well, he had an interest in my career. That was just based on Mumia. If you, if you knew him you would understand that. He just felt that he had a responsibility to give something to me and to other people. You know, I mean that's what he did. He went out of his way. We used to, he helped me to get on WHAT radio, which was my first commercial job. He was going to WPEN radio to work the night and he had WHAT. He thought I was pretty good. I thought he was the greatest voice and greatest journalist I had met, beyond some of the people that I had worked with at the Inquirer. And when he got the job at 'PEN he talked to the program director at WHAT, and he didn't really ask, he told them that I would be his replacement. And I was.

During the years or the months following my starting at WHAT, Mumia would call me up and tell me how I sounded, what I did, what I didn't do right. If there was a hot-breaking story wherever it was, he told me I should get a police radio scanner. We both had them. We used to stay up real late listening, finding out where news was breaking. Could be a fire, could be any neighborhood. Could be any issue. We broke a lot of stories. We competed to bring stories.

We used to have a system in Philadelphia concerning UPI and AP. The United Press International and Associated Press. And if you broke a story, they would credit you with your last name and your radio station's logo. And after a few weeks, we would compare who broke the most stories. We did that a lot.

Q. Was this in good-natured competition?

A. Absolutely. It was good for me because it taught me not just how to read a story and to be concerned about information, but it taught me, you know, how the District Attorney's Office worked, about the police charging function of the D.A.'s Office, how the Police Department worked, how media worked in a major market. It was essential. And it was just really important.

Q. What I am hearing from you, Mr. Collins, is that Mr. Jamal is a man very willing to share what he has; am I hearing you right?

A. Absolutely, absolutely.

Q. Aside from his willingness to share what he has with you, was there anything about his skills as a professional journalist that affected you personally? Do you understand?

A. Absolutely. There were so many different stories that were covered by the major media in Philadelphia, yet when Mumia covered a story it was a different story all together.

Q. How was it different?

Page 85.

A. Well, Mumia has an ability to describe details in a way that is unique, complexions, and how people look and they feel. He had a way of translating human emotion through the radio so that no matter where you were you understood the circumstances. I think of him as I think of Dr. King. Because Dr. King did that. Dr. King was able to tell a story from a prison cell through his writings in such a way and delivered with a patient kind of oration in such a way as to create a certain awareness that was beyond what was written in the newspaper.

Mumia had that ability, he probably still has it. It's something that he did it, he did relatively natural. It looked easy for him. But for me and for anybody else trying it it was extremely difficult. So I mean on a professional level, that I think impacted on me and just about everybody else who worked with him or hired him in the many radio stations he worked at here in Philly.

Q. He made you feel, feel for the story?

A. Absolutely. He made us understand the pain, suffering, loss or great victory. Could be a '6ers game, or a fire and the family was burnt out, or a homeless condition or whatever. I mean that's...

Q. Now, as a journalist yourself, is it difficult

Page 86.

E. Steven Collins - Direct

to convey to people who are listening to a radio program the pain that's intrinsic in a story, the suffering that is intrinsic in a story, the joy that is intrinsic in a story, is that difficult to do?

A. Yes, it can be. It depends on what the story is. Radio is a medium of imagination. And it's also in our medium, where we are music intensive, a short thing: You have to tell a story in 30 or 45 seconds. You have to tell who, what, where, why, when and how.

Mumia had an ability to tell that story in a relative short period of time that was piercing. And you, people used to say radio news is a tune out. But when Mumia was on people turned it up. He had a great, great command of language. He had an absolutely recognizable, predictable truism for people and the condition of people and he conveyed that every time he opened the microphone. So in that way I was impacted, but millions of people in the tri-state Philadelphia area who heard him were as well.

Q. Is there any event, Mr. Collins, looking back over those many years, that stands out in your mind as particularly moving to you?

A. A particular event...

Q. A particular broadcast or something along

Page 87.

E. Steven Collins - Direct

those lines?

A. The first time I heard him on the air was particularly. It was about one African American who was killed by another for no real reason. I don't know if it was over sneakers, but it was over a superficial reason. Mumia focused on the importance of life. And he focused on it to say to the audience that we take life too superficially. And that was the focus and it was just, I can't remember and I feel bad that I can't remember it exactly word-for-word the way he said it, how he said it and the words he used, but I got the message. It was, and it was on the small college station, Drexel's WKDU. That was the trademark.

Q. What did that tell you about him, that he was able to convey, to impress that on you through his voice?

A. Well, again, Mumia and I are very close, I am very close to his family. I have known him for a long, long time. And I knew his mother.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, I object. First of all, I have been giving Counsel considerable latitude in his leading questions, which 85 percent of them are. But also I would object that the answer is not responsive to the question. What did that tell you and he begins a biographical description of Abu-Jamal. I would move to strike.

Page 88.

E. Steven Collins - Direct

THE WITNESS: It was not a biographical --

THE COURT: Repeat your question, rephrase your question so he could answer it correctly.

MR. WILLIAMS: Let me move on, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. You described a lot of qualities about Mr. Jamal as a journalist?

A. Hmm-hmm.

Q. You have described how he's been able to convey the pain, the suffering, the joys of a news story. Can somebody in your, in your position as a professional journalist, in your view, can somebody act that? Can somebody mimic that? Do you understand what I'm saying?

A. Yes. The answer is no. I don't think that you can, my feeling is that you can't pretend to present on that consistent a basis that kind of caring about people you don't know but you care about.

Page 89.

E. Steven Collins - Direct

Q. You also used the term that radio journalism is imagination?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Right. So I take it that broadcast journalism, radio broadcast journalism in many respects is not an activity that one performs from the neck up, but that it requires an enormous amount from the heart?

A. It can. Or one can be very by the facts, you can just simply tell the facts. In all-news radio that works regularly because that's the format. In radio news or even in television broadcast news, with an editorial or a commentary, one's opinion is the heart of what you are talking about, you would think that you would have some passion about the thing that you have the opinion about. And in that regard Mumia's reports, which were often commentaries on WKDU, were passionate. And that was not without reverence.

Q. And was that a unique quality among radio broadcast journalists?

A. Some of the special ones it's standard. You know, I think of Osgood or some of the other people in the country who are just incredible in their ability to write a story and convey a message. And I clearly put Mumia in that category. But locally I don't know too many radio broadcasters who are quite that patient about a story or conveying a message.

Page 90.

E. Steven Collins - Direct

Q. Okay. Let me make sure that this is clear. At the time of this unfortunate episode back in late 1981 --

A. Right.

Q. -- did Mr. Jamal have the potential to become a broadcast journalist on the scale of Charles Osgood or Ed Bradley or people like that?

A. It was, it was, that was expected. I mean everyone who ever heard him or knew him at the many radio stations that he worked at expected that. I mean that was just a forgone conclusion that he would become that as he moved along the ladder.

Q. Do you know what was important to Mr. Jamal as a journalist, what his values were as a journalist?

A. Sure. He, he felt that we had a responsibility as journalists to hold people accountable generally. Specifically as African-American journalists we had a responsibility to our community and to hold everyone accountable. After working with him I felt almost as though I was elected to a position of reporter. You just couldn't accept what the wire services said or the newspaper said about what happened in the community, if you knew Mumia, you had to find it out. You had to report it. And you had to stay with it. And that's the measure I think of his ability as a reporter.

Q. He inspired you as a journalist?

A. Absolutely. Absolutely.

Q. What about linking, did he link his craft as a journalist to anything within the community itself?

A. I would think so --

MR. GRANT: I would object, Your Honor: It is leading, it has been asked and answered.

MR. WILLIAMS: I am trying to direct his attention to a particular area.

THE COURT: Rephrase your question, will you.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Did Mr. Jamal, where did he focus his journalistic craft to?

A. Well, often, a lot of stories that Mumia covered were stories that Mumia uncovered. Things that he found that were newsworthy. That were not on an editor's sheet. Things that were happening in the community that were important things.

Page 92.

E. Steven Collins - Direct

He was also the president of the Association of Black Journalists in Philadelphia. And through that position affected journalists in the Philadelphia area who were members at that time and student members who were also members at that time. Students from Temple University and some of the other schools in the area. But he was very, very, very interested in the community. That was seemingly his trademark.

Q. In what aspect of the community was Mr. Jamal most interested?

A. Usually people who needed a voice. People who were out of work. People who were protesting cuts in subsidies for, you know, all sorts of things. From children's meals in schools. He did a story once I remember on the public school system and it's lacking in relationship to academic expectation and achievement levels. And predominantly low-income schools in the Philadelphia area. It went beyond a report. It was a passionate series of reports on that particular issue. Anybody who heard that I would think would be compelled to want to make some changes with respect to public schools in Philadelphia.

Q. Have you ever heard Mr. Jamal described as the

Page 93.

E. Steven Collins - Direct

voice of the voiceless?

A. Sure.

Q. Have you ever heard that?

A. Yes.

Q. Does that have any meaning to you?

A. Yes, absolutely.

Q. What meaning does it have?

A. Well, again, if you are standing in an employment line or in a welfare line and you get a short treatment, as the people do on that level, Mumia would articulate and illuminate their condition in an incredible way. And he did it in a variety of ways. He wrote papers, he wrote his news stories, he appeared on public affairs shows. He was a person that anyone could go to to attempt to get somebody to listen. And he seemingly on a regular basis presented that kind of information.

Q. Mr. Collins, have you ever related with Mr. Jamal outside the confines of work, that is on a personal level?

A. Sure, all the time.

Q. (Indicating.)

A. He was a good friend, he is a good friend. He knows my family. We got together for a number of times at his parents' home. You know, we were, we were very close. In fact, on the night of the shooting incident he was at my house. We had dinner. He and former State Senator Milton Street and his wife and the young lady I was dating. He left about 1:OO a.m.

Page 94.

E. Steven Collins - Direct

Q. Was there anything unique about his demeanor, about his temperament on that last night that you spent with him?

A. Mumia was, you know, consistently the same temperament. He always ended the conversation by saying peace. And he meant it. He always seemed to have a pretty even-keel personality. He had a way of holding his feelings until he sort of sorted it out and then he would tell you how he felt. He has an incredible intellect. He is the life of any social event. Because he would sit down, and people may be partying or eating, but they would stop and listen. Because he just from an early age was very well read. And had an incredible insight in persuasion or debate, if you will.

Q. You said you spent some time in Mr. Jamal's home?

A. I spent time in his mother's home and at other locations that his family was at.

Q. Were you able to observe how he related to his

Page 95.

E. Steven Collins - Direct

mother, for example?

A. He loved his mother. He was, he lived for his mother. He was the only person I know who called his mother by her first name. He was, he was....he was very respectful and loving of his mother, he put her first.

Q. What about with members of, other members of his family?

A. He was very close to Billy, his brother. He was very close to Lydia. He is close to his family. I mean all of his family were, they were very close, very close-knit family, it was obvious.

Q. Were you aware that he has a twin brother?

A. No, I was not.

Q. You mentioned the name Billy. Is that Billy Cook?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know what kind of relationship he had with Billy Cook?

A. Very close, extremely close. They're brothers. Very close.

Q. Did Mr. Jamal have a concern or take a concern for Billy Cook's welfare?

A. I would think so. I saw at various times -- Billy was a vendor and Mumia was very -- and he would

Page 96.

E. Steven Collins - Direct

see him on a regular basis. We have a story in Center City, or if I saw him downtown, you would kind of think that Billy would be close, or vice-versa. They were close.

Q. What about were you aware that Mr. Jamal had children of his own?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever have occasion to see what kind of father he was to his children?

A. Yes.

Q. Could you tell us about that?

A. He was very, he lived for his son Mumia -- Amassi, rather, his daughter and his other son. He was very close to them. He provided for them. He was at times a little, I thought, preoccupied with making a better income and providing better for them. Which I think was one of the reasons why he moved from one station to another: In search of a better, you know, income to take care of his family.

Q. So you knew Mr. Jamal even at that level?

A. Yes.

Q. Of his concerns for his income and care for his family?

A. Yes.

Q. There was that kind of interplay there?

Page 97.

E. Steven Collins - Direct

A. I had a very close relationship with one of his children. And I think I know his other children very well.

Q. Is there anything in your entire experience with Mr. Jamal that led you to believe that he had any kind of bent towards violence?

A. See, that's the whole, that is the whole question here. I knew, I've known Mumia for a long, long time. During that period prior to this incident we were very, very close. And in searching my mind, I can't remember one time where there was ever a discussion, any hostility, verbal or otherwise, towards any law enforcement, or even a philosophical view that would suggest that.

He talked about the members of MOVE like people. Family members. Like they should have been talked about. The media talked about them like they were from Mars or something. They were sons and daughters of people, you know. And Mumia approached that when he reported about them. He kind of was conscious, I mean he reminded people that people that were unlike the standard group are people too.

So I don't know, I just, you know, as all this occurred, in my mind I thought a million times about, you know, this whole preoccupation with philosophical and some bent on hurting law enforcement or whatever. And I don't remember ever, ever, ever hearing that or having a discussion with Mumia or other people where that came up or that was principal or centerpiece as he has been treated in many news stories since this occurred.

MR. WILLIAMS: Mr. Collins, thank you very much.

MR. GRANT: May I, Your Honor?

CROSS-EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Good morning, Mr. Collins.

A. Good morning.

Q. I have heard your voice many times.

A. Thank you.

Q. I heard your broadcasts myself. So I will take your word as to the immense talents of Mr. Jamal. You say that you were with Mr. Jamal on the night that the shooting occurred?

A. Yeah, he was at my house, my apartment. He stopped by. I don't remember exactly the time but he stopped by. We, we had dinner. There were some other people there. And it was a great, a great evening. Anytime Mumia was around it was a great evening.

Q. Do you know or do you recall how he arrived there, that is by --

A. No, I don't know the mode of transportation, if that's what you mean.

Q. And was his brother there also: Billy?

A. No, he was not.

Q. You indicated, sir, that because you were having a good-natured competition with Mr. Jamal for breaking news stories that you both had police scanners?

A. That's right.

Q. Did he have a police scanner that night?

A. Umm, I don't remember. We didn't -- this was some time, this was some time from those days. When we had all that kind of thing going on, we lived for radio news. And there was very little else going on. That night I don't -- we got into a discussion with Milton Street on politics and world events and that's the focus of it and so we were not preoccupied with local, current-breaking stories.

Q. Now, you knew Mr. Jamal from his efforts at his work, his obviously talented journalistic voice, and his activism at WPEN, WHAT, WDAS, and WKBU?

A. KDU. And WHYY, and on broadcasts for National Public Radio, for the National Black Network. A variety of other outlets.

Q. Do you know whether or not on the evening that he came to your house before the shooting is alleged to have occurred, whether he was employed at any of these radio stations?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Now, since he had such wide-based support and such an impact on the community, there is no question that hundreds of people could have occupied your position in that had they been asked they would have testified on his behalf, I assume. Did you make any effort to contact Mr. Jamal and tell him I'm here for you if you need me, or I'm willing to come to Court and testify for you?

A. I never verbalized that phrase but if you needed me I would. And again, I knew Tony Jackson. And I'm sure Tony had my home number, so.

Q. Did you ever contact Mr. Jackson and tell him I think I have uniquely insightful information about Mr. Jamal, about his character?

A. I don't, I don't remember, I really and truly don't. I believe during that period I had some conversations with Tony, but I do not remember the specific nature of what we talked about.

Q. Is it implicit within your testimony, Mr. Collins, that Mr. Jackson should be faulted because you didn't testify on behalf of Mr. Jamal?

A. I don't know that --

MR. WILLIAMS: Objection.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: I don't know that I should. I don't know. I don't know in the sense that I don't know all the facts and I don't know exactly what in fact he did do. And then I don't know at what point Mumia expected him not to represent him. So I don't know. I really don't know.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Were you working at WDAS from December of '81 up through July of '82?

A. Yes.

Q. Was Mr. Jamal working there at that time with you?

A. December of '81 through... no, he was not.

Q. When had he last been employed there with you?

A. I don't remember exactly the date he was, he was working. I kind of felt that I should pay him back for helping me get to WHAT. So he was not working, I talked to our general manager about him working at WDAS, which occurred for a period of time, I don't know the exact dates, but.

Q. Also you were instrumental in him working at WDAS?

A. I would like to think so, yeah.

Q. And when he left that employment, was that by mutual consent?

A. I suppose. I don't know, I wasn't involved. I didn't hire him and I wasn't his supervisor.

Q. I see.

A. I was just a person who thought that he was extraordinary. And after they heard him they agreed and he was on the air. I don't know if he took another job because it was a better position or why he did that.

Q. On the night that you saw him on the night of the tragic events that later transpired, were you aware or did you know that he was driving cabs at that time for a living?

A. No, I didn't know.

Q. Did you or have you contributed efforts, whether they be journalistic, social, activism, or money, prior to the date of Mr. Jamal's conviction, to his defense effort?

Page 103.

A. Yeah. You could say that.

Q. Money?

A. No.

MR. GRANT: Thank you, sir.

THE WITNESS: You're welcome.

MR. GRANT: Excuse me, if I may, Your Honor, with the Court's indulgence. I have nothing further.

MR. WILLIAMS: Nothing further, Your Honor. Thank you, Mr. Collins.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, the Petitioner now calls Ken Hamilton.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, if this is a non-affidavit-bearing witness, I would stipulate that they would be available to testify and would have been so inclined had they been called. However, Mr. Hamilton, like the last witness, and, I assume, the next witness, under the rules of the Post-Conviction Relief Act, I believe has to be an affiant.

And I will stipulate to his testimony, Counselor, if that's what you would like on the record, but I would object to him testifying.

MR. WILLIAMS: We decline the invitation for the stipulation. We appreciate the offer but we believe that his testimony, the substance of his testimony is vital for our Petition.

THE COURT: Vital?

MR. WILLIAMS: It is now the first time they are raising the issue of the affidavits. We initially told the Court that there was this rule of an affidavit, and that we would need time to prepare affidavits.

MR. GRANT: I raised it last week, if you recall, Judge. I said I would be asking you to entertain a motion to preclude those witnesses who did not have supporting material.

THE COURT: What he wants to know is what's he going to say.

MR. WILLIAMS: Okay, I will tell him.

Mr. Hamilton was Mr. Jamal's high school history teacher. And he became friends with Mr. Jamal in connection with that teacher-student relationship. And he will describe in considerable detail about that relationship. And again it goes to the mitigation phase of the trial.

MR. GRANT: Counsel would be considered ineffective if his testimony was not forthcoming, so rather than have a third issue I am going to remove my objection from the record.

THE COURT: Okay.

Kenneth Hamilton, Junior, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

- - - - -

DIRECT EXAMINATION

MR. WILLIAMS: May I inquire, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. WILLIAMS: Thank you.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Mr. Hamilton, good morning. Or good afternoon.

A. Good afternoon.

Q. I appreciate you coming in. Do you live here in the City of Philadelphia?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. How long have you lived here?

A. 53 years.

Q. All right. Are you employed?

A. Yes.

Q. Where are you employed?

A. Philadelphia School District, Benjamin Franklin High School.

Q. What you do you do at that school?

A. For the last 30 years I have been a history teacher, and basketball coach for the last 24 years.

Q. Now, you're aware of why you have been asked to testify here?

A. Yes.

Q. You know that Mr. Jamal has filed a Petition for a new trial?

A. Yes.

Q. And have you and I met?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. When, how many times have we met?

A. Once.

Q. Once. And when was that?

A. Last Monday, I think it was Monday or Tuesday, I guess.

Q. Of last week?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And you know Mr. Jamal, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And you knew him back in 1982?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And were you aware that back in 1982 he was charged with a crime here in Philadelphia?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And you were aware that he went to trial?

A. Yes.

Q. On charges?

A. Yes.

Q. Right. Did you attend any of those proceedings, Mr. Hamilton?

A. No, I did not.

Q. You were aware that those proceedings were occurring at the time?

A. Yes.

Q. How did you know that they were occurring?

A. Through the news and other past students that I had who also knew, students that went to school with Mumia who also knew that I was familiar with him, that I was keeping up with him, and the news, that's how I was aware.

Q. Was there any impediment, any illness or anything that would have prevented you from coming to this Courthouse to testify had you been asked?

A. None whatsoever.

Q. Would there have been any reluctance on your part to come in and testify on Mr. Jamal's behalf?

A. None whatsoever.

Q. Now, did you know the attorney who was appointed to represent Mr. Jamal?

A. Just through I heard his name, who this was, yes.

Q. His name was Mr. Jackson?

A. Jackson, yes.

Q. Okay. Had you had any discussions with Mr. Jackson or anybody affiliated with Mr. Jackson about the possibility of your testifying?

A. No.

Q. Nobody ever contacted you?

A. No one.

Q. Now, can you tell us when you first met Mr. Jamal?

A. 1969, 1968. As a student of mine at Ben Franklin High School.

Q. What class was that?

A. History.

Q. You were teaching history?

A. Yes.

Q. And he was a student?

A. Yes.

Page 109.

Kenneth Hamilton, Jr. - Direct

Q. How long did it take you to take notice of him as a young, as an adolescent?

A. The first day that we ever met. The first day of class.

Q. The first day of class?

A. Yes.

Q. What was it about the first day of class, Mr. Hamilton, that made you aware of Mr. Jamal's presence?

A. I was impressed by his intelligence, his sincerity, he was very well read for a young man of his age and he stood out as far as the rest of the class.

Q. You could tell that on the first day?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Now, over the course of time as you were teaching history in that class, did your impression of him as a student change at all?

A. No, it got, I was even more impressed as we got to know each other.

Q. Can you share with us, Mr. Jackson, what kind of student he was? Mr. Hamilton, I'm sorry.

A. Yes, he's very intelligent. You can see that he had been, that he was well-read. And outspoken. He voiced his opinions. His opinions were usually based on facts. Which a lot of young people at his age, they have a lot of opinions but many of them are not basing it on what they read. And that stood out.

Page 110.

Kenneth Hamilton, Jr. - Direct

And also we used to use Mumia, or it was Wesley then, as a student-mediator. Because in those days at Ben Franklin High School we used to have a lot of mobs with gangs and gang war. And Mumia was very good with his peers. And as a matter of fact, when we heard that there might be a gang problem, because Mumia lived in the area where one of those gangs came from, we used to use Mumia to help keep calm, and he had a very calming effect on his peers.

Q. Now, you said that he was well-read?

A. Yes.

Q. As a teacher of high school students, do you feel that you're in a position to detect when a student is well-read?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you look for to determine whether a student is well-read?

A. What they are basing their opinions and statements on. And just whether they make sense as far as experiences beyond their neighborhood and the things that are in the immediate environment.

Page 111.

Kenneth Hamilton, Jr. - Direct

Q. Did you have the benefit of reading any of Mr. Jamal's writings as a tenth grade student in your class?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the quality of his writing?

A. Oh, excellent. You could see that this, he was different, he was someone that had a lot to offer.

Q. A lot to offer. What do you mean by that?

A. Well, he would impress his peers. Once again, especially the gang members, he could really make them feel bad about wanting to kill each other and beat each other up and things like that. He would put things on their minds. The same things we as adults do, but coming from their peers it would be more meaningful.

Q. He was able to communicate with these gang members, as you described them, through words?

A. Yes.

Q. And you said that he was outspoken, you used the word outspoken?

A. Yes.

Q. That has many connotations. What was the kind of tone, tenor of his outspokenness?

A. It was one of calming. And when I say

Page 112.

Kenneth Hamilton, Jr. - Direct

outspoken, unfortunately, many of my students, they're ashamed of good deeds. They are ashamed of speaking out and being known as someone that is good with words and has read. And when I say outspoken, Mumia has never been ashamed of that fact. He was proud of that. And that's one of the things that we try and work with to get many of our young people to be proud of those types of endeavors.

Q. Now, you said that he had a skill in dealing with these gang members?

A. Yeah.

Q. Was that skill known to other faculty members at Ben Franklin?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it ever a subject of discussion?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you share that with us?

A. Well, I was dean of students at that time. And I would have many meetings with the principal and vice-principal and other people in charge. And any time that I would bring up or one of them would bring up the fact that we thought Mumia might be able to help us again with one of these conciliatory jobs, there was never any doubt that's what we should do.

Q. Wait a minute, Mr. Hamilton. You are saying

Page 113.

Kenneth Hamilton, Jr. - Direct

that teachers would meet and discuss using Mr. Jamal, a tenth-grade student, to help with some of the problems in the school?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that unusual?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you ever met a student quite like Mr. Jamal?

A. Not quite like, but fortunately, because I have been there for so long, there have been a few of us who have come along like him. But there is a very small group.

Q. It is a unique group?

A. Yes.

Q. A select group?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, speaking now about back when you were teaching him as a tenth-grade student, did you have expectations of him as a teacher?

A. Yes.

Q. To go on after graduating from high school?

A. Yes.

Q. What kind of expectations did you have of him?

A. Well, college just seemed to be the natural progression. And when he showed interest in journalism and those areas, doing some of the things that he accomplished on the radio, and in the news, and, well, we helped send him to Goddard to, you know, to pursue his journalistic skills.

Q. Goddard is a post-high school institution?

A. Yes.

Q. Why did you believe that he would ultimately make a success of himself in this career choice of his?

A. Because he, he was sincere, he was serious. You know, it was something that he really was going to work at and he had already proven to me that those types, those things that you really wanted to do like that, that he had the ability to accomplish them.

Q. As a teacher, do you believe that discipline is an important quality in a student?

A. Yes. Very important.

Q. Did Mr. Jamal have that quality?

A. Yes, he, he was able as begin as a young person, just the fact that he would spend as much time reading and discussing shows discipline that I wish that many more of my students would use in those areas.

Q. When you remember teaching Mumia in a class, did Mr. Jamal ever ask questions or contribute comments?

A. Constantly.

Q. Constantly?

A. Yes.

Q. How did the other students react to that?

A. In the beginning there would be a murmur as to why doesn't he shut up like the rest of us. But after, you know, maybe a couple of days, then they would also be impressed and they would almost look forward to it. Sometimes I am not sure if they wanted to hear him or me.

Q. Share with us if you can, Mr. Hamilton, how he related to those students?

A. It would be in intellectual terms and in sharing with them many of the ideas out of his readings, and the fact that he was further advanced educationally than most of his peers and he was very willing to share in these ideas. And again it would, he had a calming, you know, his voice, his demeanor was very calming to the rest of his peers.

Q. Did he ever appear to gloat over the fact that he had this intelligence?

A. No, he was just very eager to share.

Q. Now, what about Mr. Jamal's leadership qualities, did you get a sense as to whether he had any innate abilities as a leader?

A. Yes, very much so. Because usually the, the leaders of that age group, as unfortunately many of the young people that come from Mumia's neighborhood, the leaders aren't positive. So that's the reason. And they don't get away with -- there might be other young leaders of young people in a positive way, but they didn't have the skills to get away with it. And that was what made me realize that Mumia was a very strong, you know, leader and someone who could gain respect through education.

Q. Are there any examples, Mr. Hamilton, that could illustrate what you are saying, that he had these abilities as a leader?

A. The fact that he could talk gang members out of a gang war. And the fact that he was overwhelmingly elected the president of our school, so.

Q. Mr. Jamal was elected president of the school?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he perform in that role at the school?

A. Yes.

Q. And how did he perform as the president of the school?

A. Very strong. And, again, someone who the students knew that through, by following him, they, the administration would also be, it was a good, it was a good combination.

Q. Was the administration satisfied with him as the president of the school?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he ever give any speeches as the president of the school?

A. Yes.

Q. How did he give those speeches?

A. Dynamic. Because he's a good speaker. Usually, you know, in our student leader and faculty meetings he was able to get the program and/or things that we wanted across over to the young people.

Q. Was there anything in your experience with Mr. Jamal that would lead you to believe that he is a violent person or has a tendency towards violence?

A. No.

Q. Would you say that everything you have known about this man and his relationship to humanity points in the opposite direction, would you agree with that?

A. I don't understand.

Q. Would you agree that everything that you know about him and his relationship to humanity at large points in the opposite direction, away from violence, would you agree with that?

A. Yes, yes.

Q. Mr. Hamilton, do you only know Mr. Mumia in your capacity as a teacher in his history class?

A. No.

Q. How else do you know him?

A. We became friends.

Q. You did?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you start developing a friendship with him?

A. Class and a friendship too and it lasted. Based mainly, I would say, without us really being together. By that I mean we developed a friendship that is the kind of friendship we don't have to really see each other to know that we're thinking and we're friends.

Q. There is just that kind of special bond that people could have?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever associate with Mr. Jamal outside of the classroom?

A. Yes.

Q. Outside of the schoolyard?

A. Yes.

Q. What kind of, can you tell us about that?

A. We would go to meetings, African-American awareness programs and things like that. We would discuss various issues. And this was after he --

Q. After he left your class?

A. Yeah.

Q. Okay. And in your experience, experiences with Mr. Jamal, did you get a sense of what he found important in life?

A. Yes.

Q. What kind of things from your perspective did he find important in life?

A. Humanity. And people just getting along with one another and understanding one another. And also African Americans especially becoming aware of our history and those types of things.

Q. Did Mr. Jamal have an interest in politics?

A. Yes.

Q. When did that manifest itself, in your experience with him?

A. I would say as a young student.

Q. As a student in your class?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that unusual, for a tenth grader to have an interest in politics?

A. In those days, no.

Q. That was the climate that he lived in?

A. Yes.

Q. What about his dedication to his home community, to Philadelphia and to Philadelphians?

A. Oh, very much so.

Q. He had a strong dedication to that?

A. Yes.

Q. How did that show itself?

A. In his willingness to attend meetings and lead student workshops and those things. And he never got paid.

Q. He never got what?

A. Paid. A salary. And was always willing and able to participate whenever asked.

Q. Would you say that one of his outstanding qualities is the fact that he is a sharing person?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you ever seen his relationship with his family?

A. Yes.

Q. How did you get to see that?

A. Well, because we had a relationship beyond -- excuse me -- beyond the classroom. Sometimes I would even take him home or go home with him after some of these meetings, and I was very impressed with his relationship with his mother and his entire family.

Q. What impressed you about his relationship with his mother?

A. Well, again, a lot of young people at his age I didn't think had feeling or -- he wanted to help and he did help and he tried to help. Because just before I met him his father died and it seemed as though he took it on himself to fill the void that was left in the family to help his mother. Because of what had happened.

Q. Is Mr. Jamal the kind of person who could express his emotions to other people?

A. Yes. Which is also unusual for, at that point at that time Ben Franklin only had males. And that was very unusual for a young male to be able to show that.

Q. And Mr. Jamal was different in that respect?

A. Yes.

Q. What about the showing of his emotions towards his mother?

A. Yes.

Q. It was apparent to anybody who witnessed it?

A. Yes.

Page 122.

Q. Did you know that he had a twin brother?

A. Yes. He attended Ben Franklin High School.

Q. Ahh, so you knew his twin brother?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know what kind of relationship he had with his twin brother?

A. Yes.

Q. Tell us about it?

A. He was helpful, supportive. Again, he was more well-read and he had more of an interest, Mumia had more of an interest in school and education than his twin brother. And he would try and help and share.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time among defense Counsel.)

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Did you know that his twin brother went on to a career in the military?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you know that he was successful in his endeavors?

A. Yes.

Q. And yet you are saying, in your opinion -- and I know it is subjective -- but is Mr. Jamal more talented?

Page 123.

A. Educationally --

Q. Educationally speaking, yes.

A. Yes.

Q. And as a teacher looking at the two twin brothers, did you have a sense as to who had more potential to success? I know that is a difficult question, but as a teacher.

A. Well, in education, in academia.

Q. Yes.

A. I would say Mumia.

Q. Mumia did?

A. In academia, yeah.

Q. And did he, besides the intellectual capacity, the intellectual appetite that would lead towards success, did he have other characteristics that are important to success in life?

A. Well, he was, Mumia seems, just in knowing both of them, was more capable of showing his feelings and emotions and his love. And I think sometimes it might even have irritated his brother sometimes.

Q. Was there any competition between the two?

A. Ahh, the normal as twins, yeah, the normal competition between siblings, yes.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time among Defense counsel.)

Page 124.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Now, you knew that the baby of the family was Billy Cook?

A. Yes; he also attended Ben Franklin High School.

Q. Did you have the opportunity to see how Mr. Jamal related with the baby of the family?

A. Yes; Mumia took the position of his father.

Q. He did?

A. And the younger one, Mumia was already out of school, and Mumia used to be the parent who would come to school. Maybe because he was the youngest, Billy developed an attendance problem. And when I got word to Mumia, Mumia was there instantly to try and find out how we could solve this problem of his younger problem not coming to school.

Q. In much the same way that a concerned parent would?

A. Yes.

Q. By the way, do you recognize the name Charles Tomczak?

A. As a student at Ben Franklin High School, yes.

Q. Was he white or was he an African American?

A. He was white.

Page 125.

Kenneth Hamilton, Jr. - Direct

Q. Why is it that you could recognize his name?

A. Because I think in my 30 years, I think we've had four white students.

Q. Is there anything in your entire experience with Mr. Jamal that would give you any hesitation to testify in front of a penalty-phase Jury as you have just done?

A. None.

MR. GRANT: One moment, Mr. Hamilton.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time among Defense Counsel.)

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. I'm sorry, let me go back to Mr. Tomczak, Charles Tomczak, who was a student at Ben Franklin.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember if he was a student at around the time that Mr. Jamal was a student?

A. Now, I can't, I can't say, I've had a lot.

Q. A lot of students?

A. I have had a lot of students. Around... In the late '60s or early '7Os, somewhere in there, but I couldn't say exact.

Q. Okay. Is it at least possible, then, in the four-years that there would have been some overlap?

A. Yeah.

Page 126.

Kenneth Hamilton, Jr. - Direct

MR. GRANT: Objection as to what is possible, Your Honor. Move to strike the answer.

MR. WILLIAMS: Is Your Honor granting the objection?

THE COURT: What was that objection? I couldn't hear you.

MR. GRANT: He asked the witness is it possible that another student who attended the school possibly may have known Mr. Jamal. I am moving to strike it as speculative.

THE COURT: Well, I will have to sustain that. That is real speculative. Anything is possible.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. When Mr. Jamal was a student at Benjamin Franklin, was he a well-known student?

A. Yes.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time among Defense Counsel.)

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, just for the record: I have made reference to a name Charles Tomczak with the witness. And he is or was a member of the Jury during the trial, the guilt phase and the penalty phase. I just note it for the record for the benefit of Your Honor.

Your witness.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Good morning, Mr. Hamilton.

A. Good morning.

Q. Did Mr. Jamal graduate from Benjamin Franklin?

A. No.

Q. Where did he graduate from, if you know?

A. He took a G.E.D.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, I'm sorry to interrupt. Just if I may through the Court request that Mr. Grant speak a little louder for the Court.

THE COURT: He wants you to speak a little louder. Oh, you.

MR. WILLIAMS: Mr. Grant, he doesn't have the microphone.

THE COURT: If you have any influence on that crowd, it would be good if you just talk to them.

MR. WILLIAMS: I understand.

Page 128.

Kenneth Hamilton, Jr. - Cross

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Mr. Jamal dropped out of school?

A. Yes.

Q. What grade, sir?

A. The eleventh or twelfth.

Q. And though he dropped out of school he had other high school teachers at Benjamin Franklin High School, I presume?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever confer with them or discuss Mr. Jamal with these other teachers?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you know if even one of them testified at the murder trial that occurred in 1982?

A. Did I know -- 1 don't think any teacher from Benjamin Franklin or any other representative of Benjamin Franklin High School participated in that trial.

Q. And would it be fair to say based on your knowledge of those teachers and Mr. Jamal's interaction with them, that all of them would have come to Court and testified on his behalf?

A. No, I don't know if all -- I don't know.

Q. Okay. Of the ones that you came in contact with and with whom you discussed Mr. Jamal?

A. Oh, yes.

Page 129.

Kenneth Hamilton, Jr. - Cross

Q. Okay. And do you know whether you contacted Mr. Anthony Jackson to let him know of your sentiments and that you wished to testify for Mr. Jamal?

A. Did I contact Mr. Jackson?

Q. Yes.

A. No, but I did ask another person to ask Mr. Jackson if I or anyone else were needed.

Q. Who was that, sir?

A. His name is Ron White.

Q. Ron White?

A. Yes.

Q. Attorney Ron White?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he ever get back to you? Mr. White, that is.

A. No, as to what happened when he talked to Mr. Jackson, no.

Q. You are assuming that he talked to Mr. Jackson?

A. He told me he talked to Mr. Jackson.

Q. And did he say what his response was?

A. No, he just said because he is an attorney just -- oh, no, I don't know what the response was.

Q. Did you ever visit Mr. Jamal while he was awaiting trial on the murder charges?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever contact him by phone or any other medium of communication?

A. No. But again, I did speak to Mr. White as to if I would be needed or I was available or if anyone else was.

Q. Mr. Jamal knew where you lived, did he not?

A. Yeah.

Q. And he knew how to get in touch with you if he needed you, right?

A. I -- yes.

Q. Did he get in touch with you asking you to be a witness for him?

A. At that point, no.

Q. Where is Goddard, sir, and what is Goddard?

A. It's a, it's in Massachusetts. Connecticut. It's in New England.

Q. Okay.

A. It is a university for what I guess is a standard university but also is for, we got Mumia in because he could take an entrance exam without having a problem.

Q. I see. It is a four-year institution, is it not?

Page 131.

A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Jamal did not graduate from Goddard, did he?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Now, you knew his brother. Billy Cook?

A. Yes.

Q. The baby of the family?

A. Yes.

Q. And you knew his twin brother Wayne?

A. Yes.

Q. Wayne, Wesley?

A. Yes.

Q. That's how you knew him, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And you indicated that Mr. Jamal had a paternal instinct when it came to the baby of the family, as he did for all his siblings, because he was --

A. I know his support for Billy and Wayne.

Q. In what way, sir?

A. When you said paternal.

Q. And when you say you noticed it more for Billy, in what way did it manifest itself? I know it is a difficult question, if you could answer it.

A. Okay, again, I mentioned that he showed up as his family member when there was a problem or when he needed to see a parent. He went and visited his other teachers other than me to find out what work was missing and how Billy could begin to pass and be on schedule as far as his education is concerned.

Q. To your knowledge, did Billy have any problems physically with the other boys in the school, that he would get in fights?

A. Not that I could remember, no. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Do you ever recall Mr. Jamal coming to his defense in a situation that may have resulted in physical violence?

A. No.

Q. And you found out about the murder trial from news accounts and student gossip, so to speak?

A. Yes.

Q. And you did not attend one of the proceedings?

A. No.

Q. And you did not attend the penalty phase of the hearings?

A. No. One of the, well, in following this in the press and being interested and concerned, I didn't even know if I could get in. There was a lot of commotion.

Page 133.

Q. Yes. Like today.

A. Yes.

Q. So you didn't attend?

A. They didn't want to let me in today.

Q. I understand that. So you didn't attend the preliminary hearing either?

A. No.

Q. And you didn't attend the bail hearing?

A. No.

Q. And you didn't go to the homicide calendar room?

A. The...?

Q. Homicide calendar room. It is a courtroom like this but they don't have trials.

A. No, no.

Q. They schedule the cases to go to trial.

A. No, no.

MR. GRANT: Thank you very much, Mr. Hamilton.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Mr. Hamilton, very briefly. You mentioned that Mr. Jamal dropped out of school.

Page 134.

A. Yes.

Q. Did that indicate to you an inability to do the work in the school?

A. None whatsoever.

Q. What did it, what did it tell you about Mr. Jamal, the fact that he dropped out of Benjamin Franklin?

A. In discussing and talking to him, he was so sincere about many of the things that he wanted to help people with that he thought at that point it was more important than to finish his education. And I think also that he thought that it would be kind of easy to make it up, because he, you know, that he was ahead of the rest of the students.

Q. Did you ever meet people who believe that the world was their classroom?

A. Yes.

Q. Was Mr. Jamal that type of person?

A. Yes.

Q. Now going back to 1982, where --

MR. WILLIAMS: Withdrawn. No further questions. Thank you, Mr. Hamilton.

MR. GRANT: I have no redirect. Thank you, sir.

Page 135.

THE COURT: Okay. All right, I think this may be a good spot to recess for lunch until...

MR. GRANT: We may have --

THE COURT: 2:15.

MR. GRANT: Do you think we could have a short lunch today, Your Honor, because there are so many witnesses who are not affiants I have a feeling that we won't be able to reach the witnesses that we should in order to get this thing done.

THE COURT: All right, two o'clock. If it's all right with you it's all right with me.

MR. GRANT: Very well, Your Honor.

THE COURT OFFICER: This Court now stands for a luncheon recess until 2:00 p.m. this afternoon.

- - - - -

(Luncheon recess was held until 2:40 p.m.)

- - - - -

THE COURT: Good afternoon, everyone.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, before we proceed with the next witness I have a couple of small matters. Not so small matters, actually.

First of all, I want to indicate to the Court that an attorney from the City Solicitor's Office was here this morning and she was prepared to turn over a copy of the Medical Examiner's file per the subpoena that was served on them. However, Mr. Grant, I'm told, refused to participate in that and we're going to be taking it up, therefore, with arguments later this afternoon when they return. So I want to indicate to the Court that we will have to interrupt the witnesses in order to hear whatever argument there is going to be on that subpoena as well as an answer to the various police subpoenas.

I am also told the attorney from the City is going, or the Police Department will be returning this afternoon to deal with that.

Okay, then the next matter, Your Honor, is the question of Jeannette Patton sitting at Counsel's table. I want to correct Your Honor's statement about Jeanette Patton creating a disturbance during Mr. Jamal's trial. As a matter of fact --

Page 137.

THE COURT: I am talking about the first trial, not this trial.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I understand that, I want to correct that misrepresentation. Miss Patton was never ejected from this Courtroom. She never caused a disruption. She was in fact assigned by yourself to be a legal runner for Mr. Jamal and never once was she involved in any disruption of the Court proceedings.

THE COURT: Okay, the next witness.

MR. WILLIAMS: Good afternoon, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Good afternoon.

MR. WILLIAMS: The Petitioner now calls to the stand Lydia Wallace.

- - - - -

Lydia Wallace, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

MR. WILLIAMS: May I inquire, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. WILLIAMS: Thank you.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

Lydia Wallace - Direct

- - - - -

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Good afternoon, Miss Wallace.

A. Good afternoon.

Q. Do you live here in the City of Philadelphia, Miss Wallace?

A. Yes, I do, I live in the East Mount Airy section of Philadelphia.

Q. How long have you lived in Philadelphia?

A. All of my life.

Q. And are you a working woman? I mean do you work?

A. I better, yes. I do.

Q. How are you employed?

A. I am a licensed practical nurse and I am also a director of social services for mentally retarded and mentally ill.

Q. How long have you been working in that area?

A. I have been working with the mentally ill and mentally retarded since 1988. Prior to that I did practical nursing for about 12 years.

Q. Can you tell us a little bit about your educational background?

A. Sure. I graduated from the Board of Education School of Nursing and I worked at nursing for a few years and I decided that I wanted to do a little more. I went back to school, to Antioch University. I got a BA degree in human services and administration. I am also certified in fitness and nutrition.

Page 139.

Lydia Wallace - Direct

Q. Are you a member of any community organizations?

A. Any what kind of organization?

Q. Community organizations. Or professional organization.

A. I am on the board of directors of the Philadelphia Black Womens' Health Group Project and treasurer. I have been a Democratic committeewoman for the past several years, until I moved recently where I am now. And I am not affiliated in my community where I am but I will be.

Q. And now you are aware this proceeding concerns a Petition that has been filed by Mr. Jamal for a new trial.

A. Yes, I understand that.

Q. All right. And have you consulted with any members of Petitioner's legal team in connection with testifying today?

A. I met with you twice and that was to tell me what was going to happen, what kind of proceedings

Page 140.

Lydia Wallace - Direct

this was. And how I could be utilized in the procedure.

Q. Okay. Do you remember how many times you met with me, Miss Wallace?

A. Twice.

Q. Do you remember when you met with me?

A. Umm, I met you last night and I met with you one day last week, I can't remember the exact day.

Q. Fair enough. Did you also sign an affidavit that was used in connection with this Petition?

A. Yes. I signed that affidavit more than likely, yes.

Q. You had dealings with Mr. Weinglass in executing that affidavit?

A. Yes, I did. Hmm-hmm.

Q. By the way, have you had occasions to review that affidavit?

A. Yes, you sent me a copy of it so I would, you know, know -- well, I wrote it. Once I had it notarized and sent to him, he sent me a copy.

Q. Okay. The completed, executed draft?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, Miss Wallace, do you know this man sitting here (indicating)?

A. Sure; that's my kid brother Mumia.

Page 141.

Lydia Wallace - Direct

Q. That's your brother?

A. Yeah.

Q. So obviously you knew him back in 1982?

A. Definitely, yeah.

Q. Were you aware that your brother was under indictment in 1982?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. How did you become aware of that?

A. Well, I was here during the trial. I sat through the trial and everything so I knew what was going on. I had occasion to speak with Tony Jackson. My family has been involved all along, so I knew what was going on.

Q. You mentioned Tony Jackson. Who is Tony Jackson?

A. He was a Court-appointed attorney that Mumia had in 1982.

Q. Did you know him personally?

A. Umm, I had the occasion to talk with him, like after Court sessions. He also visited my mother's home to speak with my mother on a few occasions. And I had an opportunity to interact with him, yes.

Q. By the way, is your mother still living?

A. No, my mother died in February of 1990.

Q. Did your mother attend any of the proceedings?

Page 142.

Lydia Wallace - Direct

A. Yes, my mother and I, I pretty much came with my mother because she was ill at the time. For myself also but she attended everyday. And I attended almost everyday, because I had to work on some occasions, but she was here.

Q. And while you were here in Court during those proceedings, did you have any opportunities to discuss the proceedings or what was happening in the proceedings with Mr. Jackson?

A. On occasion Mr. Jackson would talk to us after the Court had dismissed for the day. And he would pull us aside and try to explain to us what had happened that day in case we didn't understand the legal proceedings or the legal jargon. Because this was our first time of being in a courtroom so we didn't understand everything that was going on and he would explain to us what was happening.

Q. So, Miss Wallace, is it fair to say that you relied to a large extent on Mr. Jackson's explanations to help you understand what was happening on a daily basis?

A. Definitely, because we just did not understand what was going on in the Courtroom. More especially the jargon and just how things transpired during the day.

Page 143.

Lydia Wallace - Direct

Q. Did Mr. Jackson ever explain to you that in a capital case, that is in a death penalty case, that the trial is divided into two phases, a guilt phase and a penalty phase?

A. Yes, he did explain that to us.

Q. And did he explain to you after a guilt phase, if there is a finding of guilt on a murder count, that the case would then proceed to a penalty phase, did he explain that to you?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. Okay. And did he explain to you what was involved in a penalty phase?

A. I, I don't remember him really detailing it, I can't recall.

Q. Do you remember any discussions along the lines that there would be testimony at a penalty phase?

A. No, I don't remember hearing that.

Q. Now, I take it because you were present at much of the proceedings that you were available to testify at a penalty phase proceeding if you had been asked; is that right?

A. Oh, definitely. I was there, I was willing to do whatever I could do. I was never asked.

Q. As you sit here today, is there anything that

Page 144.

Lydia Wallace - Direct

as far as you can tell would have prevented you from testifying or would have made you reluctant to testify?

A. Heck, no. Excuse me. No.

Q. And did Mr. Jackson at any point approach you or your mother about testifying at the penalty phase?

A. He didn't, he never approached me. I can not say that he approached my mother, but my mother never discussed that with me, that he did or he didn't.

Q. In any event, he never approached you?

A. No.

Q. He never discussed with you the possibility of testifying, did he?

A. No.

Q. By the way, did you ever have any role in the proceedings other than as an observer?

A. No, I was always just an observer.

Q. Now let me move on to questions about the Cook family, okay. Can you explain to us what was the structure of the Cook family?

For the record: The Cook family is the family of Mumia Abu-Jamal.

A. My stepfather and mother. I have five brothers, I have one older than myself. One brother. Younger than me, the twins, which included Mumia, and

Page 145.

Lydia Wallace - Direct

the baby brother.

Q. And the baby brother is Billy Cook?

A. Billy.

Q. And then the next in age is Mumia?

A. Is Mumia. His twin.

Q. His twin is Wayne?

A. His twin is Wayne, yes.

Q. What is Wayne doing now?

A. Wayne is a career serviceman. He's out of the States right now. Has been for all of the time this has been going on. He's been in the military. And then our oldest brother is in the military, has been, now he is a retired sergeant. And they haven't been here.

Q. I want to direct your attention to when Mumia was a child, okay. How would you characterize during that time period in his life the closeness of the family? Do you understand what I'm asking?

A. You say as children?

Q. Yes, the children and your relationship with your parents among yourselves, how would you characterize the family?

A. Well, we, we were, I guess you would call us a typical family. We lived in public housing. Low income family. Very Southern Baptist mother, very strict. We had to be in the house by eight o'clock. We weren't allowed to go outside the boundaries of the public housing until we got a certain age. We had dinner at five o'clock every night. Dishes had to be done by six o'clock. You know, very, very strict.

Page 146.

Lydia Wallace - Direct

My mother, the neighbors would tell you my mother would come to the door and holler out her children's name in order and call them in. And we would just take our baths one at a time as long as the water would stay hot. The rest of us would watch TV while everybody took a bath. But we usually were in bed by 9:30, ten o'clock at night. Mom was pretty, she was a spiritual woman, she was a real straight Southern Baptist woman. Most of the time, maybe I had some girls sitting on the front step. I guess you would say, if I had to compare it to some of the families I worked for, today we would be pretty nerdy.

Q. Pretty nerdy?

A. Yeah, just a normal family.

Q. I hear you saying that it was kind of a regimented lifestyle?

A. Oh, real structured. I mean, you know, like Mom was involved in neighborhood things, like she was in PTA. We also belonged to the Friends Neighborhood Guild, which was a Quaker organization that offered social activities for the neighborhood. Mom would go to pottery classes and sewing classes and we would go to TV classes or Cub Scouts. We were involved in neighborhood kinds of things. My mother was, she was a poll watcher and Judge of Elections and, you know, she got involved in everything in the neighborhood. So we were really watched and nurtured by the neighborhood people.

Q. Did your younger brother during his early years in life ever rebel against this regimentation, the oversight that your mom provided to the children?

A. No, you didn't rebel against Edith. You didn't play that game. No, we didn't do that. We would never think about rebelling against parents, it's just, you just didn't do that.

Q. Now, you mentioned, I think I heard it right, you said that your mother was active with the Friends Neighborhood Guild. Is that --

A. It is a Quaker organization located at 8th and Fairmount Avenue and they have a lot of social activities, like arts class. Art classes, pottery classes, sewing classes. When I got older I taught a teen class in aerobics and sewing. You know, it was a neighborhood community center. You did a lot of things out of there.

Q. And was Mumia involved at all with this Quaker organization?

A. Yeah, we all, we all grew up through that. I remember Mumia used to go out to art classes. They also had a library there, there was a librarian named Mrs. Hurley. And he used to spend a lot of time over there in the library. He spent a lot of time reading during that time.

Q. During your exposure to this organization, the Friends Neighborhood Guild, did you come to understand what, what Quakers were all about?

A. No, they didn't too much -- I guess a lot of the people that were on the board of directors were Quakers. They didn't as much interact with us. They had program people that came in and taught the classes. So I don't think, except for the Quakers that lived in the neighborhood and were on the board of directors, we didn't have that much interaction with Quakers. It was a United Way agency, funded agency. So we didn't have that much interaction with them, except the ones that lived in the neighborhood.

Q. Did Mumia seem to enjoy spending time there as a child?

Page 149.

A. We all did. You know, that was our life. We lived in public housing and outside of public housing there was this guild; that was our only occupation besides 4th and Fairmount, which would be a Department of Recreation swimming pool. And we would go down there. But we weren't allowed outside of that boundary of our neighborhood.

Q. Now I want to ask you to try to share with us how Mumia related to you and his brothers. Was he very close to his siblings?

A. Oh, yeah. I often, I often felt like Mumia was very close to me. He hates to admit it but I used to change his diapers so he was like my little kid. Until they got too big, and then I had to switch him off to my oldest brother, I couldn't carry him anymore. So we had a real special relationship, you know, he was my baby. Wherever we went, my oldest brother and I, I wanted to take our twin.

As we got older Mumia became like, umm, an advisor for us. And we were older, older than him. But his knowledge base and his interests in things outside of the public housing made us, you know, listen to him a little more.

He would always talk to his brothers real soft. Real sensitive. Mumia was very, very sensitive. If his brothers got into arguments among themselves, he would be the peacemaker. He was a real sensitive kind of kid.

He wouldn't lie. He wouldn't lie. He used to get us in a lot of trouble. Sometimes we would be doing something we had no business as children to do. And we would all get in a corner and say well, we going, we going to tell mom that we did this, we did that. And everybody said yeah, this is the lie, this is what we are going to tell.

Not Mumia. He'd get us beaten every time. He would not do that, he just wouldn't hang with the crowd.

Q. In your family how important was doing well in school?

A. How was what?

Q. Doing well in school?

A. Oh, gosh. My stepfather used to at night sit us down at the table and make us go over our homework. And one of the things that he was real particular about was us like learning like the times tables. I used to dislike him a lot for that because he would just hammer in your head you need to learn these times tables or you're not going to make it in this world, get this in your head, how much is 2 times 6, and you have to recite all this stuff. And of course we learned it and of course at that time we were like who needs it. But we had structured time after dinner we had to sit down and do our homework. Mom was, as I said, really on the PTA, so she was always in school checking on us, making sure we were doing what we were supposed to do. And everybody knew Mom, so if we did wrong they would tell her.

Q. What kind of relationship did your brother have with your mother?

A. Mumia?

Q. Yeah.

A. Oh. Mumia was loving. He was loving towards all of us. But he was very loving towards my mother. He, he adored my mother, I guess, if that's the word I would, you know. He would never come in the house without hugging and kissing her. He was always bringing her things, like bean sprouts and fresh vegetables and fresh fruit, because he was always concerned about her health. But, always bringing her gifts, berry gifts and things like that. He was always just very loving.

Q. You said he always greeted your mother with a hug and a kiss. Did he greet other people like that?

A. Yes, as we got older, being the only girl out of the whole family, my mom and I might be sitting in the kitchen talking, Mom and myself, and one of her neighbors would be sitting in the kitchen talking, and Mumia would come in, he would hug Mom and kiss her, and we also would get a hug and a kiss. He was a real emotional, real whooshy, real mushy, very emotional.

Q. Just for the benefit of the record: Could you describe what you mean by mushy?

A. Oh, you know, like teenage kids, you know, they don't -- c'mon, you know, c'mon with the kissing, come off with the hugging. But he was like I loves you, sis, I loves you, that's why I'm hugging you. He would just jokingly tell you why he was hugging and kissing you. He would always like to touch. He was like a people kind of person around the family, even around the neighbors.

Q. So he was the kind of person, if I am hearing you right, that was not afraid to show his affections?

A. He always did, he was always very affectionate.

Q. I want to direct your attention to before he was a teenager, when he was a child. What stands out in your mind about his characteristics as a child?

A. Mumia liked to read so much. He read everything. If you didn't want him to read it you better not leave it sitting around. Because he's read it and gone. He was, I guess the word I would use is spiritual. He was very curious. He would, he would, umm... when he was, I guess he was elementary school age and we used to go a block away to the elementary school. That was one of our boundaries, going east. And there was a Jewish synagogue, there was a missionary church, there was a Catholic church, there were all kinds of churches around. And I recall Mumia going to these churches, visiting the rabbis and priests and ministers and all that stuff, questioning them about religious things. He would always talk to the older people in our neighborhood, talk to them about religious things. So we always said well, he's just spiritual, you know. And I guess that had a lot to do with our upbringing at home also.

But Mumia read everything that he could read about religion, he read everything he could read as far as newspapers and books. He pretty much stayed to himself in reading and studying, and trying to know the world around him.

Q. And this is even at a very young age you are describing him?

A. Oh, he was elementary school age.

Q. I'm sorry?

A. He was elementary school age when I recall him doing this.

Q. And when he grew into adolescence, did those attributes at all change or did he transform himself?

A. Oh, no, he was just more of what he was: Quiet, loving, sensitive. He was just a man. He was better able to deal with these things than an elementary school kid. I guess, I guess he was more convicted in what he read and knew. He was stronger about those things. His knowledge. I guess that's the way I would put it. But he never changed. He was always, you know, spiritual.

Q. As he grew into adolescence, what was your impression about the power of his intellect? Was he an intelligent young man?

A. Well, we used to think he was a nerd. We used to think he was a square because he just, he just knew so much. And we didn't, we didn't, we didn't disbelieve him, because if he told you something, if he told you the sun was shining, he could give you evidence, he could give you facts. He could give you enough facts that if the sun was actually purple he could convince you that it was green. But he had enough knowledge that we never questioned what he told us. He loved going to school, he loved learning, so we knew he knew what he was talking about. He was the knowledgeable one. The wise maker. So he was always learning and teaching and we respected that.

Q. What kind of relationship during his adolescent years did he have with his twin brother Wayne?

A. Ahh, very loving. Very protective. The difference between he and Wayne is he was physically bigger.

Q. You are talking about Mumia now?

A. The difference between Mumia and Wayne, Mumia was physically bigger than Wayne. Mumia was more outgoing than Wayne. Mumia had more, I guess you could say, academic skills than Wayne. So he was very protective of Wayne. Very nurturing of Wayne. Like bringing his baby brother along. Wayne was just not up to the same level that Mumia was.

Q. And what about your brother's relationship to Billy?

A. They had more, they had a more playful relationship as they were teenagers. They did more playful things together. Like Bill used to work downtown, he was a street vendor. And they would be downtown together, maybe hanging out, you know. It was more loose than Wayne. He was more protective of his twin. But Bill and he were like closer, in my eyes.

Q. You mentioned that he had took a very early interest in spiritual matters?

A. Hmm-hmm.

Q. Did he continue to have that interest as he got older, when he was a teenager?

A. Yes, his curiosity about spiritual things increased. And I guess when you say spiritual things we have to talk about love, you have to talk about being sensitive to other people and emotion. Like if we were watching a TV show or something, and something would happen where someone was oppressed or something negative happened, he would be really outraged about that. He felt that even a roach had a right to live. He, he always expressed equal rights for people and fairness, fairness and justice and those kinds of things. I don't know if you would call those things spiritual. In my sense they are.

Q. Hmm-hmm. Well, you mentioned that he had this sensitivity towards the right of all things to live.

Did that have anything to do with, did his dietary habits at all reflect what you have just described?

A. Oh. I guess when Mumia was about 14, 15 years old, he started realizing what he was eating. He just became aware of the foods and stuff that he was eating. We were still eating pork chops and, you know, all that kind of stuff. But Mumia stopped. I'm not going to say I know that he stopped because he didn't want to kill animals because that was bothering him, but that was my sense the way he came to eat more healthful, more vegetarian. He was a vegetarian, he ate more healthful foods. But knowing his character about killing things, he probably, that was probably how he came to be a vegetarian. I'm not going to say that's the fact, but.

Q. That is your feeling?

A. That's just my feeling.

Q. And your sense in observing him?

A. Yes.

Q. You used the term -- and I wrote it down here -- you used the term aware. You said that he was aware. Now, would you agree with me that sometimes you meet somebody and they just seem to be more aware of their surroundings or the world they live in, would you agree some people are just more tuned in to what's going on around them?

A. The whole time that we were growing up we were more interested in what was going on in the house and confines. Our interest didn't go outside the complex. We were interested in who was having a baby. Joke and roll, you know, that kind of stuff. But Mumia was more interested in other things. I can't say all of the things that he was interested in, but he could play with us for awhile but then he would go and watch TV or listen to the radio or read a book, or do his homework, for that matter. But he was interested in other things just different than what we were.

Q. What about when he began to develop intellectually as a young adult: Did he seem to exhibit a certain awareness about the world around him?

A. Oh, he was always interested. I don't know whether his interest in journalism came before his interest in the world. I don't, I don't know which came first. So I don't know if he was being watchful because he wanted to be a journalist or try to figure out how to do that kind of stuff, I don't know that. But I know he always watched and listened to the news. And he always discussed it with my mother or any adult that was around to feed his curiosity.

Q. Would it be accurate to say that even as an adolescent Mr. Jamal was an idealistic person? Do you know what I mean by that: Idealistic?

A. No.

Q. Well, did he, let me put it this way: Did he during those young adult years express concerns about the welfare of other human beings in his community and in the larger community as a whole?

A. Ahh, that started at home. Like right in the complex. That started at home in our house. Like we need to care about each other, make sure that each others' well-beings are looked after. Then that extended to our extended family. So Mumia was always interested and concerned about the well-being of the complex, the larger community. He liked being out in the community with people. He liked being with people. So he was concerned about whether we had good housing or being well fed or whether the neighborhood's kids had food or something like that. He was always concerned about the community.

Q. When he went into adulthood and become a journalist, did you still maintain contact with him?

A. Yes, I had gotten married and left home and we still, we always came home. We come home for Christmas, Thanksgiving dinner, to my mother's house. Or one of us would host it at our home. But we always stayed together. When a baby was born the family came together. And Mumia's named a lot of babies in the family, because it was like a special event for all of us to come together.

Page 160.

Q. Did he have a role in naming any of your children, Mrs. Wallace?

A. Yes, he named my son.

Q. He did?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he have a chance to have a relationship with that son of yours?

A. The youngest son, he didn't have as much time. He was gone during the later years. But my son was like 3 or 4 years old when this happened. So he didn't get to spend a lot of time.

Q. Now, are you aware, or were you aware what kind of journalism he practiced?

A. Well, when Mu started writing he used to talk about reporters being objective reporters. Reporting the truth. When I started listening to him on the radio, I remember him talking about things that interested me. Like things in the black people, in our community, things that were going on with our representatives, the things that were going on in the black clergy, things that would interest the black community. He was more focused on making them aware of what was going on in the world. Even though I do remember him reporting on things in other countries. But I guess by nature of the stations that he worked for, it was more things of the community interest.

Q. What was the feeling among the family, your mother and yourself and your brothers, about his being a journalist?

A. We were proud of him. We were real, real proud of him. It used to be really typical because my girlfriends all wanted to meet him because they thought he had this real sexy voice and they wanted to see what he looked like. We were really proud. He wasn't boastful about what he was doing but he was proud about being able to do something and make money at it, doing something that he enjoyed. So we were really like, you know, go for it, we were really proud of him. My mother was ecstatic.

Q. Did you get a sense -- you have listened to some of his radio broadcasts?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And in listening to him as a broadcast journalist, and in just knowing him as your brother, did you get a sense, Miss Wallace, of what motivated him as a journalist, what drove him in his wanting to develop his craft as a journalist?

A. I would guess it is his concern for people. He cared about people. He wanted, he wanted everyone to have a fair shake. And he, he was good at English so he would always get annoyed when, you know, journalists or people used the wrong words to, to paint pictures or paint scenarios and that kind of thing.

So he, you know, he was about fairness, he was sensitive to the peoples' plight, hardship, oppression. I really think that was, that was just my guess. That's what I felt from listening to him.

Q. Now, you described a close family while your brother was a child and while he was in his teenage years. What about while he was an adult, was he still close with your mother?

A. We were, we were and are still close, very close until my mother died. As a matter of fact, we were very concerned about Mumia when my mother died because he was incarcerated at that time.

Q. Well, what about back in 1981 and around that time period, was he still close to the family?

Page 163.

A. Oh, yes. We were all still, we are still to today very close. As we are allowed to be with Mumia, we are still very close with him and the other family. Even though geographically we are separated, my phone bill will tell you that we are still connecting. As a matter of fact, last weekend, the weekend before last I had a family reunion at my home and everyone was there and we were still doing our thing, you know.

Q. Did Mr. Jamal visit his mother during his adult years?

A. Always.

Q. With any frequency?

A. Always. I could recall him living right over in Camden, New Jersey when he was married. And he used to put his son on his back and walk over on the bridge and come to visit my mother and bring her some foods or something like that. He wasn't too much on cars, you know, that kind of stuff. He liked to walk or ride a bike because he liked to be in the community and look at things. And, you know, be around people. But he was always visiting my mother. His house was always open for us to visit. So we always still came together.

Q. You mentioned that, you mentioned his son, he carried his son on his back. Did you ever have an opportunity to see what kind of father he was to his son?

A. He was, he likes kids. He loves children, they didn't have to be his sons. But he was very fatherly, very affectionate, very loving, you know, to his children. He loves children. They didn't have to be his children. They could be anybody's children. Because the kids in the neighborhood, you know, sat and told me that he would read to them. I mean he just loved children. But he was very, very affectionate and protective of his children.

Q. Now, in your dealings with your brother, did you get a sense as to his attitude about issues regarding peace and violence?

A. There is nothing that is in his character that I recall being violent. He's only been a peacemaker. He always talked, like kids in the neighborhood and they were gang-warring, which was going on all the time we was growing up, he would talk to them, you know. He would talk to people, he was always a peacemaker. Even if he got into a confrontation, unfortunate to his opponent, he would talk them out of confrontation. You know, they might want to fight, but before they knew it, Mumia had talked them out of it. And they didn't even know that they had been talked out of it, you know. He was like that. He wasn't, there wasn't anything violent about him. You know, that just wasn't his nature.

Q. Your sense from your brother is that he would adopt the idea that the pen is mightier than the sword?

A. I'm sorry, I didn't hear you.

Q. The pen is mightier than the sword: Is that the kind of altitude your brother had?

A. Yeah, he felt like he could get his point across in writing or talking as opposed to fighting, yes.

Q. Have you ever seen your brother, other than perhaps normal squabbling among brothers or things like that, have you ever seen him lose his temper in an outburst of violent rage or anything like that?

A. I've never seen him in a violent rage. I've seen, you know, we've had our tussles, even he and I, you know, had boxed each other, but not to the point where I had a bloody eye or anything like that. He wouldn't even go that far, he would never go there.

MR. WILLIAMS: Miss Wallace, thank you very much.

THE COURT: I just want to correct the record, Miss Wallace. I thought you said that your brother went to a public swimming pool at 4th and Fairmount.

THE WITNESS: Yeah, we used to go.

THE COURT: 4th and Fairmount?

THE WITNESS: Yeah.

THE COURT: I think you are mistaken. I grew up at 3rd and Fairmount.

THE WITNESS: Northern Liberties Recreation Center has a swimming pool down there.

THE COURT: Swimming pool on 7th Street between Spring Garden --

THE WITNESS: No, 4th and Fairmount.

THE COURT: 4th and Fairmount on the northwest corner is a Marian Bank.

THE WITNESS: I used to be on the laundry committee --

THE COURT: Northeast corner --

THE WITNESS: The bank is still there. It is in the middle of the block.

THE COURT: It is in the middle of the block on Fairmount.

THE WITNESS: Yeah, right on Fairmount.

Page 167.

THE COURT: I remember going as a youngster, when I was in grade school I used to go to a swimming pool, it was between Reed School and Spring Garden, I don't remember whether it was 7th Street, Franklin Street or 8th Street, but there is a public swimming pool.

THE WITNESS: No, there is an outdoor swimming pool, outdoor pool I think at 8th and Brown Street.

THE COURT: Now, you mean.

THE WITNESS: No, it's been there for quite a long time. 8th and Brown Street.

THE COURT: Would it have been there between 1926 and 1934?

THE WITNESS: I don't know.

THE COURT: Well, that's what I'm talking about.

THE WITNESS: No, I ain't going there.

THE COURT: I thought there wasn't one on Fairmount Avenue. Because when I was growing-up if there was one on Fairmount Avenue there, I would have gone there. The one I went to was either on 7th Street, Franklin or 8th Street but it was between Green Street and Spring Garden.

THE WITNESS: It's 8th, I think it's

Page 168.

8th and Brown.

THE COURT: Well, I didn't know that one. The one I went to was between Reed Street and Spring Garden. Maybe they discontinued it since then. I don't know.

MR. GRANT: May I proceed?

THE COURT: But that's the only one. I don't know of any swimming pool on Fairmount Avenue. If it was there when I was growing up, and I did leave that neighborhood but I have been back to that neighborhood, because I always go back to my old neighborhood.

THE WITNESS: Yeah.

THE COURT: I grew up there. And I went to school there.

THE WITNESS: It is a good neighborhood.

THE COURT: You are right it is a good neighborhood. It was an excellent neighborhood when I went there. I went to school at 4th and Brown. Do you know where that is?

THE WITNESS: We went to Kearny at 6th and Fairmount.

THE COURT: 6th and Fairmount, I remember Kearny, but I went to Catholic school,

Page 169.

at --

THE WITNESS: We couldn't afford that.

THE COURT: Well, they didn't charge anything when I went there. Of course I don't know about now. In my days it was free. Well, okay.

MR. GRANT: May I proceed, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Go ahead.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Good afternoon, Mrs. Wallace.

A. Hi.

Q. Is it Miss or Mrs?

A. Miss.

Q. Miss Wallace. I guess I better use this microphone.

A. Please.

THE COURT: There is a lot of noise outside: He won't hear you.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Miss Wallace, you are Mumia's older sister, are you?

A. Oldest sister.

Page 170.

Q. How much older are you?

A. Hmm, six years.

Q. So you were a grown woman when he was still a teenager?

A. I'm sorry?

Q. You were a grown lady when he was still --

A. Yeah, when he became, when he was about in high school I had just about left home.

Q. Okay. You said your parents were sticklers for getting your education, especially your stepfather and --

A. Yes.

Q. Did your mother agree with that principle?

A. Oh, definitely.

Q. I'm sorry, I'm sorry to hear about your mother's passing. I want to ask you, though: How did your stepfather and your mother take it when your brother decided that he was going to drop out of high school though he had this immense intellectual tendency, I am sure they saw it?

A. Unfortunately, I wasn't privy to the discussion about that. I wasn't there. And I don't know what was said between them.

Q. How did you take it?

A. Umm, I recall, what I remember is during that

Page 171.

Lydia Wallace - Cross

time Mumia was struggling to have the name of the school changed from Franklin High to Malcolm X High which was more applicable to the people that used the school. So I thought that was very admirable. But because Mumia was, Mumia probably was more advanced than his peers at that time so he probably was bored anyway.

Q. At what age did he drop out of high school?

A. I'm sorry?

Q. At what age did he drop out of high school?

A. Umm, I don't remember.

Q. Did he drop out of the tenth grade?

A. Well, I don't want to guess but if one would guess I would say between tenth and eleventh grade.

Q. And since you were his big sister and you were so close to him, I imagine you realized at or about that time he had joined and become an active member of the Black Panther Party; is that correct?

A. Yes, I remember him telling me he was an active member of the party. When he became part of the Black Panther Party I was still home. And he used to talk about the feeding days and having programs for children and that kind of thing. That's all he talked to me about.

Q. Did he talk to you about the philosophy of the

Page 172.

Lydia Wallace - Cross

Black Panther Party aside from nurturing children?

A. No. One of, having five brothers and being the only girl, they always get things together. Even with my stepfather, like they would go down to the waterfront and just do that male-bonding thing. And I wasn't a part of that. You know, I had a real attitude about that.

Q. You are a girl?

A. Yeah.

Q. You're a girl and we're guys and you don't hang with us: That was the attitude?

A. Yeah, so sometimes I would say that Mumia wouldn't tell me everything.

Q. How old was he when he joined the Panther Party?

A. I don't know.

Q. Now, you've testified that both yourself and your mother attended the trial everyday?

A. Yes, I didn't attend everyday. I had to work sometimes. But my mother was able to come everyday.

Q. And you also came to the sentencing hearings, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And you knew Mr. Jackson, by the time the trial came around you knew him personally, did you

Page 173.

Lydia Wallace - Cross

not?

A. What do you mean personally? Just having had conversation about the trial and proceedings with him.

Q. No, I mean when a man comes in your home on a number of occasions and speaks to your family and your mother, probably you, I would assume that you got to know the person in some way?

A. He came to my mother's home, I wasn't home. I wasn't living at home then.

Q. Okay.

A. And he would come to my mother's home. I don't remember how many times. But I know that he used to come to talk to my mother, and I might have stood there, from that day's proceedings, or I might have taken my mother out to dinner or something like that and I just happened to be there when he came. But I would venture to say he never came to talk to me, he came to talk to my mother.

Q. And when he pulled you aside during the course or after the proceedings that you may have attended, he would explain to you exactly what transpired so that you and your mom would understand what efforts he was making on behalf of your brother, I take it?

A. He would try to explain to us what went on

Page 174.

Lydia Wallace - Cross

earlier in the day.

Q. Were you absent at that time, is that why he was explaining it to you?

A. No, if I was there. He would not call me or meet with me if I wasn't there that day. If we were sitting in the spectator area and he would just lean over and say so-and-so just happened or whatever.

Q. And on the days you attended would you see any communicating, would you see them whispering or communicating while the proceedings were taking place?

A. I don't understand what you asked.

Q. Yes. There is a trial going on, and I'm going to communicate with the person sitting with me at counsel's table by cupping my hands (indicating), whispering. Could you see him doing that with Mr. Jamal, your brother?

A. Not very much, no.

Q. You didn't see it?

A. I did see them do that but not very much, no.

Q. I want to ask you a question, ma'am. You said this, that I, together with my mother Edith Cook, attended the trial of my brother each day during the month of June of '82.

A. Yeah.

Page 175.

Lydia Wallace - Cross

Q. We saw his backup Counsel Anthony Jackson. And now what does that mean: You saw his backup Counsel? What does that --

A. You are talking about in the Courtroom?

Q. Yes. And what I am trying to determine is what you mean by the word backup Counsel?

A. His Court-appointed attorney.

Q. Well, some people have court-appointed attorneys and the attorneys are called attorneys.

A. Yes.

Q. But you call him backup. What does that mean to you?

A. Well, I realize that at some time, and I would not venture to say on this day he was a backup and/or the next day he wasn't or whatever. But I realized that at some time Tony was the backup attorney. But I don't know, I'm not clear about when it starts and stops.

Q. Well, if somebody asked you does he have your back, that means to you is a person protecting you from behind?

A. Yeah.

Q. But that means that you are in the lead?

A. Okay.

Q. Now, backup Counsel, does that imply to you

Page 176.

Lydia Wallace - Cross

that this person was not the primary lawyer but the person was just backing up their primary lawyer?

A. I believe I recall sometimes Mumia was in the back and Anthony Jackson was in the back, at his back.

Q. Did you ever attend the proceedings when Mumia was in the front and Anthony Jackson had his back, that is when Mr. Jamal was examining witnesses and inquiring of Jurors in Court?

A. I think I recall that.

Q. And at that point in time on those occasions whenever you recall them, Mr. Jamal was in charge, was he not?

A. Not the whole time, no.

Q. But on those occasions when you saw him under those circumstances, was it your sense that he was in charge?

A. Honestly?

Q. He was a lawyer?

A. No.

Q. He wasn't in charge?

A. I didn't feel that Mumia was in charge.

Q. Listen to this. I am not asking you if he was in control of the environment or the events. I am asking you was he in charge; that is to say, I'm going to dictate my destiny, what the world does around me the world does?

A. No. Unh-unh, not at all, no.

Q. No? How did you first, how did Mr. Jamal get Anthony Jackson in the first place as a lawyer?

A. I wasn't involved in that process.

Q. Did friends of your family come to you and suggest to your mother that Mr. Jackson would be the man to get for this type of case?

A. I wasn't involved in that process, I don't know.

Q. Now, you exchanged greetings with Mr. Jackson. You said you had never been in City Hall before that?

A. Yes.

Q. Even before trial; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. So you don't know if he was a good lawyer or a bad lawyer, do you?

A. No, I don't.

Q. From coming to your home, speaking with your mother, pulling you aside or your mother aside whenever you would come to Court to explain things to you, did you feel that he was an attentive lawyer?

A. To us?

Q. Yes.

Page 178.

A. Umm, I guess you could say when he gave us time, yes.

Q. And did he ever not give you time when you requested it?

A. I never requested time, I don't know.

Q. Are you aware of whether your mother ever requested time and did not receive it?

A. Umm... we, we, we put our confidence in him.

Q. Why did you --

A. We didn't question him because we didn't know what to question. We didn't know, we didn't know what he was supposed to do: We never worked with a lawyer before. So they are telling us this is a lawyer and he's qualified and he's all of that.

Q. Who is telling you he is all of that?

A. Well, that's what some of the supporters were saying at that time.

Q. Some of Mumia's friends?

A. Yes. And they were saying that he had a record of doing some things, and I don't even remember what they were. I think it's working with Pilcop or something like that.

Q. Yes, do you know what Pilcop is?

A. Excuse me?

Q. Do you know what that is: Pilcop?

Page 179.

A. I didn't know then. I didn't know at all. So I'm just assuming that people in the know are feeding us information. He's an attorney and we just figured he knew what to do.

Q. And what people, friends and supporters of Mr. Jamal, were telling you is that he was a good lawyer and he was all of that?

A. That's pretty much what they said.

Q. All of that is a colloquial expression for cat's meow: He is the best of the best?

A. No, I never heard that. They said he was competent, he could do the job, you know. Cat's meow, no, I didn't hear that.

Q. Hmm-hmm. Your mother testified at a bail hearing on behalf of her son back in January of '82, about a month after the shooting?

A. Okay.

Q. Is that right? Do you recall that?

A. I wasn't here. I don't think I remember hearing it. Where did that take place?

Q. Well, it says here in your affidavit that you signed that Mr. Jackson was aware of your relationship to your brother, had called your mother as a witness to testify in Mumia's behalf during a bail hearing in January of 1982; is that true?

Page 180.

A. Okay. I don't remember the particulars but, okay, I remember.

Q. And that's, you don't remember that particularly because you didn't actually draft this, did you?

A. Yeah, I wrote that.

Q. You wrote that?

A. Hmm-hmm.

Q. And where, who supplied you with the dates here?

A. Who supplied me with what?

Q. The dates, since you don't remember the dates?

A. I don't remember the dates. You could do whatever you want with me on dates, I don't remember dates.

Q. Okay. I am not going to do that.

A. I don't remember dates.

Q. I know you think lawyers are full of tricks but that's not going to happen. Let me ask you this. What lawyer assisted you in preparing this affidavit, which is marked for the record exhibit number 7, affidavit of Lydia Wallace in support of Mr. Jamal's Petition?

A. Your question?

Q. My question is what lawyer if any conferred with you or discussed with you and assisted you in drafting this affidavit (indicating)?

A. Len Weinglass called me and asked me to write up something, he told me to write what I remember, our relationship to him and, you know, those kinds of things. I wrote it, I had it notarized and I sent it to him. That's what I remember. I said that to the other lawyer.

Q. Where did you have it notarized?

A. Down at I and Erie Avenue.

Q. That's in Philadelphia, right?

A. Yeah.

Q. Oh. Well, the notary's name here is Sheldon Rosen, looks like, from Phoenixville Borough, Chester County. Is that where you got it notarized?

A. I'm sorry? I didn't hear you.

Q. Sheldon Rosen, Phoenixville Borough, that's in Pennsylvania, Chester County. It says --

A. I went to I and Erie, that's where I got it done at.

Q. Okay. Your mom testified but you didn't testify?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. You didn't testify at the bail hearing, and you didn't testify at the preliminary hearing?

Page 182.

A. No. No one asked me to testify.

Q. You didn't testify at the trial?

A. No.

Q. You didn't testify at the sentencing phase?

A. This is the first time I've ever done any of it.

Q. Yet all this time you were conversing with Mr. Jackson, he was coming to visit your mother?

A. Yeah.

Q. Coming to her home. Did you ever ask him is it normal that a family member would not testify?

A. No, I never questioned, it never crossed my mind to ask him that.

Q. Did you not testify -- strike that. Your brother Ronald didn't testify either, did he? To your knowledge?

A. I don't remember.

Q. But you would remember if he did, wouldn't you?

A. I didn't.

Q. Okay. Do you recall Mumia's twin Wayne testifying?

A. No, he wasn't in the states at that time.

Q. How about Keith?

A. Keith was in the military, he wasn't here either.

Q. Well, he was in the military, but you would agree that in your family's history this was a significant event, would you not?

A. I don't remember Keith testifying, I don't remember him being here.

Q. And we all know that his youngest brother, the baby, William Cook, who you call Billy, he never testified either, did he?

A. No.

Q. At any hearing?

A. At his own -- no, he didn't testify, no.

Q. Why do you think that no one from his family, your family, testified on behalf of Mr. Jamal?

MR. WILLIAMS: Objection, Your Honor.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. If you know, being a family member?

MR. WILLIAMS: I am going to object to that, to the operation of other peoples' mental processes.

MR. GRANT: I will rephrase the question.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Are you close to Billy?

A. Ahh, yes.

Page 184.

Q. And when Mumia got locked up, did you talk to Billy about it?

A. Afterwards, when he was out I talked to him.

Q. And Billy told you that he was right there when the whole thing happened, didn't he?

MR. WILLIAMS: I am going to object to this as outside the scope of direct.

THE COURT: Objection is overruled, Counselor.

Go ahead.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Did he not tell you, ma'am, that he was right there when your brother was shot?

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, objection on the hearsay grounds.

THE COURT: I said it is overruled, okay. You have an exception.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. You could answer that.

A. No.

Q. You never discussed it with Billy or you discussed it with him but he never told you that?

A. We didn't discuss the night of December 9th, 1981.

Q. You never discussed that with him?

Page 185.

A. No.

Q. Did you not testify on behalf of your brother for the same reason that Billy Cook didn't testify?

A. I don't know why Billy didn't. I could say no one asked me.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson ever come to your mother's house and discuss with you what his approach was going to be in defending your brother? That is did he give you some inkling into his ideas and how he thought that he could best approach this and maybe save him?

A. Umm, he could have discussed it with my mother but not me.

Q. And you don't recall ever asking him any questions along those lines?

A. No, I just figured he had, he had it, you know. He, he, handled it. I don't even know what kind of question to ask him, you know. Mumia always said to us during the trial, you know, the truth will come out, that he would be free. So we just sat through those trials knowing that when it was over, we was going to take Mu home because the truth was going to come out. I never asked any questions about anything.

Q. When Mr. Weinglass contacted you and asked you to write some things down, you didn't just start writing a rambling exposition about when I was 3 this happened to me, and when I was 4 something happened more, you gave a structured affidavit here?

A. Yeah, he told me.

Q. Where did you get the structure from, who gave you that structure?

A. When he called me on the phone he said write about myself, what my employment was.

Q. Yes.

A. What I was doing in December of '81. And my relationship to my brother Mumia. And if I had attended any trial, any of the trial, that kind of stuff. So that's what I wrote.

Q. And you left something out: If Mr. Jackson asked you to testify?

A. Yes. That's correct.

Q. Mr. Weinglass specifically asked you to write that?

A. Yes.

Q. So you had no role other than as an observer during the trial?

A. As an observer and supporter to my mother and a loving sister I was there.

Q. You did say to Mr. Williams on direct examination that Mr. Jackson explained that in a capital penalty case, that there are two phases to it, in one the jury has to decide if the person should even get to the second part?

A. That is correct.

Q. And when he explained that to you, Mr. Williams asked you did he describe what goes on in the penalty phase. And you said you don't remember hearing that explanation?

A. He didn't go into detail on it. He just said it was two. I remember him saying it was two phases and basically he gave an overview of what would happen in the first phase and what would happen in the second phase.

Q. Okay. That is an overview. Is that the same as more or less an explanation as to what occurs?

A. If you want to say that.

Q. Well.

A. It, it was very brief.

Q. When you say you don't remember hearing this explanation, but it's possible in fact that he did in fact tell you those things?

A. It's possible, yes.

Q. And in fairness to you, we are going back 13 or 14 years, I understand that.

Page 188.

Lydia Wallace - Cross

A. Yeah, yeah.

Q. He never approached you -- that is Mr. Jackson -- to testify, but you say he could have possibly approached your mother; is that right?

A. I don't know whether he did or not.

Q. Okay. Now, when did you leave home, ma'am, at what age were you in relationship to the age of Mumia?

A. Ahh, I think I left home, moved into my first apartment, I must have been 19 to 20.

Q. So that means that he was 13 or 14?

A. Yeah. About, yeah.

Q. And you said you were still at home when he had joined the Black Panther Party?

A. Yeah.

Q. So he joined before he was 13 or 14?

A. No. Umm, I'm trying to relate to when my son was born. I was 18 years old. And I left home, I would have to guess, within, within three to five years after that. I can't, dates and stuff I don't remember well.

Q. And were you living in Philadelphia in 1979?

(Pause.)

A. Yes, I think so, yes.

Q. And were you still close to your brother Mumia

Page 189.

Lydia Wallace - Cross

at that time, conversing with him about various things that were going on in one another's lives?

A. Yeah.

Q. Did he tell you why he felt compelled to buy a firearm and to carry it on his person without a license at that time?

A. No, he didn't discuss that with me.

Q. Did you ever see the weapon?

A. No.

Q. Were you aware of it's existence?

A. Not until after the fact.

Q. After which fact?

A. After the incident. I heard in the newspapers and that kind of stuff after the incident in '81 that he owned it. But I never heard about it prior to that.

Q. Well, you were describing Mumia, about his sensitivity to other human beings and that he was aware of things around him and interested in things other than what occurred within the complex in which he lived, and about his sense of fairness and his peaceful nature. What did you think when you found out that the gun involved was found right next to him, a shoulder holster was found on him, and that there were five spent cartridges in it, meaning that gun had been fired five times?

Page 190.

Lydia Wallace - Cross

MR. WILLIAMS: I am going to object to that, Your Honor: Assumes facts not in evidence.

MR. GRANT: Well, at this time, Your Honor, I would move to incorporate the entire trial testimony from the transcripts of the Quarter Sessions file, if that is the case.

THE COURT: Okay, if it is in the record.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. You may answer.

A. I --

Q. I know I lost you.

A. I lost the question.

THE COURT: Repeat the question.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. According to the record in this case, according to the facts testified by numerous witnesses -- and I'm framing this question in light of your descriptions of him as peaceful, sensitive, wouldn't harm a roach, things of that nature -- found within inches of his left arm was a .38 snub-nose revolver. The gun had been fired five times, sitting in a pool of blood, and an officer lying 3 feet from him, a hole through his head between his eyes, likewise in a pool of blood. And the weapon was later traced to having been purchased by him in 1979. And a shoulder holster on his person indicated that he carried this weapon without permission to do so or license on the City streets of Philadelphia.

Page 191.

Lydia Wallace - Cross

Now, my question was, and my question would have been in 1981 had you testified, how do you reconcile the person that you have described here to us with the facts that were found by the Jury?

A. No, not my kid brother. No question in my mind, I, you know. Well, the other thing is he told me he didn't do it. So I believed him. But I know that's not characteristic of his -- of him, he is not like that.

Q. From all the descriptions of everybody that has come here -- and they all are good people from what I can see, I believe -- I don't think that is characteristic. Nevertheless, he had a bullet in his own chest that was determined to be from the officer's weapon who was lying next to him prone and dying at that moment. In light of that I want to ask you this: Did your brother Mumia, since Billy was the baby, take up for him, fight his fights for him, protect him from society, so to speak?

Page 192.

Lydia Wallace - Cross

A. I couldn't say he did that that night.

Q. I am not asking you about that night.

A. Oh, okay.

Q. I am saying, since you knew both of them intimately, you are the older sister, Billy is the baby brother and Mumia is next to the baby brother in age, they are the two youngest, you are the next to the oldest, you could watch them as an adult would watch them, see through the eyes of a mature individual, did you see Mumia have a propensity to take up for Billy in his interaction with the world?

A. I saw Mumia take up more for Wayne than Billy. I would say that Mumia was protective of all of us. But Billy, I see him more protective of Wayne than Billy.

Q. Okay. Speaking of your brother's sensitivity: How many days or what percentage of the trial, the guilt phase of the trial, do you think that you saw? It started on June 19th, basically, there were some preliminary motions, selection of the Jury and things of that nature, but the actual testimony from the witness stand right there where you are seated began on June 19th. From June 19th until the end of June, that 12-day period, and three days in July, the trial occurred. How many days do you think you attended?

Page 193.

Lydia Wallace - Cross

A. Probably about 10.

Q. About 10. That's a lot. That's 10 out of 15 or 16 days?

A. Probably about. I attended at least half.

Q. Okay. And if you attended you know now, you saw the way your brother, who was usually serene and peaceful and sensitive, treated his lawyer?

A. Treated who?

Q. His lawyer, his backup Counsel. Did you witness that, ma'am?

A. His lawyer. I saw the way he treated him?

Q. Yes.

A. Yeah, I sat back and I could see them in the front. I never knew what conversation would transpire between them.

Q. You never heard conversations and you were here 10 days of a 15-day trial?

A. Between the two?

Q. No. It wasn't necessarily a conversation, it may have been a one-way conversation, but you did not hear your brother harangue his lawyer, telling him to get his ass out of here, he is not John Africa, he is not a real lawyer, I want a real lawyer, someone who can acquit me; you didn't hear any of that?

A. I never had, I never heard him. I heard him

Page 194.

Lydia Wallace - Cross

talk to the Judge.

Q. In that fashion?

A. In that fashion. I never heard him talking to Mr. Jackson that way.

Q. Were you here when he was removed on a number of occasions for like conduct?

A. I was here when Mumia would try to make a point or get a point across and couldn't. And he would be removed from the Courtroom, shouting back so that people could hear what he was trying to get across. That's what I heard.

Q. Whenever Mr. Jackson, whenever you observed or heard your brother dealing with Mr. Jackson, his lawyer, his backup lawyer, in that fashion, did Mr. Jackson ever come over to the family and try to explain what the situation was?

A. No, not -- no, no, never during those times.

Q. Did he at some later on point in time tell you why he didn't feel it was appropriate to come over to you during those episodes?

A. I recall Mr. Jackson coming over to us after the whole proceedings of the day and try to explain to us what legally transpired that day.

Q. I am talking about his relationship with your brother.

Page 195.

Lydia Wallace - Redirect

A. He didn't discuss that with me.

Q. He didn't tell you that Lydia, you're his older sister, I am trying to help this man, can you talk to him and let him know I am not his enemy?

A. No, no, no, he didn't come to me that way.

MR. GRANT: Thank you, ma'am.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Miss Wallace, I appreciate you coming in. I just have one question for you. Do you know, and did you know back in 1982, what the obligations of an attorney were at a penalty phase, did you know what the law required of an attorney at the penalty phase?

A. No.

MR. WILLIAMS: No further questions.

MR. GRANT: I have no recross, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right, Miss Wallace, I have been reminiscing but I think I know where you are talking about now. Take you back a good many years. For both of us. Do you remember a little street between Fairmount and Brown Street closer to 3rd Street? Do you remember that little street?

THE WITNESS: No.

THE COURT: Well, there was a police station right on that corner there of that little street.

THE WITNESS: On 3rd?

THE COURT: No, not as far as 3rd. Close to 3rd but before 3rd there is a little street that used to run, I remember when I was going to school I used to go up that street to go to Brown Street. And there was a police station right there.

THE WITNESS: No.

THE COURT: They closed up that police station and it was empty for a long time. And when did you go swimming there, do you remember the years?

THE WITNESS: During, during the years that we went to Kearny School. We used to go down there and get our surplus food always.

THE COURT: What year was that, 1960 or --

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, I don't think this lady wants to reveal her age.

THE WITNESS: I don't know why he wants to take me back there. I keep telling you I am not going.

THE COURT: The fact I am trying to get at: I had moved from there by that time but I do go back there many times. And I remember they converted that police station to a swimming pool. And they cut off that --

THE WITNESS: Are we talking about 4th and Fairmount?

THE COURT: Not at 4th and Fairmount. Closer to 3rd and Fairmount there is a little street there, okay. They converted that to a swimming pool. That's probably where you went. I don't remember.

SPECTATOR: Are we talking about Mumia? Could you remove me? Could I leave now? I would like to leave. I would like to be escorted out. Are we talking about executing Mumia Abu-Jamal? Are we talking about executing him? I want to leave right now.

THE COURT: Just put her out, please.

(A spectator was escorted from the Courtroom.)

THE COURT: Do the rest of you want to go?

Page 198.

You could put the rest of them out if you wish too. I just wanted to correct you. I think I know now where you went swimming. But that was after my time. Okay. Your next witness?

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, the Petitioner now calls Miss Ruth Ballard.

MR. GRANT: The Commonwealth requests an offer of proof, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Do you have any affidavits with these?

MR. GRANT: No.

THE COURT: In the future would you please do that so we don't have this problem all the time? Under the rules here you are supposed to do that.

MR. WILLIAMS: We suggested that at the very outset.

THE COURT: Well, just a simple little affidavit of what they are going to talk about, okay.

MR. GRANT: In the meantime I will settle for an offer of proof,

Your Honor.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, I would be glad to give an offer of proof, that is fair enough. Miss Ballard was a neighbor of the Cook family and was very close with the Cook family. And as a result, was in a position to get to know Mr. Jamal, particularly in his early years of life. And she'll describe Mr. Jamal during those early years. Again it goes primarily to the penalty phase issue.

Page 199.

MR. GRANT: Thank you.

THE COURT: All right.

(Pause.)

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, while we are waiting: Would the Court indicate what time it will close today?

THE COURT: As long as you want, I'm here at your convenience.

MR. WEINGLASS: I have to let the witnesses know.

THE COURT: Who?

MR. WEINGLASS: There are witnesses outside who I wonder if I could excuse them.

THE COURT: How long will this witness be?

MR. WEINGLASS: I think 30 minutes total.

Page 200.

THE COURT: It's almost four o'clock. How long do you want to go today?

MR. GRANT: Six o'clock everyday, work on Saturdays, Judge, let's get it on.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Well, let me say this: After her who do you have? According to this list you have three. Joe Davidson is for tomorrow, right?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, we are.

THE COURT: Do you have an affidavit on that one so we could get --

MR. GRANT: No, I have no affidavit on him, Your Honor. But if they have no more witnesses I have a couple that we could possibly call, depending on how late Your Honor wants to work this evening.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, we would prefer to let our witnesses go without interruption. There is no need for that.

THE COURT: Well, the ones that were already testified to, you could have them on call. Who else do you have?

MR. WEINGLASS: We will have them on call.

Page 201.

THE COURT: That's what I am talking about. You have them on call so they are not here. You have Anthony Jackson and Jeremy Gelb on call, so they are not here. They are back somewhere. I don't know where they are, but.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, I wanted to know what time Your Honor will finish today so I will know whether to bring in witnesses or not.

THE COURT: Well, who are you going to bring in tomorrow? Maybe we could use this time to try to see where we are going. Who do you have tomorrow?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yeah, we could start out in the morning with Mr. Davidson. Move to Mr. Jackson. Move to Mr. Gelb. Your Honor, it is not going to be Miss Gelb.

MR. GRANT: Jeremy.

MR. WEINGLASS: Jeremy Gelb.

THE COURT: Who after that?

MR. WEINGLASS: Gary Wakshul.

THE COURT: Well, do you have a copy for me?

MR. WEINGLASS: (Handing).

THE COURT: Would you get the copy for me. Give a copy to the D.A. so he knows who is coming in tomorrow.

Who do we have here?

Joe Davidson. Now, on these here, do you have affidavits on these, please.

MR. GRANT: None on Jeremy Gelb, none on Wakshul, none on McGill. And we would ask for an offer of proof. And we have one for Mr. Robert Greer, Your Honor, and he is right in the room over there. There are two witnesses that we've had who have been here for a week.

THE COURT: He is here?

MR. GRANT: Yes, he is.

THE COURT: Why don't we do him today, then. Because --

MR. GRANT: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: -- you have an affidavit.

MR. GRANT: Yes, Your Honor, we do.

THE COURT: But you don't have any for the other three. Could you give him an affidavit?

MR. WEINGLASS: No.

THE COURT: Under our Rules you are supposed to do that.

MR. WEINGLASS: We read those Rules. We offered affidavits. The Rule requires that they be provided 30 days before a hearing. We wanted the 30 days to prepare our affidavits" We were denied that.

THE COURT: Well, you say you have them. So if you have them why don't you get it over to them?

MR. WEINGLASS: We do not have the affidavits.

MR. GRANT: I will waive that, Judge. I will waive it. Could we put on the witness?

MR. WEINGLASS: Okay. They are waiving it, there is no problem.

THE COURT: Ruth Ballard, he wants.

THE COURT OFFICER: Yes, Your Honor, Miss Ballard.

THE COURT: Tell Robert Greer to stay, we might as well get him. He is here.

MR. GRANT: Yes, Your Honor.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, then is this the last witness for the day?

THE COURT: No, there is Robert Greer here.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Robert Greer, we will not put him on out of order.

THE COURT: Well, that is the order

Page 204.

he's here. And you are going to put him on.

MR. WEINGLASS: He is here pursuant to a prosecution subpoena. He is a Petitioner witness and we will put him on in our case in the order that we have decided to put our case on.

THE COURT: Well, you don't tell the Court how long you want to work. I decide how long we are going to work.

MR. WEINGLASS: Absolutely, but I am telling the Court the order of our witnesses. The Court will decide how long we work but we will decide the order of our witnesses.

MR. GRANT: I have two witnesses here, Your Honor, and they have been here for awhile. All I would like to do is, with the Court's permission -- and you certainly have the discretion to take witnesses out of order. I don't think it is going to make these proceedings too complex. I think it is going to make it simplified because these are people who they allege can exonerate Mr. Jamal and they are here and I would like the courtesy shown to them that we are showing to their witnesses by having them on call.

Page 205.

THE COURT: There is no sense in having them keep coming day in and day out. If they are here let them take the stand.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, they are here pursuant to a prosecution subpoena.

THE COURT: I will put them on.

MR. WEINGLASS: I strongly object to the Court dictating our case. You told us to call one witness a day, we called four. Now we are told it is not enough. I had that order from the Court.

THE COURT: I see now exactly what it is. No grandstanding, please. All you are trying to do is dillydally.

But tell him to come back tomorrow, and if Weinglass wants them back tomorrow.

MR. WEINGLASS: I do not. I want my witnesses tomorrow.

THE COURT: Well, your witness is Robert Greer.

MR. GRANT: Mr. Greer was subpoenaed by the defense for today's date. It happened to coincide.

MR. WEINGLASS: Excuse me?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: No, he was informed,

Page 206.

Your Honor --

MR. WEINGLASS: His name is not on the list. He is on the list for tomorrow.

THE COURT: Okay, I tell him he wants him back here tomorrow, okay. I am not go --

MR. GRANT: Can we put him on, Your Honor?

MR. WEINGLASS: Of course not.

THE COURT: No, put him on tomorrow.

MR. GRANT: Very well.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Mr. Greer was notified for tomorrow. If he is here today it is at the compulsion --

THE COURT: I don't need anymore echo in here. Only one of us could get on this record at a time. I said he could go home and come back tomorrow. What are you arguing about? I am trying to do what you asked me to do. Now let's go. She's here.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor --

THE COURT: Wait awhile, Counselor. Wait awhile. Ruth Ballard is on the stand here. Put her under oath. She is already sworn?

THE COURT OFFICER: Not yet, Your

Page 207.

Honor.

Ruth Ballard - Direct

THE COURT: Swear her in. Where is the attorney who is going to question? All right, okay. Are you ready? Let's go.

Ruth Dorothea Ballard, having been duly sworn,
was examined and testified as follows:

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, may I inquire?

THE COURT: Yes, sure.

MR. WILLIAMS: Thank you.

A. Yes, you did.

Q. -- is that true?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you know him, Miss Ballard, back in 1982?

A. Yes, I did.

A. I first met Mr. Jamal as a baby.

Q. How old was he when you met him?

Ruth Ballard - Direct

proceedings, Miss Ballard, whether Mr. Jamal was represented by an attorney?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know who that attorney was?

A. No.

Q. Now, you were living here in Philadelphia during the summer of 1982?

Q. And was there any, any reason, either health reasons or other personal reasons, that would have

Page 211.

Ruth Ballard - Direct

impeded your ability to come to Court to testify?

A. No.

Q. And if somebody had asked you to testify at that proceeding, would you have been willing to do that?

A. Yes, I would have.

Q. And did anybody discuss with you the possibility --

A. No, they did not.

Q. -- of testifying?

A. No, they did not.

Q. Now, you mentioned that you first met Mr. Jamal when he was about a year old?

A. Yeah, a year, a little older.

Q. Now, could you tell us how did that come to pass, how did you come to see or know Mr. Jamal when he was an infant?

A. Well, I got to meet Mr. Jamal and his family because we were neighbors. They had moved into this development a little before I did. And then when I moved our back's faced one another, the back of our houses were somewhat facing one another.

Q. I see. And you were friends with his folks, his parents?

A. Yes.

Page 212.

Ruth Ballard - Direct

Q. Do you remember, what were their names?

A. Edith and William.

Q. And their last name?

A. Cook.

Q. The Cook family?

A. Yes.

Q. And you developed a friendship with the Cook family?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. How close was that friendship with the Cook family?

A. Ahh, it got to be very close over the years.

Q. What do you mean by it got to be close? How was it close?

A. Umm, by visiting, going to places together, to church together. To a movie together. To the park together.

Q. Was the Cook family church-going folks?

A. Yes.

Q. And when Mr. Jamal was an infant, how often would you see him?

A. About once or twice a week.

Q. And then over the years as he grew up, became a toddler and then a young boy and so on, did your relationship with the Cook family, did it become even

Page 213.

Ruth Ballard - Direct

closer over time?

A. Yes, it did.

Q. And did you have the opportunity to see this man grow up from an infant into a toddler and then into an elementary school child?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Miss Ballard, I know it is a long time ago, but I want you to search your mind on this. And I am going to ask you what impressed you the most, in thinking back on this man as a child, what impressed you the most about him? What struck you about him? Do you understand what I'm trying to get at?

A. Yes, I believe so.

Q. Okay. If you could try to share that with us, please.

A. Hmm-hmm. Okay. As he was growing up, Mumia was always a quiet child. And he grew to be a respectful young lad. A patient young lad. And he loved to read. He was very fond of reading.

Q. Let me interrupt you just for a moment. You said that he was a respectful young lad?

A. Yes.

Q. You also said that he was patient?

A. Yes.

Q. Tell me what you mean? What do you mean by

Page 214.

Ruth Ballard - Direct

the fact that he was respectful? How did that, how did he strike you as respectful?

A. Umm, by speaking to his elders and how he would speak to his elders.

Q. You mean he was very deferential to the adults?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Did you ever see him speak ill of his parents?

A. No, no.

Q. What kind of relationship did he have with his mother, that you saw?

A. He had a very good relationship with his mother. He was affectionate and very loving.

Q. And you said that he was patient. How did you come to that conclusion that he was a patient child?

A. He didn't seem to get upset about things. He didn't seem to be a child that would get upset about different things. Like some children if you tell them no you can't do this or you can't do the other, they are going to scream and holler. He wasn't that type of child.

Q. I see. And you said that he loved to read?

A. Yes.

Q. About how old was he when you noticed that he

Page 215.

Ruth Ballard - Direct

was very fond of books?

A. Well, about 8 or 9.

Q. Is there anything, Miss Ballard, in looking at him today and thinking back when he was a child, any events or anything that he did that stands out in your mind?

A. Yes. There is one particular incident where in the summertime mainly they would have Bible class. And a teacher would come around and teach them at the community hall different things about the Bible and the Lord. And Mumia would go as well as other children, but Mumia would do something different after the class was over. He would go home and he would gather up the little children and he would read to them from the literature that he had received in Bible class. As though he was the preacher or the teacher.

Q. How old was he when you noticed that he was doing that?

A. About 10.

Q. About 10 years old?

A. Hmm-hmm.

Q. And where would he do that?

A. Pardon?

Q. Where would he conduct these?

Page 216.

Ruth Ballard - Direct

A. On his mother's doorstep, or sometimes maybe even underneath a tree.

Q. What was it about that, that remembrance that you have just described, what does it tell you about this man Mumia Abu-Jamal?

A. It told me that he was different from ordinary children. And that he seemed to have a belief in a a higher being.

Q. Did you notice as he grew older as to whether his interest in spiritual matters, whether it grew? Did he continue to have an interest in spiritual matters?

A. Ahh, yes, as far as I know for awhile, yes.

Q. Now, was there anything in his childhood, you said that he was patient, but was there anything in his childhood that you observed that would suggest to you that he was a violent person?

A. No, nothing at all.

Q. Did you ever see him in the neighborhood acting like a bully or anything like that?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Were you in a position to see that if in fact he was that kind of child?

A. I mostly certainly believe I would have.

Q. And that's because of your friendship with the Cook family?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you able to just go over to the Cook family basically any time that you wanted to socialize with them?

A. Yes, I could.

Q. And was your home available to them as well?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. And did you in fact go over to the Cook family at various times of the day, at various times during the week?

A. Yes, various times during the week.

Q. Now, did you see Mr. Jamal when he became a teenager?

A. Yes.

Q. What kind of a teenager was he that you observed?

A. He still was a quiet child that seemed to think a lot.

Q. What do you mean he seemed to think a lot?

A. Ahh, well, to me a person that thinks a lot, they don't talk a lot.

Q. So he was a quiet person?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he still maintain an interest in books, a --

A. Yes.

Q. A fondness for books?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. He did?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. Now, Miss Ballard, in watching Mr. Jamal grow up, did you ever think that you would live to see him in a situation like he is in today?

A. No, I did not, no.

Q. Why is that?

A. Because of his character and his attitude towards people. And life. I would never think that he would be in such a situation.

MR. WILLIAMS: Okay. No further questions.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Good afternoon, ma'am.

A. Good afternoon.

Q. I just have a couple of questions for you, Mrs. Ballard. During the trial that you went to, you said that you went between two and four times during the course of the trial?

A. Yes.

Q. That was 13 years ago, wasn't it?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. And at that time you did not know Anthony Jackson, Mumia's lawyer, did you?

A. Not personally, no.

Q. And --

A. I would know him, you know, as I saw him.

Q. You would know him to recognize him?

A. Yes.

Q. But you wouldn't know him to have a speaking relationship with him?

A. No.

Q. And did he know you?

A. No.

Q. Did you know anybody that knew him?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Who would that be?

A. I mean as far as his family, Mumia's family.

Q. Oh, Mumia's family?

A. Hmm-hmm.

Q. Okay. And you would sometimes during the course of the trial see Mr. Jackson walking outside City Hall, going about his business or whatever?

A. Yes.

Q. But that was the only real contact that you had with the man; is that fair to say?

A. Yes, yes.

Q. And if he didn't know you and you didn't know him, how would you expect him to get in touch with you and know that you even existed to put you on the witness stand?

A. Umm, well, he knew Mumia's family and if he had wanted witnesses he could have asked Mumia's family.

Q. Okay. So you are saying, so you are --

THE COURT OFFICER: Quiet in the room. Thank you.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. You are saying that Mumia himself would have to be the person to let Mr. Jackson know I know Ruth Ballard back there?

A. Right.

MR. WILLIAMS: I object: That was not the witness' testimony.

THE COURT: He is cross-examining. I will give you redirect if you want.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. What I am saying, ma'am, what I am trying to say is Mr. Jackson would have no way of even knowing that you were here unless Mr. Jamal or Mr. Jamal's family told him that; would that be fair to say?

A. Yes.

MR. WILLIAMS: I am going to object to that also because she is not competent to testify --

THE COURT: Overruled.

MR. WILLIAMS: -- as to what was available to Mr. Jackson.

THE COURT: Because from what her testimony is they didn't know one another. She only knew him in seeing him, okay. So how else could she meet him unless somebody tells him.

MR. GRANT: I have nothing further, ma'am. Thank you.

THE COURT: Is that it?

MR. WILLIAMS: Just one question.

- - - - -

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Miss Ballard, one, or two questions, actually. You are not legally trained, are you?

A. Pardon me?

Page 222.

Ruth Ballard - Redirect

Q. You are not a lawyer?

A. No, I'm not.

Q. You have never been to law school?

A. No.

Q. And you've never been a defendant in a criminal trial, have you?

A. No, I have not.

Q. And do you know what the obligations of an attorney are in connection with securing witnesses for a client, do you know what those obligations are?

A. No, I do not.

MR. WILLIAMS: No further questions.

THE COURT: Anything else?

MR. GRANT: No, Your Honor, I have nothing further. Thank you.

THE COURT: All right, you are excused.

Now, before we recess until tomorrow, I think we have, from what you gave me -- Joe Davidson, Anthony Jackson, Jeremy Gelb, Gary Wakshul, Joe McGill and Robert Greer -- now, if he doesn't have any of those affidavits for them, will you please let him know roughly what they are going to testify to. So we don't have any hangups tomorrow, okay.

Page 223.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, if the Court pleases: I would like, I don't anticipate getting it until I get all documents from Counsel, which is the day that I am in Court, the morning that we are here, which would be tomorrow. I would like on the record an oral offer of proof right now as to what --

THE COURT: All right.

MR. GRANT: As to what Mr. McGill's testimony is going to be.

THE COURT: Why don't you give him that so we don't waste time tomorrow. Tell him, as to the ones you didn't give him an affidavit on, tell him what they are going to testify, give him a rough idea.

MR. WILLIAMS: Mr. Weinglass.

THE COURT: Okay, Mr. Weinglass. For instance, do you have anything on Joe Davidson?

MR. GRANT: Of course not, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right, tell him about Joe Davidson.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor.

MR. GRANT: And Gary Wakshul, while we're at it. And Jeremy Gelb, while we're at it.

Page 224.

THE COURT: Well, whatever ones you don't have. Joe Davidson. What is he, roughly, going to say?

MR. WEINGLASS: Character witness. Mitigation penalty witness who should have been called and wasn't.

THE COURT: I mean did he know him a long time? Relative? What is it?

MR. WEINGLASS: Precisely.

THE COURT: What is it, relative?

MR. WEINGLASS: No, he is a colleague and a friend.

THE COURT: A colleague and a friend.

MR. GRANT: That's great.

THE COURT: Okay. How about Anthony Jackson?

MR. WEINGLASS: Anthony Jackson, we filed an affidavit of Mr. Jackson.

THE COURT: So you have an affidavit?

MR. GRANT: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay, forget that. How about Jeremy Gelb?

MR. WEINGLASS: Jeremy Gelb, Your Honor, there is a matter which both Counsel have talked to Mr. Gelb about and we would both I think prefer to take it up with the Court in private.

MR. GRANT: No, I am asking what he intends to testify to. I am not asking about confidential matters. Offer of proof: Mr. Gelb.

MR. WEINGLASS: Mr. Gelb is an attorney. He will testify about his role in the appellate process.

MR. GRANT: Okay.

THE COURT: Okay. How about Gary Wakshul?

MR. WEINGLASS: Gary Wakshul, Your Honor will recall, was a witness who the defense attempted to call.

THE COURT: Oh, he is the police officer.

MR. WEINGLASS: He is the police officer.

THE COURT: He now works for the Court system.

MR. GRANT: That's right.

MR. WEINGLASS: That's right.

MR. GRANT: And I know what his expected testimony is.

Page 226.

THE COURT: How about Joe McGill?

MR. WEINGLASS: Joe McGill, if they don't know what Joe McGill will testify to...

MR. GRANT: Judge, I don't know.

MR. WEINGLASS: He is the Assistant District Attorney, formerly.

THE COURT: I know you are calling him for a specific purpose, let him know.

MR. WEINGLASS: That's right, he was the Assistant District Attorney in the trial. We are calling him for that reason.

MR. GRANT: No, well, I object and move to strike. He is subpoenaed, you are calling him for a reason. You could subpoena the Judge. That is ridiculous. Could I have an offer of proof, Counselor?

THE COURT: Give him something.

MR. WEINGLASS: That is the offer of proof.

THE COURT: Well, that is no offer of proof. Well, you got the thing from Robert Greer.

MR. GRANT: Yes. Mr. McGill would like to know if he is being called tomorrow. And I am going to move to ask the Court, or invite the Court's attention to my motion to preclude him unless Counsel could give us an offer of proof. We have had magnanimous forbearing with the rules as it is.

THE COURT: Tell him why you want to call him. Because under our rules he could ask that I disqualify him as a witness. Now, maybe he will call him, I don't know. But if you want to call him as a witness, tell him why you are calling him.

MR. WEINGLASS: Under our rules we would have 30 days to prepare an affidavit.

THE COURT: No, no, no, we are now in Court here, don't worry about the 30 days. That's out.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, Your Honor, the District Attorney can't have it both ways.

THE COURT: All right, I will take it up tomorrow with you, then.

MR. GRANT: Mr. McGill would like to know, from a note that I have here.

THE COURT: Well, he should know, because he has to be prepared to come in here with whatever things you want to bring out. I don't know, he may have a record of this, I don't know.

MR. GRANT: He may not have to testify at all after Your Honor rules. Based upon their lack of notice and their lack of an affidavit. And their lack of an offer.

THE COURT: I am trying to save him. But he just won't listen.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, the District Attorney's Office has 18 volumes of his performance.

THE COURT: I know that.

MR. WEINGLASS: That's what I am going to question him about.

THE COURT: 18 volumes of his performance?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yeah. During the trial.

THE COURT: In this trial?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, in the 1982 trial.

THE COURT: Yes, the trial.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right, yeah, I am going to question him about matters of record in the volumes.

THE COURT: He is going to talk to him about matters of record in the volumes.

MR. GRANT: There are 4,000 pages of notes of testimony. The D.A. can take the stand on any particular case and talk about anything from I believe the guy was innocent the whole time or guilty the whole time or I thought there should have been less evidence that we had to put on. I would like an offer of proof, Judge. I don't think I am being unreasonable.

THE COURT: Okay, let me say this to you: Bring in Rules, cases, whatever you have, Xerox it for me. I will read the case, I will look at the Rule, and I will make a decision. Okay.

MR. GRANT: Thank you.

THE COURT: Tomorrow.

THE COURT OFFICER: This Court now stands adjourned until 1O:OO a.m. tomorrow morning.

(Brief recess.)

THE COURT OFFICER: The Judge will come out back out now. Please take your seats. Thank you very much. Close that door please. This Court is now reconvened. Everyone will cease all conversation.

Page 230.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I want the record to reflect that Miss Wolkenstein asked the Court to remain. The Court left.

THE COURT: I know, I had already left, Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: Exactly. Mr. Grant went in, asked the Court to come back, and the Court came back.

THE COURT: Even my law clerk came in and asked me about it.

MR. WEINGLASS: At Mr. Grant's request.

THE COURT: I didn't know what you were talking about. There is too much noise in this Courtroom. If you don't shut up I will put you all outside. Take him out.

SPECTATOR: You are a Judge. You are a Judge.

THE COURT: Put him out. It is getting to be a circus here, Mr. Weinglass. Stop this nonsense. I had finished for the day.

THE COURT OFFICER: Quiet in the Courtroom, please.

Page 231.

THE COURT: Boy, I will tell you, this is getting to be a circus. It is a shame. It is a disgrace.

THE COURT OFFICER: Silence.

THE COURT: Please keep quiet so I can hear.

What is the problem?

MR. WEINGLASS: What we have is a matter that Miss Wolkenstein --

THE COURT: All right, what is it, Counselor? Don't give me all of that. Let's get right to it. What is your problem?

MR. WEINGLASS: I think the record should reflect that Miss Wolkenstein was speaking to the Court in the --

THE COURT: I had already left. I said I was leaving and I left the bench.

MR. WEINGLASS: And she was speaking.

THE COURT: I couldn't hear her. There was so much noise in this Courtroom. I said quiet, please.

MR. WEINGLASS: There was quiet too.

THE COURT: I disagree with you. There was noise. That's why I was leaving.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I believe the noise was my speaking to you and you up and walked off the bench.

THE COURT: Fine. What is your problem? Let's get right to the issue and stop this nonsense. Come on.

MR. WEINGLASS: We objected to the Court coming back. Mr. Grant insisted on it.

THE COURT: You don't want me to come back, I will leave. You want me to leave?

MR. GRANT: Your Honor --

THE COURT: I am not going to stand here and listen to this nonsense.

MR. GRANT: I understand, Judge, but Jamal was about to be taken back and I understand that Counsel wanted to deal with these discovery matters. I asked the Sheriffs, since Mr. Jamal would like to be present on each and every proceeding, not to take him up so we could discuss this on the record. They were kind enough to oblige me.

Then I asked the Court, your law clerk if she could ask you if you could come back so we could deal with the discovery issue so that the proceeding could go smoothly.

THE COURT: What is the problem with this discovery?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, I think we have concluded for the day.

MR. GRANT: The problem is they are not entitled to any and they keep hassling me about it.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, we can bring this matter up after cool heads prevail tomorrow morning. We will all be back here. This can be argued appropriately at a better time than now. I think there's been a --

THE COURT: But he wants to know where he stands.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, we want to know where we stand.

THE COURT: Tell me. What is your problem?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: You did not want to deal with this this morning. There was now an incident here, I believe we should just begin in the morning.

THE COURT: No, I would like to do it now. Because I am not going to do it tomorrow morning so let's do it now. If you got a problem tell me what it is. What is your problem?

MR. DOMZALSKI: Your Honor, David Domzalski from the City Solicitor's Office.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Excuse me. These are our subpoenas. Could we begin on this, then, and just do it properly?

THE COURT: You represent the Police Department?

MR. DOMZALSKI: Your Honor, the Police Department received several subpoenas, as well as the Medical Examiner's Office received several subpoenas in this matter to produce certain documents. I contacted several officials in the Police Department regarding production of those documents. A lot of those documents, Your Honor, one, no longer exist; two, are not in the custody and control of the Police Department; or, three, create a very undue burden to produce because the subpoenas are very broad and would require a lot of manhours by the Police Department in order to do that.

THE COURT: Why don't you narrow down what you want.

MR. DOMZALSKI: Your Honor, we have attempted to do that.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We said that actually we would get back to you about the one issue that I think needs to be narrowed down, which is number five, and we could do that later today. So we could do that.

MR. DOMZALSKI: Two other issues, particularly with respect to a subpoena for the Detective William Wynn. William Wynn is a detective that conducts line-ups in the Police Department, Your Honor. Basically, the subpoena directed to Detective Wynn was for a certain photo array and any other documents of a broad nature. Basically, we asked the defense Counsel to give us a range for Mr. Wynn with respect to line-ups. And the only files that he has are line-up files. We need the exact dates to go back into the archives to see if he has any records pertaining to line-ups that were conducted in or around that time related to the event. With respect to --

THE COURT: Well, did we have a line-up in this case?

MR. DOMZALSKI: The problem, Your Honor, there were no line-ups. The defense --

Page 236.

THE COURT: Well, if there was no line-up.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Right, there is no point in looking. The defense requested them. It was denied by Your Honor. And so --

THE COURT: Wait awhile. It wasn't denied by me.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Excuse me, it was a prior judge on that.

THE COURT: Please be accurate will you.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Excuse me. All right, however, the question is whether or not there are, there are composites of photo arrays. Now, it may not be necessarily in Mr. Wynn's custody. And if that is the case I will seek them elsewhere. I believe the place to seek --

THE COURT: What are you trying to prove, Counselor?

MR. DOMZALSKI: Fine, I would ask that that subpoena be quashed.

THE COURT: It would be quashed because it is not specific enough.

MR. DOMZALSKI: Or withdrawn.

THE COURT: He doesn't have any.

Page 237.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: If you don't have it you say you don't have it.

THE COURT: He said there was no line-up here in this case so how could they have anything.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I think we could go to the particulars.

MR. GRANT: I object to them even asking and him answering it because all this is is a fishing expedition to try to find some evidence even though it doesn't exist. That doesn't stop them from slapping subpoenas on everybody they could find.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Excuse me.

MR. GRANT: The Supreme Court has ruled so we are not providing it.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: You wanted an offer of proof, I will give you an offer of proof. We have an affidavit, we have a witness who says that one of the witnesses here was shown a photo array. He was shown a photo array by the police.

THE COURT: Well, put that witness on the stand, let him say it under oath.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: The police never informed the prosecution, never informed the defense that there were any photo arrays. As the Court is well aware, there is an obligation --

Page 238.

THE COURT: The only picture they have of him is the picture they took when he was arrested.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, I don't know that.

THE COURT: Well, you don't know. I don't know it either, but.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We have contrary information and we believe that information --

THE COURT: I said there would be no discovery here, period, okay. Now, if you have any proof, bring that gentleman in here, let him take this stand, let him testify under oath, and we will take it from there.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, we have an affidavit.

THE COURT: I know you have an affidavit. Bring the person in here, I said.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, could I complete a sentence? You are asking for why, you are saying it is a fishing expedition, I am

Page 239.

I am trying to explain why.

THE COURT: I said I would not allow any discovery. I bent over backwards to a certain extent but this is it.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Regardless of what the offers of proof are, regardless of the points that we are trying to make here and the affidavits --

MR. GRANT: I could resolve this issue for her.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. GRANT: They have an investigator named Robert Bugler, who I imagine is somewhere in the Court today, probably him (indicating), who claimed to have talked to a witness who said that there was a photo display shown. That witness has been sitting there all day long and we don't know if his affidavit is based on hearsay. We could put the witness right there (indicating the witness stand) and that could resolve her issues.

THE COURT: All right, who is the witness?

MR. GRANT: Mr. Robert Harkins has been here for two days.

Page 240.

THE COURT: He doesn't have him on the list.

MR. GRANT: I know.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Because he is not being called today or tomorrow by the defense.

THE COURT: All right, when you get ready to call him let me know.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: The defense has informed Mr. Harkins as to when he should appear and it is not today and it is not tomorrow. As Mr. Weinglass has previously explained. We have subpoenaed for information about photo arrays --

THE COURT: Unless they give you something specific I can't do anything. You just come in and ask that the subpoena be quashed, okay.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Could we go through the particulars -- or let's do this tomorrow morning.

THE COURT: No, I am not going to do it tomorrow morning.

Tomorrow morning we are going to do the witnesses.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Then let's go through the other things that are on the subpoena and deal with it point by point so we have a clear record here. The subpoena that's being responded to indicates that there is a commander of Officer Wakshul who is being subpoenaed along with his records including information about Mr. Wakshul's work and vacation records.

MR. DOMZALSKI: That is the second subpoena, Your Honor. That is directed to the commanding officer of Reports Control. The first subpoena was directed to Detective William Wynn.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: That one we hear there are no, we know that there are no line-ups, you are saying there are no photo arrays maintained there, you don't have any information, right?

MR. DOMZALSKI: Right.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: So this subpoena we are on you are also responding to --

MR. DOMZALSKI: Paragraph 1, that the Captain at that time Henry Marie is no longer a member of the Police Department. And therefore we can not produce him, he is not under our custody or control. And we submitted an affidavit to that fact, along with his employee history record, which indicates he was a Captain of the 6th District around from approximately 1980 to December of '82, and that he retired in 1993.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Okay, the second element of that was information concerning Police Officer Wakshul's work and vacation records for the period of June lst, '82 to July 15th, 1982.

MR. DOMZALSKI: That is also contained in subpoena C, which was directed to the Police Commissioner. And what we have produced and provided to defense Counsel is a document called a time usage record. Which we have an affidavit from the budget office of the Police Department, and the finance. And the time usage record basically indicates time that Wakshul used in 1982 during, well, the run is actually from January to July of '82. I'm sorry. Strike that '82.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We have not gotten any information concerning any of the notations, memos, requests for that vacation time, who approved that vacation time, since Mr. Wakshul's investigative statement said no vacation on it very clearly.

THE COURT: You are calling Wakshul: He will tell you.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We are requesting per the subpoena any of the records concerning the situation of Mr. Wakshul applying for his vacation.

THE COURT: He told you what he could give you.

MR. DOMZALSKI: This was found so far. That's all we have found so far.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Is there a possibility of any other materials in your file? If so we are requesting them for our subpoena. Would you search for them or produce them?

MR. DOMZALSKI: The only other possible place would be in the 6th District, if the 6th District keeps records back to 1982.

THE COURT: Why don't you send your investigator down there if they do. No, I mean her. She has an investigator.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: There is nothing else there?

MR. DOMZALSKI: Basically, our records

Page 244.

we have found so far is the time usage record.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: There are other places to search. I request that you do so.

MR. DOMZALSKI: That will be done.

THE COURT: He is not working for you. You have your investigator to go down to the 6th District and find out.

MR. DOMZALSKI: Quite frankly, Your Honor, we won't let their investigator go into the 6th District to look.

THE COURT: Well, talk to somebody, then.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Next issue is point 3, a codicil which deals with all the ballistics, firearms, et cetera, reports, and physical evidence. And there, as I understand it, your position is that it's been turned over to the District Attorney's Office?

MR. DOMZALSKI: Yeah, basically, Your Honor, there are several paragraphs of this second subpoena. Based on information and belief, all that information has been provided to the District Attorney's Office and is in their custody and control.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We are requesting copies of what has not been turned over to the District Attorney's Office. It is very difficult to believe that everything has been turned over to the District Attorney's Office and no copies remain in Police Department files. In fact, what we believe is that there is information that has not been turned over to the defense and will be contained in the District Attorney's files and in the police files. So we would request to look at all information, all records, testing, et cetera.

THE COURT: You can't proceed with a shotgun.

MR. DOMZALSKI: I could certainly ask the Police Department to go through their records one more time, with some specificity, for some kind of particular document.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We want all the reports dealing with the testing of the bullet, of the weapons, all of the bullets and fragments found, removed, et cetera, from the police officer.

MR. GRANT: I object to that. It was given to defense Counsel 13 years ago. Mr. Jamal had physical possession of it. We have given them a number of documents just based on common courtesy to out-of-state Counsel. But Your Honor has ruled, the Supreme Court has ruled. All they want is discovery through the back door because they couldn't get it through the front door.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I believe that the position of the District Attorney in response to our discovery motion is that these items were available to us by subpoena and we should do so. Which is precisely what we are doing. Now they are coming in saying it's discovery and they won't give it to us.

I want to just put on the record that yesterday morning we attempted to serve the District Attorney's Office for the District Attorney's file on this case. Our investigator who was serving that subpoena was informed by the representative of the District Attorney's Office that she would not accept that subpoena, and that it required a Court order to do so. It is my understanding that that subpoena has been served and has been accepted. Now, whether there will be a motion to quash or not I don't know, but the point being that the District

Attorney's Office took the position that despite the fact that they are public officials, they would not even accept a subpoena for their records. Which is what we feel now we are being told here, that in fact all of the Police Department records as to Detective William Thomas, who was the supervising, supervising officer in this investigation, is with the D.A.'s Office, the ballistics and firearms report is in the D.A.'s Office, all reports concerning sketches, photographs of the crime scene, recovery of the weapons, is in the D.A.'s Office.

MR. DOMZALSKI: As the Court knows, Your Honor, that is part of a typical homicide binder.

MR. GRANT: What it reflects really is discovery. We have the discovery which we gave to them. That's all we have. Mr. McGill, Your Honor, turned his entire file over to the defense at the time of trial.

THE COURT: I know.

MR. GRANT: They have exactly what we have.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Furthermore, Your

Page 248.

Honor, there is a request on the same subpoena for information as to the polygraph test, the polygraph test conducted on Dessie Hightower and any other witness in this case. And the answer does not indicate at all whether there was any polygraph test to the best of the information --

THE COURT: It is not admissible.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: The fact of whether or not there was a polygraph test of a person with favorable evidence for this Defendant, for Mr. Jamal, is a Brady question, Your Honor. Whether the polygraph is admissible or not, it is a Brady issue.

THE COURT: Well, you have an investigator.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: It is a Constitutional issue going to the fundamental question --

THE COURT: Do you have any witnesses who are going to take the stand?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: -- of whether or not -- excuse me, Your Honor -- of whether or not --

THE COURT: Counselor, please

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: -- of whether or not

Page 249.

Mr. Jamal had a fair trial or not. And we are seeking, based on our information from our investigation, and an affidavit of Mr. Hightower -- who will be here to testify --

THE COURT: All right.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: -- that in fact a polygraph was given to him.

THE COURT: Who had a polygraph?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Mr. Hightower. And the fact that polygraph was never disclosed to the defense, that is a violation of fundamental Constitutional rights.

MS. PERKINS: If I may, Your Honor, Linda Perkins for the Commonwealth. I submitted, I filed the discovery answer that the Commonwealth filed several weeks ago, or last week, whenever it was. And there are just a couple of things that I want to point out, given what we have here.

The Commonwealth, yes, in it's answer to the Defendant's discovery motion did say that much of the documents they were requesting were in the hands of the Police Department. Counsel here for the City Solicitor's Office has now represented that we have that information. That does appear to be a conflict. But what has occurred, Your Honor, is that Counsel has consistently made an over-broad request for what has been considered discovery, what is the rough notes that may be in a file. Somewhere buried in a file somewhere. We have the ballistic report, which is a one-page document. We may have a report from the Mobile Crime Unit, which is a typewritten report, which may be six pages. We do not have the individual work files for each of these police units.

Now, it is my understanding that these Counsel do not understand Philadelphia procedure. Obviously, they don't. That's why they have local Counsel who is supposed to explain these things to them. There are different agencies in the Police Department who each have their own records and things to get. The Commonwealth has not misrepresented anything. We only have the things that we have given them. We have nothing more than that. And the Commonwealth has not misrepresented anything.

Now, if they have a specific request for some document they should say what it is.

Page 251.

They can't just come in and ask for the world without a showing of relevance. And that's why they first have to put the witnesses on. If they have a witness who says photo arrays were shown to me, fine, put the witness on the stand to say that. The Commonwealth responded in it's discovery answer that it had no information that any photo array was shown. The Commonwealth also represented it had no information that there was any favorable polygraph that constituted Brady material. That has been consistently said to them, that is part of our discovery answer. And Counsel can continue to insist that these items exist. That does not make it so. So the Commonwealth stands by --

I am speaking, ma'am.

The Commonwealth stands by --

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: You have --

THE COURT OFFICER: Quiet in the Courtroom.

THE COURT: Counselor, please, for a minute. He can't take down everything from all of you so just wait a minute.

MS. PERKINS: The Commonwealth stands by it's answer, Your Honor, to their discovery request. If they wanted specific documents they have to demonstrate that they are relevant and material. This PCRA proceeding does not give them the license to go on a fishing expedition to examine every file in the City of Philadelphia regardless of who it belongs to, or even to come in and examine the trial file. There is case law on that point. They have to first establish that it is material and relevant; and these blanket requests for every rough note, sketch, memorandum, simply do not suffice.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Okay.

THE COURT: Excuse me. Wait awhile. My printout sheet shows David Rudovsky. Is he local Counsel here for you people?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: He is local Counsel, yes.

THE COURT: For you people?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Yes.

THE COURT: Why don't you take it up with him?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We have taken it up with him.

THE COURT: Tell him to come in next

time.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I think the problem here is that our discovery motion on our subpoenas are quite specific. And the interruption occurred when I was dealing with an extremely specific and particular question, which was whether or not there was a polygraph done of Dessie Hightower and any other witnesses in this case. That was not answered, but, rather, an interruption occurred. We are asking for a search in the records of the Police Department as to whether or not there was a polygraph done.

MR. DOMZALSKI: Your Honor, it is my understanding and information that information related to polygraphs, if any, of Dessie Hightower were provided to the District Attorney's Office. Maybe we are playing semantics here, but that's my understanding and belief. In an effort of due diligence, I will ask the Police Department to go and look for other polygrapher records, but.

MR. GRANT: First of all, Your Honor, I could respond to Counsel, if I may. Unless it is a polygraph taken of the accused individual, since polygraphs are not admissible in any court of law in any of the contiguous 48 states that I am aware, or perhaps even outside the adjacent states, it is not exculpatory material. And even if he passed the polygraph, only the pre-polygraph questions and/or answers he may have given perhaps are subject to discovery under Brady. But the mere fact that a polygraph was given is not --

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We are not asking for the mere fact --

MR. GRANT: -- under Rule 305, under which we operate in Pennsylvania, there is no such discoverable item. Therefore, even if it existed, I would object to producing it.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: All right, so what I am hearing is that there was a polygraph. That's what I am hearing.

THE COURT: I didn't hear any such thing, but.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Anyway, I want to make it clear.

THE COURT: Bring your witness in.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: That the answer from the City Solicitor's Office is this information on the polygraph is in the District Attorney's Office. And as I said, they are subpoenaed and we will look forward to the District Attorney's response to that subpoena.

There are a couple other things on this codicil that we need to discuss. There is a request for documents concerning complaints filed between January lst, 1977 and '82, and January lst, 1982, against any of the officers involved in the questioning of witnesses involved in this case which involved allegations of brutality, excessive force, prejudice based on race, ethnicity or national origin, and false arrest. And the names and addresses of the persons who lodged those complaints. That is a specific request as to specific officers who were involved in the interrogation of witnesses here. The answer from the City, if I may just say, is that there are no documents available because there is a five-year life of them and they have been destroyed.

However, I ask whether or not there is any record maintained on any of the names of officers still, even without the records. What I am looking for, quite clearly, is the names of any officers who engaged in acts of coercion or brutality against witnesses who were also involved in this particular case. I believe that it is highly relevant. It is Brady material and it is something that I believe should be able to be released because I can't believe that there is no record existing in any way, shape or form at this point of the names at least and the badge numbers of those officers.

MR. DOMZALSKI: Your Honor, we submitted an affidavit from the now commanding officer of the Internal Affairs Division who directed a search for records specific to this, to this particular request. There is a five-year retention of files in Internal Affairs of complaints at the time pursuant to Mayor's Executive Order 1-80. And the affidavit of, I believe it's Inspector Boyle, indicates no files were found regarding this request.

Now they are asking for any information on any officer. I would assume, and I am only assuming, that may relate to discipline somehow. Well, discipline in the Police Department is not contained in Internal Affairs materials, it is contained in a personnel file or the Police Board of Inquiry records, which have not been subject to subpoenas as of this date. And, you know, basically, with respect to this paragraph, we have complied with it. We have done a search for records and there are no records in Internal Affairs where complaints against police are lodged.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. GRANT: I do have for Counsel's benefit a document marked as Commonwealth Exhibit number 1 for this particular hearing, which purports to be a photocopy of something that did exist in 1982. And it is an order from the Honorable Judge Ribner, who is a Judge of the calendar court, which says Commonwealth versus Mumia Abu-Jamal, 3-19-82. I hereby certify that on the 19th day of March of '82, the Court directs that Police Commissioner Morton Solomon produce the Internal Affairs Bureau file on the complaint against police filed by Anthony Jackson, Esquire on behalf of Mumia Abu-Jamal to be furnished forthwith to the Honorable Paul Ribner, Room 444, City Hall. And it has an asterisk next to the words file of the

Page 258.

Internal Affairs Bureau, including correspondence between Anthony Jackson, Joseph McGill, Commissioner Solomon, and a copy of order 1-80. This says that they got that 13 years ago. And now that it's been destroyed it is becoming an issue.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Actually, we are not asking for that.

MR. GRANT: Could I have this marked, Your Honor?

MR. WEINGLASS: That is not what we asked for. We asked for files concerning any of the officers who were involved concerning the questioning of witnesses, not the persons who arrested and beat up Mr. Jamal that night. By the people who questioned, officers who questioned witnesses in this case. Along with whether any of them were subject to investigations concerning charges of brutality, coercion or prejudice or bias of some sort.

THE COURT: That's like sort of a fishing expedition.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: No, it isn't, Your Honor. We have reason to believe --

THE COURT: And I said to you give me

Page 259.

a case that says you could fish and I will let you fish.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, this is extremely relevant.

THE COURT: Well, it is relevant if you give me a case. Xerox a case for me.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, not only is it relevant given the information we have and the witnesses we are going to be producing in this hearing, but it's also relevant because it is well-known and documented, a matter of public record, that this Police Department has engaged in a history of coercion, beating --

THE COURT: Now we are putting the Police Department on trial here. I thought this was Mumia Abu-Jamal.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: This was 1979, the U.S. Justice Department action against the City of Philadelphia, Mayor Rizzo and the Police Department, in which substantial evidence of this type of activity was brought forward and proven as such. And these practices obviously continue today. We can not pick up a paper, any paper in this City, in this period of time, in which there is not a report about police officers who have manufactured evidence -- I am now talking about the 39th District incident, which has now led to the overturning of 39 drug cases. There just recently were five police officers who pled guilty to violating the civil rights of people they arrested. And in one instance, a 53-year-old grandmother, another instance a Temple University student. These are all instances recently. So from the past to now there has been a process and a practice in this Police Department in this City of coercing witnesses, of framing people up and prosecuting them illegally.

THE COURT: Why don't you bring these witnesses in?

MR. DOMZALSKI: Your Honor, may I at least respond? I certainly object to the characterization by defense Counsel.

In point of fact, I will actually cite you some case law -- the case is Commonwealth versus Petrose, whereby in order for the issue of the civil rights of the defendant to be admissible with respect to discipline of a police officer, it has to be an exception to the prior bad acts rule. There, one, must be an administrative proceeding in which a police officer has been found guilty of some wrongdoing by the police department. In Petrose, Your Honor, this was a case involving a bribery defendant, and the subject officer was demoted as a result of taking bribes at some point in time. And that is the narrow exception to the prior bad acts rule in Pennsylvania with respect to impeachment purposes, which I assume would be the underlying motive for trying to get these documents ahead of time and to put these officers on with respect to prior disciplinary practices.

And, Your Honor, at that time -- obviously, I don't have the records of these officers -- but it would be that limited scope.

And I would also just state for the record that there are many fine police officers who go out there and do their job everyday and do it in a very hard, vigorous and sincere manner. And myself -- also being a police officer, I want to add, at one point in time, for 13 years, and serving this City -- would strenuously object to the characterization. Certainly there are officers in the Police

Page 262.

Department that do things wrong and we take every sincere effort to get them out.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Well, obviously the record indicates these activities. And we request again to get that information for the reasons given.

Well, you said that you don't have those records. And I am looking again for a list of names of the people.

MR. DOMZALSKI: As I understand it, we are switching the focus to disciplinary.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We will send you a new subpoena if necessary that says that.

MR. DOMZALSKI: Okay.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We will do that until we work through each and every file that is possible, if that's the way we will do it. As opposed to simply grunting, looking and not understanding what the request is, which is very clear, it is very clear from our subpoena and looking at the information in the body.

There is another subpoena, as I understand it, which we are dealing with here. And that's the one that's addressed to the Police Commissioner. And this is another aspect of the vacation, the personnel files question.

MR. DOMZALSKI: I believe we dealt with that. When we combined the subpoenas we mentioned them.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: There is another aspect.

MR. DOMZALSKI: Paragraph 2.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Request for any and all records of intelligence, civil disobedience, and civil affairs records concerning Mumia Abu-Jamal, covering the period from January 1971 to December 1981. Attached to our Petition is a series of documents released from the Federal Bureau of investigation. They are the files on Mumia Abu-Jamal maintained by the FBI, over 700 pages. Many, many of those pages indicate that the work, the surveillance, political surveillance of Mr. Jamal was done in tandem with, at the initiation of, using reports of informers and from agents from the Philadelphia Police Department from these divisions. We know as a fact, because we have these files, that in fact that happened. This was from the period of 1968 through 1973. I know as a fact that Mayor Rizzo when he was Police Commissioner and the

Page 264.

Police Inspector Fencil maintained surveillance records on some 18,000-plus people who lived in the City of Philadelphia. And we have every reason to believe from the FBI files and from this fact of public record that there are records on Mr. Jamal which would be maintained under the supervision of the Philadelphia Police Department in one or another of their divisions from the period of January lst, 1968 to December 3lst, 1981.

Now, there is an answer here. And it --

MR. DOMZALSKI: Once again, Your Honor, basically --

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: It says no records were located. It is not clear to me --

THE COURT: All right, let him answer you.

MR. DOMZALSKI: Basically, Your Honor, with regard to the subpoena, the intelligence division of the civil disobedience unit of the Police Department: There is no such animal that exists at this time. Basically what I did, I directed the subpoenas to the commanding officer of the Intelligence Unit and to the commanding officer of the Civil Affairs Unit. But those commanders had people directed to files related to that time period and no files were located.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: On Mr. Jamal in particular?

MR. DOMZALSKI: Yes.

THE COURT: That's what it says.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: That just flies in the face of reality given this 7O0 pages from the FBI that cite Philadelphia Police.

THE COURT: Use the FBI file, for what it's worth. Okay, anything else?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: That was the Intelligence division. What about the civil disobedience?

MR. DOMZALSKI: Well, there is no intelligence division of the civil disobedience unit. I directed it to the Intelligence Unit of the Police Department, Civil Affairs Division. Records were also reviewed I believe with respect to Robert Small --

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your representation is they do not exist for this period of time?

MR. DOMZALSKI: No.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: There are files,

Page 266.

there are files of political surveillance?

MR. DOMZALSKI: I am not representing that at all.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: There are no files on Mr. Jamal?

MR. DOMZALSKI: With regard to the language of the subpoena, there are no records. That's what the Commanders have signed in affidavits.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: This is pertaining to Mumia Jamal?

MR. DOMZALSKI: Right.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: You are saying there is none for Mumia Abu-Jamal or Wesley Cook for this period?

MR. DOMZALSKI: Right.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: All right, we will do another subpoena for the Black Panther Party and organization and people who were active and who raised their voice in opposition to certain policies by the Mayor and the Police Department and try again. All right, there is another, there is another aspect. I think there is maybe another Counsel here to deal with another subpoena.

Page 267.

Is that right?

MR. DOMZALSKI: Your Honor, this issue regards the issuance of a subpoena to the Medical Examiner's Office directed to the personnel file of Paul Hoyer. The City would move to quash that subpoena outright because it wouldn't reveal any pertinent or relevant information. Basically, the scope, as I understand it, of Counsel's, or one of Counsel's representations of what they are looking for, is it's material to determine the question of the competence of Dr. Hoyer in some way, shape or form. And basically, again, I think with respect to any potential disciplinary issues. I have already set forth the case law in Commonwealth versus Petrose. I believe it would apply to a civilian and not just a police officer.

And with regard to the personnel file, the only thing of possible relevance regarding competence would be a performance report. And it seems to me if there are any performance reports in the personnel file, the only one of any potential relevance would be the one in 1981, when he did the autopsy.

Page 268.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Okay? The reason we made this request, Your Honor, is that while Dr. Hoyer was testifying it became clear that there was an exit wound of Officer Faulkner that showed up on the slides and was not in the autopsy report. This raises substantial questions as to the reliability of the autopsy report. And we believe that it's very germane to our inquiries here to be able to take a look at the personnel files of Dr. Hoyer.

MR. DOMZALSKI: Your Honor, the practice, you know, at least in my experience, in the Court of Common Pleas, Your Honor, is that in situations like this, often times the Court does an in camera inspection of the files to make a determination on materials and the relevance. I don't know if the Court wants to entertain doing that. But certainly we have asked to quash the subpoena outright, but if the Court believes that there is a sufficient offer of proof to merit an in camera review, the City would not appeal that.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: And of course, Your Honor, anything that would demonstrate in some way the incompetence of the autopsy report would probably be well deemed Brady material in this instance.

MR. DOMZALSKI: I think that's about it for me.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor is not commenting. Is your silence denial, agreement or taking it in camera?

THE COURT: Counselor, as I said to you before: Xerox me a case that says you are entitled to this and I will be glad to read it.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: There is another issue.

MR. GRANT: I will deal with it.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: You will take it? I thought there was Counsel representing the City on this.

MR. GRANT: Don't worry about opposition Counsel. You could state your position.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Could you indicate on the record your name and who that you represent from the City.

MS. PASQUARIELLO: Good afternoon, Your Honor. My name is Anne Pasquariello, Deputy City Solicitor. I am Counsel for the Medical Examiner's office.

Page 270.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: All right, this is in response to the subpoena that we made to get all of the reports and information, slides, tapes of the Medical Examiner's autopsy. I have already indicated the importance of this. That there already was evidence at the trial that this autopsy was significantly flawed. Perhaps totally unreliable. And that we want to see, basically, the material and the reports, notes, tapes and slides of the autopsy. We do have the autopsy report. That's not an issue. We want all the other documents surrounding it. And as I said, there are, as I understand it, there are tapes made by the Medical Examiners doing the autopsy, there are slides made. The Medical Examiner was looking at these slides when he testified and he said oops, I see another exit wound which I didn't put on the autopsy. And we believe that we are entitled to this material.

It is also my understanding that we were going to get this material and that there was no objection until Mr. Grant intervened here. And as we can see -- are you going -- he is prepared not to even allow Counsel to argue it herself.

MS. PASQUARIELLO: Your Honor, if you will: I have the original Medical Examiner's file, which contains things other than the autopsy report. I spoke with Mr. Rudovsky on Monday. He suggested that I bring the original plus a copy. Which I've done. I can give a copy of the Medical Examiner's report to defense Counsel. And to the District Attorney's Office.

I also have Kodachrome slides, nine, identification photographs, and photographs of the injuries of Police Officer Faulkner, which at this point I can give to defense Counsel.

THE COURT: (Indicating).

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Thank you very much. Okay. That's fine.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time.)

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: All right, I think that for the moment, until we get to the next round of the subpoenas, which are returnable tomorrow, that concludes this.

There is one other thing, Your Honor. I had asked earlier on for certain documents to be marked in as exhibits. As the Court indicated reticence to do that, I would really like to know from the record whether or not the various documents that were proffered at the very beginning of today --

THE COURT: I don't know that anybody identified them. I don't even know what they are. Newspaper articles?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: They were given to the Court.

THE COURT: Newspaper articles?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: There were three newspaper articles and then there was correspondence. We believe that they are part of the record, they are part of the arguments that we were making before this Court. I am interested in knowing at this point whether the Court has had them marked.

THE COURT: I guess the Court Officer would have them.

THE COURT OFFICER: We only have one, we only have C-l, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Is that all we have?

THE COURT OFFICER: Yes, Your Honor.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: In other words, you

Page 273.

accepted the offer of an exhibit --

THE COURT OFFICER: No, nobody accepted anything. We took nothing from the Bar of the Court which was entered this afternoon. Right, that's the only thing we got.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: No, there were --

THE COURT OFFICER: We took nothing else.

THE COURT OFFICER: Excuse me. Excuse me. Could I? Excuse me.

THE COURT: Well, do you have copies.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: There were copies placed here, given to the Court and Assistant District Attorney. I believe the District Attorney has their copies. Unless they will say it disappeared. The others were part on the Bar of the Court. It was Your Honor who refused to accept them.

THE COURT: Don't give them to me, Counselor: I don't hold these things.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: You said you are not taking them.

THE COURT: I don't hold these things.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: They were put here for the Clerk to take. There were four items that were marked. Were indicated to be marked.

THE COURT: They are looking for it.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Defense 1, 2, 3 and 4. And they should have been.

MS. PERKINS: If I may, Your Honor: The newspaper articles that they referred to this morning, I believe Mr. Grant, I saw him myself and he just confirmed with me, he gave those back to the defense table. Where they are, I don't know. As for the correspondence between the Commonwealth and defense Counsel yesterday regarding their request to see additional exhibits --

THE COURT OFFICER: Here they are.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Let's try again. Could we try again?

MS. PERKINS: If I could finish my statement, Your Honor: With regard to the correspondence that Counsel wanted marked, I don't know if it was marked or not, I told the Quarter Sessions Clerk we have no objection to that being made part of the record. It is correspondence that is between Counsel. And I believe that was included in the Quarter Sessions file, whether it was marked or not. It doesn't have to be marked. A letter can, very obviously, be put in the Quarter Sessions file.

Page 275.

THE COURT: Where is the Clerk of Court? Is he here?

THE COURT OFFICER: Your Honor, the Clerk has gone.

THE COURT: He is gone.

THE COURT OFFICER: He was here.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Well, we can try this again.

THE COURT: Save it for tomorrow. He is going to be here. Don't give them to me. I don't want them. The Clerk of Court.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Let the record indicate that we proffered four exhibits this morning.

THE COURT: All right, just mark them.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor's Clerk did not accept them, did not --

THE COURT: He is not my Clerk. He doesn't work for me.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I thought Your Honor made it clear you ran this Courtroom.

THE COURT: Yes, but I am beginning to think I'm not. I can't even run you.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: You are not going to, either. I would ask you to really withdraw that. That is really totally improper.

THE COURT: Counselor, we both can't talk. That poor Court Reporter here can't get both of us. I told you what to do. They are marking them.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: They are marked.

THE COURT: Okay, I tomorrow morning when the Clerk of Quarter Sessions is here give it to the Clerk of Court.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, I ask you for an apology.

THE COURT: Apologize? You got a long wait, Counselor. You have a long wait.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Could somebody take them?

THE COURT OFFICER: I am not accepting them until tomorrow.

THE COURT: You should apologize to me, not me to you. I told you to hold them in your possession because they are going to get lost. Hold them. Tomorrow morning when the Clerk is here I will tell you to hand it to the

Page 277.

Clerk, he will take it and put it in the file, okay. Is there anything else?

MR. GRANT: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. See you tomorrow morning.

THE COURT OFFICER: This Court now stands adjourned until 1O:OO a.m. tomorrow morning at the Call of the Crier.

(At 10:15 a.m. the hearing was convened in the presence of the Court and the attorneys.)

- - - - - -

MR. GRANT: Good morning, Your Honor. May we have the Court's indulgence for a moment, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time.)

MR. GRANT: Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. WILLIAMS: Good morning, Your Honor. This morning we are going to have two very brief witnesses. And we have discussed this with Mr. Grant. The two witnesses are Alma Crenshaw and Darlene Campbell. And I would hand up to the Court an amended witness list (handing). They are very brief witnesses, Your Honor.

MR. GRANT: That has been discussed with me, Your Honor, and of course I object. And the basis on which these witnesses purport to be called is that they were two jurors allegedly peremptorily struck, allegedly by the Commonwealth. And they would come to say I'm either white or black or Asian or Indian or something and I was struck. That issue was dealt with on direct appeal by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, headnote number one, Commonwealth versus Mumia Abu-Jamal, which is cited primarily at 321 -- I'm sorry. 521 Pennsylvania Supreme Court Reporter, 168. 1989. And it's dealt with directly at length by the Supreme Court in their opinion beginning at page 194.

Page 4.

I would suggest to Your Honor that this issue has been litigated by the highest Court in this jurisdiction, therefore it is not subject to PCRA review.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, it is subject to PCRA review for one specific reason. This is new evidence which indicates that the Supreme Court did not have a complete and accurate record.

THE COURT: Counselor, the Supreme Court has already ruled on this. It's not proper. Okay. That's my position. You take it up with the Supreme Court later on.

MR. WILLIAMS: Okay, just so the record is clear on this.

Page 5.

THE COURT: The record is clear that as long as the Supreme Court has ruled on any issue it's not a proper issue to be brought up now. Period.

MR. WILLIAMS: We11, Your Honor, that begs the question.

THE COURT: No, it doesn't beg any question, that is a definite answer. Okay. The Supreme Court has ruled on it, that's it. It's not a proper basis for PCRA.

MR. WILLIAMS: These are witnesses --

THE COURT: I know what they are, Counselor. But I have already ruled on that.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, I am concerned that the record isn't clear as to who they are and I would like to make sure that the record is clear.

THE COURT: You mentioned their names and you told me that the D.A. didn't object. Now I hear that he is objecting because he says that it's already been resolved by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, we only said that we discussed the matter with Mr. Grant.

Page 6.

THE COURT: Oh, okay.

MR. WILLIAMS: What I am concerned about is to insure that any future court that examines this record knows precisely which witnesses we are calling and why we are calling them.

THE COURT: Well, you already said that.

MR. WILLIAMS: I said that.

THE COURT: I am saying to you, Counselor, maybe you could bring it before that other Court, maybe they would be willing to hear it, I don't know. But as far as this Court is concerned, if the issue has already been ruled on by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, and that's what I am bound by, it is a dead issue. Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor --

THE COURT: No more, Counselor, please.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I assure the Court it won't take more than 20 minutes of the Court's time.

THE COURT: I don't care if it is five minutes, I said if the Supreme Court has already ruled on it that is the end of it.

Page 7.

MR. WEINGLASS: They have not ruled on this issue.

THE COURT: Yes, they have.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, they had before them eight peremptory strikes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Whatever they had they had and they ruled on it, Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: They ruled on the fact that eight African Americans peremptorily struck does not invoke Batson. In fact there were 11. And we have two of the three here in Court today who are African American who will identify --

THE COURT: Counselor, I am not going to call all those jurors back to find out what the situation is.

MR. WEINGLASS: We are calling two of them, just two.

THE COURT: I don't care if you call two or one, but, Counselor, the Supreme Court has already ruled on it, that's it. That's finished.

MR. WEINGLASS: They have ruled on the incorrect and incomplete record.

THE COURT: Fine, tell them about it when you get up there.

Page 8.

MR. WEINGLASS: But we have to give them a full record.

THE COURT: You are going to go there anyway, it is an automatic appeal.

MR. WEINGLASS: Exactly.

THE COURT: Take it up with them when you get up there.

MR. WEINGLASS: But they should have a full record when we get there and you are preventing us.

THE COURT: You won't have a record at this time, I ruled that's it.

MR. WEINGLASS: You are preventing us from making that record.

THE COURT: I am telling you we are not here to just make a record. PCRA is pretty plain, if you don't understand it go back and read that statute again.

MR. WEINGLASS: But we are telling the Court again that the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania did not rule.

THE COURT: Well, you are telling me that they made a mistake?

MR. WEINGLASS: No, they did not make a mistake, they were misled. They were misled

by an affidavit.

THE COURT: Tell them that they have been misled, okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yeah, and we are going to prove that by calling two witnesses.

THE COURT: No, you are not going to do that.

MR. WEINGLASS: To show that they were misled.

THE COURT: You are not going to do that. Period.

MS. PERKINS: If I may, Your Honor: Under the PCRA the Defendant Petitioner is precluded from litigating issues previously litigated. And if this issue is before the Supreme Court it was previously litigated, whether they are now saying it could have been done differently.

MR. WEINGLASS: It was done on an inaccurate record and you know it. And that Court was misled and I object to this Court preventing us from presenting that record so the Supreme Court won't be misled again.

THE COURT: I overruled your objection. You have an automatic exception.

Page 10 is missing. We will make attempts to locate it.

Page 11.

affidavit to the Supreme Court at that time as part of the defense pleadings.

MR. WEINGLASS: Which they discounted.

THE COURT: Just a minute.

MS. PERKINS: I do not know that these two jurors were part of his affidavit. If that's the case, then it was not presented to the Supreme Court for whatever reasons. If they want to put on Mr. Gelb or Mrs. Gelb, who was appellate Counsel, to establish why they didn't raise it, they must first do that. They can not come in here and say we have the witnesses, we are entitled to explore this record without first establishing that appellate Counsel was ineffective for not raising it.

MR. WEINGLASS: Maybe Counsel hasn't read the Supreme Court opinion. I will excuse her for that. What the Supreme Court --

THE COURT: Maybe you haven't read it. I have read it.

MR. WEINGLASS: I have read it many times. What the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania said was we have before us the affidavit of Anthony Jackson who says that 11 African-American jurors were struck. We also have before us the affidavit of Mr. McGill who says that there were only eight. We, the Supreme Court, have decided that we will put more credibility in Mr. McGill's affidavit because Mr. Jackson's affidavit is older. Now it turns out Mr. McGill's affidavit was wrong. It was false. And it misled the Supreme Court. We are now trying to correct that record by bringing the proper, the jurors in so that there will be no question that Mr. Jackson's affidavit was accurate, and Mr. McGill's affidavit was false.

Now, if Counsel has read the opinion, you will know that three times the Pennsylvania Supreme Court said the Commonwealth struck only eight African Americans. That was incorrect. And we are prepared to show that this morning. But we are being precluded from doing that. Your Honor, we spent a lot of resources in finding these two jurors.

THE COURT: I know, and that's been waived, for the time being that's been waived. It is not a proper petition under the PCRA.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, Your Honor.

THE COURT: That's it. Give me your next witness, will you.

MR. WILLIAMS: I would like to have marked as exhibits in connection with our efforts to get these jurors to testify, marked as exhibits 5 and 6, the minutes, exhibit 5 from June 8th, 1982, the voir dire of Alma Lee Austin. I would like to have that marked as exhibit 5. And then the minutes for June 16th, 1982, which is the voir dire of Dorothy -- I'm sorry, Darlene Sampson. And these are the two witnesses who are present hear this morning and we proffer them as witnesses.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, could I be informed as to what Exhibits 1, 2, 3 and 4 are?

THE COURT: He says part of the voir dire testimony.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: He is asking what Exhibits 1, 2 and 3 and 4 are. These are the exhibits that were proffered yesterday morning, Your Honor.

MR. GRANT: Very well.

THE COURT: Hand it to the Clerk.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Not accepted by the Clerk apparently. Here they are again, I am offering them again, repeating what was done at about this time yesterday. Exhibits 1, 2, 3 and 4 are here (handing).

THE COURT: Well, if she doesn't have it put it in there.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: They were put over here on the bench and the Court indicated it wouldn't accept them.

THE COURT: You are wasting this Court's time.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: 1, 2, 3 and 4 (handing).

Okay. 1, 2, 3 and 4 again to the District Attorney's Office (handing).

MR. GRANT: Thank you.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: And these are your 5 and 6 (handing).

MR. GRANT: Thank you.

THE COURT: You have the wrong ones now.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I would note that they were thrown on the floor by the District Attorney's Office.

THE COURT: That is a shame. You shouldn't do that.

Is that right now? You have it right?

Page 15.

Is that right now?

Okay, give them to the Clerk.

THE COURT OFFICER: Does the Court want to see these?

THE COURT: No, 1. don't want to see them, give them to the Clerk.

(Copies of newspaper articles were marked Defendant's Exhibits D-l, D-2, D-3 and D-4 for identification.)

THE COURT OFFICER: So marked D-l, 2, 3 and 4, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

Your next witness, Mr. Williams.

MR. WEINGLASS: If the Court will bear with me a moment, I want to check my witness in the hall.

THE COURT: No, just give us the name, the Court Officer will call out there for you. Who do you want to call?

MR. WEINGLASS: Anthony Jackson.

THE COURT: See if Anthony Jackson is here. Is Anthony Jackson around?

THE COURT OFFICER: Anthony Jackson.

THE COURT: Somebody check outside and see if he might be outside.

Page 16.

THE COURT OFFICER: We have them in a room, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Oh, you keep them out there.

He is not there, Counselor.

Where is Williams? Will you tell that attorney I want him back in the Courtroom.

Williams, where are you? He's not here. Who is your next witness?

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, in light of the fact that we had two witnesses here this morning, the short fact witness --

THE COURT: All right, but there are other witnesses that are available here from this list. Pick one of them, will you, Counselor, so we could proceed.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, as we indicated in our list of witnesses, our next witness in order is Anthony Jackson.

THE COURT: Well, he is not here.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, it's 10:25.

THE COURT: I know that, that's what concerned me. I have been here since 9:30. It's 10:25, now let's go. You have other witnesses back there. Who do we have available back there?

MR. WEINGLASS: If the Court will bear with me for one moment. He informed me this morning that he would be in Court here at 10:30. I ask for a four-minute recess so that Mr. Jackson could arrive?

THE COURT: According to my watch it's 10:28 and a half.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, if the Court will bear with us.

THE COURT: I will give you until 10:30, period.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I will give you until 10:30. Do you understand English, Counselor?

MR. WEINGLASS: I understand that two weeks ago --

THE COURT: That's what I said, 10:30.

MR. WEINGLASS: I understand two weeks ago this Court invited us to proceed.

THE COURT: Yes, if you had started when I wanted you to start. You got a whole week out of the Supreme Court.

MR. WEINGLASS: One full week is not enough to litigate a death penalty case.

Page 18.

THE COURT: Tell it to the Supreme Court.

MR. WEINGLASS: And we did and the Supreme Court stopped this Court.

THE COURT: Right, and they said start on the 26th.

MR. WEINGLASS: And we did, but we are asking this Court for five minutes and we are not getting it.

THE COURT: Look, you had one, two, three, four, five, six, witnesses here.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right.

THE COURT: Pick another one, we will. Take him as soon as he comes.

MR. WEINGLASS: We added two this morning which we anticipated calling.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: The Court rejected those witnesses.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. WEINGLASS: So we are short a few minutes.

THE COURT: You have other witnesses that have been here since yesterday. And you haven't called them and it is not being fair to them. Call one of the other witnesses.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, the Court is not being fair to us. And I want to make that record.

THE COURT: Okay; you have it on the record. I am not being fair to you. You are not being fair to the Court. The Supreme Court says we have to proceed. And that's what we are going to do.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, we are not trying this case by a second hand or a minute hand.

THE COURT: Counselor, I don't care how you try it, that is your problem, but you are going to proceed when the Court says you proceed. You want to delay it more, delay it more. You don't want to call anybody, we will adjourn until tomorrow. Of course the D.A.'s not going to be happy about that.

MR. GRANT: That is correct. And I would most respectfully object to that, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Well, it is past 9:30 now, Counselor, call your next witness, Mr. Williams.

Mr. Williams. Mr. Williams. The

Page 20.

Court has directed you to call the next witness. I don't want to have to hold you in contempt. Please call the next witness.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, we are dividing up the duties in this case.

THE COURT: I don't care who is dividing up what. Call the next witness.

MR. WILLIAMS: I am trying to consult with my Co-counsel Mr. Weinglass.

THE COURT: You had all night to consult with him. You gave me a list of who you are going to call today. Those witnesses are here. Whichever ones are not here, do you want me to issue a bench warrant for them?

MR. WILLIAMS: That's what I am trying to determine, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Well, you want to find out who is here.

MR. WILLIAMS: If you could just give me a moment.

THE COURT: Wait awhile. Who are the witnesses that are there?

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor.

THE COURT: I know those but --

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, we can put on, at this point in time the Petitioner calls Joe McGill.

Page 21.

THE COURT: Is he here?

MR. GRANT: They know very well he's not here.

THE COURT: Okay, so he is not here either. Who is the next one?

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, we ask that Mr. McGill be brought here.

THE COURT: Well, bring them all here, but who else is here now?

THE COURT OFFICER: Gary Wakshul is in Room 618.

THE COURT: Gary Wakshul.

MR. GRANT: Yes, yes.

THE COURT: But who is back in there now?

THE COURT OFFICER: Just these two. Nobody else.

THE COURT: Just these two. They are the only two there?

THE COURT OFFICER: Yes.

THE COURT: Okay? We could call Gary Wakshul.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor, we object strenuously to this procedure. We are not prepared with Mr. Wakshul.

THE COURT: You gave me his name.

MR. WEINGLASS: His name is on the list and if Your Honor will consult the list he is way down on that list. And you can not dictate to us the order of our witnesses.

THE COURT: He is second on the list, right. Jeremy Gelb, there's Gary Wakshul. Do you want to call Jeremy Gelb?

MR. WEINGLASS: We are at the point where Tony Jackson is the next witness.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: It is from yesterday.

MR. WEINGLASS: It is from yesterday. He is a holdover.

THE COURT: He is a holdover.

MR. WEINGLASS: From yesterday.

THE COURT: He was a holdover and he was ahead of Jackson. Where is Joe Davidson, is he here?

MR. WEINGLASS: He was told to be here at one o'clock, he will be here at one o'clock.

THE COURT: You told him one o'clock.

MR. WEINGLASS: Exactly.

Page 23.

THE COURT: I didn't say the Court was going to start at one o'clock.

MR. WEINGLASS: We were starting with Mr. Jackson at 10:30.

THE COURT: He is not here.

MR. WEINGLASS: After we called Darlene Sampson and we called --

THE COURT: You told me about your list. Davidson was first on your list, why don't you call him?

MR. GRANT: Would you like us to assist Counsel in bringing Mr. Jackson, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Maybe, if it will help you in any way.

MR. GRANT: Counsel, would you like us to contact Mr. Jackson?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, they could contact Mr. Jackson, certainly.

THE COURT: Okay. We will take a recess while defense tries to dig up it's witnesses.

THE COURT OFFICER: This Court stands recessed until the call of the Crier.

- - - - -

Page 24.

(Brief recess.)

- - - - -

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, if Mr. Williams is going to continue to proceed as Counsel for the defense, in, light of Your Honor's request that he be admitted pro hoc vice, and their assurances that such motions would be filed with the Court, if he has not provided those I would ask that Mr. Rudovsky present himself here as local Counsel to justify why this has not been accomplished?

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, as I understand it, the papers are being prepared. I drafted out all the relevant information for the Rudovsky firm last night. So I could assure the Court that the papers are being prepared and will be filed today, pursuant to Your Honor's order.

THE COURT: Well, let's call Rudovsky. Shouldn't he be here? Shouldn't he ask the Court?

MR. WILLIAMS: He will be the movant. He will be moving my admission.

THE COURT: He will be here?

MR. WILLIAMS: He will be here to move

Page 25.

my admission.

THE COURT: When will he be here?

MR. WEINGLASS: I spoke to him last night, I believe he is clearing space to come today. I could only assure the Court that we will have him here.

THE COURT: Well, you call him and tell him I ordered him here. Because I won't permit you to continue if we don't do this properly. You better get him on the phone and get him over here. Where is he now?

MR. WEINGLASS: I believe he is in his office but I am not sure of that.

THE COURT: Why don't you call his office and tell him to get over here so that we could complete this properly. I told you this yesterday.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yeah. I am proceeding from this point on, Your Honor, not Mr. Williams, on the questioning of witnesses.

THE COURT: Oh, okay. But if you want to get back into this thing, make sure.

MR. WILLIAMS: I will.

THE COURT: Make sure he is over here.

Page 26.

MR. WILLIAMS: I will. The only other thing, Your Honor --

THE COURT: The only other thing is until he moves for your admission, you just have to take a seat. Okay.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, we just wanted to clarify for the record: There was a third juror who was here this morning. A woman by the name of Beverly Greene. And I want to proffer her transcript as defense exhibit 7.

THE COURT: Is anybody here by that name?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Yeah, she was here this morning: Beverly Greene.

MR. GRANT: That is apparently an allusion to another juror on the Jury question. We would have the same objection.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I am only filing it as an exhibit.

THE COURT OFFICER: No, this was 5 and 6 that Mr. Williams proffered. You never presented it after the 1, 2, 3 and 4.

You tried to present two exhibits but then you went back.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Before I came up with 1, 2, 3 and 4, 5 and 6. Could we have copies of the ones we already submitted again?

THE COURT: Look at the list.

THE COURT OFFICER: Counsel, you handed to me 1, 2, 3 and 4 and I asked you if that was all.

THE COURT: We could show you what we have here.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: There must be a wastebasket right hear for defense exhibits.

THE COURT: No, you are not doing it properly. I told you to hand it to the Court Officer to hand to the Clerk. The Clerk keeps them.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Okay, I have 1, 2, 3 and 4.

THE COURT OFFICER: Yes, ma'am.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: 5 then would be the transcript of Beverly Greene.

THE COURT OFFICER: So marked D-5.

(Copy of transcript was marked
Defendant's Exhibit D-5 for identification.)

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Okay. The next exhibit is the transcript of Darlene Sampson.

Page 28.

(Copy of transcript was marked
Defendant's Exhibit D-6 for identification.)

THE COURT OFFICER: So marked D-6.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: The next one is the transcript of Alma Lee Austin.

(Copy of transcript was marked
Defendant's Exhibit D-7 for identification.)

THE COURT OFFICER: So marked D-7.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I believe you need the one for Beverly Greene.

MR. GRANT: Not really.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: You don't want it. Okay. The record should reflect the prosecution or the Commonwealth doesn't want their copy of the transcript. Right. And I want to make clear for the record that she is the third juror who was African American who was peremptorily excused by the Commonwealth, Joseph McGill, during the original trial.

THE COURT: Who is next on the agenda? It's three minutes after 11:00. Let's go.

MR. WEINGLASS: I want to thank the Court for it's time and it's patience. The next witness called by the Petitioner is Anthony Jackson.

THE COURT: Anthony Jackson. Well, I thought you asked for Joe McGill.

MR. GRANT: Mr. Jackson arrived in the interim, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Well, I guess we can excuse, I guess we can excuse you for the time being. I'm sorry.

(Mr. Joseph McGill, Esquire appeared before the Bar of the Court.)

MR. MCGILL: Your Honor, when would you like me here?

THE COURT: I don't know, his honor over here is making all those decisions. I can't make it for them. He is telling me who he wants to call and when. There wasn't anybody here so he asked to call for you, we called for you. So.

MR. MCGILL: Do you mind if I ask him?

THE COURT: Yes.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time.)

MR. MCGILL: 3:00 p.m. is what...

THE COURT: Is it okay?

MR. MCGILL: Yes.

THE COURT: Okay, thank you for coming over. I'm sorry.

Page 30.

MR. GRANT: With all due respect, Your Honor, with the anticipated offer of proof and the affidavit of Mr. Jackson, I think we will be here way past 3:00 p.m., and way past 3:00 p.m. tomorrow.

THE COURT: We may very well be but we won't call him. Go ahead.

Anthony Jackson. He is outside?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT OFFICER: He is outside?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

- - - - -

Anthony E. Jackson, Esquire, having been duly affirmed, was examined and testified as follows:

- - - - -

DIRECT EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Good morning, Mr. Jackson.

A. Good morning, Mr. Weinglass.

Q. Are you appearing in Court this morning pursuant to a subpoena?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Mr. Jackson, drawing your attention back to

Page 31.

December of 1981: At that time what was your occupation and employment?

A. Attorney. I was in December of '81, I believe at that time I was still working, I was the Director of the police project at the Public Interest Law Center of Philadelphia.

Q. And when were you first admitted to the practice of law in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania?

A. July 27th, 1974.

Q. What law school had you attended and graduated?

A. Temple University.

Q. And did you also graduate in 1974?

A. Yes, '74.

Q. Prior to your admission were you employed by any governmental agency of the City of Philadelphia?

A. Yes, Philadelphia Police Department.

Q. And how long had you worked for the Police Department?

A. Approximately five-and-a-half years.

Q. Do you recall what years they were?

A. Yes, sir. 1963 through '68, maybe '69.

Q. And in what capacity were you working for the Police Department?

A. Evidence technician. I began as an assistant

Page 32.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct or something of that, there was one title and then eventually I got another title, I forget what the first one was but eventually it was an evidence technician.

Q. And after your admission in 1974 and prior to December of 1981, were you ever employed by the District Attorney's Office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of the City of Philadelphia?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And in what capacity?

A. As an Assistant District Attorney.

Q. And for how long were you so employed?

A. About six months.

Q. And prior to December of 1981, did you have a professional relationship with an attorney in Philadelphia by the name of Marilyn Gelb?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. And could you describe briefly for the Court the professional relationship you had with her?

A. Prior to going to law school, I was also an investigator for the Public Defender's Office for about five years, and I was also a private investigator for a number of years. During that period of time I met Marilyn Gelb as an investigator.

Page 33.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

And I had occasion to investigate a number of cases for her, as well as a number of other attorneys. In fact, during this relationship, she was one of the people who encouraged me to go to law school as well. I continued to investigate cases for her, even while I was in law school.

Q. And did you continue to maintain a relationship of a professional nature with Marilyn Gelb through the 1980?

A. Yes, I did. I mean I would see Marilyn, we would consult sometimes on different cases and things of that sort.

Q. Would it be fair to say that you were close personally?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, could you also indicate what your professional experience was as an attorney after 1974 and up to December of 1981? You have indicated that you worked for the District Attorney.

A. After I left the District Attorney's Office, I think it was in January of '75, I was associate counsel for the Philadelphia Prison Master. At that time the Philadelphia Prison System had been declared un-Constitutional. And a Master was appointed and I was associate counsel. I worked there for approximately a year-and-a-half or two years, I'm not really clear. And during that period of time I also maintained a private practice as well.

Page 34.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

After that I began at Pilcop I believe in 1978 as the Director of the police project. And I held that position for approximately three years and in fact I was about to leave in, I think in January of '82, yeah, so I think in fact I was working at Pilcop for about three weeks or so after the appointment to Mr. Jamal's case.

Q. We will get back to that in a moment.

A. Okay.

Q. While you were at Pilcop, what did your practice consist of for that office?

A. Primarily suing police, instructing attorneys on how to sue police departments and police officers for wrongful conduct. In addition to which we gave information and testimony before the United States Congress, the State Congress, the City Council -- City Council, State Legislature. We conducted studies, we did investigations of police officers here in the City of Philadelphia who had committed wrongful acts. As well as we assisted in enacting legislation that now to a large extent governs police conduct here in the City of Philadelphia.

Page 35.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

And in addition to which, we were instrumental in having the United States Justice Department sue the City of Philadelphia Police Department, first time in the history of the United States.

Q. That case became United States versus Philadelphia?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Now, during the period of time that you were the Director of the police project, would it be fair to say that your work mainly involved civil litigation?

A. Absolutely. Well, mainly, yes. There were, with this exception. In our representation, in our obligations, we would from time to time represent citizens who were arrested for what we called cover charges: Resisting arrests. Oftentimes they had confrontation with the police and the police would issue those cover charges, as we called them. And we would from time to time represent people on those charges.

Q. Was your work as the Director of Pilcop full-time work or part-time?

A. It was full-time.

Q. Now, prior to December of 1981, how many cases

Page 36.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

had you tried that went through to the sentencing or penalty phase in a capital prosecution?

A. One or two. One of the cases that I'm thinking of was before Judge Sabo. I don't know whether that was, quite frankly, if it was before or after Mr. Jamal. It seems to me that it was before Mr. Jamal. I really, I can't remember the name of the case, I can't put it in a time sequence. And there was one other, I think that was before Latrone. So two cases.

Q. And at the time of your appointment to this case, December of 1981, were you at that time still working at Pilcop?

A. Yeah, I think -- yeah, I think, again, that was my last few weeks there or something of that sort, yeah, I was still actually working there.

Q. And sometime after your appointment, did you then open an office for the practice of law in Philadelphia?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. So would it be fair to say that at the time that you accepted the appointment to represent Mr. Jamal, you were in a transition out of Pilcop and into your own private practice of law?

A. That's right.

Page 37.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

Q. And do you recall when you opened your office, approximately?

A. I think it was January, February. Again, I'm thinking...

Q. That would be January or February of 1982; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. And do you recall when you were appointed by the Court to represent Mr. Jamal?

A. I think in December.

Q. Of 1981?

A. '81, yes.

Q. So would it be fair to say that you were in fact appointed to represent Mr. Jamal at a point in time prior to the opening of your office?

A. Well, yeah, I mean, maybe I should just explain this. The police project was funded through LEA: Law Enforcement Administration assistance funds. The funding for the police project ended I think in August or September of '81. I then performed most of the same duties as I had previously performed; however, I was doing other matters at Pilcop as well. And I had to make a decision whether or not I wanted to transfer to some other project or just what would happen. And I knew that it was about time, or at least I wanted to return to private practice. At the time that I took the appointment, I knew that I was going into private practice. I was not in fact working full-time, or not working as much as I had been for them.

Page 38.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

MR. WEINGLASS: Now I would like to have a document which has been marked D-8, which is a copy of the seven-page declaration appended to the Petition and marked in the Petition as Exhibit 1 (handing).

(Exhibit D-8 for identification.)

THE COURT OFFICER: (Handing.)

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Do you have it?

A. Yes, sir, I have it.

Q. Directing your attention to the last page of that document, do you recognize the signature on that document?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And whose signature is that?

A. It is my signature.

Q. And do you note the date on which that document was signed?

A. April 17th, 1995.

Page 39.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

Q. Now, did you review that declaration prior to signing?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And have you reviewed it once again prior to your appearance here in Court today?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And do you recognize that document as an important document for these proceedings?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And you are of course aware of the significance of these proceedings for Mr. Jamal?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Is that document a true and accurate document to the best of your knowledge and belief?

A. Yes, it is. With a couple of minor exceptions. One of which we have already discussed. I think in here I mentioned that I took the appointment when I was in private practice. Again, I think I was off for about three weeks; I was actually at Pilcop then.

Q. Other than that the document is accurate?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Now, do you recall the date that the Jury returned a verdict of first degree murder in this trial in 1982?

Page 40.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And what date was that?

A. Oh, you want, I remember the day, the date I'm not certain of. I could look through my notes, through this affidavit.

Q. Yes, page 6 of your declaration.

(Pause.)

Q. Well, if it is not there.

A. Yes, my guess would be -- wait a minute, July 2nd, I believe.

Q. Yes, I believe you are correct.

A. Yes, July 2nd.

Q. And do you recall what day of the week July 2nd was?

A. Friday evening.

Q. And do you recall what time of day the Jury returned the verdict?

A. As I recall, five, six o'clock, something like that. It may have been later, I just, it seems it was sometime in the early evening.

Q. And do you recall when the sentencing or penalty phase of the case was set to begin?

A. Saturday morning.

Q. The next morning?

A. That's correct, sir.

Page 41.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

Q. Now, prior to the Jury reaching their verdict of guilt of the first degree, and from the time of your appointment back in December of 1981, did you have any discussion with Mr. Jamal concerning the sentencing or the penalty phase of his case?

A. None at all.

Q. And from December 15th, 1981, to July 3rd, 1982, had you interviewed anyone for the purpose of having them appear as a witness in the penalty or the mitigation phase of the trial?

A. No, sir.

Q. Had you subpoenaed anyone to appear as a witness for the penalty or the mitigation phase?

A. No, sir.

Q. Had you engaged in any discovery with the District Attorney's Office for the purpose of obtaining information or evidence or testimonial evidence for the mitigation or penalty phase?

A. No, sir.

Q. To your recollection, had you received any Brady materials from the District Attorney's Office respecting the penalty or the mitigation phase?

A. No, sir.

Q. Had you requested it?

A. No, sir, not for the penalty stage.

Page 42.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

Q. Now, after the Jury returned it's verdict Friday evening and -- strike that. Do you recall what you did that Friday evening after the Jury returned it's verdict?

A. No. And for some time I have just tried to recollect what I did as opposed to what I assume I did or what I was in the habit of doing. I just don't know. I remember speaking to Mr. Jamal's mother in the rear of the Courtroom after the Jury's verdict. Typically, I would see Mr. Jamal up in the cell room or up at the prison. I think that day I think the relationship had become so strained, I don't know, I may have been reluctant to go see him. But I wasn't reluctant not because I had any fear or anything, but because he had just been convicted. I know I spoke to him, I think it was just here in the cell room. I did not have an opportunity to discuss, quite frankly, the penalty stage at that point. And I really don't remember -- I don't think that I even went to see him up at the prison that evening, I don't recall. I have no independent recollection of it. It seems to me that I did not.

Q. And you mentioned that you spoke to Mrs. Edith Cook?

A. That's correct.

Page 43.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

Q. His mother. Was that more to console his mother after the verdict was announced?

A. Yeah, I have a specific --

MR. GRANT: I would object to the leading and move to strike that portion that was.

MR. WEINGLASS: I'm sorry, it was leading, I will withdraw it.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. When you spoke to his mother after the verdict was announced, I think you indicated here in the Courtroom, could you relate what the conversation was?

A Sure. Essentially, she was here of course to hear the verdict. And I did, again, I have a specific recollection of talking to her in the rear of the Courtroom. And it was primarily to provide whatever comfort I could for the verdict. I would assume that I would have talked to her later on because I sometimes did. But quite frankly, I don't think that I did. I think when I saw her in the Courtroom, that may have been -- Mr. Weinglass, I mean I just don't know. I mean I just don't know.

MR. GRANT: Move to strike his assumptions as well. I move to strike Mr.

Page 44.

Jackson's assumptions since he bases it on nothing.

THE COURT: The part about assuming could be stricken.

Go ahead.

MR. WEINGLASS: The rest of the answer --

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: -- may remain.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Mr. Jackson, did you ask Mrs. Cook if she would appear the next day as a witness in the mitigation hearing when you saw her here in the Courtroom after the verdict was announced?

A. No, sir.

Q. To your recollection, as best you could recall that Friday evening, July 2nd, did you reach out and try to locate any witnesses for the mitigation or the penalty phase hearing which was set for the next morning?

A. No witnesses, no, I did not talk to any witnesses. Nor did I reach out for any witnesses, sir.

Q. Now, could you state for the Court and the record, what were the reasons why you hadn't prepared for the penalty or the mitigation phase of the proceeding?

A. Okay. Twofold. Believe it or not, I didn't think that he would be convicted of murder in the first degree. That was the first reason. The other is because we had been I think working six days a week for a couple of weeks. And I first assumed that in the unlikely event that would have happened, we would have had at least an extra day to prepare whatever preparation would be available and necessary.

Q. Now, prior to the time the verdict was reached in the case of guilt, you were aware, were you not, that there might be an aggravator in the penalty phase of this case: Because the victim was a police officer?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Did you have any plan or formulate any strategy to rebut that aggravator in the penalty or mitigation phase of the case?

A. You said did I plan?

Q. Yeah.

(Pause.)

A. I considered arguments at that -- I mean I knew that that was an aggravator and I knew... I knew that there was some consideration I had as to what I do to rebut it in argument only, not with testimony or evidence or things of that sort. And I knew at least in my mind what the mitigating factors were.

Q. Now, was there any, to your recollection, any conscious, deliberate or tactical or strategic reason why you did not call any witnesses other than Mr. Jamal during the penalty or the mitigation phase of the case?

A. I don't know if -- it's, it's difficult for me to recall why witnesses were not called for the penalty stage. I know that obviously after Mister, I guess it was the morning of the 3rd is when I do recall seeing Mr. Jamal, and Mr. Jamal had requested the opportunity to address the Jury. I notified Judge Sabo that and Mr. Jamal was able to speak to the Jury. Now, of course that is one of, your question also went to if I had a plan. I knew what the aggravating circumstance was. In my mind there was one aggravating circumstance, that the police officer, because he was a police officer. In my mind there were several mitigating circumstances that could be offered in Mr. Jamal's behalf.

Certainly the testimony or mitigating factors might have been, may have been more effectively presented with witnesses. If you recall, I am sure you know, there were limited funds in this case. There was limited time in this case. And unfortunately, as I said, the first thing that struck my mind after the Jury's verdict was to make sure that I was legally prepared to deal with the penalty phase. I didn't want to just helter-skelter go after witnesses without particularly knowing what I would do with the witnesses. But I, in retrospect, I don't know why I did not call the witnesses. I don't know if there was a plan, I don't think so. I just don't know about it. I don't know.

MR. GRANT: I didn't hear that last....

THE WITNESS: I said I don't recall what the reason is why there were no witnesses called during the penalty stage.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. In any event, so that we are clear, Mr. Jackson --

A. Sure.

Q. -- prior to the verdict of guilt Friday afternoon, July 2nd, you hadn't done anything to prepare a penalty or a mitigation-phase hearing?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, you indicated on the morning of the penalty phase hearing, July 3rd, which was a Saturday, you had a meeting with Mr. Jamal prior to coming to Court; isn't that correct?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. And in the course of that conversation, did Mr. Jamal indicate to you that he wanted to make a statement to the Court?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. And when he did that, did you advise Mr. Jamal of the risks that might be involved in his doing so?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you review any statement he was planning to make with him?

A. No, sir.

Q. When you put him on the stand during the penalty phase, did you know what he was going to say?

A. No, sir.

Q. And after he began to speak, did you do anything to call a recess so you may review his narrative with him?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, you recall, Mr. Jackson, that in January of 1982 you had put on the stand during a bail reduction hearing Mr. Jamal's mother Edith Cook, as well as the legislator of the Commonwealth of

Page 49.

Pennsylvania David Richardson?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Did you contact either Mrs. Cook or Mr. Richardson and ask them if they would also appear and testify during the mitigation or penalty phase hearing?

A. No, sir. Mrs. Cook was here but I never asked her to testify.

Q. And you also during the guilt phase of the trial put on a number of reputation witnesses to testify for purposes of establishing Mr. Jamal's reputation in the community; do you recall that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you inquire of any of those witnesses as to whether or not they were available to testify in the penalty or the mitigation phase of the hearing?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now moving back to the guilt phase of the trial.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall, Mr. Jackson, that you did put on several witnesses for the defense during the guilt phase of the trial?

A. Yes, sir, I have a vague recollection.

Q. Do you recall putting on an eyewitness by the name of Dessie Hightower?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you talked to Mr. Hightower yourself prior to putting him on the stand?

A. Just here in the Courtroom or just outside the Courtroom for a few moments.

Q. Do you recall also putting on the stand another eyewitness named Veronica Jones?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you talked to Miss Jones prior to putting her on the stand?

A. No, sir. In fact, even before she took the witness stand in the Courtroom I tried to speak with her, again either in the Courtroom or out in the hallway, and she refused to talk to me. Of course, well, she took the stand.

Q. Yeah. Had you prior to the moment that you had called them here to the Courtroom made an effort to talk to either Dessie Hightower or Veronica Jones?

A. Veronica Jones I don't, I don't, I don't think so. I don't remember. I just don't remember... how I even got her to Court. And Dessie Hightower, I assume that I tried to contact her but I don't remember. But I don't remember. Veronica Jones, I know for whatever reason I couldn't talk to her: I don't know whether she was unavailable or I don't know whether the prosecution found -- I don't know. But I know she wasn't available for me to talk to her whenever it is that I wanted to.

Mr. Hightower I think, on the other hand, we did, we were able to obtain his address and I think he was available to talk to me. I don't know what happened, why I never talked to him, I just don't recall.

Q. But so that the record is clear: The fact is, Mr. Jackson, the two eyewitnesses that you called for Mr. Jamal in the guilt phase were two people who you hadn't interviewed prior to putting them on the stand?

A. That's correct, I didn't interview them, no, sir.

Q. Now, you also recall during the defense case calling the physician who had treated Mr. Jamal at Thomas Jefferson University Hospital on the night of the occurrence: Dr. Anthony Colletta?

C-O-L-L-E-T-T-A.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And had you talked to Dr. Colletta before you put Dr. Colletta on the stand?

A. No, sir, I wasn't permitted to. No, sir.

Q. And had you seen Dr. Colletta's medical report concerning his treatment of Mr. Jamal prior to putting him on the stand?

A. I don't believe I did, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, you recall seeing the transcript recently where you admitted on the transcript that you hadn't read his medical report prior to putting him on?

MR. GRANT: I move to strike anything that he admitted outside this Courtroom and off that witness stand.

THE COURT: It is stricken, the last statement. Please, Counsel, just ask questions...

MR. WEINGLASS: I'm sorry.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Were you shown the transcript page wherein it appears that you informed Judge Sabo that you hadn't seen the medical report before?

A. Yes, sir. I saw the transcript, and I recall I made some note to the Judge that I didn't, I was barred from talking to the doctor prior to his appearance and that I just at that time received the medical report.

Q. Now, also in the guilt phase, do you recall there came a time when you used Judge Sabo's chambers and the telephone in his chambers to attempt to locate a witness named Debbie Kordansky?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you ever done that before?

A. First time in my life, sir. It's a strange situation. That I could explain.

Q. Yeah.

A. In this case, unlike any other -- excuse me -- unlike any other homicide case that I had tried before, the District Attorney was pretty much in control of all of the witnesses. They had redacted the addresses and phone numbers of the witnesses and cut them out literally. There was no way for the defense to contact these witnesses without going through the District Attorney's Office. Miss Kordansky, as an example, was one person I wanted to speak to. Why? Among other things, she said she saw a man running from the scene. Obviously I wanted to see her.

I remember bringing this up to, bringing it up to the Judge and Mr. McGill I needed to see this witness. And Mr. McGill as I recall said words to the effect that she didn't want to talk to me, she had nothing to say, she'd hurt me or something of that sort. I know when I first brought it up, I think it was at the initial time I said words to the effect that Mr. McGill keeps telling me that these witnesses don't want to testify for the defense or won't be good for the defense when in fact they were witnesses who would be helpful to the defense if we could talk to them.

And back to the phone call. I asked if I could contact Miss Debbie Kordansky. He would not give me the address, he would not give me the phone number of the witness. He said that he would contact her or have the County detectives contact her to see if she would want to talk to me. So the County detective said well, Miss Kordansky, the defense wants to talk to you about your statement that you made about a man running away. You don't have to talk to them, do you want to talk to them.

MR. GRANT: I object unless he was there and heard that conversation, which I am sure he was not. Move to strike it.

THE COURT: Strike that part where he wasn't present.

MR. WEINGLASS: We will be calling the witness, for the Court's information.

THE COURT: Okay, call her later on.

MR. WEINGLASS: The person who spoke

Page 55.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

to Debbie Kordansky was Detective Thomas, who is under subpoena for the defense.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: And we will be calling Detective Thomas.

THE COURT: All right.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Please continue.

A. As a result of what I was told, I nevertheless persisted that I was not, I would not take the word of the prosecution that my witness, that a witness wouldn't talk to me. And that I would still like the opportunity for her to say no to me personally, to my investigator, if I had an investigator, or someone. The concession I was able to secure was a phone call in the Judge's chambers. And I talked to her on the phone, she said words to the effect that she didn't like black people because she had been arrested -- I'm sorry, she had been assaulted or raped by a black man in the past, and words, words to that effect.

She went on to say other things that I don't specifically recall. But I do know the fact that she didn't like black folks and had been raped in my mind did not excuse her as a witness: She could dislike us as long as she told the truth. I had no opportunity to know where she was. I still did not know where she was, they called. No, I did not see it, Mr. McGill called the number. I never knew where she was. Well, now I know where she is supposed to have been but I could never contact her.

Page 56.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

Q. So she wasn't produced at trial?

A. She was not produced.

Q. Did she also, to refresh your recollection, Mr. Jackson, say that she didn't want to help you?

A. I think that was the words that she -- yeah, that's the words that she used, yes, I don't want to help you.

Q. Did that leave in your mind the impression that if she were called she wouldn't help you?

A. Yes, sir.

MR. GRANT: Objection. Objection.

Thank you, Mr. Jackson.

THE COURT: Stop leading, will you. Just ask him. Let him answer the questions without suggestions.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Now directing your attention to another witness, a cab driver who did appear and testify for the Commonwealth by the name of Robert Chobert: C-H-O-B-E-R-T.

Page 57.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall Mr. Chobert?

A. I certainly do.

Q. Do you recall Mr. Chobert at some point after he had completed his direct, prior to cross-examination, indicating to the Court at sidebar that he had a prior record?

A. Yes, sir, I know I became aware of it somehow, yes, sir.

Q. And do you recall, Mr. Jackson, what that record was?

A. I think for bombing a school or something of that sort. Or a school bus. Firebombing or something of that sort. And I think he was still on probation for that offense. Maybe over in Jersey or Delaware. I think, I don't think it was here in Philadelphia.

Q. Would it refresh your recollection that Mr. Chobert had told the Court at sidebar that he had thrown a Molotov cocktail into a public school for pay?

A. Okay, yeah, yeah. That now -- yeah, that's what it was, yeah, that's what it was. He had been hired to do that, yes, sir.

Q. And do you recall what, did you request that

Page 58.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

that fact be laid before the Jury during cross-examination?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you recall what Judge Sabo's ruling was?

A. He ruled against it.

Q. Did the Jury ever hear that?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, do you recall on what basis you had asked the Court to permit you to lay that fact before the Jury?

A. On the basis of crimen falsi.

Q. Crimen falsi?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was on that basis that the Court denied your request?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. Did you also raise with the Court on that occasion the fact that this evidence could be admitted under cross-examination under the doctrine of Commonwealth V Murphy and Davis V Alaska as proof of the witness' bias or motive since he was still on probation?

A. I did not, sir.

Q. I know this is not easy for you, but, Mr.

Page 59.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

Jackson, was that just an oversight?

A. I don't know if it was just an oversight as much as I don't think I knew that at the time. I think, I knew that in some situations, just as the cases hold that the record could be admitted for purposes of showing bias. At the time, at the time the situation came up, quite frankly I don't think I knew, I knew that law.

Q. Moving into another area. During, the course of your preparation for this trial, did you have occasion to try to employ the services of a pathologist as an expert witness?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And could you relate to the Court what your efforts were and what occurred?

A. I think the first initiative was to file a petition with the Court for funds. I requested, filed a petition for funds. The Court gave I think $150 for a pathologist. I telephoned five, six, seven pathologists in this area of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware. The best that I could get was a pathologist in Pittsburgh who said if I would mail it to him he would read it and tell me something over the telephone. For $150 he says he doesn't walk out of his neighborhood. And he, he was willing at least to do that for $150. But I had no success in finding a pathologist who would even consider reviewing, talk to me or anything, for $150.

Page 60.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

Q. So are you indicating the case went to trial without the services of an expert pathologist for Mr. Jamal?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Now, would you indicate what effort you made if any with respect to obtaining an expert in firearms?

A. Yes, sir. Almost identical situation. George Fassnacht was a ballistician I had known, from the Police Department and other. And there was substantial questions with regard to the weapons, the projectiles and things of that nature. And obviously I needed the services of a ballistician. Again I requested funds from the Court. I think I was initially given the 150 or 250, I'm not certain what the amount is. I spoke to Mr. Fassnacht once or twice at his home. And I think eventually I requested another -- I think he may have gotten a total of $350. However, I did not have enough funds for him to perform any tests, any examinations, nor for his appearance in Court.

Q. So there was no test done on the alleged gun

Page 61.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

that Mr. Jamal had that night, and no test done on the bullet that was removed from Officer Faulkner, to your knowledge?

A. Not by the defense.

Q. Do you recall making a request also that you have an investigator?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you made that request early on?

A. In fact I think I made a request in December, I think. Or certainly by January.

Q. Was it because this was an alleged offense that occurred on a public street at four o'clock in the morning and it would be important to have an investigator early on to get out in the street and find potential witnesses?

A. Absolutely. The area, the area is known to be inhabited, a lot of transient persons who frequent the area. There were just a lot of, a lot of people that could have, could have seen something, known something, that were not in fact interviewed by the police. Just a number -- I could give you a litany of reasons why I needed an investigator.

Q. And fast?

A. Fast, right away.

Q. And it is a fact, is it not, that the Court

Page 62.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

did not approve your request for an investigator until January 20th, 1982, six weeks after the alleged occurrence?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. Incidentally, in looking at all these police interviews that you were given by the prosecution in this case: They did an awful lot of their interviewing in the month of December; isn't that correct?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Before you had an investigator?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much money was allocated for your investigation of this case?

A. The grand total for all of the experts, investigators, ballistics, less than a thousand dollars. Perhaps $800. For everybody.

Q. For everybody?

A. Everybody. And they didn't get paid until after the case was over. I think the investigator, think I may have paid him in advance. But that was the other obstacle: Even the amount, assuming even the amount given by the Courts was acceptable, you then had to ask that they wait approximately a year before they receive the money.

Page 63.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

Q. Incidentally, what was the name of the investigator who you retained with the money the Court authorized?

A. Bob Greer. Robert Greer.

Q. To your recollection, of all the witnesses, potential witnesses, do you recall how many of the witnesses he was able to locate and interview with the funds that were made available to you?

A. I think two.

Q. Do you know how many witnesses the police had interviewed in connection with this case, a round figure?

A. 150.

Q. Now, in your experience as a defense attorney up to June of 1982, how would you go about bringing a police officer witness who you wanted to call for the defense into Court?

A. Okay, if I am on trial, a jury trial, simply tell the D.A., the Assistant District Attorney who is trying the case, what police officer, Officer so-and-so, and they would have the officer in.

Q. And that was a matter of practice and a working arrangement between defense attorneys and District Attorneys in your experience?

A. Yes, sir. The exception would be if there was

Page 64.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

perhaps an ongoing trial and I had a minor matter, you would then take a subpoena down to the Court Attendance and bring the police officer in that way. But in,any trial you simply would tell the police officer -- tell the Assistant District Attorney who would then bring the officer in.

Q. So if I understand you correctly, then, the procedure would be you would just inform the District Attorney informally and the District Attorney would see to it that the police officer would appear in court?

A. Yes, nine times out of 10 that would be the only way. There may be some reason in a particular case where the Assistant D.A. may have objections for reasons that fit that particular case. Generally speaking, in a homicide, just call the D.A. to tell the D.A. who you want if it is a police officer.

Q. And did you come to this Court in June of 1982 in the defense of Mr. Jamal in the expectation that that same arrangement would be followed in his case?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And did there come a time in the course of that trial when you requested of Mr. McGill, the District Attorney prosecuting the case, that he produce a police officer by the name of Gary Wakshul?

Page 65.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And did the District Attorney produce Officer Wakshul?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you recall when you, what phase the trial was in when you made that request of Mr. McGill?

A. Sure. It was definitely during the time where the defense was presenting it's case. Having refreshed my recollection through some of the notes of testimony, it appears to be late in the defense of the case. I can't tell you which day, which day into the defense or which day before the verdict. But it was after a number of witnesses had already been presented.

Q. Did the District Attorney Mr. McGill tell you that you were too late in making that request?

A. Well, yes, he did tell me it was too late. Because the officer, contrary to what I understood, none of the officers, or the officers were instructed not to go on vacation during the period of the trial. When I requested that this officer be present, I was then told that he was on vacation. That he was on vacation. And that I should have told him a lot earlier. I guess he would have canceled his vacation, I don't know. But as I understood it, he had already been instructed not to go on vacation but somehow he got away.

Page 66.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

Q. Did you ask the Court for a continuance so that this officer could come back off vacation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it granted?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ask the Court to have Mr. McGill call Officer Wakshul to see if he was still in the City of Philadelphia?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. While on vacation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that granted?

A. No, sir.

Q. So the Jury never heard from Officer Wakshul?

A. No, they didn't, sir.

Q. Why was Officer Wakshul important to the defense?

A. Extremely important. There were a security guard and I believe another police officer testified that after Mr. Jamal was removed from 13th and Locust to the Jefferson Hospital, that Mr. Jamal made a statement, a confession: I killed the mother-fucker and I hope he dies. I'll never forget those words because they said it so cute. And I say cute because -- well.

Page 67.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

But in any event, Officer Wakshul, who had been, according to the report, had been with Mr. Jamal from the time that he was transported from 13th and Locust until I think the doctor saw him, in his report he said Mr. Jamal never said anything.

Q. So you wanted to lay that fact in front of the Jury as a rebuttal to this alleged confession?

A. Absolutely.

Q. The Jury never heard it; isn't that true?

A. That is correct, sir.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time between defense counsel.)

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. As a trial attorney, in your way of thinking, that alleged confession was an important piece of evidence against your client?

A. Extremely important.

Q. Was it also an important piece of evidence for the Jury to have heard and considered during the penalty phase as well?

(Pause.)

A. Well, let me answer it this way. During the, during the trial it is critically important if an officer is contradicting the alleged confession to another officer and this other security guard. The question as to would it be critically important at the penalty phase, the question is whether, whether you reintroduce that information or you just incorporate it. I guess it's just, I don't know if it is a tactical matter or what, but certainly the jury would need to know that information in either stage.

Q. Now, do you recall coming before Judge Ribner on or about April 29th, 1995 -- that's about five weeks before the trial was about to begin -- and requesting that a second attorney be appointed to assist you in this case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you recall indicating to Judge Ribner five weeks before the trial that you needed that assistance in order to properly prepare the case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall stating why you needed that assistance?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did Judge Ribner grant you the assistance of another attorney?

A. No, sir.

Page 69.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

Q. Now, it's a fact, is it not, that shortly after that, on May 13th, 1982, Mr. Jamal had asked the Court if he could represent himself?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. This was after your applications for resources for a pathologist, for a forensic expert, and for assistance of investigators and attorneys had all been turned down?

A. That's correct, sir. We were batting zero.

Q. And did Mr. Jamal then begin in fact to represent himself?

A. He did indeed.

Q. And what became then of your role?

A. I was told that I was to be backup Counsel.

Q. Backup Counsel?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Jackson, had you ever been backup counsel before?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you know what the responsibility and obligations of a backup counsel were?

A. I didn't know then, still don't know, sir.

Q. Did you ask the Court to assist you in telling you what your obligations and responsibilities were?

A. Yes, sir.

Page 70.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

Q. Did you get any assistance?

A. No assistance in Common Pleas Court. As a result of that I appealed to the State Supreme Court for clarification. Because, again, I had never taken a course in backup counseling, never been backup counsel, didn't know what I was supposed to do, not do, who I was supposed to talk to, who I was not supposed to talk to. No instructions, no guidelines, no books on being backup counsel. I was put in a tenuous situation.

Q. Because you were put in a tenuous situation, you asked to be released?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And you asked more than once to be released?

A. I asked so many times, yes, sir.

Q. And you weren't released?

A. No, I was not.

Q. Did there come a point in time during the Jury selection when Mr. Jamal was asked to desist from further representing himself with respect to asking questions of jurors?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And to your impression, during the several days that Mr. Jamal was questioning jurors, was he proceeding in an appropriate fashion?

Page 71.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

A. As appropriate as any attorney I've ever seen do it before.

MR. GRANT: I would object to that. Counsel, if you would please not answer --

THE WITNESS: I'm sorry, I didn't see you. Forgive me.

MR. GRANT: Yes. I object and move to strike, Your Honor.

THE COURT: It is stricken from the record. That's already been ruled on by the Supreme Court.

MR. WEINGLASS: With all due respect, Your Honor, the Supreme Court ruled on it without hearing Mr. Jackson's impression of how his client was proceeding in a pro se status and we are entitled to put --

THE COURT: The Supreme Court has ruled on it and that's the end of it.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: In a PCRA, it specifically provides --

THE COURT: In a PCRA, any matter that has already been ruled on by the Supreme Court

Page 72.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

is not part of PCRA.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right. We are entitled --

THE COURT: Where is local Counsel for this gentleman to give him advice as backup Counsel?

MR. GRANT: I could give him some. If he is saying that he is incompetent now, why should we receive his impressions about anything?

MR. WEINGLASS: That is a matter of weight, Your Honor.

MR. GRANT: Legally.

MR. WEINGLASS: That is a matter of weight. That is their position.

THE COURT: Whatever the Supreme Court has already ruled on is not proper in a PCRA. You give me a case that says that's wrong, Counselor, Xerox me a case, and I will be glad to reconsider.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right. Your Honor, I will Xerox the statute, which says new evidence must be presented in a PCRA. This is new.

THE COURT: This is not new evidence. It has already been --

Page 73.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

MR. WEINGLASS: The Supreme Court didn't have it.

THE COURT: This is not new evidence. The Supreme Court already had it and ruled on it, Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: Moving on.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Did there come a time later, after voir dire was completed -- I don't want to go back into that issue: I am being precluded --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- where the Court took from Mr. Jamal his right to represent himself and ordered you to represent Mr. Jamal? Did there come that time?

A. Yes, sir, the relationship began to go downhill even before.

Q. All right, but there came a time where you were ordered by Judge Sabo to begin to defend Mr. Jamal as his lead Counsel?

A. Yes, sir. During the time the trial began, Mr. Jamal was conducting the voir dire, and I believe he had conducted maybe one or two other pre-trial matters, he was questioning the witnesses, conducting the voir dire in my mind as effectively as any other attorney. And I think there was this one instance

Page 74 is missing. We will make attempts to locate it.

Page 75.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Did you become lead Counsel at a certain point later in the trial, after the Jury was selected?

A. Yes, I was lead Counsel while I completed the voir dire. Mr. Jamal was then supposed to have an opportunity to represent himself again. And I played lead Counsel again. Mr. Weinglass, it's kind of difficult for me to recall just the machinations how I was going back and forth. Sometimes I was lead Counsel, sometimes I was backup Counsel, sometimes I was in never-never land, I don't know.

Q. But I don't want to go back into the part that the Court has already ruled on.

A. Sure, yes, sir.

Q. Looking at the rest of the trial, past the time of Jury selection, could you describe for the Court what your relationship was with Mr. Jamal after you assumed the role of lead Counsel?

A. The relationship become progressively strained after that time. I think it was particularly because Mr. Jamal had been removed from representing himself. I think Mr. Jamal, obviously, clearly felt that the rules of Court, the Judge's rulings, as well as my role as an attorney following those same rules and regulations, were causing him problems. And I think

Page 76.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

at that point he realized that he was in a jam. When I say he was in a jam, it's because he was not being able to exercise the rights that he felt that he was entitled to. And as a result of that, he didn't think that the system, the rules, my competence or incompetence, or a lawyer, quite frankly, was going to do him much good. And I think he had to have lost confidence in me because I, as backup Counsel, I couldn't assist him in remaining Counsel for himself.

Q. So you were put in a very difficult, compromised position?

A. Oh, absolutely.

Q. As a lawyer, did it appear to you that you were put in a conflict position with your client Mr. Jamal?

A. It didn't appear, I certainly was. I had to do many things contrary to what he wanted me to do.

Q. Now, were you under orders from the Court to proceed as a lawyer in this case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you heard Judge Sabo say to you that you must proceed in this case as a lawyer fulfilling all the obligations that a lawyer would fulfill under the circumstances?

A. That's right. As best I possibly can. And I

Page 77.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

say as best as I possibly can because it was clear that the relationship between me and Mr. Jamal had deteriorated. Mr. Jamal had strong reservations and suspicions about what was going on in the Courtroom.

MR. WEINGLASS: May I have this document marked as D-9, I think it is. D-9.

No, 9. And handed to the witness.

And I want to show a copy to Counsel (handing).

- - - - -

(Document was marked Defendant's Exhibit D-9 for identification.)

THE COURT OFFICER: (Handing).

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Mr. Jackson --

THE COURT: Just a minute. Is there any objection to this?

MR. GRANT: None, Your Honor.

THE COURT: What's that?

MR. GRANT: I have no objection.

THE COURT: Okay. Go ahead, then.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. I want to show you what's been marked D-9, which is denominated Coroner's Report, and ask you to look at the first page.

Page 78.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Direct

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Lower, left-hand corner.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you see the handwritten notation in a box there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What does it say?

A. Shot... letter I, 44 caliber.

Q. 44 caliber?

A. Yes, sir.

MR. GRANT: I object: That's not what it says. Would you read --

THE WITNESS: 44 cal.

MR. GRANT: Thank you, sir.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. 44 Cal?

A. C-A-L, period. I'm sorry.

Q. Do you recall if you saw this prior to or during the trial?

A. Never. Never.

MR. WEINGLASS: If I may have just a moment, Your Honor.

Excuse me, Mr. Jackson.

THE WITNESS: Sure.

Page 79.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time between defense Counsel.)

MR. WEINGLASS: Thank you, Mr. Jackson. I have no further questions.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

THE COURT: Could we recess for lunch.

MR. GRANT: Do you want to, Judge?

THE COURT: Well, it's 12 after 12:00, and --

MR. GRANT: Whatever Your Honor's pleasure.

THE COURT: And I usually grab something at this time.

MR. GRANT: That's fine with me.

THE COURT: A quarter after 1:00?

MR. GRANT: That's fine.

THE COURT: Okay.

THE COURT OFFICER: This Court will take a luncheon recess until 1:15.

(A luncheon recess was held until 1:35 p.m.)

THE COURT: Good afternoon, everyone.

THE COURT OFFICER: That gentleman in the green shirt, please escort him out of the

Page 80.

Courtroom now.

(Pause.)

THE COURT OFFICER: Sorry, Your Honor, for the interruption.

THE COURT: Are you moving for somebody's admission?

MR. RUDOVSKY: I have original copies for Your Honor.

THE COURT: Where do the originals go?

MR. RUDOVSKY: I have it here.

THE COURT: You will file it?

MR. RUDOVSKY: I will file it, Your Honor. If I may hand up a copy. I served them to the District Attorney.

May it please the Court: My name is David Rudovsky, I am local Counsel in this matter. And I hereby move for the admission pro hoc vice of Daniel R. Williams and Jonathan B. Piper to appear in these proceedings, these proceedings alone in the defense in this PCRA matter. The supporting material is in the affidavit. Both Mr. Williams and Mr. Piper are members of the Bar in good standing in their own jurisdictions. They have been working on this matter for a number of years and will aid the defense in the presentation of the evidence.

THE COURT: I see Mr. Williams. Mr. Piper is not here, is he?

MR. RUDOVSKY: Mr. Piper is not here right now.

THE COURT: All right. You will take care of filing the papers?

MR. RUDOVSKY: I will, Your Honor. Thank you.

THE COURT: All right.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, before we begin with witnesses, there is another matter to be brought to the attention of the Court. I believe that there is a disparate and biased procedure in terms of people entering the Courtroom before these proceedings. This afternoon, members of Officer Faulkner's family were allowed to enter without going through the metal detector. Immediately after that the Cook family attempted to enter. The doors were closed behind them, or in front of them, and as they attempted to come in, as members of Mr. Jamal's family, they were, members of the family were physically accosted by whatever portion of, I don't know if it was the Sheriffs or Court

Page 82.

Officers out there in the hall. Specifically Mr. Jamal's son was physically stopped from entering after the Faulkner family had entered unimpeded without having to go through the metal detector. And then Mr. Jamal's first wife Abeeba Hart was also touched by the Court Officers. And they were then, the metal detectors were put on for the Cook family.

Contrary to the procedure being followed for the Faulkner family. I believe this is fundamentally unfair, biased and disparate. And if there is a procedure for the families it should be for both families, not for one, not only for the black family, not only for the family of the Petitioner here, but for both families. We should have the same procedure. If there is going to be metal detectors it has to be for both families, or no metal detectors for both families.

The other thing is it has come to our attention that in fact representatives of the FOP have been allowed to enter this Courtroom -- they are not in uniform, they are not part of the Court Officers here -- without going through metal detectors. Again, they are members of the public coming in here and they should be treated in the same way as any other members of the public. If the public is being subjected to going through a metal detector, then so should the FOP representatives. I would ask the Court to remedy this situation. Or to indicate that it is not going to for the record.

MR. GRANT: If I may, Your Honor: The Faulkner family was searched. I don't know where Counsel gets her information but I wish she would start researching some of the statements she makes prior to opening her mouth. Number one.

THE COURT: She does that all the time.

Go ahead.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: What was that, Your Honor?

THE COURT: I said you do that all the time.

MR. WEINGLASS: Is that stated on the record, please?

THE COURT: Yeah, sure, he takes down everything.

Page 84.

Go ahead.

MR. GRANT: Number two, Your Honor, obviously, and I would ask the record to reflect that since July the 12th when we started these proceedings, there has been a constant tumult, incessant horns blaring, crowds shouting, right underneath the window where the proceedings are taking place. So that even Counsel for Mr. Jamal who is trying to have an orderly and fair proceeding can't even hear the statements of Counsel or the other witnesses.

We've had three outbursts, four outbursts in the last three days: People shouting and directing comments to Your Honor. People have been escorted out today. There's been a sum total of about 16 people ejected from the Courtroom.

Now, I am not suggesting that the defense team is orchestrating any of this, but certainly emotions are very volatile and spirits are very high. I would suggest for Counsels, own protection and everybody else that there be two separate entrances and they have metal detectors at both, because clearly this is not going to resolve itself in this Courtroom.

Page 85.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: You are indicating --

THE COURT: What are you suggesting?

MR. GRANT: I am suggesting that there be two entrances, one for each family, if that's what they want to do. They could be searched at either place. But if you were here earlier today you would realize that people are willing, because of their beliefs or disbeliefs in whatever is going on, anti the death penalty, pro death penalty, I could understand these emotions, but if it is going to come to physical confrontation, we are here to maintain order: That's what this Court exists for.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: There has been no physical confrontation between the Jamal family and Faulkner family.

THE COURT: Will you please keep quiet for a minute. He has made a suggestion and I think it is a good one.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I object.

THE COURT: You are talking about the second entrance?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I object. It is not with the acquiescence or acceptance of the

Page 86.

Petitioner.

THE COURT: You could decide anything you want, it is my Courtroom, I will make the decisions.

You are suggesting they come through this way?

MR. GRANT: Yes, Your Honor. Only the families be allowed in this area. These people of the spectators, the members of the gallery, are primarily the people who have been ejected.

THE COURT: I will change that. The families on both sides could come through this second entrance here.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Families on both sides, fine.

THE COURT: That's what I said, Counsel. If you just listen to what I am saying.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Families on both sides.

THE COURT: That's right. I don't have to repeat it. Okay. Now, are there any other problems?

THE COURT OFFICER: Your Honor, if that is the case, then it should be known that all families should show ID when they come through.

Page 87.

THE COURT: Yes, we have to: You don't know who they are.

THE COURT OFFICER: We need to know.

MR. GRANT: I agree with you.

THE COURT OFFICER: If they are a member of the Cook family we want to know, if they are a member of the Faulkner family we want to know.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: The families have been coming in on a regular basis, they have been identified.

THE COURT: Let the Court Officer know who they are because I am not there at the door.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We will do that.

THE COURT: All right. Okay, let's proceed with cross-examination now.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, there is --

MR. GRANT: Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. WEINGLASS: There is just one other matter, which I brought up with Mr. Grant before Court began this afternoon. We have a witness who is on our witness list, his name is

Page 88.

Joe Davidson. He is a reporter, as I understand it, with the Wall Street Journal, stationed in Washington. He came up today and we --

THE COURT: Why don't you let him finish cross-examination: Maybe we could get to him.

MR. GRANT: That was my suggestion precisely.

MR. WEINGLASS: I was just concerned because --

THE COURT: Well, Counselor, you weren't concerned. I told you to call him early in the morning before we had Mr. Jackson here. You didn't want to put him on. Now come on.

MR. WEINGLASS: If I may finish. I was concerned because of Mr. Grant's representation that he might be cross-examining Mr. Jackson --

THE COURT: He might, he might.

MR. WEINGLASS: -- all day today and all day tomorrow.

THE COURT: He may, I don't know. But let's go. We are never going to know. If you would stop talking so we could proceed with this witness.

Page 89.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yea. Your Honor, if we could just have Mr. Davidson on for 10 minutes on his direct, that's all that --

THE COURT: Counsel, I am not going to interrupt the District Attorney's cross-examination at this point. I offered you to let him go on this morning when we were having difficulty in finding anyone. And I had to wait and sit in my chambers for nothing. You could have had him on and off.

MR. WEINGLASS: Correct, but we thought --

THE COURT: Well, I know what you thought, but you didn't think right, so let's proceed with the cross-examination of this witness.

MR. WEINGLASS: We had three witnesses that the Court refused to hear.

THE COURT: Fine, okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: We expected that the Court would hear those.

THE COURT: You should have had him on here, he could have gone on. I suggested him, I told you who you could put on. But you won't tell me how to run this Courtroom. He is on for cross-examination, let's proceed.

- - - - -

Anthony E. Jackson, Esquire, having been previously affirmed, was examined and testified as follows:

- - - - -

CROSS-EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Good afternoon, sir.

A. Good afternoon, Mr. Grant.

Q. For the record, Mr. Jackson: You and I have known one another for a number of years, is that not true?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. As a result of trying murder cases; is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By the way, just to start off: Mr. Weinglass asked you how many times prior to the case for Mr. Jamal had you tried a murder case and went to the penalty phase, and you said once or twice; is that correct?

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, that is a misstatement of the record.

Page 91 is missing. We will make attempts to locate it.

Page 92.

Q. How many murder cases had you tried, sir, prior to December, or I should say June the 2nd of 1982?

A. My best recollection is a minimum of 16, perhaps 20 cases, 20 murder cases before Mr. Jamal's case.

Q. And how many of those defendants were convicted of first degree murder? Just round numbers if you can. Percentages if you can.

A. A half dozen.

Q. So out of 20 murder cases, six people convicted of first degree murder. And ostensibly, those six people faced the judgment of life or death by a jury, I presume?

A. That is correct, sir. Let me correct it. This is tough. I think there may have been two, possibly three that were convicted of first degree on waivers, with the judge.

Q. Nevertheless, the two possible penalties for first degree conviction are only a life or a death sentence; is that correct?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Of those six people -- that was prior to Mr. Jamal's --

A. That is correct.

Page 93.

Q. -- none of those people received the death penalty, did they?

A. No, sir.

Q. And that's because you saved their lives through your oral skills, your intellectual prowess, and your advocacy as a lawyer; would that be fair to say?

A. I appreciate the compliment but I would assume that the facts of the cases helped a little bit too.

Q. Oh. So you think that basically when a man is killed and that person happens to be a police officer, and that police officer's bullet is found in the center of the chest or removed from the back of a person who is found within three or four feet of the officer with the gun used to kill the officer, you think basically there is no way you can win that kind of a case?

A. No, never thought that.

Q. You never thought that?

A. Never thought it.

Q. Because as a lawyer you have to have a certain degree of ego and you think you can win any case that you try, don't you?

A. Pretty much so, yes, sir.

Q. And there was nothing different about this case than there was about the other 20 murder cases in terms of your feelings and abilities and belief in yourself?

A. That's true.

Q. Now, you graduated from Temple Law School in 1974; is that right, Mr. Jackson?

A. That is correct.

Q. Where did you go to undergraduate?

A. University of Pennsylvania.

Q. And what did you major in there, sir?

A. Political science.

Q. And you worked for the D.A.'s office the next year after you graduated from law school; is that correct?

A. Actually, it was the same year.

Q. Same year?

A. I think I graduated in May or June and I think I began in the D.A.'s Office in July.

Q. And you only stayed with the D.A.'s Office six months; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Well, that's kind of an unusual tenure. Is there some reason for that?

A. Yeah. Umm, first reason is for me going to the D.A.'s Office -- I will just give you the history -- my last semester of law school Arlen Specter conducted a criminal law seminar. I did a paper in my last year on the lack of black prosecutors throughout the United States and got a good grade on the course. But as a result of that, he then contacted me to, since I said there were few blacks prosecutors in the United States, would I consider coming to the D.A.'s Office.

At the time it was probably the last place that I thought of working. But I guess to some extent I was a little bit embarrassed about it so I did take the job. It lasted, I lasted, I stayed six months because of the situation with the prison came up and I moved on to that.

Q. Well, you moved on to that because that was the last place you thought of working because you never fancied yourself being a criminal prosecutor in the first place?

A. Never did.

Q. And what you saw of it you didn't like; would that be fair to say?

A. Some of it, that's correct.

Q. And you had another job where you worked in law enforcement, and you worked for the Police Department?

Page 96.

A. That's correct.

Q. As a civilian?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what did you do, sir?

A. I worked in the identification unit in the evidence lab. Took fingerprints, compared fingerprints, did latent prints, did searches, employment searches, photographs of evidence, photographs of defendants, dead bodies, things of that sort.

Q. Crime scene photos?

A. Crime scene photos.

Q. Sketches?

A. I did not do sketches.

Q. Collecting evidence at the scene?

A. Collecting evidence.

Q. You did all those things that are the very core and the essence of a criminal prosecution for five-and-a-half years, did you not? The only thing left is talking to witnesses?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So you would agree with me that in terms of the scientific and forensic sciences that are involved, you were pretty well skilled and experienced in that field before you even became a lawyer?

A. I had some skills and some talents, yes, sir.

Q. Well, did you get promoted through the ranks in that field?

A. One promotion.

Q. You got pay raises?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you a slug?

A. No, sir.

Q. All right. You were competent at what you did?

A. I think so.

Q. And even though you had a stint at the D.A.'s. Office, you weren't particularly enamored of prosecutors or policemen, are you, as a general philosophical --

A. Policemen but I didn't like prosecutors.

Q. Okay. And you also did a stint as an investigator?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you investigated for various lawyers in town, criminal practitioners?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Marilyn Gelb was one of them? And she was the appellate Counsel who succeeded you while you served as trial Counsel for Mr. Jamal, was she not?

Page 98.

A. That's right, sir.

Q. And you maintained this professional relationship with her even after you stopped being a private eye and you became a lawyer, did you not?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And you did that because you thought she was pretty damn good and you liked her style and you felt that she would be a good mentor for you, didn't you?

A. Absolutely, I respect Marilyn Gelb a great deal.

Q. And do you still?

A. Still do.

Q. You think she is a good lawyer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you think you are a good lawyer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now what I would like to discuss with you is this organization, this Public Interest --

A. Law Center.

Q. Law Center. The police project?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would you tell us a little bit about that?

A. Sure. The police project at Pilcop was established I think approximately in 1977 or seventy -- 77? I think it was '77. It was funded, as I said, by LEA funds, Law Enforcement Assistance Administration. It was specifically funded to explore avenues of increasing police-community relations, implementing wrong -- not wrong, I guess I am just trying to think of what the expression was in the grant. But we were trying to create an avenue for citizens here in Philadelphia to file complaints and have them meritoriously examined.

Prior to that time in Philadelphia when one made a complaint against the police, normally we would have to go right back to the police station where the incident happened; and there was no telling who might take the complaint, an officer might write it on a yellow sheet of paper and after the person leaves throw it in the trash.

As a result of that, we thought that was an inequitable way of conducting an investigation of citizens' complaints. We tried a number of avenues, one of which was litigation. Another of which was lobbying. Another of which was community organizing. Some of which was representation, criminal representation of those who were charged with what we call cover charges. And of course we did other types of research and information dissemination.

Q. If I am not mistaken, you sued the police, instructed other attorneys how to sue the police, and investigated the police in Philadelphia and enacted guidelines for police conduct, assisted the Department of Justice in suing the City of Philadelphia Police Department, first in the country, assisted citizens and represented them in criminal court on cover charges?

A. And we represented police officers too.

Q. Did you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many?

A. The entire Guardian Civic League, black police officers.

Q. Black police officers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in what fashion did you represent them?

A. Primarily in employment discrimination.

Q. I see. No criminal cases?

A. No, sir.

Q. No civil cases for money?

A. No, sir.

Q. And these cover charges you are talking about, what you are talking about is pretextural arrests?

Page 101.

A. Exactly.

Q. Fabricated, framed people?

A. That's right, sir.

Q. And you became the Director of Pilcop, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long were you the Director?

A. Three, three-and-a-half years.

Q. And is that the job you left the D.A.'s Office to take?

A. No. I left the D.A.'s Office to take a job as staff counsel with the Prison Master. The prison system here in Philadelphia had been declared un-Constitutional because it constituted cruel and unusual punishment.

Q. You mean crowded conditions?

A. No, sir. No, sir.

Q. What do you mean?

A. No, I am talking about Jackson V Hendricks. This was, it was more than overcrowding; it was rodents, bad food, bad accommodations, it was everything. And of course Mr. Rudovsky was here and I am sure Mr. Rudovsky could tell you a great deal more about it than I can. But again, that was the first time that the prison system here in Philadelphia had been declared un-Constitutional and that was an unusual situation when a Master was appointed. The Master was appointed to oversee the correction of those problems in the prison system.

Page 102.

Q. How long did you stay there?

A. Approximately two years.

Q. Now, when you took the job at Pilcop, probably for the first time in your adult life you had a job, I would venture to say, that suited your profession, because you were in fact an attorney, and suited your philosophy, because you believed in what that job represented, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And over that period of time of dealing with the persons you perceived as the victims of the system that forced the institution of that project, and your criminal practice, you began to philosophically identify with this type of organization and what it hoped to achieve, did you not?

A. At least that, yes, sir.

Q. Okay. And since you had had 20 murder trials, more or less, before Mr. Jamal was tried, where did you have time to squeeze all those in between the D.A.'s Office and the Police Department and the prison system and Pilcop?

A. I worked real hard. I did, I could try to tell you. 1975 was the year because I think I left the D.A.'s Office in January, maybe February of 1975. During that time again I was staff counsel for the Prison Master, it was not full-time. During that first year of being in private practice, I think I was appointed to three, maybe four criminal cases, criminal homicide cases. I was privately retained for one.

Q. Major cases, sir? And by that I mean every case is major if there's a murder involved?

A. Right.

Q. What I am suggesting to you, though, is there are some cases that put more pressure on lawyers than others. There are cases that have political overtones, community activism, socialist orientations and crowds, high emotions?

A. I've never had another case like Mr. Jamal's case.

Q. Well, each case is going to be different than any case you've ever had?

A. Absolutely.

Q. But did you ever have a case that approached this scale on sensitivity and emotion?

Page 104.

A. As Mr. Jamal's?

Q. (Nodded head affirmatively.)

A. No.

Q. On those three cases you were appointed to, two you were appointed to, one you were retained?

A. Three, three or four I was appointed, one I was retained.

Q. In either of those was the issue of the death penalty involved?

A. Well, neither of those that I just spoke of. I was also acting as Co-counsel, another case that I had forgotten about, that was a death penalty case. I played no major role in the case. Another lawyer, Bobby Mozenter, was the lawyer.

Q. Okay, so tell me about the other 17 or 18 cases that you had when you were working also with juggling these balls and trying these murder cases?

A. Sure. '75, as I said, must have been four or five cases. I tried to make a note.

Q. By the way, excuse me, Mr. Jackson.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you reciting all of these informational facts and all your direct examination based on a 13-year-old recollection?

A. No, not all of them. Well, some of my testimony on direct was refreshed by my reviewing some old transcripts. Things of that sort. But --

Page 105.

Q. And some were refreshed by reviewing your trial file, I take it?

A. No, not my trial file. I. haven't seen my trial file since I gave it to Marilyn Gelb.

Q. You gave it to her?

A. I gave her everything.

Q. Everything?

A. Everything that I recall. I may have retained some -- I think I gave Marilyn everything that was in the file.

Q. Well, there wasn't much in the file since you gave it all to Mr. Jamal during the trial?

A. That isn't true. That isn't true.

Q. That isn't true?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, did you say to the Judge that it was true?

A. That I gave -- that what, did I say what to the Judge?

Q. That Mr. Jamal took all the statements of the witnesses who testified in that case and you had to go from memory and your own rough notes to proceed as to how to cross-examine them and to know which ones were there, which ones were available for you?

A. That is partially correct. Let me explain what happened. When I first received discovery from the District Attorney's Office I made copies -- remember, I mean it was at least 150 statements. I made copies of most, some of those statements, gave them to Mr. Jamal. As we proceeded in preparation for trial or during the trial, I'm not certain when, I gave him some statements that I had not made copies of. Those would be the statements that I was talking about that Mr. Jamal had. I had copies of some statements that I had also provided him copies with. There were other statements that I had no copies of. And I believe there may be statements that I had that he didn't have.

Am I confusing you, sir?

Q. No, I am not confused. I think you are, Mr. Jackson.

A. Okay.

Q. Do you recall this situation? I will see if I can refresh your recollection.

MR. WEINGLASS: When Counsel has the line and page I would appreciate it.

MR. GRANT: When I have it I will give it to you.

Page 107.

I'm sorry for the delay, Mr. Jackson.

THE WITNESS: No problem, sir.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. I would invite your attention, sir, to the date of June 26th, 1982. Pages 139 and 140. And you are acting as Counsel at that time, Mr. Jackson. Not backup but as primary Counsel. When being asked by the Court why you didn't know who your next witness was you stated -- and I have the volumes physically here for you in the event that you would like to refresh your recollection further -- you stated one of the difficulties that I have in determining what witnesses to call is that I have to reflect and think --

A. That I had to what?

MR. GRANT: May I approach, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Give it to him.

MR. GRANT: (Handing.)

139, sir.

THE WITNESS: Okay, thanks, sir. All right, 139, sir.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. It says Mr. Jackson: One of the difficulties -- is how it begins. Do you see it?

Page 108.

A. Yes, I'm sorry, I see where you are.

Q. One of the difficulties that I have in determining what witnesses to call is that I have to reflect and think and search my notes as to the statements of witnesses since I no longer have a copy of the statements. Mr. Jamal has copies of the statements. I think that I indicated I showed you all of the names.

You were speaking to Mr. McGill at that point in time.

A. Right.

Q. So does that refresh your recollection as to what was in your file that you turned over to Marilyn Gelb and how much you gave to Mr. Jamal and how much you retained?

A. That's entirely consistent with what I said, sir. At the time that I made these statements, again, I specifically recall that there were some, when I originally received copies of some of the discovery, there were a number of them that I made copies of and I gave to Mr. Jamal. Now, I kept all of the others. At a point in time there were some statements that were the only copies, the originals I had given to Mr. Jamal. At this time I'm not -- I don't know exactly which, which witnesses we were talking about at this time. This may have been a time that he had all of the statements and I got some. I just don't know. But I mean it is not that he had all of the copies so long that I didn't have them. I mean he had some and I had some. If he had all of them then I would have had duplicates of statements because I made copies of them.

Q. Well, this is pretty plain English right here. It says I no longer have a copy of the statements, Mr. Jamal has copies of the statements. That sounds like the entirety, it sounds like it is inclusive, whole; it doesn't say some or others, it says the statements, does it not?

A. Yes, talking about specific statements, I would assume. I don't know if it's talking about all the statements.

Q. Oh, I see. So you have an independent recollection 14 years later as to what you meant at that paragraph in the 4,000-page transcript?

A. No, I didn't say that. I said it doesn't say all the statements, I don't know what it is. And if you were to let me clarify I will tell you. I don't know, but I don't believe that it refers to all of the statements.

Q. Did you bring any file here today?

Page 110.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. No, sir. I have no file.

Q. I see you looking at some papers you are referring to?

A. Piece of paper, I wrote this, I wrote this earlier today to count up the cases. And this is the affidavit. That is what I made (displaying). This is my file.

Q. May I see them?

A. Absolutely.

MR. GRANT: May I approach, Your Honor?

THE WITNESS: (Handing).

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. You were telling us before I rudely interrupted you about how you were able to balance 20 homicides, more or less, and your other jobs. Would you continue, please?

A. Well, you have my crib sheet right there.

Q. Oh, I see. So what you have is a little numerical data sheet and you have a copy of your affidavit?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who prepared the affidavit for you, sir?

A. Mr. Weinglass.

Q. And in what respect did he prepare it for you,

Page 111.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

since you are a lawyer as well?

A. He prepared it on behalf of Mr. Jamal, as far as I know. He was representing Mr. Jamal.

Q. And these statements that are found in the affidavit here, they are dictated by you to his secretary?

A. No, sir.

Q. They were typed by you in their present form?

A. No, sir.

Q. You gave him a rough draft and he filled in the text?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, tell me how that came about?

A. Sure.

Q. And I hate to keep diverting, digressing from our mission.

A. Mr. Grant, no problem. I met Mr. Weinglass perhaps two years ago. I talked to Mr. Weinglass and a couple of his associates. He generally asked me about my representation of Mr. Jamal. We conversed perhaps a couple of hours. Over the last two years I have spoken to Mr. Weinglass a number of times. I've seen him a number of times. And obviously the subject of the conversation was my representation of Mr. Jamal.

Page 112 is missing. We will make attempts to locate it.

Page 113.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

THE COURT: You no longer have privilege. There is no longer a privilege.

MR. GRANT: This is a statement of the witness, and he is taking notes as to the witness' statement. And I just want to see if the notes comport with the reality that I see typed here in front of me.

THE COURT: Well, if you have them turn it over to him.

MR. WEINGLASS: I don't have such. I don't have the notes. And I believe the notes are privileged. I am Counsel to Mr. Jamal. That privilege still pertains.

THE COURT: That is not anything that Jamal said to you, it is what a witness said to you.

MR. WEINGLASS: If it has anything to do with what I take down in terms of my representation of Mr. Jamal.

THE COURT: No, no.

MR. GRANT: I would like to state that when Mr. Jamal claims his Counsel at trial was ineffective he has waived the attorney-client privilege with respect to what this man did and what his file showed he did on behalf of Mr.

Page 114.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Jamal.

And he is no longer representing Mr. Jamal (indicating Mr. Jackson). And this attorney is not representing Mr. Jackson (indicating Mr. Weinglass). So there is no attorney-client privilege here.

MR. WEINGLASS: He is missing one gap and that is that I represent Mr. Jamal, and the privilege between Mr. Jamal and myself pertains.

THE COURT: That's right, but we are not talking about anything that Mr. Jamal said to you. Only what Mr. Jackson said to you. If you have the notes turn them over. Otherwise the Court can conclude that you just manufactured this thing. If you have them give it to him.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, I appreciate the Court indicating the possibility that it was manufactured.

THE COURT: Well, because he is going to argue that later on. And I am trying to help you now. Because if you have them give it to him.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor beat him to it. You are making the argument from the bench

Page 115.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

for the prosecutor. But I appreciate that observation. But I don't have the notes. There are no notes.

MR. GRANT: Thank you, sir.

THE COURT: He doesn't have any notes.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. So he sent you a rough draft based on rough notes that he had taken from conversations with you over the couple years?

A. That's what I suspect, that's where the rough draft came from, his notes and from his recollection.

Q. Did you see him taking notes while he was taking to you?

A. Yeah, from time to time, sure.

Q. When he sent you the rough draft did he send you a copy of the rough notes as well?

A. No.

Q. Never saw those?

A. No.

Q. You don't know what he was writing?

A. No, sir. I sure don't.

Q. He didn't let you review it?

A. No, he could have been writing a recipe for a cake as far as I know.

Q. And you didn't ask to see the recipe for that

Page 116.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

cake or taste it, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Okay, back to juggling.

A. I'm with you. Where would you like me to begin?

Q. I would like you to tell me about the other 17 cases, minus the three or four that you have mentioned?

A. Okay, sure. All right, 1975 I was appointed, I think I told you about that. Okay, '76, I was appointed to at least three cases, possibly four. I was privately retained in two cases. 1977, appointed to four or five cases, privately retained in two or three. If you add up '75, '76 and '77, it is a minimum of 11 cases I was Court-appointed, a maximum of 13. I was privately retained through those same years a minimum of 5 cases, a maximum of 7 cases. That's why you got 11 and 5, 16; 13 and 7 is 20.

Q. And you know what, Mr. Jackson --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- comparing notes with your colleagues back in the late '70s --

A. Hmm-hmm.

Q. -- you probably had more homicide experience than 80 percent of the lawyers practicing criminal

Page 117.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

law here in Philadelphia?

A. Didn't know that.

Q. Wouldn't you say that?

A. I had a lot.

Q. Did you know of any lawyers that tried as many murder cases as you that were your peers at that time?

A. No, I had no way of knowing, sir.

MR. GRANT: Okay. I am not bringing you anything, I am just giving you these notes for your ease and comfort. If I could have that one back, please.

THE WITNESS: (Handing).

MR. GRANT: This.

THE WITNESS: Oh, I thought you wanted my crib sheet.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Now, how did you come to represent Mr. Jamal? And I know you were appointed, sir.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But, you know, there's ways to get appointed. Like Defendant's friends come to you and say Mr. Jamal is in trouble, we know you are a good lawyer, do you think you could go to Court and see if you could represent him, see if you could somehow get an appointment to represent him. Tell us how you got to be appointed?

Page 118.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. Okay. What you just said is kind of sort of how it happened this time. It is the first time in my whole career it ever happened this way.

Q. Are you sure? Was it the last?

A. Pardon me, it was the first and only time I ever talked to a client and got the Court to appoint me. All of the other Court appointments were given to me out of the blue. I had no prior knowledge. This is the only case where -- and let me back up to answer your question fully.

I was approached by some friends of Mr. Jamal's after Mr. Jamal was arrested and shot who suggested that he needed representation. Not that I could necessarily be his lawyer, but he needed someone to receive some advice and counsel while he was in Jefferson Hospital. I recall that I went to Jefferson Hospital where he was. He was, you know, had the tubes, he was wounded. Things of that sort. I had known Mr. Jamal before that time. I went, I told him that I was there as a result of some concerned friends of his that he at least have counsel available to him if he had any questions or concerns to make sure that at least in that situation that things didn't get any worse. That may have been... it could have been a week or so, two weeks before I was actually --

Page 119.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. Formally appointed?

A. Appointed, that's right.

Q. And who were these friends and supporters who suggested that you go visit him, and that was your introduction to him professionally for the representation ultimately that arrived?

A. Yes. Ahh... now, I think it was E. Steven Collins was the one who actually talked to me. And I think he told -- well, I know he told me that he conferred with others, and he called me or saw me, I don't really recall. And as a result of that he came, Mr. Collins came and asked me. And I said well sure. At that point I think the concern was not necessarily representation for him in the homicide case, but representation for whatever was going to be his needs while he was in the hospital. I think, I don't think that he, Mr. Collins or anyone else, could tell Mr. Jamal who to retain or who to have represent him. Nor could I impose myself on him. I think at the time it was just a need that he should have somebody to advise him.

Q. Yeah, but being the popular man, outspoken

Page 120.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

community activist and generally respected and liked person, he could probably have selected a number of lawyers that he could have come to him and asked them to go get the same appointment that you got; correct?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection, Your Honor. It is highly speculative: He could probably.

MR. GRANT: All right, I will rephrase it.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. You weren't the only lawyer in town, were you?

A. No.

Q. And you weren't the only black lawyer in town, were you?

A. No.

Q. And there were some good lawyers back in the day?

A. Still are.

Q. Yes, there are.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I am talking about lawyers with reputations that are legendary right now?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they were your contemporaries then?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you know any of those people?

Page 121.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. Oh, absolutely.

Q. Name some?

A. You mean black lawyers, Ben Johnson.

Q. Ben Johnson?

A. Starting in, he was of course a great lawyer. But I think the one thing that you are missing: Mr. Jamal was in the hospital, he was wounded. Mr. Jamal did not have access to a phone. I don't know, if Mr. Johnson wanted to volunteer his services I don't know how Mr. Jamal would have talked to him.

Q. The same way that you were contacted and not by Mr. Jamal?

A. Mr. Jamal didn't initiate the conversation.

Q. That's what I am saying. Mr. Collins did.

A. Yes.

Q. And he could have walked to a phone and called somebody else just as easily as you; correct?

A. Sure.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, Mr. Collins was here yesterday. Counsel had an opportunity to cross-examine him. This witness does not know what Mr. Collins was doing or thinking or why he was acting.

THE COURT: If you want --

MR. WEINGLASS: This is very bizarre.

Page 122.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

The very witness we are questioning Mr. Jackson about was here in Court yesterday. He could have questioned him all afternoon.

MR. GRANT: I could have had I known that he was the one that got Mr. Jamal his Counsel and then didn't even come in to testify on behalf of Mr. Jamal.

THE COURT: Bring him back if you wish.

MR. WEINGLASS: I assume the Court is sustaining the objection.

THE COURT: No, I am not sustaining the objection. I'm overruling the objection. I am saying you could bring Collins back if you want to.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, it is the District Attorney who is asking about Collins. Not me.

THE COURT: No, it is what came up now through cross-examination.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right.

THE COURT: He can't ask Collins about something if he didn't know Collins was the one that called Mr. Jackson.

MR. WEINGLASS: Exactly. So the

Page 123.

District Attorney could bring Collins back and ask questions about Collins.

THE COURT: Anybody could bring him back but the objection at this point is overruled. 0kay.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was E. Steven Collins, who is a broadcast journalist, a friend of yours at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was Mr. Jamal a friend of yours at that time?

A. No, not a friend. I knew him. I wouldn't say he was a friend.

Q. How many lawsuits could you estimate that you brought against the Philadelphia Police Department during the years that you were Director of Pilcop?

(Pause.)

A. That we actually -- oh. Probably... no more than six or seven. We were primarily involved in assisting other lawyers in suing the Police Department, the theory being, you know, the old private attorney general theory that if we trained more lawyers in the City to do this type of litigation, the citizens would just have a better

Page 124 is missing. We will make attempts to locate it.

Page 125.

Q. How soon after you got in the case were you suing the Police Department for brutality against the person who was accused of killing the police officer by shooting him between the eyes at pointblank range?

A. I'm not quite following you.

Q. Yeah. You filed a lawsuit, and the lawsuit and the discovery as a result of that lawsuit which was even engendered by your filing the claim got to you before the trial was tried, wasn't it?

A. You mean I filed a lawsuit on behalf of Mr. Jamal?

Q. Yes. You recall filing a lawsuit, don't you?

A. I remember filing a complaint. Quite frankly, I don't recall filing a lawsuit. If I did, fine.

Q. Okay.

A. I remember filing a complaint.

Q. Administrative complaint?

A. Yes, sir, not a lawsuit.

Q. I see. Well, had you ever filed any of those before that, before that shooting on December the 9th of '81?

A. Had I filed any what?

Q. Administrative complaints before.

A. On behalf of Mr. Jamal?

Q. On behalf of anyone.

Page 126.

A. Oh, sure, plenty, plenty.

Q. Plenty of them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you know what happens when you file those complaints?

A. I know what happens, I know what happened -- no, I didn't know what happened during that period of time. Because that's the basis of Pilcop being, being there. Because there was no predictability about what would happen.

Q. Okay.

A. I understand based on the time, by the time I represented Mr. Jamal, by that time we had been successful in getting the Police Department to establish a system whereby the police officers were to investigate the case or give me some notice within 30 days that they are doing something, send me a letter saying we got your complaint and we are going to do it.

Q. What happens when you investigate your complaints, generally speaking, after you established this procedure?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What generally happens when you file an administrative complaint? The Police Department investigates, what they do is go around with a microphone saying did you see anybody getting beat up and walk away if the person says yes or no?

A. Obviously what they would want to do is to interview the complainant. That's what they would want to do. As if it would make a difference. And interview, I guess, the officers who were charged with the wrongdoing.

Q. And if they didn't know what if any officers were charged with wrongdoing, they would interview every officer that was in the periphery of that incident, would they not?

A. I have no idea at all what they would do in that situation.

Q. Okay, let me say this to you: You did file an administrative complaint in this case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they did go out and interview almost every single person that had already been interviewed related to the murder in this case, hence, 150 interviews; would that be fair to say?

A. Mr. Grant, I'm going to, I'm guessing. I assume it, I don't, I don't have any specific recall of how many people they interviewed as a result of the administrative complaint, how many people they interviewed as a result of the criminal charge. I really, I have no idea.

Q. But you saw innumerable instances of duplicated or duplicate interviews of the same person on two or three different occasions, didn't you, when you had the statements?

A. I know there were some, yeah.

Q. Now, don't you think it would be a smart tactic for a clever lawyer, even if there was no basis to filing a lawsuit, to file a lawsuit while the criminal case is pending so that cops would be interviewed twice, the civilians would be interviewed three times, and then you could look and find little discrepancies so that it is better for you to be a criminal practitioner?

A. Absolutely not right. Worse thing in the world. Why would you want to file an administrative complaint that has no basis? I wouldn't do it.

Q. I am not saying you would. Even if there weren't a basis, that would be very beneficial to you as a cross-examiner, would it not?

A. Yeah, it could if there was a basis for it. And he had a right --

Q. Yes.

A. -- why not exercise the right. Would it be

Page 129.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

beneficial? Hopefully.

Q. And in this case it totaled a lot more interviews than in the average homicide case, wouldn't you say? Because they were doing dual investigations?

A. Mr. Grant, I assume. You know, I know that there were duplicate statements. I don't know that all of these statements were as a result of the complaint. As an example, I know Cynthia White probably had three or four statements, each one of the statements were different. I don't know if that were as a result of the administrative complaint or just the fact that each time she told a lie the Police Department wanted to go back and ask her again, I don't know.

Q. And you kept her on the stand for two-and-a-half, three days, didn't you, on cross only?

A. It was a tough following it, yes, I did.

Q. It was as a result of this administratively filed complaint which took place pretty much parallel to and in conjunction with this criminal accusation against Mr. Jamal, in other words, these two things were going on in tandem, which is the occasion for the officer, Mr. Wakshul, tell you which interviews were generated as a result of the administrative complaint or the regular police investigation. I have no idea at all what motivated the police. And maybe if I had the specific interview in front of me that said Internal Affairs as opposed to Joe Detective I could make that distinction. I don't recall ever seeing a statement Wakshul said that Mr. Jamal said that yeah, I shot the mother-fucker, I'm glad. In fact, I recall the exact opposite, where the officer said that he was with him until he was treated and he never said anything. That's my recollection.

Page 131.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. Well, I appreciate that. And we are going back 13 years, but didn't it occur to you since you were going to be testifying about something 13 years old or more that you might want to read the 4,000 pages which constitute the notes of testimony in this trial?

A. It occurred to me.

Q. But it didn't occur to you that you should do it or that you would do it but just that you should do it?

A. Maybe I should do it. 4,000 pages. No, I lived through it once, it's difficult for me to go back and live through it again reading the pages. I admit my recall isn't perfect and if I am making a mistake I apologize but I just don't remember that statement.

Page 132.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. Well, that makes it entirely impossible, of course, although it may seem convenient to a prosecutor's mind when you say I don't recall, then I'm stuck, right? As opposed to you making a statement saying yeah, I read it, based on the information I have, this is my answer. Now, you see, that is something somebody could deal with, but when you say I don't remember it's tougher, isn't it?

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, if Mr. Grant is having difficulty as an examiner he should take a little time and restudy the record. He shouldn't put it to the witness to confirm that he's having difficulty conducting his cross-examination.

MR. GRANT: Thank you.

MR. WEINGLASS: I object to the form of the question and it's relevance and it's materiality.

MR. GRANT: Thank you, Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: May I have a ruling from the Court?

THE COURT: The objection is

Page 133.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

overruled.

Go ahead.

THE WITNESS: Is there a question for me?

THE COURT: No, there is no question.

MR. GRANT: There is no question pending.

(Pause.)

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Based on what you are telling us thus far, when you opened your new offices in January or February of '82 --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- and you had already received the appointment to represent Mr. Jamal, this was not something to which you were unaccustomed: After all, you were working at Pilcop but the money had run out, you knew you were leaving?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you went with Mr. Crawford as a partner?

A. Well, we shared expenses.

Q. Shared space?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So did you give Mr. Jamal second-rate service because you were moving your offices from one part of Page 134 is missing. We will make attempts to locate it.

Page 135.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

McGill stated this to you on page 85 and 86, June 2nd, 1982. The purpose of backup Counsel as stated yesterday -- so it wasn't the first time he was saying this to you --

A. Mr. McGill is saying this to me?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. He is telling me.

Q. He is giving you some instruction as to the difficulty you are in, he is saying this is the purpose of backup Counsel.

A. Okay, I'm listening, sir.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I object to the question. It is a sad day, Your Honor, when defense counsel has to take it's instructions from a district attorney.

THE COURT: Look, this is cross-examination, Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor, but he asked if he got --

THE COURT: Objection is --

MR. WEINGLASS: -- if he got any direction from the Court and he indicated that the Court gave him --

THE COURT: I don't know the whole statement yet, he is just starting.

Page 136.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

MR. WEINGLASS: But it is a statement from the District Attorney Mr. McGill.

THE COURT: Okay. He is starting.

MR. WEINGLASS: Mr. Jackson doesn't have to take anything from Mr. McGill.

THE COURT: He doesn't have to take anything from anybody if he doesn't want to. He is saying, Counselor -- let's not argue this in front of the witness. The objection is overruled. Now, please, let's proceed.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Since you expressed to Mr. McGill that you had never been backup counsel, and they don't teach backup counseling in law school --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- he stated the purpose of backup counsel as stated yesterday is, number one, to literally protect. And the law feels this is necessary to protect a defendant against himself, is one reason why the law allows or requires that. Secondly, a reason for backup counsel to be a professional member of the bar is necessary in the event the defendant would want to relieve himself of this right that has been permitted him by this Court to represent himself. Counsel would then be present, would be legally equipped to handle the case throughout. And lastly, if for whatever reason, and I am not saying that there will or is a reason, that the defendant would be for any reason ejected from the courtroom, at that point backup counsel, a professionally competent individual who was a member, who is a member of the Bar and aware of the procedures in the law, would then take over for the defendant maintaining all his rights. And for these reasons it's necessary that a member of the Bar be present for Mr. Jamal's own sake.

Page 137.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Do you recall that conversation?

A. I recall a conversation similar to that, yes.

Q. And the actual taking of testimony did not occur for two-and-a-half weeks later?

A. Yes.

Q. After that?

A. What --

Q. That was on June 2nd, the trial actually began with testimony on June 19th. Now, you had all that time to ponder and deliberate over these weighty words since you didn't know what backup counsel did or what they were for; correct?

A. Mr. Grant, Mr. Grant, Mr. McGill to tell me what backup counsel was.

Page 138.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. Nor I am not suggesting that he can.

A. If I could answer the question.

Q. Yes.

A. I am not saying Mr. McGill was wrong. But what I am saying is each and every person in this Courtroom could tell me what backup counsel was and it could be all different and they could all be right. My problem was, and that's why I went to the Supreme Court: Tell me what a backup counsel is. Everybody else is telling me what I do. Mr. Jamal is telling me what to do. Mr. McGill is telling me what to do. Judge Ribner is telling me what to do. Judge Sabo is telling me what to do.

Q. What did the Supreme Court tell you to do?

A. The Supreme Court said go back and do whatever you can.

Q. The best you can do?

A. So I went back and I just did this for awhile (Witness indicating by folding arms).

Q. Do you know why you were having a hard time?

A. I know some of the reasons.

Q. I have read this record extensively, Mr. Jackson.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I don't envy the position you were in and

Page 139.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

I certainly could empathize with what was happening there, but tell me if this is a fair statement. Basically, Mr. Jamal, whether you were called backup Counsel on June 1st, or primary Counsel on June 19th, or no Counsel on July 3rd, you may have been the lawyer, but he was telling you what to do and dictating both the strategy and the witnesses to be called?

A. No, sir.

Q. No?

A. No, sir. Mr. Jamal was not dictating anything to me, sir.

Q. I see. Well, let me see if I could give you a little series of excerpts that may alter your opinion. First of all, on June 2lst, 1982, page 4.02, you were speaking to the Court. Judge Sabo. Well, there may be an additional comment from Mr. Jamal but I would like, you stopped, you stated my consultation with Mr. Jamal leads me to my representing to the Court that indeed, notwithstanding the Supreme Court order -- for you to represent him as primary Counsel, and backup Counsel if necessary -- and notwithstanding Your Honor's order, Mr. Jamal will continue to act according to the strategy of John Africa, and that is consistent with his consultation with Theresa Africa as well as my participation in his defense.

Page 140.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Now, who was calling the shots on strategy, you or him?

A. As far as I know, I was. I consulted with Mr. Jamal, obviously, and when I made the remark about the MOVE strategy, the MOVE strategy as I understood it was that they represent themselves and wouldn't waive any right at all.

Q. And he later said to you, a week later, as a matter of fact, June 28th, page 28, dot 48, I am fighting for my life according to the strategy of John Africa. I don't want you to participate -- meaning Mr. Jackson. You are not working for me. I want you to get your ass up and go out of here?

A. Yes, sir. I remember that specifically.

Q. On June 24th, page 2, 1982, Mr. McGill stating for the record: I am putting on the record again that the Judge has permitted Theresa Africa to speak with. And you state no, Janet Africa. Mr. McGill said I'm sorry, it's Janet this morning. The Court: That's Janet. The other one wasn't here. To speak with Mr. Jamal. And she has been doing it for about 10 or 15 minutes. And I believe this was a time when you and Miss Africa and Mr. Jamal were talking. And he is referring to you. All three of you. And you state just briefly: They were talking only to tell me they didn't want me to sit there. Meaning as a lawyer (indicating). That's all.

Page 141.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Were you running the show? You weren't running the show, you were part of the show, Mr. Jackson, weren't you?

A. Well, see, your characterization. I could tell you specifically about that conversation if you wanted to know. If you wanted to talk about a show, I don't know what you mean about the show.

Q. Okay.

A. He did not dictate to me what, he did not dictate strategy to me. If he did I would have walked out of the Courtroom then.

Q. Did you have some kind of allegiance to him above and beyond your professional relationship with him?

A. Yes, I respected him as a man.

Q. And you would go to jail for him, wouldn't you?

A. No, sir, that's why I didn't walk out of the Courtroom. That's what the conversation was about. He wanted me to walk out of the Courtroom. I said I'm not doing it and I didn't. So I wasn't going to jail. I respected him but I wasn't going to jail.

Page 142.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. Do you recall this conversation that you had with the Court in that regard? This is June 9th, 1982. During voir dire or the questioning of witnesses at page 3.19 through 3.22. The Court had at that point, Mr. Jackson -- I know this was difficult for you and I know this is difficult for you and I am not trying to trivialize this matter, believe me.

A. Mr. Grant, go on, I have no problem.

Q. The Court had removed the right to Mr. Jamal of questioning witnesses. The Court said to Mr. Jamal: I will do it but if you want to limit my questions I will allow you to present to me any questions you have, Mr. Jamal, or you, Mr. Jackson. The Court said do you have any additional questions. And this was at sidebar. Mr. Jamal then walks away from sidebar and stands over at Counsel's table, right here in this very room, right there in that very spot. And the Judge said is he going to get some questions. You go over to Counsel's table and then you stand there side-by-side with him, and you remain at Counsel's table while the Judge and the D.A. are standing at sidebar waiting for you. And at that point you say I have been instructed -- and I

Page 143.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

emphasize that term --

A. Hmm.

Q. -- by Mr. Jamal not to participate. He asked me not to participate, Your Honor. With all due respect, I think that I have to follow his wishes. He is my client.

Now he is saying to you let them put on the evidence against me, don't say squat, and let them convict me: You were willing to do that?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection to the form of the question.

MR. GRANT: I will rephrase the question.

MR. WEINGLASS: Thank you.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. He said don't participate as a lawyer, you went to school 20 years to do that and he said don't do it, and you stood beside him and said Judge, I have to respect the wishes of my client. The Court went on to say that is not exactly true, Mr. Jackson. You said sir, under the circumstances I feel compelled to follow his wishes, Your Honor. The Court: Well, you realize that you would be in direct contempt of this Court, and I may very well sentence you to six months in prison.

Page 144.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

And you said I appreciate that, Your Honor, but I think under the circumstances, my right to represent Mr. Jamal even in this modified circumstance -- meaning backup Counsel -- I feel compelled to follow the wishes of my client. I appreciate and respect Your Honor's intention with respect to this issue, but I think under the circumstances my allegiance to my client is superior, quite frankly, Your Honor, than my abidance by the rules of the Bar of the Court.

You were saying I'm going to throw my ethics out the window, I am going to throw my obligation to serve my client dutifully out the window because a lay person tells me to do that, and the Supreme Court told me otherwise, and the Common Pleas Court told me otherwise, and you are telling me that you were running the show, Mr. Jackson?

A. I am telling you I was running the show.

MR. WEINGLASS: I object to the questioner testifying.

THE COURT: Well, he asked him a question.

MR. WEINGLASS: I have no objection to that part of the question that was read from the record. That's appropriate. But then Counsel adds his own editorial comment as to what Counsel thinks Mr. Jackson was saying. And that's Counsel's impression, but it's not appropriate to ask Mr. Jackson on the basis of his impression of his reading the record. The record speaks for itself.

Page 145.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

I have no objection to him confronting Mr. Jackson with the record. I do have an objection to confronting Mr. Jackson with what Mr. Grant thinks he believes the record says.

MR. GRANT: Well, I read it in the record, it is words, they are on paper. I know you have the record.

MR. WEINGLASS: That part of your question I sat quietly through.

MR. GRANT: Thank you.

MR. WEINGLASS: I have no objection to that part. It is last part of his question where he editorializes.

MR. GRANT: I move to strike the editorial, if I may.

MR. WEINGLASS: Thank you.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. When I say were you running the show, Mr. Jackson, what I am trying to say, sir, is the reason

Page 146.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

you were having a hard time, from reading this record it appears to me -- you correct me if I am wrong -- is that you had a person who wanted to tell you what to do, and tried to humiliate you while they are telling you what to do, but yet you were expected to be professional and to carry out the wishes and to save that person's life, of necessity. Now, do you think that you were controlling that situation? Have you ever had a client deal with you like that, where you walk up to the Judge and say I have been instructed to do this, I have been ordered to do that, my client's demand is this? Have you ever been in that situation?

MR. WEINGLASS: Compound question now.

MR. GRANT: It is all one question:

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Have you ever been in that situation?

A. All right, have I ever been in that situation? No. But the situation that you described is not reality. The situation -- Mr. Jamal asked for me to do some things sometimes that I thought perhaps were unreasonable. I nevertheless had abiding faith in, well, what this Court, what the system was supposed to provide.

When Mr. Jamal would ask, he would ask me to walk out the Courtroom, I am not walking out of the Courtroom. I am not going to jail. At the time, and again the context of the statement that you read I am not really familiar with, but I believe that if he had a right to exercise, I was going to defend that right. I don't think he had a right to tell me to walk out of the Courtroom. There is a difference. There is a difference. That's what I am talking about.

Page 147.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. I am reading words, sir, I wasn't there.

A. I understand you are reading words, and I am telling what you the words mean. I would not go to jail if he tells me to walk out of the Courtroom. But for Mr. Jamal or any other client that I represent, that I would try to represent them and represent their interests as best as I possibly could. If that in fact meant that I might have to go to jail, then fine, if I am protecting their rights consistent with the law. I do. No question. Done it many times. Been cited for contempt of court throughout my career in this Courthouse.

Q. June 1st, 1982, page 22 and then page 95. Talking to Judge Sabo. Quote: I mean of course Judge Ribner has appointed me as backup Counsel. I am serving in that capacity, quite frankly, not directly as a result of that order, but because of my sense of responsibility to Mr. Jamal. My request to be removed from this case was not out of any sense of disinclination, but indeed to remove the Court from jurisdiction over me in my role with Mr. Jamal. I feel my role with regard to backup Counsel to Mr. Jamal is that indeed I represent him. I anticipate that there is the possibility that Mr. Jamal's role in the activity in this Court may come into conflict with the Court's rules and with Your Honor, Judge Sabo. And I'm suggesting at this point I will follow the rules that address the order and command of my client, and I want that to be clear.

Page 148.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

At page 22, by you. May it please the Court: Your Honor, Mr. Jamal has made certain representations to this Court with respect to my representations to Judge Ribner -- that one I read -- and my present attitude and feelings towards representing him. I would like the record to clearly reflect that it has indeed been my decision and my request that I be removed from this trial as backup Counsel. If I were removed, to the extent that I would participate or assist Mr. Jamal, that would be my decision and Mr. Jamal's decision.

So you asked to be removed as backup

Page 149.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Counsel from reading this so the Court couldn't tell you what to do, to remove the Court from jurisdiction over me with my role with Mr. Jamal -- those are the words you uttered?

A. Right.

Q. Tell us what that means to you?

A. Sure, real clear, real clear. If Mr. Jamal is representing himself, I'm a friend of his. I'm a lawyer. If he wants me, he wants to ask me something, fine. I have no problem doing that. If I am backup Counsel it sounds like I've got some obligation, some duty that I don't know what it is. So if I'm just, if Mr. Jamal wants to consult, if he is his own lawyer, he wants to ask me a question, I am a friend of his, I come in, an associate of his or something, he wants to ask me a question, he wants me to sit down at Counsel's table, he wants to break to consult, fine, in Court then he is just conferring with me. But as soon as you say I'm backup Counsel, that sounds like there is some obligation, some standard that I have to meet. Nobody is telling me what the standard is to meet. I am in an untenable situation, that's why I wanted to get out of it.

Q. Let's be realistic, Mr. Jackson.

A. Pardon me?

Page 150.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. Let's be realistic here.

A. That's what I -- trust me, I was being realistic.

Q. Do you think it's harder to be a secondhand lawyer, so to speak, than it is to be a firsthand lawyer: Do you think it's harder to be somebody assisting somebody who is the main lawyer or do you think it is harder to be that main lawyer?

A. You see, now you are saying all kinds, secondhand, firsthand, assisting, backup. Now you see what happens: Nobody knows what it is.

Q. I do and you do. Primary and backup, those are the words.

A. Mr. Grant, you could call it primary, backup, assistant, you start using all these different names, but, Mr. Grant, and I'm sure you know, to this day, to this day I don't think anyone could give you a definitive answer to what a backup counsel is supposed to do. A backup counsel is supposed to do almost anything that the client or the court or somebody else may want them to do. And I have never been in that situation. And it's like I've got to be ineffective at the point where I'm being backup counsel. What do I do?

If I sit like this (Witness folded his arms) as backup counsel and never open my mouth, am I being effective backup counsel? Possibly so.

Page 151.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Nobody is going to tell me what to do. I mean what do you do? And I'm saying as backup Counsel, do I wait until he asks me a question, or do I tell him he is about to make a mistake? I mean what do I do? If the Judge tells me something or he tells me, what do I do as backup Counsel?

And, Mr. Grant, what I am saying to you: It may be clear to you, it may be clear to some others what backup Counsel is. I admit I have no idea at all what the standard for being a backup counsel is.

Q. What did you do for Mr. Mozenter when you were his so-called co-counsel?

A. I sat there and assisted him, did research, talked to the client, did some investigation, did some writing, things of that sort.

Q. Advised and consulted with him together?

A. It is co-counsel, not backup counsel.

Q. Well, you weren't Mr. Mozenter's peer at that point, I hesitate -- was a lawyer.

Q. And you were a junior lawyer to him?

A. Oh, absolutely.

Page 152.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. And you were not basically going to be lead counsel in that situation?

A. That's right. But, Mr. Grant, you are talking about lead counsel and associate counsel as opposed to backup counsel. I am telling you backup counsel is an entirely different animal.

Q. Okay.

A. For me.

Q. Let's approach it easily.

A. Yes, sir. Yes, sir.

Q. You went to law school?

A. Yes.

Q. You were trained to be a lawyer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Nobody was asking you to be greater than a lawyer?

A. That's right.

Q. They weren't asking you, a backup doesn't sound to me like something that's far beyond the ability of a lawyer; it sounds like something that's maybe less than is required, to a certain degree, than of a person who has the primary responsibility to carry out litigation of a claim. Wouldn't you agree with that, Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes and no. Mr. Grant. No matter how you ask me, you are not going to get me to say I knew what being a backup counsel was. I'm never going to say it. And there is nothing, you could ask me another way, I still, I didn't know then, I still don't know.

Page 153.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. And if you were to practice 50 more years you still wouldn't know, would you?

A. Absolutely. Maybe by that time the court will make some pronunciation to tell you and describe it. And I am telling you now: You tell me a case, you show me a case that tells you what a backup counsel does. There is none. Is none. So where did I get my guidance from? What standard of effectiveness do I use? There is none so I wanted out. I'm saying well, I'm going to be judged by, Judge Sabo is going to tell me to do something, Mumia is going to tell me to do something, and Mr. McGill is going to tell me to do something, and everybody else in the Courtroom is going to tell me to do something. Backup Counsel.

Q. And you were, in your own opinion, a very good lawyer?

A. In my opinion, egotistical as it may sound.

Q. It doesn't sound egotistical to me, it sounds factual to me. In fact, you stated -- 6-1-82, page 03 -- I have been I believe an effective counsel for many, many years here in the City of Philadelphia; and at 6-21-82, during the pendency of the trial, at page 402 and -03, what I am saying essentially, Your Honor, is that of course Mr. Jamal's being represented by me under protest. It is still against his wishes that I represent him. Nevertheless, as Your Honor well knows, it is at least my present intention to defend Mr. Jamal to the best of my ability with all the vigor that I could put forth.

Page 154.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

And you meant those words?

A. When I am his lawyer he's got it all. As backup Counsel, I don't know what he's got.

Q. Hmm. Well, that was after you had been appointed no longer backup?

A. That's what I am saying. I am a lawyer, I know at least when I am a lawyer I know what to do.

Q. The point I am making is you were only backup for a heartbeat, you were only backup until when he was removed from voir dire, from that point on, from 6-2 to July 3rd you weren't backup anymore, you were primary Counsel?

A. Mr. Grant.

Q. So what was the quandary here?

A. The quandary is you brought it up.

Q. I brought up the fact --

A. You brought up, and I am telling you when the issue of being backup Counsel was an issue, it started, it started before we came here to Judge Sabo. I went up to the Supreme Court during the time I was at pre-trial. That's when it started. When Judge Ribner said I was going to be backup. So that was a precursor to what happened actually in the Courtroom. I went, before we even came here I said Supreme Court, tell me what to do. Because I do not want to be backup Counsel. Either I am going to represent him or I'm not. For me to be a backup Counsel with no guidance, no standard, I felt uncomfortable. As long as -- quite frankly, if I was appointed as Mr. Jamal's Counsel, quite frankly even against his wishes, I knew what I could do. But I was not going to be backup Counsel and not know what standard to follow. That was my problem. If the Court -- in the petition I said tell me what I am supposed to do. And listen to what I'm asking. Tell me what I am supposed to do. Since you folks are telling me I'm backup Counsel, tell me what backup Counsel does. Nobody would tell me.

Page 155.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. Well, Judge Sabo told you you don't have to be backup anymore, right?

A. Well, yes, fine.

THE COURT: Just a minute. Mr. McGill

Page 156.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

came in. You are not going not going to him?

MR.WEINGLASS: We are not going to call him now. But if he is in violation of the sequestration order --

THE COURT: He just walked into the Courtroom.

MR.WEINGLASS: -- I would ask him to be removed.

THE COURT: I didn't want to interrupt the witness.

MR. WEINGLASS: I appreciate that.

THE COURT: I don't think they are going to need you today. Okay.

MR. GRANT: Or tomorrow. With all due respect.

THE COURT: I don't know when. You will be on call, we will let you know when.

MR. JOSEPH MCGILL: Your Honor, I do have a few hearings tomorrow. Should I stay in contact with the Court Crier?

THE COURT: No, we will be in touch with you if we need you.

MR. MCGILL: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: Okay. I realize that.

Page 157.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, in case the Court reporter didn't hear it, Mr. Grant did indicate that it was his present belief that he wouldn't be needed tomorrow either. I just think that should be on the record. Because we are trying to prepare our schedule.

THE COURT: I know.

MR. WEINGLASS: We've had trouble with the Court before on scheduling.

THE COURT: This is cross-examination, I can't cut anybody short.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am not asking you to cut him short; I am just indicating to the Court that when we prepare for tomorrow we are accepting the representation of Counsel that he is going to go all day tomorrow.

MR. GRANT: I will try.

THE COURT: You have other witnesses here. Jeremy Gelb. Gary Wakshul. Joe Davidson. So. We will have them available tomorrow if you need them. Try to get their phone numbers and we will call them. Okay. Go ahead.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Now, Mr. Jackson --

Page 158.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- that dilemma that you had at backup Counsel status, that only lasted for a little while because --

A. Yeah.

Q. -- during the second day of Jury selection you became primary Counsel, didn't you?

A. Right, sir.

Q. And therefore you knew how to do that, didn't you?

A. Yeah, now, and you could correct me if I am wrong, it seems to me that even prior to the voir dire Mr. Jamal may have conducted some examination. It seems to me he did.

Q. Yes, he did the motion to suppress?

A. Okay.

Q. And he did a few witnesses, maybe 15 or 20, 30 witnesses perhaps, at the voir dire stage, the initial day.

A. Okay, then he got to voir dire. Now, during that period of time, during that motion to suppress and that voir dire, I'm backup Counsel.

Q. Yes.

A. That's what I'm doing (Witness indicating by folding arms).

Page 159.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Okay. So then the next day after Mr. Jamal was removed from representing himself, I, quite frankly, pleaded with him because the alternative was for Judge Sabo -- no disrespect to the Court -- was for Judge Sabo to select the Jury.

THE COURT: Wait awhile. I didn't select the Jury. You voir dired the Jury.

THE WITNESS: For voir dire. Forgive me, Your Honor, I should be more precise in my language.

THE COURT: I don't select any juries.

THE WITNESS: And the defense says the same thing. Not you. In other words, the Judge would do the questioning. And I said hey, let me do it. I know you don't want it, I don't want to be in this position, but in my opinion it would be better for me to participate in the voir dire rather than to leave it to the Judge to do it.

Mr. Jamal conceded to that on the condition that after that was completed, Mr. Jamal would then begin to represent himself.

Now, during that period of time I had no preparation, I'm doing the voir dire, I'm conducting the voir dire. And during that period of time, I was the lawyer. No problem doing that. And again, and once we, once, well, the Judge removed him from representing himself after the Jury was selected, you know, I was back as his lawyer. But there were these times when I was in never-never land. Where I was, I call it never-never land, backup-counsel land, I don't know what to do there.

Page 160.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

MR. WEINGLASS: Excuse me. I just want to state for the record that at one point in his response Mr. Jackson indicated that he just sat that with his arms folded across his chest and I don't think the Court reporter got that. I thought the record should indicate that he was, that he was mimicking a position of having no role at all but to sit quietly.

MR. GRANT: And for the record --

THE COURT: How do you know that's what he meant?

MR. GRANT: That was a hypothetical example that he gave. He didn't indicate he did this at this trial.

THE COURT: He may have been praying.

THE WITNESS: I prayed a lot, Your Honor.

Page 161.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. For the month of June and all of July you were his lawyer?

A. Right.

Q. And as a result of that, you knew what you were doing because you've done it 20 times before in situations like that?

A. Right, yes, I have.

Q. And you were going to try to do the best that you can do because, A, you respected him as an man?

A. Right.

Q. You had come to know his family, had you not?

A. Yeah, very well.

Q. And you know that he was referred to you by E. Steven Collins?

A. Yeah.

Q. Who you knew?

A. Yeah.

Q. Who you respected?

A. Sure.

Q. And you knew he was counting on you?

A. Yes.

Q. And you know that by saying I was a lousy lawyer, that certainly increases his chances here today to get a new trial all over again, don't you?

Page 162.

A. I'm not going to say I'm a lousy lawyer.

Q. Well, you said you were ineffective?

A. Yeah. I said, when I use the word ineffective, I said I was an ineffective backup lawyer.

Q. Oh.

A. Each time I was a backup lawyer I was ineffective.

Q. Do you think that you were effective as the primary lawyer or the lawyer?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection, Your Honor: The question of effectiveness is a matter for the Court to decide upon review of the record.

THE COURT: Everybody is asking him his opinion so I will let him ask it.

THE WITNESS: Most times I was. I made mistakes. The question is if I make mistakes does that make me ineffective. Maybe.

Mr. Weinglass asked me the question about Mr. Chobert about his record. I blew that issue. I don't know, does that make me ineffective? It certainly didn't help Mr. Jamal any.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Well, let's look at that a little bit. He commented to you about the case of Commonwealth versus Murphy. And you remember Craig Murphy, don't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you know that Craig Murphy wasn't convicted until about another seven or eight years after your trial, don't you?

A. I don't recall today.

Q. So that wasn't the law then?

MR. WEINGLASS: I also mentioned Davis V Alaska.

MR. GRANT: Counsel, could I do this? Do you mind?

MR. WEINGLASS: I think the question ought to be complete.

THE COURT: Counselor, you have redirect if you wish. Don't tell the D.A. how to ask his questions. He doesn't tell you how to ask yours. You merely object.

And if there is an objection to his question the objection is overruled.

Now, please, let's go forward. You will have a chance for redirect. Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: When he starts a question by saying --

Page 164.

THE COURT: Counselor, I have already ruled the objection is overruled. You have a chance to redirect, you can phrase the question any way you wish.

MR. WEINGLASS: Thank you.

THE COURT: Do it then, okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Thank you. I would do that. But when he starts a question by saying did Mr. Weinglass ask you and then he only gives half of my question, that's inappropriate. That part is inappropriate.

THE COURT: You bring it out on redirect, okay.

Let's go, come on.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Davis versus Alaska?

A. Pardon me.

Q. Davis versus Alaska?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the seminal case that decided whether you really blew it or not in that instance, according to the representations here today. Do you know anything about the facts of that case, sir?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, let me just give it to you, a little overview. Two guys went out and committed a crime together, and one of them was going to testify against the other. Plead guilty. And the guy that wanted to plead guilty was on probation or on parole, okay. Juvenile. And the Court felt, Supreme Court of the United States said hey, when a guy's got that much to gain and that much to lose, and he's got this thing in the background here motivating him to cooperate with the Commonwealth because he could get additional time for whatever he gets plus time for the crime, you got to tell the fact-finder that and the lawyer should know that. Now let's contrast and compare that with the scenario that you were involved in.

We have a man who is driving his cab down the street, he sees a man run out of a parking lot, run over and shoot a police officer in the back, almost at pointblank range from 12 inches away, then stands over the police officer, shoots him between the eyes, there were flash burns on his face, within 45 seconds the cops come and he runs up to them and says I'm on probation or parole, don't believe what I say, he runs up and says I just saw that man shoot that cop. Now, before the cops ever knew who the man was, and before they had a reason to look for a record, he said those words to them. He interjected himself into that situation.

Now, what you would have to suggest, I guess, in that situation is that he went up and told them what he saw, not because he was stunned, shocked and amazed, but because I'm on probation, I saw a crime, I'd better go tell the police.

Now, on appeal I guess that will be decided by the Supreme Court, but you could see how you are still a good lawyer and those issues on which reasonable men would differ are going to be the things that turn this case; do you understand?

A. I understand what you are saying, sir.

Q. So I'm saying to you: Are you confessing error because he threw a case at you?

A. Sir, I am not confessing error. Well, if that was an error, yes, I'm confessing it. I am confessing what I did and what I didn't do. That's what I have been doing the entire time I have been up here. If it makes me an ineffective lawyer it makes me an ineffective lawyer. I have enough ego to know who I am and what I do. I am just admitting and telling you what the facts and reality is. You know, I'm taking it whichever way it comes: I'm a man.

THE COURT: All right, quiet, please.

Page 167.

THE COURT OFFICER: Quiet in the Courtroom.

THE COURT: Or you will be evicted. Please.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. You do realize -- getting back to my previous question -- that if you say I'm ineffective, or I didn't do a good job in some areas, that is the basis on which their claims are premised, and of course that would give the person who you have come to respect as a man, and whose family you have come to know, and who you like as a person, and who was referred to you by friends of yours, another chance when you couldn't succeed for him, and since this is the first time that you ever had a man on death row, the first time?

A. Hmm-hmm.

Q. You still remember this case vividly, don't you?

A. I sure do.

Q. Like every other lawyer, you see those things that you think that you should have done in the back of your mind when you're shaving in the morning, because you don't like to lose, because you are just like everybody else, aren't you?

Page 168.

A. Yeah, I got a big ego.

Q. So this would be a chance to help this man, wouldn't it?

A. Sure would.

Q. Well, you said you didn't have any resources and basically you guys were batting zero, right?

A. I . . . yes, you are talking about two different things but the answer is yes yes.

Q. Yes yes I had no money, and yes yes I could give him a new chance, those are the possibilities in --

A. I could give him a new chance?

Q. A new chance, a new trial?

A. Oh.

Q. You could assist?

A. Oh, now, Mr. Grant.

Q. I'm sorry, Mr. Jackson, I'm sorry.

A. Mr. Grant, let me tell you, Mr. Grant: If I wanted Mr. Jamal to have a new trial, I would have came in here and said I've been ineffective, that's it.

Q. But you couldn't do that --

MR. WEINGLASS: May the witness have a chance?

MR. GRANT: Yes, I apologize.

Page 169.

THE WITNESS: All I am simply saying is the facts speak for themselves. You have the record. And I'm not trying to embellish the record, I'm trying to explain to both of you, Mr. Weinglass and to you, what happened, what was going through my mind.

If as a result of my explanation it makes me ineffective, then I'm ineffective. And that's, and that seems to me is a legal conclusion. As far as I am concerned, Tony Jackson is concerned, in terms of whether I was effective, it's totally different than the Court's stand. I know what I did and I'll live with it.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. You did what?

A. Pardon?

Q. You say you know what I did?

A. I said I know what I did.

Q. Okay. Now I want to discuss with you the statements that you made that you weren't getting any resources to help you in your quest to save Mr. Jamal from conviction.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in that regard I would like to bring to your attention an examination that Mr. Jamal himself did of the then Superintendent of Philadelphia Prisons, Mr. David S. Owens, and that was on June the 3rd of 1982. It was during the pendency of a motion to suppress.

Page 170.

A. Okay.

MR. GRANT: At page 3.57, Counsel.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. And they were discussing what if any resources Mr. Jamal did have to assist him, aside from the money given to him by the Court and the lawyer given to him by the Court.

A. Hmm-hmm.

Q. Now, Mr. Jamal had gone on with Judge Sabo saying, you know, you are not going to let me do this and let me do this and I want you to bring somebody here to explain why they are not doing this up at the prison. The Court asked David Owens to come down and he came down. And the Court said did I discuss with you the issue of Mr. Jamal having runners on his behalf.

Answer: Yes, sir.

He said well, for the record would you tell us exactly what those arrangements are, or were.

And he says yes. There's been ongoing dialogue with Mr. Jackson -- you -- with regard to the visitations in the institution for Mr. Jamal. After some discussion and some communication -- with you -- we have arrived at the following visiting at the institution. Number one, the Mumia Jamal Defense Committee, Committee, will be permitted to visit on every Saturday morning no more than four visitors at any time. Number two, the Association of Black Journalists will be permitted to visit on Thursday mornings, no more than four individuals at any time. Number three, the Prisoners' Rights Council, they would be extended visits but they would have to conform to the agreed upon process, since that is a group that comes to the prison frequently.

A. Sure.

Q. And number four, legal runners, Mr. Jackson provided me with the names of two individuals who he indicated would be of value entering the institution to work at Mr. Jamal's case and that request was approved.

And at that point Mr. Jamal asked well, what is your definition of a runner. Just what are you going to allow them to do for me.

Mr. Owens said, my definition of a runner is an individual who is a paralegal who is able to take the information to a prisoner, carry it back to the community to effect and do those things that the prisoner, by nature of being incarcerated, could not do.

The Judge then asked Mr. Owens, of the total amount of privileges including these that have been allowed Mr. Jamal, in your experience how would you rate that in relation to other prisoners in your experience.

Mr. Owens: I am not aware of anywhere in our system now or that there has been in our system in the past that would have amounted to the groups of individuals coming in to visit and assist him.

And Mr. Jamal then says, well -- I'm sorry, he doesn't say at that point. Same day, earlier on, when he brought to the Court the motions he had put in for runners: I made those motions to you for legal runners not just so they could have access to me at the prison but so they could be field workers for me, be my legs, my ears and my eyes. And he names two runners, Alfonso Robbins and Gerald Ford.

Didn't the fact that he had that support structure that you were working with --

Page 173.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. I wasn't working with it. He was working with it.

Q. What do you mean?

A. They were working for him, they weren't working for me. When I asked for an investigator, when I asked for a pathologist, ballistics, I wanted them to work for me. Where I would talk to them. Mr. Jamal, he had runners, as you say, to assist him in doing things with his family, in the community, and, I'm sure, serve some beneficial purpose. But none of those people could I send out as an investigator.

Q. I didn't --

A. None of those people were pathologists, ballisticians. I mean if everybody in this Courtroom went up to see him everyday, how did it help me?

Q. Well, you had an investigator?

A. For a little while. $450 worth.

Q. How about five months? How long did the investigator work for you on Mr. Jamal's case?

A. $450 worth.

Q. How much?

A. $450 worth.

Q. Where did that come from?

A. It came out of my pocket and the Court

Page 174.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

reimbursed me.

Q. So how much was he charging by the hour?

A. I don't really remember.

Q. Was he making more than you an hour?

A. Probably -- no. I think the Court, there is a rate that the investigators get, I don't recall what it was. And Mr. Greer, Bob Greer is his name. Sometimes Mr. Greer would, in effect, volunteer his time. He was also doing some work on some other matters. But with $450, if he was charging $15 an hour, or $25 an hour, how long would that last? And you said it's over five months. It may have, I got the appointment in, I think the petition was approved in January, I think.

Q. Yes. January 20th?

A. In January. I don't recall specifically after when I retained Mr. Greer.

Q. Okay.

A. But I mean it isn't like I had the services of an investigator full-time for five months. I've never had such pleasure in my life.

Q. Well, how much investigation can you get for $450?

A. Not much.

Q. In 1981 dollars we are talking, we are not talking 1995 dollars, Mr. Jackson.

Page 175.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. Not much.

Q. Okay. So did people from the Mumia Abu-Jamal Defense Committee also pay this man?

A. I don't know. I don't think so. But I don't know.

Q. You didn't ask him?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, if you knew that wasn't buying much investigative time, and five months is pretty long investigative time, didn't you inquire why he wanted to work for you so long for no bucks?

A. You said that, I didn't say that.

Q. All right. Let me read you something. Mr. Greer, apparently he had some contact with Mr. E. Steven Collins, and he sent out some, some inquiries to several people.

A. You are asking me about conversations between Mr. Greer and Mr. Collins?

Q. No, I am asking you about who was paying Mr. Greer, if you know, besides yourself?

A. I have no idea at all of anyone paying him except me.

Q. Except you.

A. Yes, sir.

Page 176.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. So he could have been getting more money than what you were paying him and what the Court permitted?

A. Could have been getting.

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection: Speculative. If Counsel has any proof of that, it's highly speculative. He could have been.

MR. GRANT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Nothing could be more speculative than a question beginning with those words.

THE COURT: The witness filed a financial statement in this case. So if that is of any use to anybody.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. I don't know if you have seen the filings of defense Counsel in this case, sir?

A. No.

Q. But Robert T. Greer -- who formerly worked for you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- sent out a letter on March 16th -- and I am reading from exhibit number 2, the last page.

A. Hmm-hmm.

Q. Robert T. Greer's stationery, private

Page 177.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

investigator, Suite 805, One East Penn Square -- is that where he worked: One East Penn Square?

A. Yeah, I think that's where he worked.

Q. He sent a letter -- I am not asking you to verify the contents of the letter, I know you can't do that -- this letter is in response to your phone call on E. Steven Collins, on the Georgie Woods Show, I have been retained -- and that has a specific legal connotation, would you agree?

A. Yeah, it does for me. I know what a retainer is.

Q. Somebody gave me money?

A. That's what it means.

Q. Okay. I have been retained by the Mumia Abu-Jamal Defense Committee to investigate the incident of his arrest.

Now, is that the same thing he was investigating for you?

A. You are asking me -- no, you know, I retained Bob Greer as a investigator. As to what he meant in that letter, I am afraid to venture a guess.

Q. Well, let me say this: He was retained to investigate the arrest of Mumia Abu-Jamal. Do you think, using logic and common sense --

A. Right.

Page 178.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. -- he was talking about the same murder charges that you are talking about when you were paying him?

A. I would assume so. But then I assume that he is talking about the same charges. But then I have to assume the truth of everything that he's been retained.

Mr. Grant, what you are doing is asking me what did he mean when he wrote this letter. I have no idea that the letter even existed.

Q. Well, that is unfair.

A. It sure is.

Q. What I am really asking you is if the guy was working on the murder case for you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I would assume that since he is employed by you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That you would be aware of what he is doing since you are paying him?

A. Yes, sir. But let me explain this. I was an investigator, Mr. Greer is an investigator. I asked him to do some tasks for me. I'm not so certain that that letter isn't consistent with him working for me. He may have decided to put that hat on to say well, on behalf of the Mumia Abu-Jamal Defense Fund I am going to talk to you, I am going to do something, because that is the hat he put on. Tomorrow he may put another hat on. I mean it is something you just have to switch in midstream to accomplish your purpose.

I am speculating now. But I don't know that letter is inconsistent with what he was doing for me. It sounds like you are trying to suggest that he was being paid by this fund. I don't know if he was. I don't know.

Q. You gave him money out of your pocket, you gave him money from the Court?

A. Well.

Q. And now this letter says I was retained by the defense fund?

A. Mr. Grant. Let me just tell you. I gave him money out of my pocket because, as you know, what happens in Court appointments, you file a petition and they wait a year to get their money.

Q. I understand, Mr. Jackson.

A. You know, Mr. Greer is a big man: He looked at me and said he needed his money so I gave the money out of my pocket.

Q. I understand.

Page 180.

A. Then you are asking me to buy into that because he was retained that he got some money. And you and I are both lawyers and you know we get retainers, I don't know if that necessarily means the same thing to him. I don't know if it's the truth or not. It may have been a subterfuge. It may have been a convenient entre. I just don't know.

Q. Did he ever work for you prior to that?

A. Mumia's case I think was the first case Bob ever worked with me.

Q. Did he ever work with you as an investigator when you were an investigator?

A. Oh, no, no, no.

Q. You didn't meet him through your prior career as an investigator, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Okay. Now 1et's talk about the other resources that you didn't have to help you. On January 20th of '82 you filed a petition, you filed a petition to ask for Court funds to employ a ballistician, a photographer, a special investigator, and a pathologist. And you knew that the going rate for the Court of Common Pleas -- and they have thousands of criminal cases a year, and hundreds of lawyers appointed -- is $150 per expert, or per investigator, initially? And you knew that was an initial amount, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That's why you initially got 150 bucks for Greer and then you came back and got triple that eventually, right?

A. I think so -- yeah. I think so. I think it was four. Now please don't mess with me if I'm wrong.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. I am not going to mess with you.

MR. WEINGLASS: I just have this objection: Counsel inadvertently misstated on January 20th it was filed. On January 20th the Court ordered it. The filing was much earlier. And that is a matter of Court record.

MR. GRANT: Oh.

MR. WEINGLASS: I don't think Counsel should misstate the Court record.

THE COURT: If it is in the Court record.

MR. GRANT: And if I haven't done it I would move as Commonwealth Exhibit 1 in these proceedings the entirety of the Quarter Sessions file, including the transcript notes of testimony, transcripts and related Exhibits into this proceeding so that they may be part of this record.

THE COURT: Okay.

(Quarter Sessions file was marked Commonwealth's Exhibit C-l for identification.)

MR. GRANT: And I'm sorry, Counsel.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Filed, ordered: You got money for these people; correct?

A. Yeah. Approved.

Q. And what did the Judge at the time, Judge Ribner was the one who ran the calendar room, that is the room where preliminary matters are discussed and arrangements of this nature are made; correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And when you filed that, didn't he tell you in this kind of case I think all those experts would be appropriate to have?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I am going to give you money for each, and I am going to give you our standard initial fee?

A. Right.

Q. But if you need more give me an itemized bill

Page 183.

so I could tell we are not just giving people money for nothing and X will accommodate you and --

A. That's right, he put it off on Judge Sabo.

Q. He put it off on Judge Sabo. He put it off on the trial Judge?

A. Let me say: Before he put it off on Judge Sabo I went back to him -- my recollection is that I went to Judge Ribner several times for money before we even got to Judge Sabo where I asked him for money. Yes, I could initially request, you know, money for the experts and things of sort thing, and they give you 150. But initially it was like this was not a 150 case.

Q. Yes?

A. And it's like why, why go through this. I mean it's like why go through a charade because this is typically the way things are done. Because it is not always done, because I know, and I am sure you know, during that time some people got more money for certain things. But anyway, he said if this is not enough money I come back in. It's like a game. I'm giving you 150, if you need more come back. You're coming back. You better go see the trial Judge. So like come on.

Q. So you went to see the trial Judge and you got

Page 184.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

more money?

A. Yeah, another 150.

Q. So in your affidavit when you said you didn't get more money and you were without funds -- and that's why Mr. Jamal decided to be his own lawyer: Because he saw that you were ineffectual in getting bucks for him -- well, this is what you are implying in this affidavit, or declaration?

A. I am implying, yes, that I was ineffectual in getting money. Yes, I got a total of about $800 for a pathologist, ballistician, investigator and photographer.

Q. And you don't know how much money he got, though?

A. Who, Mr. Jamal?

Q. Mr. Jamal.

A. No, I have no idea at all.

Q. Could it be -- well, you have no idea?

A. None whatsoever. I didn't know he got any money, sir.

Q. If people came in here and testified that they contributed thousands of dollars to the Mumia Abu-Jamal Defense Fund to defend him --

MR. WEINGLASS: Nobody testified to thousands of dollars.

Page 185.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

MR. GRANT: I said if, Counsel.

THE COURT: Counselor, listen to his question. He said if.

MR. GRANT: If.

THE COURT: If they did.

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection: Speculative. There are no if questions allowed in a court of law so far that I know. It leads to speculation.

MR. GRANT: Counselor, you are right. I am going to go back to law school. I apologize, let me rephrase that.

MR. WEINGLASS: I accept it.

THE COURT OFFICER: Quiet in the Courtroom, please.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Do you know Mr. Joseph Davidson?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How do you know him, sir?

A. I know Joe as a journalist and I think at the time of Mumia's arrest I think, maybe, I think Joe was then the president of the Association of Black Journalists. I think. But I mean I have known Joe for a long time.

Q. Then you know him to be an honest and

Page 186.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

trust worthy individual, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you read the papers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you read the Sunday paper?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you read the article substantially quoting you Sunday in the Review and Opinion section? I have it here for you.

A. Oh, yeah, I read that.

Q. You read that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you read about the bucks that was contributed just by the Association of Black Journalists to give to the support of the defense of Mr. Jamal?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection: Hearsay. You can not question a witness on the basis of a newspaper article unless you bring in the author.

THE COURT: He is asking him if he read it.

MR. GRANT: Every exhibit he puts up here is a newspaper article. I'm just asking about one.

Page 187.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

MR. WEINGLASS: He did and I did not object. But it is objectionable when they get into the content of what he read, which is when I objected.

THE COURT: That's what you gave me. They were your exhibits, they were hearsay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor refused to accept my newspaper articles as exhibits.

THE COURT: They are in the file.

MR. WEINGLASS: But when I offered them you refused them even though they were directly relevant to the injustice which is occurring in this Courtroom.

THE COURT: That is your opinion.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, it was the opinion of a headline of a local newspaper.

MR. GRANT: Here we go with the papers, Judge. I told you, Judge, I told you.

MR. WEINGLASS: And those newspapers, according to the standard set by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, reflect the fact that the community believes Your Honor cannot sit fairly. When a community newspaper --

THE COURT: Well, isn't it up to the Supreme Court to rule on that?

Page 188.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

MR. WEINGLASS: When a community newspaper says Sabo must go, that is evidence of the fact that the community does not believe in the fairness of these proceedings. It's evidence. What he is questioning him on is not evidence.

MR. GRANT: Is this my cross-examination or what?

THE COURT: Don't take up anymore time.

MR. WEINGLASS: I have no objection to proper cross.

THE COURT: Please don't interrupt cross-examination.

MR. WEINGLASS: I object to hearsay. What is in the newspaper is classic hearsay unless it is directly relevant to community attitudes, which is why I offered mine.

THE COURT: Let's see where he is going.

MR. GRANT: Okay, I will get some quotes from the papers and ask the person who made them if they are so.

THE COURT: Okay.

BY MR. GRANT:

Page 189.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. You don't know anything about Mr. Davidson's fund raising efforts or any statements he made in the press about giving money to Mr. Jamal, I assume?

A. I know the statements that appeared in the press that were reportedly made by him. I don't know that he said it.

Q. And you don't know that it is in fact true that just that Association raised a thousand bucks?

A. I have no idea. I have no idea.

Q. There are some attributions to you, Mr. Jackson, in that same newspaper.

A. Yes, sir. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you interview with Marc Kaufman or Julia Cass in this regard?

A. Yes, with Marc.

Q. And you basically said to him, or they elicited from you, or however it came about --

MR. WEINGLASS: Could we have the date of the newspaper?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, you may. Sunday.

THE COURT: This last Sunday.

MR. WEINGLASS: Last Sunday.

MR. GRANT: You could have the newspaper, it's right here (handing).

MR. WEINGLASS: Thank you.

Page 190.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

THE COURT: You mean you didn't buy the newspaper?

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

THE COURT: You didn't buy the newspaper?

MR. WEINGLASS: Oh, yes, Your Honor, I have the newspaper.

THE COURT: Well, you have that one?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, I have this newspaper.

THE COURT: He has that one.

MR. WEINGLASS: Photograph of Mr. Jamal that says the City known for past excesses.

THE COURT: Since you bought it already we won't read it here.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am just noting the headline.

THE COURT: Yes, okay. That's hearsay as you said. Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Oh.

THE COURT: If we are going to let part of the hearsay in, let's leave the whole hearsay in. Okay. Let's go.

Page 191.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

MR. GRANT: Thank you, Your Honor.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With respect to the comments you made, the reason that I'm raising this is because, just so you know, if you haven't already defined it, my theory of this entire matter --

A. Hmm-hmm.

Q. -- is that despite the fact that you were nominally an attorney for Mr. Jamal, Mr. Jamal effectively right here ran the show, and now through your mouth is alleging that he was ineffective as Counsel because you really didn't control anything. And to that extent I am going to ask you if you said this.

A. I didn't -- okay, go ahead.

Q. Go ahead, please.

A. I was trying to follow you. You are saying that Mr. Jamal was always in control, and he was ineffective, is that what you are saying?

Q. I am saying he dictated to you what he wanted you to do.

A. All right, you said that several times, and if you believe that's true, that's your belief.

Page 192.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Well, let me ask you. Philadelphia Inquirer, 7-23-95 Review and Opinion section. Page E dash 1. Byline Marc Kaufman and Julia Cass. Column 5.

It was Abu-Jamal's decision not to call his brother.

Did you say that?

A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't say that?

A. Danny Alva.

Q. Danny Alva said --

A. Danny Alva wouldn't let me call him. Danny Alva represented Billy.

Q. Mr. Jamal never said I don't want my family involved in this, this is my thing? Think carefully, Mr. Jackson.

A. No, I don't know why that occasion... you are talking about in this trial?

Q. I am talking about did he ever say that to you at any time?

A. That he didn't want his family involved in his trial or something. Because, Mr. Grant, I know you are a good lawyer and I am just trying to answer your question.

Q. Just answer what is in your mind.

A. I am trying to.

Page 193.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. I am not going to tell you where to go.

A. If you are asking me if Mr. Jamal said that he didn't want his family involved in this trial, I could answer that question. If you are asking me if Mr. Jamal didn't want his family involved in going to Atlantic City -- I need to know what you are asking me, sir.

Q. Well, your only involvement with Mr. Jamal and his family was through this trial process?

A. No, if you are talking about this trial then he never said that.

Q. He never said that?

A. No, sir.

Q. So you made some tactical and strategic decisions on your own as to what witnesses were going to be called, whether you are going to put on character references from his family, whether you are going to call them at the penalty stage; these were all your decisions, correct?

A. In cooperation with my client. Some in cooperation with my client.

Q. Well, which ones were not in cooperation with your client? If you recall.

A. You are asking me to go back through every witness that I called?

Page 194.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. You are the witness. You are the one that signed the affidavit.

A. But you are asking the question and I am trying to find out the question. I am trying to answer you, Mr. Grant. You need to tell me what question you are asking. If you want me to go through every witness that testified then you have to bring out the transcript and tell me each and every witness. And to the best that I possibly can I will tell you whether or not that was a cooperative decision.

Q. Gary Wakshul. Wakshul. You know him, right, the guy that --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- said I didn't hear the Negro male make any comment?

A. Yes, sir. What is your question?

Q. He was not called until the very eve, at the moment before closing arguments were about to take place, do you recall that, on July 1st?

A. I didn't recall it until the other day, that it was that late, but, yeah.

Q. You know that was on the day that closing arguments were given?

A. I didn't know that it was. I'm not denying

Page 195.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

that it was. I know it was late, I just didn't remember what day it was.

Q. Okay.

A. And that was my fault, sir.

Q. You said that before and you said that in your affidavit.

A. That's right. I thought that's what you were asking.

Q. Well, not yet.

A. Okay.

Q. I am at page through 35, July 1st, 1982, Counselor.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Not you. You are Mr. Jackson. And you are speaking to the Court. Your Honor, there are several other matters that I would like to bring to Your Honor's attention. We -- that's not fair.

(Pause.)

MR. GRANT: If I may, Your Honor. May I approach?

THE COURT: If you are going to give him a copy.

MR. GRANT: Yes, Your Honor.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. (Handing) Right there (indicating).

Page 196.

We have found there is another witness we need to call. Let me make sure I have that right. We have found that there is another police officer that we would like to have testify.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It is anticipated to be very brief. Mr. McGill advises me that he is not present today. I would ask that of course he be called in.

THE COURT: When did you ask for this witness. Let me see you over here.

This is obviously taking place in open Court. And the Judge is asking for a sidebar.

The following discussion ensues. What is this officer that you want. What's he going to testify to.

He picked Mr. Jamal up at the scene.

So.

During this time the Negro male made no comment. He was with him the entire time.

Mr. McGill says he's not around. I'm not going to be bringing this guy in, he's not around. That's what he says. Mr. McGill says I'm not bringing him in at the last minute. The Court then says Mr. Jackson, you knew about this before. I'm not going to hold up this trial. You -- Mr.

Page 197.

Jackson -- says I didn't.

What did that mean: I didn't know about it before?

A. No, I knew about it, I just overlooked it, I forgot about it.

Q. That doesn't say I forgot, it says I didn't.

A. Well, I didn't read you the answer. Are you asking me to read the answer or are you asking me for an answer, sir.

Q. I am asking you: When the Judge says you knew about this and you said I didn't, what does that mean?

A. I forgot, that's what I said. I had forgotten the statement of Officer Wakshul.

Q. Well, the Judge asked you the same question I am asking you right now. What do you mean you didn't. Didn't you get the statements from the detectives months and months ago?

Mr. Jackson: Absolutely right.

A. Yeah.

Q. Now, I forgot. That's what your statement is. And that this was a joint decision or singular decision on your part?

A. Which question are you asking me?

Q. You forgot. You forgot that Mr. Wakshul existed? You forgot what?

A. I forgot that I had this statement. Let me put it this way. I am going to say either I forgot or an oversight. Obviously Mr. Wakshul was an important witness. It wouldn't be something that -- I wouldn't deliberately not call him in. I called him in at the last day when he came to my attention. I don't know if Mr. Jamal brought it to my attention, whether I saw it myself, or someone else. When I realized I needed the officer I asked that the officer be in Court.

I mean there certainly would not have been any strategy not to call an important witness. I mean that would have been silly.

Q. What tells you, with all your legal skills and abilities, that this was an important witness for the defense?

A. Because he, because we had two witnesses who said that Mr. Jamal made a confession. So when this man says --

Q. Four, actually, two of them didn't testify; correct?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection: There were two before the Jury.

THE COURT: He is asking.

Page 199.

THE WITNESS: Well, I am not going to comment. You said there were four, fine. I mean I know during the motion to suppress there were some others and all, and I think I have, I have my own suspicions about why those others weren't put on. But be that as it may, I knew that this officer, if those two witnesses said that Mr. Jamal made the statements, and this would have been prior to him receiving care from the doctor, this officer as I recall the statement said that he was with Mr. Jamal the entire time until the doctor came. So either these two people are lying or the officer is lying. And as far as I was concerned, this officer, he simply made a statement that he made no statement whatsoever. That's the only statement that I saw. I know you referred earlier about some other statement. I never saw any other statement.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Well, you got entire discovery in this matter, Mr. Jackson; do you deny that?

A. I got what they gave me.

Q. Well, do you have any basis in 1995, 13 years later, do you have any independent basis or any kind of basis to say discovery was withheld from you in this case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Name it?

A. All right, the Medical Examiner's report.

Q. Yeah?

A. The Medical Examiner's report, there was a page indicating that the police officer said that -- I believe that a police officer shot Mumia other than, other than Faulkner. I was never -- the discovery I got from the District Attorney's Office didn't contain that paper.

Q. You know what, Mr. Jackson, I was hoping you'd bring that up.

MR. GRANT: May I have this marked as Commonwealth Exhibit number 2 for these proceedings?

(Documents were marked Commonwealth's Exhibit C-2 for identification.)

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. This purports to be a package from the Medical Examiner's Office to a Mr. Anthony E. Jackson. 13 years later, same package (displaying).

Were you at Suite 911, Western Savings Bank Building back then at Broad and Chestnut?

Page 201.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With Mr. Crawford?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could you read into the record, sir, what Counsel has had for awhile and what I respectfully submit that you had?

A. Could I read it into the record?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. What do you mean?

Q. That is a letter from you, right?

A. Yeah.

Q. Okay. Now, what's it say?

A. Dear Mr. Ainge: Please be advised that I have been appointed by the Court to represent the Defendant charged in the death of the above-captioned person. Accordingly, I'm requesting that you forward a copy of the report to this office. Your prompt communication -- cooperation in this matter will be appreciated.

Q. You asked for a report, right? And that implies to you, the average lawyer doing homicide, the Medical Examiner's report was basically a protocol, that's what you are asking for, isn't it, the findings of the Medical Examiner? But they didn't just send you that. Would you flip the page there?

A. Would I what?

Q. Right there. There are two entries, Mr. Jackson. The top one says what? It's handwritten and it is from?

A. Copy of preliminary... police report I guess. Preliminary, looks like P-O-L report. Given to Detective Thomas, 744 of Homicide unit.

Q. Please. I don't think this gentleman is getting that.

A. Oh, I'm sorry.

Q. You know who Detective Thomas was, don't you? He was the assigned detective in this prosecution, right, Bill Thomas?

A. Yeah, I know Bill Thomas.

Q. Taller, kind of black guy, chubby cheeks?

A. Yeah. You said that.

Q. All right.

A. Okay.

Q. And they said on the first line -- what is that, by the way, you are reading from?

A. A log.

Q. A log? What is it entitled?

A. Investigative log.

Q. From the Medical Examiner's Office?

Page 203.

A. That is correct.

Q. What is the second entry on there, Mr. Jackson, and what date is it?

A. 1-27-82. Copy of complete case sent to Anthony E. Jackson, Esquire, Suite 911, Western Savings Bank Building, Broad and Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, 19107.

Q. And it does not say report sent, it says complete case sent, and it puts your name, address and where you are, doesn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, do you deny that you received that packet, sir?

A. I haven't examined the packet. I'm telling you there was one sheet that I did not receive.

Q. Look on the fourth sheet back and maybe you will find it there?

A. Is this what I had, sir?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. This is what I received?

Q. Yes, sir. Do you see a cover sheet that is called preliminary -- and I stress that word -- preliminary findings, presented to you by Mr. Weinglass earlier today?

A. Pardon me?

Page 204.

Q. You read from a Medical Examiner's notation earlier today?

A. Yeah, right here.

Q. Okay. Now look and find that in that same package that you are looking through right here, sir?

A. (Witness complies with request.)

Q. Do you see it? It is going to be right there at the top, it will be the first three or four pages.

A. Oh, I'm sorry, yes, sir, I see it now.

Q. Now, it is one thing to say that you don't recall having reviewed any of the notes of testimony in this case, apparently having no file, having given half your file to Mr. Jamal -- and then of course that was burned up in the MOVE fire -- what are you basing your statements on here today 13 years later?

A. On what am I basing my statements? Mr. Grant, I am thoroughly confused. You are talking about the medical, Mr. Grant, now you are asking me -- come on, tell me what you are asking.

Q. Why are you making these statements, Mr. Jackson?

A. What statement?

Q. That I know that I didn't receive this piece of paper right here. How do you know that?

A. Is this the paper I didn't receive?

Page 205.

Q. Yes.

A. When did I say this is the paper?

Q. When Mr. Weinglass was asking you about it.

A. Is this the one I said I didn't receive? Let me see...

Q. Which one are you referring to, by the way?

A. Oh, oh. There's another sheet. This is not it, sir.

Q. It is the last one in your hand?

A. That's not what I am talking about, Mr. Grant. That's where you have me confused, sir. There is a sheet that says that Mr. Jamal was shot by another officer or something. I can't specifically -- this is not the sheet that I am talking about, sir.

Q. Okay, may I approach?

A. Yes.

Q. That is right next, that is the next page, fourth page right there?

A. Yeah.

Q. Right there in front of you. Now, you received that, right?

A. Yeah, but not from the Medical Examiner.

Q. Who did you get it from?

A. The one I got from the Medical Examiner did not have this sheet.

Page 206.

Q. Who gave this sheet to you?

A. Someone.

Q. Someone snuck into the Medical Examiner's Office, stole it and sent it to you in the mail?

A. That is your statement, sir.

Q. How did you get it, sir?

A. I got it through a confidential source, sir.

Q. What does that mean?

A. It means that I got it from somebody I am not telling you where I got it from.

THE COURT: All right. Quiet back there or you are going to go out.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Did they give you the rest of the M.E.'s file too?

A. Yes, sir, I got the entire report.

Q. So you got the entire report. I thought you said you didn't have that statement at the time of trial?

A. I didn't say that. I said the District Attorney did not turn it over to me.

Q. I see.

A. Big difference.

Q. Do you think the District Attorney had that also?

Page 207.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. No, in fact Mr. McGill said he didn't have it. That's what he said.

Q. And you disbelieved him, right?

A. It wasn't, whether Mr. McGill had the report or not, it was part of his obligation to turn over all the files of the Police Department and the Medical Examiners, whether he had it in his hand or not, it doesn't satisfy the rule.

Q. Is that the law?

A. It is Jackson's law as I understand it, sir. Now, if you tell me that it is different, that he shouldn't turn it over.

Q. I am not telling you that, sir.

A. It is my understanding if a police officer has a report, he has a statement from somebody, Joe -- excuse me -- Joe McGill doesn't have it, the Commonwealth, the Commonwealth is held responsible for that. The fact that he didn't see it or he didn't get it is no excuse.

Q. I see, but you did have it. Both of them. You had the Medical Examiner's statement about some other policeman shot Mr. Jamal because you had a hearing on that on June 28th, didn't you, where you brought these very police officers in that you thought this statement came from and you had a

Page 208.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

previewed examination to see if you would want to use them as defense witnesses, and you had it on the record and Judge Sabo gave you his chamber to conduct it; correct?

A. It was, it went a little different than that. He made me go back there and he decided that I could not put them on. I wanted to put them on, obviously, because they sent me a report that did not contain a sheet that says that Mr. Jamal was shot by another police officer. Isn't it awfully strange that they would send me a report without that?

Q. Well, you claim they didn't send it to you?

A. I have no reason to lie to you, Mr. Grant.

Q. Well, would Mr. McGill have a reason to lie to you?

A. Pardon me?

Q. Does Mr. McGill have a reason to lie to you, Mr. Jackson?

A. I don't --

Q. You are kind of making some insinuations here and I just want to clear this up.

A. All right, let's clear it up. I am saying I did not get the sheet. Mr. McGill said that he didn't get it. I don't know whether he got it or not. But it's not important whether he had it. If the Commonwealth, with it's resources, it was in their possession, it is his responsibility to have it. If it was, if it was a person with the Medical Examiner's Office who had the report, it is still on Mr. McGill. It is his responsibility to turn it over to me.

Page 209.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

So Mr. McGill might have been telling the absolute truth. That does not absolve the Commonwealth of it's responsibility to turn over all of the information.

Q. I am just trying to find out if you are accusing Mr. McGill of lying to you?

A. I don't know if he is lying, I am not accusing anybody. I am simply talking about what the responsibility is. I want that to be very clear. If I had the proof that Mr. McGill was lying I would have brought it to the Court's attention then or now. I don't know. I simply know the obligation of the Commonwealth and that is to turn over all of the information. And they didn't do it.

When you start asking me what in this case did the Commonwealth not turn over, that was number one. And I am telling you I don't know what else.

Q. What is number two?

Page 210.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. Pardon me?

Q. What is number two?

A. Let me see if there was something else...

(Pause.)

All right, the names, the addresses and phones numbers of witnesses.

Q. Oh, please, Mr. Jackson. That, they would turn that over to you, what, so you could do -- well let me strike that.

A. Yeah, be careful. Oh, I'm sorry.

Q. They didn't turn over the names and addresses of witnesses to you?

A. Names.

Q. They turned over the names to you?

A. Names, yeah.

Q. Yeah. They didn't tell you where they lived, did they?

A. No, sir.

Q. And in what case when you were trying murder cases in the late '70s did they ever give you the place where the person lived?

A. Some of them.

Q. Some of them?

A. Yeah.

Q. How many of them? How many cases had you

Page 211.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

tried where they give you the name of the --

A. I understand the District Attorney has a policy to redact all that and I am not suggesting --

Q. Why do you think they do it?

A. Because, as I understand it, because they fear that the defendant may get the address and somehow intimidate that possible witness.

Q. Do you think that is a reasonable policy?

A. Absolutely not. Absolutely not. And if you wanted to know why I will tell you why I don't think it is reasonable.

Q. Why?

A. All right, the reason is this. The Police Department conducts these interviews, right. Now, of all the people that a person might talk to, you think about a police officer, isn't a police officer an intimidating individual? I am not talking about a police officer in particular. Police generally are intimidating to folks. Me, I am a member of the Bar of the Court. They give me the address. They gave me the report. It's Mr. Jackson as a member of the Bar of this Court, we don't want you to give this information to your client, but we don't want you to be hampered in your investigation in providing an effective representation. Here is where the witness lives. If you want to go talk to that witness, here it is. But I am going to ask you, just like me, I am not a District Attorney, I am a member of the Bar, I am not going to intimidate this witness. So why shouldn't I be given the same respect and given the opportunity to represent my client and investigate the people?

Page 212.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

You have all, you the District Attorney, you have all the advantages. You have the witnesses. And you are saying well, we're honorable people, but those defense lawyers, they are dishonorable people so we are not going to give them that information. That's why I don't like that policy, sir.

Q. Just because you are an honorable man doesn't mean you could make generalizations. And do you read papers anymore?

A. That's absolutely right. Why assume that everyone in the District Attorney's Office is honorable?

Q. You know how many witnesses have been dead in the last year, don't you?

A. I don't know.

Q. Directly related to their testimony?

A. I don't know.

Page 213.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. Well, I do. So --

A. I understand what you are talking about, sir.

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection, Your Honor.

THE WITNESS: You are missing my point, you are missing my point. What I am saying to you: If I am defense counsel, you tell me -- and I am telling you it has been done -- you tell me here is a statement with the address, with the phone number. You, Mr. Jackson, as a member of the Bar of the Court, I want you to give me your word that you won't give this information to your client.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Are you saying that by withholding or protecting the address of the people who witness murders, are you saying that we are violating the discovery rules by doing that?

A. I am not saying that.

Q. It is not, is it? It is absolutely not, is it?

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor --

THE WITNESS: That is not what I was talking about.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, if I may.

THE COURT: He could answer that

Page 214.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

question.

If that is an objection it is overruled.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, there is a Police Directive that requires that information to be turned over: Directive 135.

THE COURT: Bring it up in redirect.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well.

THE COURT: He is asking him a legal question. He is a lawyer, he could answer it.

MR. WEINGLASS: But he is misrepresenting the Police Directives.

MR. GRANT: I don't work for the police and we give out discovery so I don't care what that says. We give out discovery.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Is that against --

MR. WEINGLASS: He should ask him if Police Directives are in error.

THE COURT: You could bring it out in redirect. Will you, please.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Is that an ethical or legal violation of the law, sir?

Page 215.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. Mr. Grant, I am not suggesting, and I don't know for certain that it is a violation of the discovery rule. But that wasn't the question I was addressing. You asked me --

Q. The question I asked you was what did we withhold from you? And I am not implying things legally permissible to be withheld, as you well know, when I asked the question.

A. Okay, this is what I meant when I say you are withholding something, whether it is on a statement, your policy or whatever. If I am a lawyer for a defendant, I have a statement from him, from this witness, I have the police, I have what the police says that witness says. I would like to talk to that witness myself, just to find out if in fact that witness said so. District Attorney says no you won't. You will not contact this witness. You will contact us and we will contact that witness and find out if the witness wants to talk to you and if you could get to her. Now, do you think that that's fair?

Q. No, I don't think it is fair and I don't --

A. That is my own point.

Q. I don't think it's fair because I don't think it happens very often. And I want to ask you about withholding statements from you and the D.A. saying I won't let you talk to this witness, because you made some accusations today.

Page 216.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. I didn't say withholding statements.

Q. You made some accusations about Mr. McGill about Miss Kordansky, he wouldn't help you get the witness and the detective said you ain't got to show up if you don't want to, and I want to visit that issue. What I am trying to do initially, Mr. Jackson, before we proceed --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- is clear up these insinuations, this innuendo, these implications that you are raising here. Now let's talk about June 30th of 1982.

A. Okay.

Q. Page 3, we are talking about this very type of thing.

A. Okay.

Q. Mr. McGill is talking to the Court and says Mr. Jamal has been here for about 10 or 15 minutes. And you state: Your Honor, I would like to bring to your attention that we have a prospective witness, a Debbie Kordansky. Yesterday Counsel for the prosecution, Mr. McGill, gave me her phone number and the St. James Hotel as the place where I could locate her. I contacted her by phone. She indicated to me by phone that she no longer lived at the St. James Hotel, although I have not been able to confirm it. In any event, she indicated to me last Monday she was in a bicycle accident, she injured her head, she would find it extremely inconvenient and impossible to appear in Court. My sense is that she simply wants to avoid appearing as a witness.

Page 217.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Now, you then go on to state: Given the fact yesterday, I guess it was about 6 p.m., six o'clock last night was the first opportunity I had of contacting this witness, I wondered whether or not there may be some means that the Court could suggest that I could have her brought in or her injury confirmed or if she is not going to testify. Then the Court goes on to say let's find out what she would testify to, and you read the Court the statement.

And her statement that you felt was exculpatory was this: I was watching TV, I heard about five gunshots. And where she lives is approximately, it is on the corner of 13th and Locust.

A. Not quite on Locust but I know where it is, yes, sir. Closer to Walnut Street.

Page 218.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. Approximately. I was watching TV, I heard five, about five gunshots, sometime between 3:45 and four o'clock. Which is the time of the alleged murder -- or the proven murder at this point. The gunshots seemed to be in succession. I thought it was firecrackers. I didn't look out the window at first. I heard sirens a short time later. I saw about 10 squad cars and two vans at 13th and Locust. And then she says I saw a male running on the south side of Locust.

Now, that's her statement. Now you say to the Court -- my point is maybe that's not the sequence, maybe when the 10 squad cars and two vans or whatever were there, obviously that's after the crime has occurred and they are all converging on the scene, and clearly if a person is running, they are going to either run right into the arms of the police, or run right past the police -- but you are saying no, Judge, I think what she really meant was I saw the person running and then I noticed all this other stuff.

The Judge then says... Did you ask her whether that was out of sequence.

And you go on to relate to him what you heard.

Page 219.

Mr. McGill then interrupts and says did you get an address from her.

This is you: She won't tell me anything. She said nobody said anything about Mumia's case but it sounds like some Moslems. I don't know whether they are white or black, they are calling me and harassing me. She says I don't know if it has anything to do with this case.

Mr. McGill then says to you, Mr. Jackson, first of all, the first time I heard that name as a potential defense witness was yesterday. That would have been June 29th. Yesterday afternoon. I then said let me check to Mr. Jackson. I checked my book, this was yesterday afternoon, I checked to see if I could get the address and give to it them right away. I said it was not here and I would check the book which had been taken over -- like these boxes I bring back and forth (indicating). They took the box over right after Court, the police officers. And I said it's over on my desk. I went over and got the information, called Mr. Jackson immediately and gave it to him.

Mr. Jackson: That is correct.

Mr. McGill then says: I could appreciate the fact that you would like to have a witness. I have never contacted the woman. Although we have had a telephone number. I suppose that the Commonwealth would be willing to try and give somebody a call, to call her, but we don't have any more information than Mr. Jackson does.

Now, Mr. Jackson, that doesn't sound to me, the words from this transcript don't sound like the words you told Mr. Weinglass that occurred when you were trying to find Debra Kordansky and the people, Mr. McGill was telling you not to bring her in, that the detective was saying you don't have to come -- where is any of that in there?

A. I haven't heard it.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, there is another part of the transcript.

MR. GRANT: Let's read it. Where is that?

MR. WEINGLASS: That is the part I read.

THE COURT: Bring it up in redirect.

MR. WEINGLASS: But Counsel says it doesn't sound to me like my question, I questioned him on another part of the transcript.

MR. GRANT: Could I have the page?

Page 221.

MR. WEINGLASS: Oh.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Now, could you reconcile those two versions of the same event, sir?

A. No, I can't, Mr. Grant. I just know what I remember, sir. And again, I haven't reviewed the transcript. Look, and I know, I know that I tried to find, to locate Deb, Debbie Kordansky. I had an investigator even look for her.

Now, the transcript that you are reading now suggests as soon as I asked Mr. McGill for the address and phone number he gave it to me. I don't know what that says, that didn't happen.

Q. Why did you say 13 years ago that's correct?

A. I'm saying if that is what that transcript says, that that was the only time, then I am telling you it didn't happen that way.

Q. Well, it is in black and white and your memory is not?

A. You know, and that's true. Look, could I make a mistake? Absolutely. It is not, but it is not the thing that I was likely to make a mistake today. Debbie Kordansky in my mind was a vital witness. I just didn't all of a sudden decide I wanted to see Debbie Kordansky and then I asked Mr. McGill and he gave me the information. Why, if that were the case, why would I get the Judge involved in chambers? I never had a judge go back in chambers to call a witness since I was practicing law. Believe me, the events did not come down like you are reading it.

Q. You had the Judge intervene to get Gary Wakshul for you, and you claimed at that time that you were making the decisions and you forgot to get Mr. Wakshul in, isn't that the same?

A. No, sir, that is not the same. No, sir, that is not true. That is not true.

Q. All right, Mr. Jackson.

A. That is not true.

Q. By the way, you didn't know that had you brought Mr. Wakshul in, he would have said as a result of Mr. Jackson filing a suit against all the officers, the Internal Affairs Division interviewed all of us to see if we beat up Mr. Jamal, and had that not had happened I probably wouldn't have even mentioned the fact that the guy did say yeah I shot the mother-fucker and I hope he dies? Because when he said it I was, I claimed I went out to get my hat and coat from the Police van but I lied. I broke down and cried and I went out and wrecked my car because I didn't believe it. And then for the first time when they asked me, that's when I mentioned it. I probably never would have.

A. You know --

Q. Did you know he was going to say that when you brought him in? It was in his statement.

A. Okay, first of all, again, I never filed a lawsuit against them.

Q. Complaint, I'm sorry.

A. Let me just tell you this, Mr. Grant. You tell me if I am wrong. Throughout this trial, whenever there was any testimony that was changed, it was always to the benefit of the Commonwealth. Each and every time. When there was testimony that was changed...

THE COURT: Do you want a recess?

THE WITNESS: Just for a minute.

MR. GRANT: Perhaps we could recess until tomorrow.

THE COURT: Let's recess until tomorrow morning so you could get your composure back.

All right, we will adjourn until tomorrow morning. Could we try about 9:30.

MR. WEINGLASS: Could we, before the Court leaves, could we put on Mr. Davidson? He is here.

THE WITNESS: I am all right now.

THE COURT OFFICER: Quiet in the Courtroom. The Court is still in session, quiet in the Courtroom.

THE COURT: Do you have any --

MR. GRANT: I'm sorry?

THE COURT: He wants to put on Mr. Davidson.

Where is he?

MR. WEINGLASS: He is in the witness room. Just outside.

THE COURT: I thought the witness room was back here (indicating).

THE COURT OFFICER: Yes, Your Honor, he is in the witness room.

MR. WEINGLASS: I think he's back here.

THE COURT OFFICER: Yes, he is.

THE COURT: Would you bring him out.

(Brief recess.)

THE COURT: All right, Counselor, will you take a seat there.

THE COURT OFFICER: This Court is now reconvened.

Joseph Davidson, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

THE COURT: Are you ready?

MR. WILLIAMS: I am. Your Honor. May I inquire?

THE COURT: Yes, sure.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Mr. Davidson, I know you have been waiting a long time and I appreciate it. Can you tell the Court where you live?

A. I live in Washington, DC.

Q. Okay. And I would like you to explain to us a little bit about yourself. What do you do for a living?

A. I'm a reporter with the Wall Street Journal.

Q. How long have you been a reporter with the Wall Street Journal?

A. It's almost 11 years now.

Q. All right. And are you based in Washington, DC?

Page 226.

A. I am.

Q. And what kind of stories do you cover for the Wall Street Journal?

A. Currently my beat is criminal justice and immigration.

Q. Can you share with us, Mr. Davidson, a little bit about your educational background?

A. I went to the public schools in Detroit, Michigan. I went to undergraduate school at Oben University, which is a college outside of Detroit. I went to the University of Michigan for graduate school.

Q. What did you study at the University of Michigan?

A. Public policy studies.

Q. Now, are you a member of any professional organizations, sir?

A. I am a member of the National Association of Black Journalists.

Q. Mr. Davidson, I want you to look here at the gentleman that I am putting my hand on (indicating). Do you see this gentleman?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know who he is?

A. Yes.

Page 227.

Q. Can you tell the Court who he is?

A. Mumia Abu-Jamal.

Q. Did you know this gentleman back in 1982?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you aware that in 1982, that gentleman was under indictment?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you aware that pursuant to that indictment he was put through a trial?

A. Yes.

Q. In this Courthouse?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you attend any of the proceedings, Mr. Davidson?

A. Umm, a couple of days I believe, not the full trial.

Q. Okay. Did you know that there was a Court-appointed attorney representing him?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Do you know who that attorney was?

A. Yes.

Q. Tell the Court who that attorney was?

A. Tony Jackson.

Q. Did you know Mr. Jackson personally?

A. Yeah, from around this building, basically.

Page 228.

Q. Have you ever had any dealings with him prior to 1982?

A. Tony Jackson?

Q. Tony Jackson, yes.

A. Ahh, yes, casual dealings, you might say.

Q. Was it your impression that he also knew who you were?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, was there any health reasons or any other personal matters that would have impeded you from taking the witness stand in those proceedings? I am referring to the proceedings related to Mr. Jamal.

A. No, I could have taken the stand.

Q. Now let me ask you ask you this, Mr. Davidson. If you were asked to come into Court and to testify in a proceeding for the benefit of Mr. Jamal, would you have been willing to do that?

A. Yes.

Q. Did anybody discuss with you the possibility of your coming into Court and testifying for the benefit of Mr. Jamal?

A. No.

Q. Now, you said that you know Mr. Jamal. Can you share with us the circumstances under which you grew to know him?

Page 229.

A. Well, we're colleagues. I worked in this building in 212 as a City Hall reporter. Mumia was often around this building doing things with a job as a radio journalist. So as journalists together we got to know each other.

I also, he also lived not too far from me in the Mount Airy section. And sometimes his son would come over to my house before school because my son went to the same school as his son. Also, we were both active in the Philadelphia Association of Black Journalists. He was, I succeeded him as president of that organization.

Q. Let me interrupt you for one moment. First, to be clear: You said you were colleagues. You are referring to the fact that you were professional colleagues?

A. Exactly.

Q. Both of you were journalists, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And then you referred to the Association of Black Journalists?

A. That's right.

Q. And you said that you followed Mr. Jamal as president?

A. Yes.

Page 230 is missing. We will make attempts to locate it.

person on the street. I mean I found that he had a real, a real empathy, I guess, for those people who were being beaten by the system or being cheated somehow. The little guy. The little woman. I thought that he had, he was in touch with them, he was sensitive towards them. And so, you know, the down-to-earth part has to do not just with, you know, finding some glory in reporting about the most powerful people, and being able to rub shoulders with the most powerful people in the City or in the society, but also those who were down the bottom rung of the ladder.

Q. Let me ask you this, Mr. Davidson. I know in the law there is an incredible urge to brush shoulders with the powerful. Is that also true in journalists: Is there an urge or a desire among journalists to rub shoulders with the powerful?

A. Among some, not all.

Q. And by your eyes, is it an admirable quality to resist that desire to rub shoulders with the powerful and to have empathy for those who are voiceless in our society?

A. I think it's a particularly, it's particularly valuable and important for journalists to be able to do that.

Page 232.

Joseph Davidson - Direct

Q. Tell me why?

A. Well, many people come into the profession because, because we feel that it provides an opportunity to be of service to the, you know, just to the small people, if you will. I mean the notion of being a muckraker, while sometimes I think outside of the profession it's considered, you know, like a scandalous kind of thing almost, like you are into sensationalism, among journalists muckraking is really a valuable cause because what it means is that you are, you are digging out the dirt that somehow afflicts those at the bottom of the society. And it means that rather than spending all of your time with those who, you know, have the wealth in society, you are really looking out for those who are poor, for the downtrodden. It is a noble calling far too often forgotten, I think.

Q. And did you think that Mr. Jamal was dedicated to what you called that noble calling?

A. Definitely.

Q. Did you find that you had much in common with Mr. Jamal?

A. I think so. I mean I thought we shared a, you might say an outlook. I mean we talked about society, we talked about phoniness, for example. And

Page 233.

Joseph Davidson - Direct

I thought that, you know, we did share, you know, a certain outlook on the world.

Q. Help us to understand a little bit what you mean by this shared outlook. What outlook are you talking about?

A. Well, I think it's a, it kind of gets back to what I've been saying, this business of how we approach the profession. Also, a certain skepticism, I think, about the way in which the political and economic system treated various groups of people. Particularly poor black people. And I mean we certainly had shared some, you know, some doubts about the fairness of the system. And so we talked about those things. And so that was another kind of link between us.

Q. Did you have the occasion, Mr. Davidson, to observe the kinds of skills that Mr. Jamal exhibited as a journalist?

A. Yes, all the time.

Q. Can you explain to us what kind of skills he exhibited?

A. Well, I thought that he was the best radio journalist in the City. And I paid attention to the journalists in the City because they were my competition in many cases. I thought that on one level his, it was the gift of his voice. But it was certainly more than that. It was his writing ability. He has the ability to convey with words a picture so that his listeners can, his listeners are in a sense placed at the scene of whatever it is he is reporting. I think that his, I think he can do that because of a certain empathy he feels with, you know, with the subjects about which he is writing. It is again that sensitivity.

Page 234.

Joseph Davidson - Direct

And so I think it was the combination of the physical gift, the writing ability, paying attention to details, which is very important in our profession. All of those things I think were very important. And, like I said, Mumia made a very, very, very good radio journalist.

Q. So you are saying that it takes a certain amount of empathy and sensitivity to be able to write with this kind of power that you were describing? Is that right?

A. That's right. I believe so. I mean I think that there are plenty of good writers in the business. But I believe that it's, I believe that it's important to really try to, it's really important to try to feel what, in kind of a sense, feel the issue. It's more difficult to do this if you are covering like City Council, for example. If you are covering a dry hearing on Capital Hill. Where this kind of reporting comes out is when you're out on the street, in the neighborhood, or out in the fields with people. And you are talking with them basically about their life. Often it's about their problems. Often it's about some tragedy. And it has to do with your ability to listen. It has to do also I think with a certain, a certain level of self-confidence. And it is the kind of thing that you don't learn in journalism school. It is the kind of thing that educators, you know, seldom will talk with you about. It has to do I think with, with a willingness to open yourself up to others. A willingness or an ability perhaps to be vulnerable. Because I mean there is all this touchy-feely stuff that you never hear about when you talk about journalism. I frankly believe it is really important, though, because the more you get into people, the more that will come out in your work. And I think that is remarkable in journalism.

Page 235.

Joseph Davidson - Direct

Q. Mr. Davidson, I think that would be true for attorneys as well. But let me ask you this. You say that Mr. Jamal had the ability to feel the story.

A. Right.

Page 236.

Joseph Davidson - Direct

Q. And you just described that it requires an ability to be vulnerable?

A. Right.

Q. What kind of qualities in a human being would you believe is required to have that kind of vulnerability to feel other peoples' pain?

MR. GRANT: I object, Your Honor. Unless Mr. Jamal possessed those qualities, I respect his opinion but I don't think it is relevant here.

THE COURT: Would you get right to the issue, whatever you are trying to show, Counsel.

MR. WILLIAMS: I am trying to get to the issue of Mr. Jamal's qualities as a human being.

THE COURT: I thought you did that.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Mr. Davidson, let me put it to you directly. What kind of qualities as a human being do you think that Mr. Jamal possessed that allowed him to have that kind of vulnerability that you were speaking of?

A. Well, I find it's one of a sense of independence and sense of self-confidence. Because I don't think that you can, that you have those characteristics unless you're basically secure enough

Page 237.

Joseph Davidson - Direct

to be open enough to others and to allow those kinds of, those feelings to come out, come out in the way you deal with others in terms of the way you listen, your openness. And that comes out in your work. So I think it's self-confidence and I think it is just the ability to listen, be sensitive, and to empathize.

Q. Now, Mr. Davidson, if Mr. Jamal was interested in using his, what you have characterized his enormous skills as a journalist and as a human being to make money and to rise in the profession of journalism, do you think that he had the potential to do that?

A. Without a doubt. I think that there are many people in the profession on the national scene, on local scenes around the country, who have far less talent and who have done very well in the profession.

Q. Far less talent than Mr. Jamal?

A. Right.

MR. WILLIAMS: Mr. Davidson, thank you very much.

MR. GRANT: I know it has been a long day for you, sir, I only have a couple questions.

- - - - -

Page 238 is missing. We will make attempts to locate it.

Page 239.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, that is true, if they --

MR. GRANT: I am asking some questions. I let you ask every question in the world.

MR. WILLIAMS: I don't think we should be addressing each other. I think our remarks should be addressed to the Court.

THE COURT: Let him finish, will you. You said you won't be long and I gave you that opportunity, now let's let him cross-examine so we could all go home.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Do you think that your feelings were shared that you expressed here today by other members of the Philadelphia chapter?

A. My feelings about his skills as a journalist?

Q. His skills, ability and sensitivity and the kind of voice that he presented in the community.

A. Among those who I spoke with, I would say yes. I can't speak for all of the journalists, but I would say certainly a number did share those views.

Q. And as a result of that, the Philadelphia chapter of the Association of Black Journalists raised how much money on his behalf to submit to his defense in this case?

A. Well, the Philadelphia Association of Black Journalists at that time participated in a defense fund. And essentially what that amounted to was encouraging people to send money to a post office box.

Q. Whose box?

A. Pardon me?

Q. Whose box was it?

A. I believe it was the PABJ box, Philadelphia Association of Black Journalists' box.

Q. Who was the repositor or the treasurer of those funds?

A. I think I believe the treasurer was Tyree Johnson.

Q. Could you tell us, since you were basically the man at that point in the Association, could you tell us how much or what level of monies were collected for Mr. Jamal's defense? --

A. Well, I actually spoke with him a few days ago. And his recollection was it was between two and four-hundred dollars.

Q. Two and four-hundred dollars?

A. Right.

Q. When did you talk to the reporters from The

Page 241.

Inquirer when you said that you thought it was a thousand bucks?

A. I think that was last week.

Q. And after you made that statement to them you later talked with the person who ultimately received the money?

A. That's right.

Q. And that's what you were told?

A. That's right.

Q. So at the time you made that comment you thought it was true?

A. That's right.

Q. Thank you.

A. And what I told them, The Inquirer reporter, I thought it was up to a thousand and no more. But that my recollection was hazy. And so after that I checked with the, I checked with two other people, as a matter of fact, who told me it wasn't anything like that. It was the treasurer told me it was like two to four-hundred.

Q. Okay. But you, you knew personally that you were not the only organization that was making these efforts on behalf of Mr. Jamal, did you not?

A. That's true.

Q. Do you know how many other organizations or groups were collecting money for Jamal's defense?

Page 242.

A. I don't know how many, there were certainly others involved.

Q. Other organizations or other individuals?

A. Other organizations. But also other individuals.

MR. GRANT: Okay. Thank you very much, sir. Thanks for your patience today.

- - - - -

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Mr. Davidson, let me pick up where Mr. Grant left off regarding the money you referred to. What was your impression of the purpose for this fund that became two to four-hundred dollars?

A. Well, I recall we had some discussions about what should be done with it. And it was my impression then that it was meant primarily for his family. I think his defense was going to be paid for by the State.

Q. So do you know if any money went to Mr. Jackson for his defense?

A. Well, the best I could say on that is that when I spoke with the former treasurer of the organization he indicated that some money, that he believes some money went to a photographer. He doesn't know if the money went directly to Mr. Jackson. But that some money went to a photographer to take some pictures, I guess of the scene. And then some of it may also have gone to the family.

MR. WILLIAMS: Very well. Thank you very much.

- - - - -

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Do you know sir, if I may, that photographer's name or if that photographer's name was William Peraneau?

A. That's what I was told.

Q. And did you know that that Mr. Peraneau was retained and also being paid by the Court of Common Pleas for his efforts?

A. No.

MR. GRANT: Thank you, sir. I have nothing further, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right, you are excused.

We will adjourn until tomorrow morning.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your honor, just one last thing. Tomorrow I understand Mr. McGill will be here.

THE COURT: No, tomorrow morning we will continue cross-examination.

MR. WEINGLASS: I know, but sometime during the day tomorrow, hopefully Mr. McGill will be here, I am not sure.

THE COURT: I am not sure, so why don't we wait until tomorrow and see what tomorrow brings.

MR. WEINGLASS: Tomorrow might be too late.

THE COURT: Let's try to get in here a littler earlier.

MR. WEINGLASS: I just make one simple request of the District Attorney. Mr. McGill filed a declaration which went to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. We do not have a copy of it in our files. Could the District Attorney provide it to Counsel? It's part of the official record.

MR. GRANT: Not anymore. I am sick of giving them everything. They gave it to us, that's how I got it. So I am not going to provide it to Counsel.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, we do not have Mr. McGill's declaration that the Pennsylvania Supreme Court relied upon. May we have a copy of it? It is a very simple document which is part of their records. We from the defense side do not have Mr. McGill's affidavit, which was referred to by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court.

THE COURT: Well, I don't have it either.

MR. WEINGLASS: I know, I am asking the District Attorney to provide it for us.

THE COURT: Well, who was the attorney that represented Mumia in the Supreme Court?

MR. WEINGLASS: In the Supreme Court the attorney was Marilyn Gelb.

THE COURT: Well, ask her.

MR. WEINGLASS: I have asked her, Your Honor, and I represent to you that their office does not have a copy of that declaration.

THE COURT: Well, I don't.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am sure the District Attorney has it. This is a very simple request.

Page 246.

THE COURT: I know that.

MR. WEINGLASS: It is a two page document. They have it in their file, we don't have it. I just ask for it. So that when I question Mr. McGill we don't have to interrupt his testimony for that document to be found. They could find it tonight. It's very simple.

THE COURT: Okay, you try to find it tonight too, will you.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I don't have it.

THE COURT: Well, I don't have it.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am not asking the Court for it, I am asking the Court to ask the District Attorney to provide it for us.

THE COURT: You ask the District Attorney.

MR. BURNS: Your Honor, this is a copy of the affidavit for Mr. McGill that was given to the defense.

MR. WEINGLASS: It is wrong, it is the wrong affidavit. You are looking at the wrong -- read the Supreme Court declaration, they referred to it. There is another one.

THE COURT: Go back up to the Supreme Court and ask them where it is. I don't have it. What do you want me to do, dig something up for you? I don't have it.

Page 247.

MR. WEINGLASS: I want you to perform as a Judge interested in the rights of my client.

THE COURT: I can't force them to give you something that they say they don't have. Go back to Marilyn Gelb and ask her.

MR. WEINGLASS: I have already asked, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Have her in here and let's find out where it is.

MR. WEINGLASS: Don't leave the bench.

THE COURT: Well, I am leaving the bench now because I am tired of this.

MR. WEINGLASS: You leave in the middle of Defense Counsel's argument and you come back when the Commonwealth wants you.

THE COURT: Tomorrow, I said. In the meantime, you look for it. They will look for it, do whatever you have to do.

MR. WEINGLASS: Same old game tomorrow: You will tell me it's too late.

MR. GRANT: You know what, Judge, I think Counsel needs to be reprimanded. I don't think he understands the rules of decorum and the profession in a Courtroom.

MR. WEINGLASS: I understand the Canons of Professional Ethics.

THE COURT: I understand it. Do you understand you are here by permission of this Court?

MR. WEINGLASS: I understand that.

THE COURT: You could be removed. So please. Don't go too far.

All right.

THE COURT OFFICER: This Court now stands adjourned until 9:30 a.m. tomorrow morning at the call of the Crier.

THE COURT: Before we commence I just want to make a few comments as to the proper decorum in this Courtroom. I know yesterday I had said that the families could come in through this back door. After speaking to my security detail, they advise me that that wasn't such a smart idea. Instead, they have set up two monitors out at the front here. The one in the middle is for the family members. The one on the other side is for the general public.

In addition, to you people of the news media, I do wish that you would report the proceedings in here correctly. You said that we had evicted three people yesterday because they refused to sit. We actually evicted four. Three of them were evicted because when they stood up they turned their back to the Court. The fourth one was evicted, was a rather stocky white male who when he stood up gave the Court the Nazi salute. Well, nobody in this Courtroom will address this Court with a Nazi salute. He not only was evicted but he is told that he could not come back any further in these proceedings. I will not tolerate any Nazi salute in this Courtroom.

I received a memo from the Court Officer today that reads: To whom it may concern. I have an appointment at Hahnemann Hospital Comp clinic today. I must leave at 10:45 a.m. in order to arrive on time. Following that I leave to go to physical therapy at Novocare at Roosevelt Boulevard and Harbison Avenue. I will be available on Monday until 1:45 p.m. when I again leave therapy and also on Tuesday. That's Gary Wakshul.

If anybody wants a copy of this memo, we will give it to you. Otherwise I will just give it to the Court stenographer.

And I have also been notified that Anthony Jackson called at 9:35 and said he would be 15 minutes late. He's here now so there's no problem.

I also read in the news media that there is constant bickering between defense Counsel and the Judge. Well, that's going to stop. When I make a ruling, that's final. You have an automatic exception. I will not tolerate any arguing about it. The matter, as you all know, is on automatic appeal to the Supreme Court. They will review your objections. I will not tolerate any bickering, there is not going to be anymore bickering. When I adjourn for the day we are adjourned for the day.

Yesterday I had adjourned because of Anthony Jackson. Defense asked that we take a witness Joe Davidson because he was from Washington, DC. I agreed to that -- well, the D.A. agreed and I said okay, fine, we'll do that. When that was finished I wanted to leave. It was a long day. I don't want any motions or arguments at that time. There will not be anymore of that. If a motion is determined at that time it will be taken up the following morning. So everybody understands it. And if you continue to do that, I will have no alternative but to hold you in contempt and fine you. Okay.

THE COURT: All right. Mr. Jackson is here?

Page 6.

MR. GRANT: While he is coming in, Your Honor, I would like the record to reflect that Miss Wolkenstein yesterday asked me, or the Commonwealth, I should say, to record two tape recordings that were made, one of Cynthia White and one of the Police Radio tape, since apparently she didn't have it. We voluntarily complied and I am turning over to her the copies of the two tapes this morning (handing).

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I just wanted to note that yesterday and again today, the Court quite properly recited the procedural path that this case might take on an automatic appeal to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court.

THE COURT: It always does, it always does.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right. But I hope --

THE COURT: The case always go to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

MR. WEINGLASS: But I hope that the Court's reciting that now twice does not indicate that the Court has already made up it's mind.

THE COURT: No, I am just telling you for the record that that is the procedure that

Page 7.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

we have here.

MR. WEINGLASS: Only if we lose here.

THE COURT: Right. Even if you win here the D.A. is going to appeal and that is going to the Supreme Court.. So it is going to go there no matter who wins or who loses, okay, Counselor.

Where is Anthony Jackson?

Anthony E. Jackson, Esquire, having been previously affirmed, was examined and testified as follows:

CROSS-EXAMINATION (Continued)

- - - - -

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Good morning.

A. Good morning, Mr. Grant.

Q. Good morning. Yesterday after we adjourned proceedings with your testimony, Mr. Jackson, a Mr. Joseph Davidson testified and he indicated that the Philadelphia Association of Black Journalists collected money for the defense of Mr. Jamal and the amount in question is apparently between two and four-hundred dollars. Now, you requested the Court by way of a petition for monies to pay for a photographer, did you not?

Page 8.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. I did, sir.

Q. And that was granted, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how much did Mr. Peraneau receive?

A. I think 150, 200, I really don't recall. Something.

Q. And he was in fact a photographer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he took photographs for you?

A. Yes, sir.

THE COURT: Counsel, I hate to interrupt. Maybe this will help your recollection of what he got (handing).

THE WITNESS: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I am handing him his fee petition that he submitted to the Court. It has on there the figures. And it would help me too.

MR. GRANT: Fee petition that Mr. Jackson submitted?

THE COURT: Yes, in this case.

MR. GRANT: Okay.

THE WITNESS: Apparently he received

Page 9 is missing. We will attempt to locate it.

Page 10.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

MR. GRANT: Very well.

THE WITNESS: I should point out: Mr. Peraneau didn't get the money until the end of the trial, he probably didn't get it until a year after the trial.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. He got the money?

A. Yeah, I'm pretty sure, yeah, I gave it to him.

Q. Mr. Jackson, in fact, it is customary, as unfortunate as it is, that even you and all lawyers who are court appointed to represent indigent defendant's have to wait for their money?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Because we're in a City that at various stages in our history has been nearly bankrupt; you would agree with that, wouldn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And so it is not unusual for people to wait, including all the lawyers who represent people that you are appointed to, isn't that so?

A. Yes.

Q. So that wasn't a big deal in that case anymore than it was in any other case, was it?

A. With this photographer, no.

Q. May I take a look at that, please?

Page 11.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

MR. GRANT: May I approach, Your Honor?

MR. WEINGLASS: If the Court please.

THE COURT: Do you want copies of that?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, I would like to.

THE COURT: All right.

Frank, could you make copies of this for everybody.

THE COURT OFFICER: All right, let me have this, Counsel?

MR. GRANT: I will proceed in the meantime, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. GRANT: Thank you.

MR. WEINGLASS: I think the record should reflect that the Court provided a document to the prosecution this morning in aid of it's cross-examination.

THE COURT: I gave it to the witness to refresh his memory. He didn't seem to know what was paid. Since that is his fee petition and he has it on there, I gave it to him to remember.

BY MR. GRANT:

Page 12.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. Mr. Jackson, you do acknowledge that pursuant to Judge Ribner's statements to you and from your years of practice and your more or less 20 homicide trials here in Philadelphia prior to Mr. Jamal's case, that the standard fee for experts, the initial fee that was given was $150?

A. I think that's correct, yes, sir.

Q. All right, now, just by the document that you submitted to the Court for your fee payment, you acknowledge that Mr. Peraneau, who is nothing more or nothing less than a photographer, received almost three times that amount; correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And based upon your testimony yesterday, Mr. Greer received practically $500; correct?

A. Ahh, yes, sir.

Q. And that was more than three times the standard initial fee?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you said yesterday also that Mr. Fassnacht, who was your alleged expert ballistician, received more than twice what the initial and usual fee was for his services, did he not?

A. I believe he did.

Q. Well, you stated yesterday he received $350?

Page 13.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. Yeah, okay.

Q. Now, do you know whether any of these experts that were retained by you received any other monies from any other source while working on behalf of Mr. Jamal?

A. I have no knowledge.

Q. By the way, with respect to Mr. Fassnacht, the ballistician?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You testified on direct examination yesterday, Mr. Jackson, that Mr. Fassnacht received $350 for his services; correct?

A. Yes, sir. Again, I could be wrong, it could have been four.

Q. I won't hold you to that figure.

A. Yes.

Q. But whatever it is, he got money?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you then thereafter testified that he looked at no Firearms Identification Unit reports, that is to say he didn't look at the findings on paper of the ballisticians who testified at trial; correct?

A. He looked at whatever I was given.

Q. Pardon me?

A. Whatever I was given he looked at.

Q. Oh. So then he did look at the reports?

A. Yeah, I apologize if I misstated. Yeah, I mean he looked at what I was given in discovery.

Q. And what you were giving him in discovery said that the bullet removed from Mr. Jamal beyond a reasonable degree of medical certainty came from the dead officer's handgun; correct?

A. Ahh -- I don't recall specifically what the report says. I wouldn't imagine that a ballistician would be talking about medical terms but I don't know, I don't recall what the medical report said.

Q. No, they weren't talking about medical terms. A doctor that you brought in to testify on behalf of the defense removed the bullet --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- from beneath the skin in Mr. Jamal's back?

A. Yes, sir, I thought you were referring to the ballistics report.

Q. I am.

A. It didn't have medical terms in it, sir.

Q. Oh, I'm sorry, did I say beyond a reasonable degree of medical certainty?

A. Yes.

Q. Beyond a reasonable degree of scientific certainty.

A. Okay.

Q. That is one of the findings in the report that you gave Mr. Fassnacht?

A. I would assume so. I don.'t recall what's in the report. And I am not disagreeing with you, I just don't know what is in the report.

Q. I appreciate that. And let me see if I can refresh your recollection here if that's possible.

MR. GRANT: May I have this three-page document which I am showing to Counsel which they have already received marked for identification as Commonwealth Exhibit number 3.

THE COURT: You say three pages, that looks --

MR. GRANT: Four pages, yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay, all right.

THE COURT OFFICER: Do you have it?

(FIU report was marked Commonwealth Exhibit C-3 for identification.)

THE COURT OFFICER: So marked C-3, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Would you staple that for the lawyers, please.

THE COURT OFFICER: Yes, Your Honor. (Handing).

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Mr. Jackson, you are being handed what has been marked for identification purposes as Commonwealth Exhibit number 4. It purports to be a firearms, I'm sorry, number 3, purports to be a Firearms Identification Unit examination report. I would like you to take your time and look that over. And based on your work as an evidence technician, I am sure you have seen hundreds, if not thousands, of those, have you not?

A. Yes, sir. Mr. Grant, this does appear to be one of the documents that was given to me. However, I think there were additional documents. I think... there was a property receipt given for the weapon. Seems to me there was something else.

Q. I tell you what it was.

A. This was 13 years ago.

Q. Property receipts for all the weapons, they gave you property receipts for all the fired missiles, both spent shells and fired cartridge casings, bullet jackets, and you gave him Dr. Tumosa's report from the Criminalistic's report whereby he found primer gun residue on the clothing of both Mr. Jamal and the police officer, which indicated on that report that both gunshots were exchanged from a distance of no more than 12 inches?

A. All right, I will accept that. I knew it was something more than that.

Q. So you gave them that report?

A. Yes.

Q. Along with other reports, he reviewed them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And after he reviewed them he didn't tell you what his findings were?

A. No. We had some preliminary discussions but no findings as such because I couldn't afford to have him conduct any examinations or any testing.

Q. Well, when you talked to Mr. Fassnacht, you contacted him and you asked him would he agree to help you in this case with his expertise; correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when you call somebody up to buy a couch at Strawbridges, and they agree to sell you the couch, don't you ask them how much it is going to cost you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you ask him what his fee was going to be?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So you knew what his fee was going to be before he looked at those documents?

A. No, sir.

Q. His fee was going to be based on reading all your files, giving you an expert opinion as to what he read, and then he would tell you how much he was going to charge you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Tell us how that arrangement went?

A. Sure. He had to see what documents were available and what work had to be done before he could give me a fee, he didn't know what he had to do.

Q. And what fee did he give you?

A. I don't remember at all. Excuse me. I know as a result of our having I think two conversations, and his, his analysis of the reports that he had there without doing any independent testing, and providing me with some expert suggestions with regard to cross-examination of the ballistician, we paid him whatever we paid him, 350 or something. I know for him to perform independent tests as well as to review the actual projectiles, as well as the actual weapons and things of that sort of the Police Department, it was an amount that was extraordinary, I don't know what it was. I mean he might have said a thousand dollars, and at the time that would have been extraordinary. I just have no idea. I really don't.

Page 19.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. Well, when he gave you that extraordinary projection, did you file a petition with the Court of Common Pleas and say I need extraordinary bucks to satisfy this?

A. Oh, yes, sir. Mr. Fassnacht was -- I do particularly remember being in front of Judge Ribner. Mr. Fassnacht is well known here in Philadelphia and of course he has performed these tests and things of this sort all over the world. During the time I know that I appeared before Judge Ribner I had asked for additional funds. And I know there was a prolonged discussion. And I was told when I got the extra money that's all I was going to get. And again, I think originally 150 and whatever the extra amount was, that was it.

So I mean I was doing enough things in vain without having to go back to the Court again to ask for something in vain. I mean time was limited. I knew I wasn't going to get anymore money, why go back again.

Q. Because you are so successful at that time and

Page 20.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

you are a lawyer, and you know everything in life is negotiable in life, don't you, Mr. Jackson?

A. Yeah, sometimes in life you have to draw a line. Perhaps I drew the line too soon.

Q. Maybe you didn't. Because on the stand yesterday you said we got less, we were operating on a shoestring budget, we received less than $800 for his defense?

A. Yeah, I think that figure was actually lower by looking at the petition.

Q. By looking at the petition, it looks like we are getting to twice that much and we are not exhausting all the experts?

A. I have to look at the petition. It's been 12, 13 years since I have seen that document, I have no idea what is going on.

Q. Do you think that the recorded transcripts of your words uttered in 1981 would be more accurate than your 13-year-old memory stated here today?

A. About how much I received?

Q. About everything involved in this case.

A. Generally speaking, I would say that's true. It doesn't necessarily have to be true. You would have to give me a specific example.

Q. Is it a fact that after you talked

Page 21.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

preliminarily with Mr. Fassnacht, that you didn't have anymore discussions with him, not because his fee was extraordinary, but because Mr. Jamal was then acting as his own lawyer and he was going to and told you that he was going to make determinations and talk to these experts?

A. Oh, no. Even if he was his own lawyer, why wouldn't he want me to consult with the expert? I mean he couldn't do it. I mean the answer is no.

Q. I would like to direct your attention, sir, to the notes of testimony from June the 7th, 1982 --

-- at page 86, Counsel --

-- and whenever you would like me to give you a copy of the transcript.

A. Sure.

Q. Wherein you stated, based upon request from Mr. Jackson, I'm sorry, from Mr. McGill, who protested in this fashion to you. Wow, you mentioned George Fassnacht. I have not received any reports at all, Judge. So I would like the Court to order if there is a report or will be a report and he is going to be a witness, I would like the Court to order that I get Mr. Fassnacht's report by this Friday, since I gave all my discovery material months ago. He goes on to state: I want to make sure that I have all the facts correct because you protested that Mr. Fassnacht didn't get any money. He says there was some money allotted for a ballistician.

Page 22.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

And then you say yes, $350.

He then says well, let's have the report.

You say I haven't gotten the report, up to this point I have no report, written or oral. Mr. Jamal has never spoken to Mr. Fassnacht, through no fault of his own. So there is nothing to provide.

Mr. McGill: He -- meaning Fassnacht -- was engaged three months ago.

Mr. Jackson: No, he was not, because as you know, the Court has never paid him his money.

Mr. McGill: From Judge Ribner you got $350 to pay for that expert, did you not. The Court ordered that.

Mr. Jackson: Yes, you're right.

Mr. McGill: The Court ordered that.

Mr. Jackson: That's what he said he would do. Since that time I have not spoken to him -- meaning Mr. Fassnacht -- because now Mr. Jamal is Counsel, I haven't talked to him.

Does that mean that after Mr. Jamal became his own attorney you ceased any negotiations with Mr. Fassnacht and left it to Mr. Jamal? Because you mentioned twice during this conversation that Mr. Jamal had not spoken to him, as if that meant something.

Page 23.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. Spoke to Mr. Fassnacht after that. I spoke to him before that when I had to get the money, when the Court approved the $350. Mr. Fassnacht would not perform, I had to pay the money out of my pocket and received it after the money was received from the Court. As I had to do in a number of instances.

But in any event, I had spoke to Mr. Fassnacht whenever it was, when he said three months prior to that, whatever time it was. Sure I did. I went up to his, to his home. This was during the trial. At that time I was Mr. Jamal's lawyer.

Q. So basically this man did not testify on behalf of Mr. Jamal?

A. No, sir.

Q. He did not look at one single revolver?

A. No, sir.

Q. He did not look at one fragment of a bullet?

A. No, sir.

Q. He did not test fire one weapon?

A. No, sir.

Q. He did not inspect any physical evidence by

Page 24.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

way of clothing, gunshot primer residue, whatever you --

A. No, sir.

Q. And you paid him 350 bucks?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Nice job if you can get it?

A. Well, I think it was cheap at that price. If you know the ballistics. The information he gave me was invaluable during the cross-examination of the witness, it was well worth it.

Q. It was well worth it?

A. Yes.

Q. In fact, he did advise you and consult with you and give you his expertise?

A. I said that, yes.

Q. And he directed you to areas that he thought were ripe for exploitation or attack by you?

A. Yes, sir. It all just made it all the more clear it would have been so much better if I had him to conduct an independent test and perform some other examinations. Couldn't do it. Couldn't do it.

Q. Certainly in the best of all worlds it is always nice to have more?

A. Yes, I guess that's what it is.

Q. But when you coupled his expertise and his advice to you -- and he is a world-renowned expert, is he not?

Page 25.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you coupled that with your experience as an evidence technician and knowing what of necessity is done and should be done, that in fact gave you more of an edge than the average lawyer would have because of your expertise coupled with his expertise, did it not?

A. Probably did.

Q. And you kept Mr. Larry Paul on the witness stand and cross-examined him on behalf of Mr. Jamal to a fare-thee-well, didn't you?

A. Did the best I could, sir.

Q. Now, you said yesterday, sir, that you couldn't hire a pathologist and you contacted and attempted to solicit at least six of these people to give you an expert medical opinion beyond a reasonable doubt of medical certainty on behalf of Mr. Jamal; is that correct, sir?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Name two of them?

A. I couldn't name one of them, I couldn't actually even name the one I talked to.

Q. How do you know you actually talked to anybody?

A. Because I said so.

Q. How about the doctor in Pittsburgh that you contacted who said I will give you an opinion -- much like Mr. Fassnacht, I might add -- I won't come and testify for you, I won't look at any physical remains of Mr. Faulkner, I won't come in to Philadelphia, but I will look at all the information you provide me, pathology report, a toxicology report, ballistics reports, and I will give you an opinion by phone: You stated that yesterday?

A. Yep, that's essentially it, yeah.

Q. And what was his name?

A. I have no idea at all.

Q. Well, did you take him or her up on that offer?

A. Yeah, I mean I mailed the materials to him. So I mean his name would be in the file. I have no idea, I just don't recall the name, sir.

Q. Well, the name is not important.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You in fact, after having mailed those reports to him --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- had further contact with him and solicited and received his expert opinion, did you not?

A. Yes, sir, based on the documents that I sent him, I had a telephone discussion with him. And, generally speaking, the discussion just reviewed what was in the reports. And I don't recall that there was anything in our discussion that was particularly noteworthy. Since, again, he was reviewing old documents and not the actual specimens and things of that sort. As far as I know, the information perhaps turned out to be not as significant as I would have wanted it to be.

Q. Merely reviewed the documents. What do you mean, he wrote you a letter and called you up and said you sent me items one, two, three, four and five, thank you very much, I'll take 350 bucks?

A. No.

Q. What do you mean by review?

A. I guess he looked them over and reviewed it. You know, looked at the pages, read them. I don't know if he did any comparison. I don't know what a pathologist does with information like that. Whatever those guys do.

Q. You do too, Mr. Jackson?

A. I don't know what he does with the report.

Q. Well, you know he reads it, for one thing?

Page 28.

A. Yeah, I said it, and you questioned what I meant. I don't know what other word to give you.

Q. Tell us what opinion did he give you, did he tell you?

A. He gave me nothing other than response to a telephone call.

Q. Did he tell you that Police Officer Faulkner was not dead?

A. I don't think he said that.

Q. Did he tell you that the cause of death was not a gunshot wound?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did he tell you that in fact a bullet was not taken from the brain of Officer Faulkner?

A. No, sir.

Q. What did you expect him to say even if he had agreed to testify for you with any reasonable degree of medical certainty?

A. Mr. Grant, that's why I hired a pathologist. Because I am not a pathologist, I don't know what he was going to tell me. Pathologists do their pathology thing, I don't know.

Q. How much did you pay him?

MR. GRANT: Indicating for the record Mr. Jackson is reviewing his fee petition filed with the Court.

Page 29.

(Pause.)

THE WITNESS: I assumed it was $150. It is not recorded on the petition that I filed with the Court.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. But you do recall having paid the man for his services?

A. Yes, sir. I don't know whether it was 150 of the -- I think it was about 150. Whatever the Court approved, whatever the amount was that was approved, that's the amount that I paid him. And again, I had to do the same thing with him as I had done in other instances: I had to pay him the money then. I think it was $150, Mr. Grant.

Q. Okay. So now we are up around what? Let me see. 450, 350, that's 800, photographer, Fassnacht. We got 450 for the investigator. That's around 1,200. Now we have 150 for the pathologist so we are up around 1,400. Did you retain the services of, that you paid for, of any other experts in your pursuit of a defense for Mr. Jamal?

A. I don't think so. I don't...

Q. When I say did you pay for: Did the Court of Common Pleas, did the Citizens of Philadelphia pay

Page 30.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

for any other experts?

A. No. According to this petition, Citizens of Philadelphia paid 562 for an investigator, $400 for a photographer, and 350 for a ballistician, and that was it.

Q. So the investigator got nearly $600 now?

A. Yep, that's what it looks like.

Q. And that doesn't include what if any retainers he received -- and I am referring to this letter you sent to Mr. Steven Collins -- that was not counting if he received any retainers from the Mumia Abu-Jamal Defense Fund?

A. I could only tell you what this document reflects. I have no idea what he got from anybody else.

Q. Now, you testified on direct examination, Mr. Jackson, that in addition to making a request for additional monies for experts, you also petitioned the Court for the services of another lawyer to help you, counsel, associate --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was denied, you stated; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you explain this statement made by you on

Page 31.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

June 22nd, 1982? Page 5.022. Quote, Your Honor --

MR. WEINGLASS: I'm sorry, give that cite.

MR. GRANT: 6-22-82. Page 5.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Your Honor, Jonathan Black, a member of the Bar, is going to assist me in further cross-examination. I will continue to do the questioning, Mr. Black is going to assist me in some other matters.

Now, you said that from that table right there, and he was with you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So my question is: The same person that you petitioned to assist you, perhaps without money, but he was assisting you; is that correct?

A. That day.

Q. Oh, that one day he was here?

A. That one day, sir. Mr. Black has been a life-long friend, high school, college, law school together. We were partners. Mr. Black assisted me that one day.

Q. I see. So your request that he assist you by way of your petition was not in fact denied, what was denied was Mr. Jamal's right to have two lawyers work for him at the City's expense?

Page 32.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. When I filed the petition it had nothing to do with Mr. Black. Mr. Black didn't take any Court appointments anyway. So it wasn't for him. I filed a petition for the services of another lawyer. I didn't tell them anymore about it.

Q. And he gave it to you?

A. No, the Court did not give me any help. The request to the Court was made prior to the date Black, Black came in and assisted me during the trial. The request for additional counsel was made before trial.

Q. I know, but in fact Mr. Black did come in and assist you during the trial?

A. That one day, yes, sir, yes, sir.

Q. So June 3rd when you informed the Court that the Defendant was out an investigator or something, or ballistician, and no funds were made available, by your very fee petition that statement was not true, was it?

A. No, that -- I'm sure I wasn't trying to mislead this Court. I am sure this Court, I asked Judge Sabo and Judge Ribner a number of times for money. So if I said that there were no funds, that was just a slip; it was no secret that I got whatever

Page 33.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

I got.

Q. And which Judge is the one that gave you these additional increments of money? Judge Sabo? Judge Ribner? Judge Ribner was the calendar Judge, Judge Sabo was the trial Judge.

A. I. . .

Q. It was Judge Sabo, wasn't it?

A. It may have been, sir, I just -- it may have been. Because I think in fact when I did go back -- and that was part of the problem, I filed the original petitions with Judge Ribner. When I asked for additional amounts he said see the trial judge. Well, who is the trial judge? In the beginning there was no trial judge. And then after awhile he said well see the trial judge and it was Judge Sabo. And then we had to, I think it was three weeks after we were assigned, it took about three or four weeks before we even got to Judge Sabo. So, well...

Q. So you could say, based on yesterday's testimony, in which you stated after my initial request Judge Ribner put it off on Judge Sabo --

A. Yeah, I think there may have been one or two -- I think all of the requests for funds, the additional amounts for funds were sent to Judge Sabo. I think.

Page 34.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

MR. GRANT: Okay. If I may, Your Honor, I would request that the fee petition submitted by Counsel be marked as Commonwealth Exhibit number 4 for the purposes of this Post-Conviction Relief Act hearing.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I am going to object to this. First the Court facilitated the cross-examination by the Commonwealth without even being requested by Commonwealth Counsel, the Court on it's own brought in an exhibit to help the Commonwealth. Now this petition for fees is a matter that should not be presented publicly because it is a petition that an attorney files with the court in order to obtain reimbursement for expenses and his fee. So I believe this petition ought to be protected by the Court. I don't think it was appropriate to bring it here in the first place.

THE COURT: You are saying it's not public property?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, exactly.

THE COURT: I disagree. It is public property.

I just wanted to correct the record: I only gave it to Mr. Jackson because I saw he was having difficulty remembering what the fees were. How could he remember 13 years ago. So I gave it to him as an assistance.

Page 35.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

MR. WEINGLASS: Exactly. But this is what happens all too often here. The Court brings in a document to assist the witness, then the document is given to the prosecution.

THE COURT: I gave it to both of you. Since you asked for it.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yeah, but we hadn't requested it and we are not doing the cross-examination. You gave it as an aid to the party who is doing the cross-examination, who is the Commonwealth. After that happened --

THE COURT: I gave it, I gave it to the witness.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT: I didn't give it to the Commonwealth.

MR. WEINGLASS: But now the Commonwealth has taken it from the witness. And now the Commonwealth seeks to make it an exhibit. So the Court started a process.

THE COURT: Well, let me say this: It's already an Exhibit with the Court. Because these are Court records. This is filed with the Court.

MR. WEINGLASS: This is filed with the Court, but as I understand it, Your Honor --

THE COURT: There is no privilege here. No. There is no privilege.

MR. WEINGLASS: In order to preserve the sanctity --

THE COURT: This is no sanctity. These are public funds that are expended. And it's public record.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yeah. But you see, Your Honor, these matters are not ordinarily given to the Commonwealth. Because when you give them these matters, they now know how a defense is structured. They now know of resources that the defense spends. You read this and you know just what calculations were made by a defense side in a trial. What was important, what they spent time on. Now we are going to get --

THE COURT: Wait awhile. Are you saying this is a lie?

MR. WEINGLASS: No, I am not saying that at all. I'm saying it's the truth. But it is a truth that if we have a new trial, will put Mr. Jamal with a disadvantage because now the Commonwealth will see what the defense spends it's money on. And will be able to calculate in our new trial just what the defense strategy will be. This should never be turned over to the Commonwealth without reason. So I object to their being given this document and I object to it being put into evidence.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, if I may: First of all, I don't have to try to speculate and calculate on what defendant lawyers do. Because I was a Federal Public Defender for years. I know what they do, because I do it, I have done it. There is no mystery.

And if it makes Counsel rest any easier, I will only ask that portions be admitted with respect to monies paid for experts to assist Mr. Jamal's defense. Since one of the averments in their Petition is that inadequate funds were made available to these individuals to help Mr. Jamal. Clearly there's no attorney-client privilege anymore. He is saying that lawyer was no good. We have a right to see if in fact that allegation is true. Mr. Jackson is testifying on behalf of them that yeah, you are right, I wasn't no good, I didn't spend the money. And now we are finding out now that he spent adequate sums and more than the average person gets.

I certainly think this is admissible evidence. It is material, it is relevant, and I can't even think of a legal excuse why an objection should be sustained.

THE COURT: All right, it is admitted for the limited purpose that you say, all right.

MR. GRANT: Yes, Your Honor.

(Above-described portion of fee petition was marked Commonwealth's Exhibit C-4 for identification.)

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Now, Mr. Jackson, you said that basically you had a conversation with Mr. Fassnacht and he looked at the documents. And that was the extent of his money, that was before the trial, that was the extent of his time contributed and that was before the trial; correct? You could refer to what's been marked as C-4.

A. I don't think it's any -- no... I know I originally talked to George whenever I filed the petition. I'm assuming that I talked to him when I went up to his home. And again, I think I went up there twice. I am assuming that I did it before trial.

I just don't know, Mr. Grant. I really -- I would assume I did, I just don't know.

Q. Have you practiced civil law?

A. Yes.

Q. You practice criminal law?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have retained experts in both fields?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when you have an expert and the expert is going to testify on your behalf and he is going to assist you and counsel you, the law, the rules of evidence provide that you must turn over his report within a reasonable degree of time, because we don't have trials by ambush, we have trials by discovery; correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And true lawyers, and good lawyers, and these aren't lawyers who are doing anything bad --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- have oral consultations with their experts and have a conversation something like this...

Page 40.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you look at the materials I sent you. Yes, I did. Did you come to any conclusions. Yes, I did. What are they. X. Are they helpful to me. No. Well, I don't need a report. Thank you.

Now, that happens all the time, doesn't it?

A. I guess with some folks it does.

Q. It's happened for you?

A. Not in this instance.

Q. Not in this instance?

A. That's right.

Q. But you were consulting with this man right up to the very day of the penalty hearing, weren't you?

A. Mr. Fassnacht? Up to the penalty stage?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't know why I would be ---

Q. Because, I could tell you why you might be.

A. Let's not speculate.

Q. Okay, let's not speculate. He was operating from a corporation or a company called Keystone State Arms Consultants, was he not?

A. Yeah, I think that's what he calls his company.

Q. And I don't know if yours are marked, and since this is not paginated, I am going to give you my copy, which I have. The old tab mark is on it, if I may. And I would like you to look at your figures as to the dates and times when you had correspondence and consultation with Keystone Arms Consultants (handing).

First one is a letter to you with a bill that says give me 350 bucks, it is from Mr. Fassnacht?

A. Yes, sir, April 2nd.

Q. Okay. Now would you go to the next tab, please. And you will see now an hourly breakdown that you provided the Court as to those times when you consulted with Keystone Arms Consultants; correct?

A. I'm sorry, sir, what is the next?

Q. The tabs are clearly marked in those areas, sir. And red ink is highlighting the entries you made with respect to Keystone.

A. Well, I'm looking for Keystone. You have a lot of tabs that are marked with red.

Q. A lot of Mr. Fassnacht's consultations.

A. Oh.

Q. And they go up until June 30th. You could look that over for yourself and tell me if you agree

Page 42.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

with that?

A. I'm looking at it. Preparation, filing, complaint, police department. That's one of the tabs. I thought they were all about Mr. Fassnacht.

Q. Well --

A. Mr. Grant, I'm looking for it, I am not trying to be -- all right, I'm sorry. Here it is. March 30th, consultation with people and Keystone.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. That's on the 30th of March.

Q. How much time, how many hours did you put in for that payment?

A. For him and the others, 3 point -- 3.5.

Q. March 30th, right?

A. Right. And for him and what, four people?

Q. However, he was first retained and monies made available on January 20th, 1982; correct?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, that was when the Judge, Judge Ribner signed the order granting your fee petition, your petition?

A. Yes, sir. I could go through this again if you want about when the petition was signed and when he was retained. Mr. Grant, I will just refer you to the letter you just gave me. It says he received some money. This is a bill in April so you know he didn't receive the money in January.

Page 43.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. So he had to wait until the end of the trial?

A. Pardon me?

Q. So he did not wait until the end of the trial?

A. No, that is the problem.

Q. When is the next time that you consulted with him, that is Keystone Arms Consultants? We have one day now: March 30th.

(Pause.)

A. June 2nd.

Q. And how many hours did you spend with him?

A. Two hours.

Q. Go to the next tab, please. What date is there?

A. June 30th.

Q. June 30th. Did you know that the trial ended, closing statements were given on July lst?

A. No, I didn't know. I don't recall.

Q. Would you take my word for it?

A. Yeah.

Q. Did you know that June only had 30 days then and only has 30 days now?

A. I'll take your word for that too.

Q. So the next day, that day that the trial was

Page 44.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

over, the day before that you were still talking to Mr. Fassnacht, weren't you, for how many hours in that day?

A. 1.5 hours.

Q. Do you know how many words could be said in seven hours?

A. I know I could say a lot of words: I talk fast.

Q. Does Mr. Fassnacht?

A. No.

Q. So you spent seven hours with him, and you were deciding or consulting and being advised by him and deciding whether or not it may be worth putting him on the stand up until the very day closing arguments were given, isn't that so?

A. Mr. Fassnacht was never going to take the stand, I couldn't afford to put him on the stand.

Q. Okay, all right. So you would admit upon reflection and with your memory being refreshed that your statement to the Court on June 3rd before the trial actually started that you were without experts and no funds were made available was not true?

A. Again I will say say that, yes, and I am sure the Court was aware that if I said no funds were available, I'm sure this Court knew that that wasn't true since this Court had already approved funds, and Judge Ribner. Look, if I said that I was incorrect.

Page 45.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. Mr. Fassnacht also went up and spent some time with the Defendant, didn't he?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you remember requesting from Judge Sabo a Court order to allow Mr. Fassnacht to go up to the cell room or the prison, he didn't like going to the prisons, he preferred to meet with the Defendant in a courtroom, that was denied so then you asked for him to go up to the cell room and an order was in fact given; do you recall that?

A. I don't. I'm not denying that it happened, I just don't remember.

Q. I don't want there to be any question. And I would direct your attention to...

(Pause.)

MR. GRANT: I seem to have lost a document or two.

(Discussion held off the record at this time among Commonwealth's Counsel.)

MR. GRANT: The Court's indulgence, please, Your Honor. I'm sorry.

(Pause.)

BY MR. GRANT:

Page 46.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. Do you have some of my notes up there, Mr. Jackson?

A. These (displaying)? I was trying to get some more of them. Yeah, I have some, ballistics report and --

Q. I will take some of them.

A. (Handing.)

Q. I am going to have to get back to that, I don't know what I did with my documents.

MR. GRANT: I will move along, sir, we will return to that area.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. In your affidavit on page 2, Mr. Jackson -- which was only executed a couple of months ago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. April 17th, I believe you said. I will digress for a moment: I think I found my document. With respect to whether or not Mr. Fassnacht advised Mr. Jamal at the prison, I would like to direct your attention or invite your attention to June lst, 1982, page 99. And thereafter the following day, to June 2nd, 1982, page 2.78 and 79.

Mr. Jackson to the Court: George Fassnacht is a ballistician and he was appointed as a

Page 47.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

ballistician for Mr. Jamal.

I guess that in fact was not true, right, since he really didn't work for Mr. Jamal and do too much, right?

A. Well, I guess the Court appoints -- I don't know whether the Court appointed him or they just appointed a ballistician.

Q. Mr. Jamal had never spoken to him. On the next day, Your Honor, during the lunch period the ballistician by the name of John Fassnacht -- now this is Mr. Jamal speaking -- he is mispronouncing his name but he is talking about the same individual -- wanted to meet with me. The issue is he tried to see me during the lunch hour and he couldn't get in to see me. I need an order from the Court so I could meet him.

The Court: I don't see why you need one. Implying that if he is your expert, Mr. Jackson is working with him, they should let him in. But I will give you one anyway, all right.

And thereafter there was an order in the Quarter Sessions file, which has been marked as Commonwealth Exhibit 1 in this case, verifying that the order was signed. Do you know of any reason why the order was not complied with?

Page 48.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. No. I, I just, I draw a blank on it.

Q. You just have no recollection?

A. No, sir.

Q. Okay. That's fair enough. Now, in your affidavit on page 2, sir, supporting the Post-conviction Relief Act alleged by Counsel Mr. Weinglass, you state either I can not or did not know how to effectively obtain additional funding for experts.

You wrote that, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that's totally untrue, isn't it?

A. I still think it's true.

Q. Well, you got more money than everybody else usually gets for these kinds of things, now why did you say either I could not or did not get more money when you knew Judge Ribner's statement to you was Counsel, I will give you the initial fee, if you need more money and it is a reasonable expense, and you itemize a bill as to how the money is being spent, we will give you more money? Isn't that what he told you?

A. That's what he told me. Sir, I said that was true in the affidavit. That was true then, it is still true today. The fact that I had gotten more money than I had gotten in other cases before doesn't mean it's enough. And the record reflects that I spent seven hours with George Fassnacht and what did he get? 350. And you said that was an exorbitant amount of money. I don't think that it was. This was a trial, as you know, that had 150 statements in it. There was a lot of work to be done. A lot of work. And we are talking about $150 for a pathologist?

Page 49.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. No, I agree with you that seems like a relatively paltry sum.

A. You are talking about, what's the amount for the ballistician? Mr. Grant, I am not going to even argue with these amounts of money. If you think that's enough money for these experts, so be it.

Q. I am not saying that's enough money, I'm saying that your representations were untrue and --

A. No, they weren't, sir. I couldn't get another dime.

Q. Okay.

A. Another dime. Not another dime for anybody. If I could I would have gotten the money, I'm not a fool.

Q. Now, yesterday you said you had to review over 150 witness statements and interviews?

Page 50.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. I think it was about that.

Q. Well, all you had to do was read your own words from the affidavit you submitted in this case and which you looked at yesterday and it is limited to a hundred, so now your work is cut down by 33 percent; do you recall --

A. I don't know whether it was a hundred, a hundred and fifty pages.

Q. Maybe it was 200?

A. Maybe it was 200.

Q. It could have been 500?

A. I don't think it was that many. I don't know how many pages it was, I am talking about how many statements. I don't know. I did not count it. I didn't know I would be required to count them. I didn't count them then, I didn't count them now: Forgive me.

Q. I wasn't counting either but you wrote it down?

A. All right, I approximated. I guessed that.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, the affidavit says over 100, over 100 witness interviews were turned over in discovery. So it's Counsel who is mistaken, not the witness.

MR. GRANT: That's what I said.

Page 51.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

MR. WEINGLASS: Over 100. You said 100.

MR. GRANT: Oh, okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: But throughout this cross-examination Counsel has been shaving the actual record.

THE COURT: Counsel, you have a right to redirect if you want to bring something out.

MR. WEINGLASS: And I appreciate that, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: But Counsel cannot ask a question which misstates the record.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. WEINGLASS: That is fundamental.

THE COURT: Would you ask him the question again.

MR. GRANT: Yes.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. In your statement, your affidavit supporting Mr. Jamal's claims, you state that there were -- I will ask you precisely -- you state that there were in excess, that there were... oh, here it is. Over 100 police interview?

A. At the time that's what I believed the number

Page 52.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

to be.

Q. I shouldn't have said that there were only 100, I should have said there were over 100. What does that mean, l0l? ll0?

A. It could.

Q. My guess was as good as yours, wasn't it?

A. That's it.

Q. All right. You state on your affidavit, page 2, the last paragraph, that because the witnesses' addresses were deleted from the statements that you were given, this resulted in your investigator spending most of his limited budget, nearly $600 by your estimation, searching for a single witness?

A. He spent a lot of time looking for Sandra White.

Q. You said most of his limited budget looking for one-witness?

A. Yes, sir. She never gave the Police Department the correct address. He found out where she lived. And he did visit her a number of times.

Q. Oh, he did.

A. He visited the house, I'm sorry, the house.

Q. So he wasn't looking for her because he knew where she was?

A. Well, first of all it took him a little while

Page 53.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

to find out where she actually lived because she never, out of all those arrests she had -- and I think there might have been 26 arrests -- but she never gave her proper address.

But in any event, when he went to the house she was living she was never there. I would characterize it as looking for her; you characterize it some other way. So be it. She wasn't there.

Q. I am reading your words, Mr. Jackson.

A. I may have misspoke, then. Now, he went to the house looking for her and she wasn't there. That's what he tells me, sir, I wasn't with him.

Q. Well, how much of his time did he spend looking for the house before he found out where she lived?

A. I have no idea.

Q. So he may have found the house the second week he was looking for her?

A. He could have, yeah. I mean you are right, I just don't know.

Q. So most of his time wasn't spent looking for - that person where they lived?

A. Well, I don't know, Mr. Grant.

Q. Well, Mr. Greer says in his affidavit that he located her and there were always two plainclothes

Page 54.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

police standing around protecting her while she prostituted herself on the corner of 12th and Locust?

A. That's where she was working. I am talking about when he went to her house.

Q. If you are an investigator -- and you have been one?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- you assume a lot of poses, and you suggested yesterday that maybe he used the Mumia Abu-Jamal Defense Fund to get access and entre to certain circumstances, so he could investigate this house, or he could just visit her where she works, in the hotel, if she uses a hotel -- he is an investigator, so what are you talking about?

A. You need to ask him. I don't -- fine, you are asking me to tell you why he didn't talk to her. I don't know, sir. He saw her a number of times on the corner working and he didn't talk to her. Why, I don't know.

Q. I am asking you why you wrote down he spent all this time doing this and you don't know what he did, that's all I am asking you?

A. Say it again, sir. I misunderstood.

Q. You made representations about what he did and spent his time on?

Page 55.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. Yes.

Q. And now when I ask you directly what it is you profess ignorance, that's what I am asking you?

A. I am not professing ignorance. I will tell you once again, Mr. Grant, I will tell you once again. Mr. Greer told me that he spent most of his time looking for Cynthia White. Now, I am professing any further ignorance beyond that. I was not specifically there. I can't tell you where and when he looked for her. I know he saw her once at 13th and Locust Street. That's what he told me once. You have the reports, I don't know what else I could tell you.

Q. On May 13th Mr. Jamal became his own lawyer, at least he petitioned the Court to become his own lawyer, and that petition was granted by Judge Ribner.

A. Okay.

Q. Now, from December the 9th of '81 until May 13th, what's that? Five months. Five months. Now, you say in your affidavit, sir, that at the time of trial you were kept busy each evening feverishly reviewing over 100 police interviews as well as abundant materials on forensic and physical evidence, which, you gratuitously add, which had been earlier

Page 56.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

turned over in discovery. And then you --

MR. WEINGLASS: What page are you reading, Counsel?

MR. GRANT: Well, you filed the affidavit, sir. Page 4.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Now, if you were feverishly from night to night pouring over these documents, pouring over these documents preparing yourself for examination, what were you doing for five months and four days prior to that time?

A. You really want me, you really think I know what I was doing?

Q. Well, no, I don't think I know what you were doing, I think you did a lot more than you are admitting here on direct examination. That's why I'm asking you. I think you put substantial work into this case and I could tell by your cross-examination, sir. Now, you tell us what you did?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection, Your Honor.

MR. GRANT: I will withdraw that statement. Move to strike it.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Tell us what you did?

A. Okay, Mr. Grant, as best as I could recall,

Page 57.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

when I was appointed by the Court to represent Mr. Jamal I reviewed the statements, as any lawyer would do. I did not review every statement in this case prior to trial.

Q. When you say review --

A. Read them.

Q. This is a term that we use as lawyers?

A. Okay, I read them.

Q. And usually, basically, is applied to civil law but we do it too. It's like what I did (displaying) with the notes of testimony from this trial: We call it digest and index?

A. Right, I did not do that immediately.

Q. Well, how many times did you read the reports? You must have read each report ten times at least?

A. At least.

Q. Mr. Jackson, you are a thorough lawyer, I have seen you operate, I know you must have read them 10 times, and I am glad you admitted it.

A. Yeah.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, the person conducting the questioning is testifying. That is not allowed.

THE COURT: Mr. Jackson said it is true.

Page 58.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

MR. WEINGLASS: I have seen your work before, I know you are thorough. He is acting as a character witness. That is not permitted. He could ask questions, not make statements.

THE COURT: I understand that.

MR. GRANT: I will proceed, Counsel: The objection is well taken.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. You read each statement at least 10 times, didn't you?

A. Yes, I read the statements over a lot, Mr. Grant.

Q. Mr. Jackson, you had just left an institution where you had worked for three or four years, you had a substantial reputation for being an excellent lawyer litigating against the Police Department of Philadelphia, had you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And now you were going out on your own for the first time? More or less?

A. More or less, yes, sir.

Q. And this case was probably one of the biggest events in the criminal justice system in the City of Philadelphia for a quarter of a century, wouldn't you agree?

Page 59.

A. Indeed it was, sir.

Q. And if you succeeded and did a good job, whether you won or lost, because all lawyers are also businessmen, this could have been an immeasurable boost to your career, couldn't it?

A. I'm sure, I'm sure it could have. But I had a bigger problem. A problem -- go ahead, I'm sorry.

Q. And therefore you had every interest and every incentive to do the best job that you could possibly do?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you determined to do that, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you state, when I became backup Counsel -- this is in your affidavit --

I don't have the page marked here; if I read it you will recognize it, Mr. Weinglass, where it is.

-- you state, when I became backup Counsel, I assumed that my responsibility for trial preparation was over, and hence I abandoned all efforts. What do you mean by that?

A. It means --

MR. WEINGLASS: The proper reading is all efforts at trial preparation. Counsel only reads portions.

Page 60.

MR. GRANT: Isn't that what I just asked him?

MR. WEINGLASS: No, it is the gist of what --

MR. GRANT: No, it is not the gist.

THE COURT: Read it over again, Counsel, please.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. I will ask you it my way.

A. Sure.

Q. This is what I want to ask you. When you became backup Counsel --

A. Right.

Q. -- according to the affidavit you filed with that man two months ago or three months ago, you said in effect, I abandoned all efforts at trial preparation and you assumed your responsibility for doing so was over, did you say that?

A. I did, sir.

MR. GRANT: Mr. Weinglass, would you leave me alone.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. What did you mean by that?

A. Well, just as I said to you yesterday, again, in that never-never land of being backup Counsel, I told you I was just going to sit back with my hands folded (indicating).

Q. You were going to do that when you knew what this meant to both your career and the person you had come to befriend?

A. Sir, when I am backup Counsel it didn't mean much to me at all. I was put in a position I didn't want to be in. I was no good. I wasn't doing myself any good, I wasn't doing him any good.

Q. It didn't stop you from submitting a fee petition, did it?

A. The Court was ordering me to be there. I didn't mean at the present time I didn't want to be there. If they are going to make me be there they are going to pay for it.

Q. But in fact you were advising and consulting him and you were assisting him, and you know there are notations in the record -- have you read any of the record since yesterday?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you intend to read any of the record while you are a witness in this case?

A. I didn't hear you.

Q. Do you intend, do you intend to read any of the record of your performance or the transcripts of these proceedings while you are a witness in this case?

A. If I could get out of it without reading anymore, believe me I will. I don't need to read anymore, trust me.

Q. Let me read something to you.

A. Okay, I figured that was coming.

Q. You then go on to state in your affidavit -- and I am paraphrasing --

MR. WEINGLASS: Beg your pardon.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. I am paraphrasing because I don't really care about the exact wording, Mr. Jackson, I am concerned about the gist.

MR. WEINGLASS: If the affiant gave a sworn statement, if that affidavit is true, I believe you have to give him the precise statement of the words, otherwise it is not proper impeachment.

MR. GRANT: Could Counsel cite some law for that proposition?

MR. WEINGLASS: You can't paraphrase and say you are impeaching at the same time.

MR. GRANT: This is Mr. Weinglass on evidence, Judge. I never heard this rule.

MR. WEINGLASS: Let the record reflect that there was a loud laughter from the right side of the Courtroom and no admonishments from this Court. This Court only admonishes the left side of the Courtroom. But when the friends of the Fraternal Order of the Police laugh, the Court laughs with them, without comment. I think the record should reflect that. It's happened before.

THE COURT: It is not the exact record. There was an outburst from the right side. And I will caution them.

Please; no comments.

Your own client has been spotted laughing at this. Because I have been watching him. I have been watching you.

MR. WEINGLASS: And he smiles and he laughs with his supporters, but they get an admonishing. But when the persons on the other side of the Court make --

THE COURT: The admonishing is when they give a loud disruption of the proceedings.

MR. WEINGLASS: There was a loud laughter in this Courtroom. Much louder than

Page 64.

I've heard from the other side.

THE COURT: All right, I am admonishing everybody. No laughing, no speaking out, no nothing.

And that goes for you too, Mr. Weinglass.

MR. GRANT: May I proceed, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Sure.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. You further state words to the effect of the Defendant had at some point authorized me to assume his role...

A. Thanks. I'm sorry.

Q. It's all right. The Defendant authorized me to assume his role for the limited purpose of voir dire?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And would it be fair to say that that means Mr. Jamal said to you okay, Jackson, you can finish asking these Jurors questions so we could pick a Jury, but I want you to know that after that I'm the lawyer again?

A. That's right.

Q. That's what it means to you?

A. Yes, sir.

Page 65.

Q. Well, where does Mr. Jamal get the authorization to dictate the rules of your profession and mine, and to tell you what your duties are going to be over and above the Courts that control your behavior?

A. I believe since he got it from Judge Sabo.

Q. Oh, he did?

A. Yes.

Q. Let me refer you to page 6-28. I'm sorry, June 28, 1982, page 28.4.

MR. GRANT: And this is a quote, Mr. Weinglass.

MR. WEINGLASS: Could I have just one moment. What was the page?

MR. GRANT: Six -- I'm sorry, page 28.4. Four-zero, 40. I am not going to waste time.

MR. WEINGLASS: I appreciate that. It is not the first time.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. The Court: I told you initially that when I appointed you as Counsel -- speaking to you, Mr. Jackson -- and this is in response to your belief that Judge Sabo told Mr. Jamal oh, it is only going to be for this limited time period -- I told you initially when I appointed you as Counsel once you became Counsel you were going to follow this thing all the way through. I think it's only fair that the continuity of the representation of this Defendant include not only the opening remarks, since you are going to be the one that has to let the Jury know what you intend to prove, and the closing remarks, as to your arguments as to what you have proven, or as to what the evidence shows.

Now, do you recall the Judge having admonished you when you were trying to defer to Mr. Jamal and allow him to be Counsel despite your appointment and despite the Supreme Court's order to you?

A. Mr. Grant, you know, I don't remember that specifically. And my recollection is that when Mr. Jamal was removed as, removed from representing himself, it was, I was only to resume or take his place for the completion of the voir dire and Mr. Jamal would then be returned to represent himself. I don't, now, I don't know, I just didn't make this up out of the air. That was my understanding. If I misunderstood the Court, fine. But that was clearly, clearly my understanding, that Mr. Jamal would be representing himself at the beginning of this trial.

Page 67.

I thought he did.

Q. Okay. Well, he was removed from that representation on June the 7th. And the trial didn't take place, witnesses were not actually called until June the 19th, so in addition to the five months you had, and --

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection: That is a misstatement of the record. What the Court did on June 7th is, as the record reveals, was not to remove Mr. Jamal as his own Counsel. The Court exercised it's prerogative under the local rule to take over the voir dire, which it can do with any attorney. Mr. Jamal remained as Counsel while the Court took over the voir dire. Mr. Jamal was not removed as Counsel until June 18th.

MR. GRANT: Oh. Thank you, Mr. Weinglass. My mistake.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. For the five months, minus those 11 days Mr. Weinglass so helpfully provided for me --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- you had prepared that case as if you were going to be the lawyer and the only thing changed is that there was a two-week hiatus in your taking that role and running with it? In other words, from the time you got this case up until the time of trial, there were only two weeks when you didn't think you were going to be the lawyer, right?

A. Excuse me. That may have been it. I prepared the case with the intention of being Mr. Jamal's lawyer, the answer is yes.

Q. Okay. And you said in your affidavit nevertheless, on page 4, with the Jury sequestered -- and this is a quote, by the way -- with the Jury sequestered and opening arguments scheduled to begin, I had no choice but to proceed even though unprepared -- and I emphasize that -- for trial; you said that, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall your statements on June 26th, 1982 -- pages 136 through 137 -- as to your preparedness for trial? Quote, as far as I'm concerned -- speaking to the Court -- I have an idea of what my opening remark would be to the Jury, and that would include generally a list of some witnesses, not necessarily their names, but the types of witnesses as to what they would say, as well as character witnesses. You continued. Of course, Mr. Jamal solely and exclusively knows the character witnesses, but he would generally and normally call, and I don't know. I of course have some concern about telling the Jury what I am going to present as to character, that I am going to present character witnesses, when in fact he -- Mr. Jamal -- may later on decide that those character witnesses should not appear. And then you say, I am suggesting that perhaps I shouldn't say it in the opening remark. But I know that my training and experience suggests that this would be a good time to let the Jury know that you have somebody who is going to come in and say that a person's reputation is generally good for veracity -- which means truth telling -- and things of that sort. Now, it may be somewhat, it may be a somewhat premature concern, but I just wanted the record to reflect I do have a strategic problem with regard to what is in my opening remarks, and that it may be compromised somewhat by the Defendant at a later time.

Would it be fair to capsulize that statement as I'm ready to go to trial and give my opening and I know what I would say, and what my experience dictates I should say, but I think Mr. Jamal is going to undercut me?

A. No, I don't remember the specific context in that matter. Correct me if I am wrong, I thought Mr. Jamal was going to return as his own Counsel. I didn't know whether I was making the opening remark or him. I don't know who was lawyer. That's the way I remember it. And I am saying I have an idea of what I would say to the Jury at that point, and again you could give me the context, I don't think I knew what my role was. I think that was the complaint.

Q. Let me give you the context.

A. Okay.

Q. That same day, page 136 and 137. The Court was asking if both sides are ready to proceed.

A. Okay.

Q. You say, Mr. Jamal is currently speaking with Janet Africa relevant to my comment to him that I am now required to present an opening remark. And you said I am required, so you knew that it was you who was going to give the opening, did you not?

A. Yeah, I think I just found out. That was the problem.

Q. In my opening remark I indicated to him that only generally am I required to indicate to the Jury what I intend to prove. And generally the witnesses or types of witnesses that I would intend to call. Mr. Jamal indicated that he wanted to speak to Janet

Page 71.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Africa before commenting further with me.

Meaning I'll let you know if I agree or disagree with you making an opening; was that fair to say?

A. Well, I don't think so, Mr. Grant.

Q. Okay.

A. As I recall, Mr. Jamal, that day Mr. Jamal was going to make an opening remark to the Jury, or that was, that was what we were planning. All of a sudden I was told I had to do it. I had not planned it. So he took the opportunity to talk to Janet Africa for whatever reason he wanted to. He was his own Counsel at that point. And then all of a sudden I was put in that position to make the opening remark and do all those things. And you said maybe it was strategy. I haven't, I knew who the witnesses were but, no, I didn't know who his character witnesses were. I haven't known this man all my life. You call it strategy if you want. I couldn't call character witnesses for you other than perhaps myself. I just don't know who they are.

Q. That is precisely the problem with the character witnesses. Because do you know Ruth Ballard?

A. Pardon?

Page 72.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. Do you know a Mrs. Ruth Ballard?

A. Yes, I think -- I know that name. I think I know her.

Q. When did you became familiar with her name?

A. I think I had -- oh, no, no, no. I heard the name. She testified in the hearing, that's where I heard the name.

Q. You didn't know her from a can of paint until yesterday?

A. Yeah.

Q. And so you wouldn't call that person as a character witness because you don't even know the person exists on this planet until they come to you and say I am a character witness; correct?

A. Or a client tells me.

Q. Okay.

A. Yeah.

Q. Now, that statement that you made to the Court about I'm ready to go on with my opening, I'm fully prepared except for the problem Mr. Jamal is causing me, was made on June 26th. June 19th is one week prior to that. And on page 7 and 8 you say, apparently again regarding your preparedness to act as trial Counsel, all right, may it please the Court, I would also like to bring to the Court's attention that I am at this very moment prepared to defend Mr. Jamal to the best of my ability. I will also bring to the Court's attention that unless and until Mr. Jamal specifically indicates to me that that it will be his strategy for me not to participate, or in other words to remain silent, with regard to the presentation of witnesses and facts, until or unless that is done, and placed on the record, I will defend Mr. Jamal in the traditional manner of an attorney and I ask then that the trial begin.

Page 73.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Does that tell you that you were prepared?

A. It tells me I thought I was prepared for the trial to begin. At that time, to say yes at that point, I was then made a real lawyer again. And I had reviewed the documents. But, and I think you know, it is one thing to prepare for a case that you may have some participation in. It is another thing to prepare for a case where you are actually conducting the examination. Up until that time, if Mr. Jamal was his own lawyer, I'm, I'm not, I can't substitute my strategy, my views for his. I mean that's just common, that's just common sense.

And I am saying yes, I read the statements. Of course I would read them again. If the Court asks me if I read them, well, I'm sure, I'm ready, let's get it on. Because understand that you make the opening remarks the Commonwealth puts. So you know you do have some time to prepare on a daily basis.

Page 74.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

But, Mr. Grant, I think clearly when Mr. Jamal was his lawyer, he was his lawyer. I was not his lawyer. I was a backup lawyer. And again, when I'm a backup lawyer, I don't do a thing.

Q. When you weren't his lawyer, he was still his lawyer?

A. That isn't true. When I was his -- look, I have some integrity, I have some self-respect. If I'm his lawyer, I'm his lawyer.

Q. Okay. Would it be fair to say, then, that you may have been doing the talking but Mr. Jamal controlled, directed and ordered you, an attorney at the Bar of this Court, when and how to proceed?

A. No, sir. I mean this was, there were things that I consulted with Mr. Jamal as I would with any client. Any client can direct me in certain instances. When I acted as his lawyer, contrary to what you and perhaps any other person might believe, I was his lawyer.

Q. Okay. July lst, 1982. Page 32. Mr. Jackson.

Page 75.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Regarding the last-minute attempt to subpoena Police Officer Gary Wakshul -- these statements are made to the Court -- we have now found there is another police officer that we would like to testify.

Now, you have been his lawyer now since -- July 1st; this is the day they are going to give closing arguments -- you have been his lawyer throughout the trial at this point?

A. Right.

Q. We have now found that there is another police officer that we would like to have testify. There was some discussion. Mr. McGill just advises me that he is not present today and I would ask the Court that he be called in.

The Judge says, you knew this. You knew about this before, I am not going to hold up this trial.

You say I didn't.

The Court says what do you mean you didn't. Didn't you get statements regarding these detectives months and months ago.

You say absolutely Judge. But then you say, I was forced to try and remember everything that everybody said and I couldn't do it.

And that sounds like a strange comment

Page 76.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

but I think the context in which it was said will help you understand the implication.

Mr. McGill then states, I object to this. I think if Mr. Jamal, the Defendant in this case, decides he is not going to give statements until the very last minute to his attorney, that's on him. I don't see any reason why this trial should be delayed.

And then at page 39 you say, regarding not knowing who your next witness will be, I told him -- Mr. Jamal, you are implying -- when we were at sidebar if there were any others to let me know.

And the Court says to the Defendant: You should have told Mr. Jackson you wanted him from the beginning of the trial. And the Defendant states I told him at the motion to suppress and he didn't show up. Meaning Mr. Wakshul.

Do you recall that conversation?

A. I thought you were saying this was some other police officer. Okay. Now, all right.

Q. Gary Wakshul: The person you wanted on the last day of trial?

A. Yeah, okay, right.

Q. Now the Defendant --

A. Right.

Page 77.

Q. -- at the Bar of the Court, talking to the Judge, and you are saying, I told him before to tell me if he wants anymore witnesses.

And he said: I told you I wanted some more witnesses and I told you back at the motion to suppress that I wanted that guy and he never showed up.

Do you recall that conversation?

A. I take all the responsibility for not calling that officer.

Q. That is the point: You are taking the responsibility?

A. It is my fault. How could it be his fault?

Q. How could you tell me that you didn't do something when what you had to do was go into this person's mind and find out what they wanted to do?

A. No. I don't understand.

Q. Let me read it again to you, maybe it will make it clear to you.

A. All right.

MR. WEINGLASS: What page?

MR. GRANT: Same pages.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. The Judge said to you, come on, Mr. Jackson, you have been in my room before, I know you're good.

Page 78.

You should have told me this before. You should have told the D.A. before. If you wanted that cop you should have had him in here before.

You said no, Judge, I couldn't have done it before.

And he said why not, and you say, basically, I told the Defendant when we were at sidebar if there were any others -- meaning police officers or witnesses -- to let me know.

And then --

A. But Mr. Grant.

Q. -- the Court says to the Defendant, why didn't you tell him from the beginning of the trial.

Now, how are you claiming -- oh, I understand what you are saying.

A. No, you don't.

Q. How are you claiming responsibility for that?

A. Okay. You said there's something in there that somebody told me something in the motion to suppress. I think Mr. Jamal represented himself in the motion to suppress.

Q. Yes, he did.

A. So how could the man be responsible in the motion to suppress to produce the witness? That's the context of that statement. If you let me finish

I'11 answer your question, sir.

The statement suggests that I was told during the motion to suppress to produce evidence. I wasn't the lawyer then. So it doesn't make sense then, it doesn't make sense now.

Q. Don't get excited, because that statement that he made was a lie. And I am going to reveal it right now.

A. Well, I don't know. You say it's a lie.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I ask that it be stricken.

MR. GRANT: Well.

MR. WEINGLASS: Counsel again is not only testifying, he is giving summations.

MR. GRANT: I said I am going to show it. And if I may be allowed to continue, subject to his motion to strike, which may be granted if I don't prove what I am saying, then I think it is a good motion. I think I should be allowed to proceed.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. No, I am not saying, Mr. Jackson, that you had a responsibility to bring somebody in at the motion to suppress. What I am saying to you is on that very last day of trial, you are coming in here today in 1995 saying it's my fault, Judge, I should have got that witness in. You know good and well that means I was ineffective as a lawyer, and that means maybe he gets a new trial, and you know in fact that that's not true and you are in here doing it for him?

Page 80.

A. Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection to the form: Argumentative.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Isn't that so?

MR. WEINGLASS: Compound.

THE COURT: He said isn't that so. Just a minute.

THE WITNESS: I'm sorry.

MR. WEINGLASS: Could I have a ruling on my objection?

THE COURT: Overruled.

MR. WEINGLASS: Overruled?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: Thank you.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Isn't that what you are doing?

A. I'm answering, I'm answering the question truthfully. It was not Mr. Jamal's responsibility to bring in the witness. It's my responsibility. I'm the lawyer.

Q. Well, let me suggest to you that you as a lawyer wouldn't have brought that witness in.

A. All right, Mr. Grant, I know you made some, some allusions to Mr. Wakshul yesterday about some testimony I never knew anything about. Let me just give you the context of this officer. I did not conduct the motion to suppress. During the motion to suppress, I don't know why Wakshul would not have been called because -- I don't know.

Q. What?

A. I do not know why he would not have been called. Since this was, what, three, four witnesses who said they heard Mr. Jamal confess. If, again, Wakshul was with him for the entire length of time and that it seemed Mr. Jamal remained silent, then he would have been presented as a witness. Mr. Jamal conducted that motion to suppress. And I am not going to compare Mr. Jamal's efforts with regard to legally-trained attorneys. However, I did not have that same hands-on familiarity with the witnesses and how they were called and things of that sort.

I don't know, it may have been during the motion to suppress Mr. Jamal had Mr. Wakshul's statement, I don't recall. He conducted the motion to suppress. As I said to you before, there were some statements that I made copies of, some copies of statements I gave to him. But certainly, why wouldn't I call the witness if I knew?

Q. Let me tell you why you might not want to call the witness, sir.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. First of all, you made a claim that I never knew about that officer prior to that date and I didn't know about any statements that he may have given I guess to the Internal Affairs Bureau. That is not true, is it?

A. Yeah, I still haven't seen the statement to the Internal Affairs Bureau.

Q. What?

A. I don't think I've ever seen it, have I?

MR. GRANT: May this be marked as Commonwealth Exhibit number 5 for identification, please, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. GRANT: This purports to be an April 12th, 1982 letter to Mr. Jackson from the prosecutor in this case: Joseph McGill.

THE COURT: All right.

Page 83.

(Letter was marked Commonwealth's Exhibit C-5 for identification.)

MR. GRANT: Yes, Counsel, I believe -- has Counsel seen it?

THE COURT OFFICER: (Handing).

(Pause.)

MR. GRANT: The document that Counsel, all of them, are perusing is a document that they received also in discovery so it is not a mystery.

THE COURT OFFICER: Show it to the witness, Mr. Grant?

MR. GRANT: Yes, please. For the record: Mr. Jackson appears to be perusing the document C-5.

THE WITNESS: Okay, I have read the document, sir.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Now would you read that into the record, sir?

A. Sure. It is dated April 12th, 1982. It is directed to me. Dear Mr. Jackson: Please, be advised that the staff inspector's entire file has been duplicated and delivered to your office pursuant to Judge Ribner's order. You may set a date and time to hear a tape recording of one witness' statement in our office. Since we are voluntarily turning over this discovery to you, we expect you to provide us with names, addresses, and statements of any witnesses you will call at trial. If you fail to provide us with same we will assume that none exist. If you seek to introduce such evidence at trial, we will assert your failure to notify us of such evidence as a bar to it's admission. Signed, Joseph McGill.

Q. Now, that was two months before the trial began in this case?

A. That's right.

Q. And you claim that you didn't receive any statement from Gary Wakshul; correct?

A. All right, I don't remember. I don't remember.

Q. Well, say you don't remember, don't say you didn't get it.

A. I will tell you what I do remember. I remember a statement from Gary Wakshul where he said I was with him and he never said a word. I remember that, specifically. I don't remember ever hearing any other words. If you don't want me to say I don't remember, I do remember that.

Q. Okay. And you said yesterday on direct that, or on cross, that you wouldn't know which of his statements were given for the Homicide investigation and which were given for the Internal Affairs investigation unless you saw some indication up in the upper corner that this was from a special investigation or something like that?

A. Yeah, because you told me there were two statements, I only remember one. I only remember one statement. You said there were two statements, and you said well, don't you know that there was a simultaneous investigation conducted by the Internal Affairs of the Police Department. The only way that I would know is because they indicate who they are doing the examination. I only remember one statement.

Q. Well, that is a lot different than saying you didn't remember more than one statement, isn't it?

A. Well, it may be, but in my mind, if I remembered one, I would remember the other. But yes, it is a big difference.

MR. GRANT: I'll say. And I would like this marked as Commonwealth Exhibit 6, please. And I'm sorry to keep running you around.

THE COURT OFFICER: No problem. Keep me in shape.

Page 86.

(Police interview was marked Commonwealth's Exhibit C-6 for identification.)

THE COURT OFFICER: (Handing).

(Pause.)

MR. GRANT: This document also was turned over to Counsel previously, Your Honor.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time.)

THE COURT OFFICER: Mr. Grant, show it to the witness?

MR. GRANT: Yes, please.

THE WITNESS: Thank you, sir.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. You have been presented with a document, sir, consists of approximately six pages. And it's dated February llth, 1982, four months before the trial began. Do you see the first question that's on that document, sir, posed by Mr. Goldberg, who is a special investigator?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What does, don't give me the answer, just what does the question read, read that into the record?

A. Officer Wakshul, I am staff inspector Frank Goldberg and this is Lieutenant Daniel -- I can't.

Q. Looks like Sitella.

Page 87.

A. Okay. Sitella.

Q. S-A-T-T-E-L-O-E-L-E? I am not sure.

A. Of the Internal Affairs Bureau. I am going to take down what you say directly on the typewriter. Do you understand.

Q. Now, sir, where it says we are questioning you concerning -- and you probably have seen hundreds of these reports: These are typical 75 dash four-eight-three forms from the Detective bureau -- what does it say we are questioning you concerning?

A. Oh, I'm sorry.

Q. It's up there, it's right above --

A. Yeah.

Q. Right above what you just read.

A. Your copy might be better. Allegations... initiated by Anthony Jackson, an attorney representing Mumia Abu-Jamal, Wesley Cook, indicating that police officers --

Q. Abused his client on 12-9-81?

A. Okay. Yeah.

Q. Now, they are basically responding to your complaint and they are interviewing all the people that may be responsible for any abuse suffered by Mr. Jamal, that's their job and that's what you intended for them to do when writing that complaint, right?

Page 88.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was four months before the trial, and you read a letter from Mr. McGill saying I'm turning over the entire file of the Inspection Bureau's investigation to you?

A. Mr. McGill wrote it to me?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you asked why would I not put this man on at trial. Do you see that yellow sticker on that file C-6 there, sir?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Go to page 3, please.

You indicated earlier that you heard the male, you recall the statement that the male made no comment, you recall that, and that would be great to put him on to prove that these other police officers and security guards who worked at Thomas Jefferson were liars: I mean tactically that's what a good lawyer would do?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What would a good lawyer do if he knew that there was another statement that read, what I am going to ask you to read into the record, start at the question at the top of page 3 and read down to the bottom, or read down to the next question, please, into the record, if you can't read it out?

A. I'm sorry, sir. Police Officer Gary Wakshul, okay, question: Upon carrying him --

Q. Upon carrying him, meaning Jamal?

A. -- into the emergency room, where did you put him.

When we entered the hospital we placed him on the floor, somewhat inside the second set of electric doors which led into -- I don't know what that word is.

Q. The emergency room?

A. Oh, emergency room.

Q. Let me do it this way, Mr. Jackson.

A. Sure.

Q. Let me read it and you follow along and you tell me if I'm, if it seems to be correct. Question: Upon carrying him into the emergency room where did you put him. Meaning Mr. Jamal.

Answer -- this is Mr. Wakshul talking -- when we entered the hospital we placed him on the floor somewhat inside the second set of electric doors which lead into the emergency room. By this time I was tired and winded from carrying him. He was very heavy and constantly struggled to keep us from carrying him. I was too tired to carry him anymore and said something to that effect. And said something to that effect that I had to put him down. After he was placed on the floor, and as I was standing back up, I did hear him say I shot him, I hope the mother fucker dies. I was disgusted at this point and decided I wasn't going to touch him again. I didn't want to be near him. I stepped away a few feet in front of a small alcove in the emergency room opposite the receptionist's desk. I stood there for a few seconds and then walked out of the hospital.

Did you re-enter the hospital at any time.

Yes, about five minutes later.

For what purpose.

I closed up the wagon doors, got my hat and then went back in to see what else I could do.

Now, when you put on the evidence the male made no comment, you know that any mediocre D.A. is going to put in the rebuttal to that, which is this. Would that not cause a person to pause or hesitate as to the value of putting that person on?

A. Yes, sir. But I did call him. I asked for him.

Page 91.

Q. You asked for him?

A. It is on the record.

Q. No, Mr. Jamal asked for him.

A. Oh, I'm sorry. I thought I was the one who asked. On the record it said me, but.

Q. On the record?

A. But you don't believe I was the lawyer.

Q. You said we?

A. I won't quibble with words. Mr. Grant, honestly and sincerely, I don't remember ever seeing that statement. If I have seen it, sir, maybe. I don't ever remember seeing that statement.

Q. I am not questioning that, Mr. Jackson. I know you to be a man of honor for many years. I'm saying just because you don't remember it doesn't mean you didn't get it?

A. Yeah.

Q. Would you agree?

A. I agree, I agree.

Q. All right, we are at the same page. Now, that part about the Defendant, when the Court said in response to you wanting Mr. Wakshul on July 1st at the last minute, on page 48, the Judge says you should have told Mr. Jackson -- talking to Mr. Jamal now at sidebar -- you should have told him that you wanted him from the beginning of trial.

The Defendant states, I told him -- Mr. Jackson -- at the motion to suppress that I wanted that guy Wakshul and he didn't show up.

And you are saying that's not, that's not true. And it's not true, is it?

A. No, sounds to me that he said during the motion to suppress he wanted Wakshul. Just like I said before: What happens is, when we want police witnesses, you tell the D.A. He and Joe McGill weren't necessarily on speaking terms so Mr. Jamal, sounds to me like Mr. Jamal is saying he told me to tell Mr. McGill. That's what I am assuming that statement is.

Q. Let's assume that your assumptions would be well-founded. At page 113 through 115, on June 2nd, this is is what actually happened --

A. Okay.

Q. -- at the motion to suppress. Just before the defense portion of the motion to suppress was to begin. That is to say, when the Defendant wants to put on his evidence at the suppression motion, he is entitled to put on evidence?

A. Yeah.

Q. And the Court said, in asking which witnesses would the defense require, the Court said what witnesses do you need. And he is speaking to Mr. Jamal. Because Mr. Jamal is acting as his own lawyer then. What witnesses do you need.

Page 93.

Mr. Jamal says say what.

The Court says what witnesses do you need. Perhaps we could have them for you. Are any of these police officers.

Jamal says yes, some.

The Court: All right, tell the District Attorney and he will have them for you.

Mr. Jamal: Some are private citizens as well.

The Court: First of all, do you want the, do you want the police officers.

Mr. Jamal: Judge, a policeman I would like to have, I have their names here.

Judge Sabo says read them off.

Mr. Jamal says Daniel Soboleski and John McGurk.

This is bringing back memories, isn't it?

A. Something.

Q. The Court says how do you spell that last name. And the Defendant then proceeds to spell both names correctly. And then says Soboleski, Officer Soboleski, badge number is badge 5596, and he states that Officer McGurk's badge number is 3185, he is from the 6th District.

The Court says, are those the only two officers.

Mr. Jamal says yes.

The Court goes further in trying to assist him to present his case by saying who else do you want.

And Mr. Jamal says Debbie Kordansky and Veronica Jones. He later goes on to say I changed my mind, I don't want them to come in. After conferring with you, by the way.

Nevertheless, the Court says who else.

The record reflects Mr. Jackson confers with Defendant. And then Mr. Jamal says a curious thing: Judge, I have no objection to the District Attorney's Office supplying the police witnesses. They are available to him. As if he would allow us to do him a favor.

The Court then says, before we get into that, who else after Veronica Jones or is that the end.

Mr. Jamal says that is the end.

Mr. McGill then says, if the Court would wish me, I would be very glad to get them. Meaning the officers and the witnesses. I was going to get them anyway.

Now, considering that exchange, and that was the witnesses for the defense that he asked to be brought in at the motion to suppress, did you hear the name of Gary Wakshul one time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Would you take my word for it that it was never ever mentioned at any time prior to July lst, 1982, the date of closing arguments?

A. I will take your word for it that there is nothing on the record that would indicate that he asked for it. Mr. Grant, you have to understand: I don't remember. And if, if Mr. Jamal has specific recollection of asking me maybe he didn't ask me on the record. I don't know, and I'm speculating, but I just can't tell you anymore.

Q. Now, when you gave Mr. Jamal some statements, you had some and he had some?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why would an attorney give his only copy of a document that he would need for trial to a person who may not value these documents like attorneys value them: To be used for weapons?

A. I will try to explain again. I got the documents --

THE COURT: Go ahead. Finish up.

THE WITNESS: There was a time when I got the documents. Made copies for Mr. Jamal, and I kept copies. There is another time we got some additional documents, gave some to Mr. Jamal and I think I kept some. There were times when Mr. Jamal had some. Mr. Jamal was his own lawyer at the motion to suppress. I don't, I am assuming that at some point in time there may have been some statements. I don't think it was necessarily that statement of Wakshul, but I don't really know. He was the lawyer, I wasn't the lawyer.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. I don't care, if you were backup Counsel, wouldn't you have a backup copy?

A. Well, you see how that backup thing gets you in trouble. I don't know. You say --

MR. GRANT: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right, the Court reporter indicates he needs a break. And I think it's almost, well, nine minutes to 12:00.

We'll break for lunch until one o'clock.

MR. GRANT: Very well.

THE COURT OFFICER: This Court now stands in luncheon recess until one o'clock at the call of the Crier.

- - - - -

(Luncheon recess was held until 1:30 p.m.)

- - - - -

Anthony E. Jackson, having been previously affirmed, was examined and testified as follows:

- - - - -

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Good afternoon, Mr. Jackson.

A. Good afternoon, Mr. Grant.

Q. When you filed the police complaint, the complaint against the Police Department, which generated additional discovery or documents, you billed the City of Philadelphia for that, did you not?

A. I don't know.

Q. Could you take a look at C-4?

A. Sure.

Q. Let me see if I can find the tab.

MR. GRANT: Here is mine (handing).

THE COURT OFFICER: (Handing).

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. It's tabbed in yellow and it's marked in red, sir. A little check mark. I believe the date is 12-30-81.

A. That's correct, sir, I did.

Q. What's that notation there, sir?

A. 12-30-81: Preparation and filing complaint with Police Department: 1.5 hours.

Q. And you were paid for that, were you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you knew that that was going to generate additional police materials and interviews of the other individuals that may have been under suspicion?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. So you were basically getting the benefit of having duplication of investigation with the obvious and inherent possibilities that it contains; namely, that people may say things in a different way or totally different; correct?

A. That, that's a possibility, yes, sir.

Q. Now, and that was only 21 days after the arrest for the murder in this case; correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, yesterday, sir, I asked you, and I was asserting to you at that point that you may have been the lawyer but Mr. Jamal was running the show.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall giving an interview in Philadelphia Magazine in December of 1993, sir, about this case?

A. Philadelphia Magazine?

Q. Well, let me see. Inquirer Magazine?

A. I don't know, umm... I may have, I don't recall.

Q. Let me see if I can -- do you recognize this photograph? It's called 'Presumed Innocent,' picture of Mr. Jamal in handcuffs?

A. No, I never have seen it.

MR. WEINGLASS: May I see it?

MR. GRANT: Yeah, let me identify it for the record if I can. It is a pretty poor photocopy.

THE WITNESS: I know I didn't see the article.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Pardon me?

A. I didn't see the article.

Q. You've never seen?

Page 100.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. I didn't see that article.

(Pause.)

MR. GRANT: Okay, while Counsel is looking at that:

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Your final bill submitted on C-4 for experts -- and you claim that they were fair and reasonable amounts -- was 1,312 dollars and 50 cents; would that be correct?

A. What page is it? I'm sorry. I'll find it?

Okay, yes? I see it down there.

(Pause.)

A. I guess that's it, yeah.

Q. Now, you disagreed with me yesterday that Mr. Jamal was calling the shots even though you were the attorney, and you still take that position, sir?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I would like to invite your attention, sir, to an interview you had for the Philadelphia Inquirer this past Sunday, July 23rd, 1995. It's called the Review and Opinion section, at pages 1 and 2, section E. When asked a number of questions, apparently you responded to reporters, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. If I may just read from the article. As

Page 101.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Abu-Jamal's case moves through the appeal stage questions arise. One, why didn't William Cook, Mr. Jamal's brother, testify for his brother. According to Cook's lawyer, the younger brother was ready and eager to testify.

Now they are distinguishing between Mr. Jamal and his brother by calling one Cook and Mr. Jamal by his lawful name?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Cook's lawyer was Danny Alva, was he not?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, according to this article, it says the younger brother was ready and eager to testify. The defense attorney Jackson says it was Abu-Jamal's decision not to call his brother.

Did you say that?

A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't say that?

A. No, sir.

Q. That is a misquote?

A. It's whatever it is. I didn't say that.

Q. Well, when asked why didn't you pursue a murder three charge or a temporary insanity or self-defense claim as opposed to tell the Jury they should find the Defendant guilty of murder in the first degree or nothing at all, there is another response here, and it is in quotation marks -- tell me whether or not you said this one -- during the trial people would say that Mumia was probably enraged that night, that he acted to what he saw happening and was temporarily insane, Jackson said. I remember he said -- Mr. Jamal -- they want me to buy into that, to say I'm crazy, but he would never select that, it was never an option because of the way he is.

Page 102.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Did you say that?

A. I said words to that effect, yes, sir.

Q. No, did you say that?

A. I don't remember -- I don't remember each and every word that I said to the reporter. I'm saying now I said words to that effect, yes. That's as best as I could do. I didn't have a tape recorder so I can't tell you I said exactly that.

Q. Do you recall after the trial was over Mr. McGill walked up to you and said Tony, you did a good job for the man, he wouldn't give you any help, he wouldn't let you put the gun in his hand, he made you argue first degree murder or nothing, and your response was that's right, it's one or the other?

A. That decision for first degree was my decision

Page 103.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

and my decision alone. I never asked Mr. Jamal, I never asked Mr. Jamal what I was going to argue to the Jury. Never. Never once, never once.

Q. You never thought that perhaps a defense of others claim may have been viable?

A. Pardon me?

Q. Defense of others: It is like self-defense?

A. Oh, yeah.

Q. You never thought that was a viable defense?

A. I considered it, yes, sir.

Q. But you made a tactical and strategic decision not to pursue that defense?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you likewise made a tactical and/or strategic decision not to pursue, although I don't even know if it exists in the annals of Pennsylvania law, a temp insanity defense, enragement, irresistible impulse?

A. Well, if you want to call it tactical decision, perhaps it was. You know, by implication perhaps one, you know. And again that's what the response of the article suggests, there wasn't any evidence of that. I mean people surmised that that's what happened. The brother, he was enraged and did it. That's what people surmised. I couldn't respond to what people surmised. And Danny Alva prevented me from talking to his brother because his brother had charges pending against him.

Page 104.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. Are you sure he had charges pending or had they already been disposed of, Mr. Jackson?

A. There was a time, and I don't know what time, that the brother had charges pending against him.

Q. What were the charges against him, do you know? Simple assault against a police officer?

A. Well, it wouldn't be simple, it was a police officer, so it would be aggravated.

Q. Aggravated as a misdemeanor?

A. Okay. But notwithstanding the charges against him there, here the clear implication that I got when he didn't want him to testify would be that if he testified in this trial, there may be some additional problems. Now, I know about double jeopardy and all of that, I wasn't Mr. Cook's lawyer.

Q. Did Mr. Jamal ever tell you just leave my family out of this, this is not their thing, this is my thing? Think carefully, Mr. Jackson.

A. I'm not going to say he didn't say it, but that -- it is the context in which he may have said it. It had nothing to do with the trial, it had nothing to do with bringing Billy into the Court, if that's what you mean.

Page 105.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. Didn't what?

A. Didn't prevent me from bringing Billy into Court, if that's what you are talking about, Mr. Jamal's brother. There may have been a time he said he didn't want his family involved. But I think you have to understand his family. He had a very loving and close family and very close relationship with his family.

Q. You did?

A. I did too, but I mean he did. And I think he was trying to protect them as well. It had nothing to do with presenting Billy or something of that sort.

Q. Or Lydia Wallace?

A. Yeah, or Lydia.

Q. Or Elizabeth Cook?

A. That's right.

Q. In other words, you could have at any point in time brought them in, either at the penalty phase, or at the guilt phase, but you made a conscious decision not to?

A. I would assume so. I did use -- I think his mother. Well, I'm sorry.

Q. You used his mother?

Page 106.

A. Mr. Jamal -- oh, at the bail hearing I think Mrs., I think his mother testified. I believe.

Q. Yes, she did, 1-11 of '82. So?

A. So therefore, again, she testified so she must have had some involvement in this case. So that's what I am saying. You have to consider the context at which time the people were involved or whether they were involved at all or not. I mean I was not prevented from talking to his family. Except Billy, and that was because of his lawyer.

Q. His order?

A. Billy's lawyer, Danny Alva.

Q. Oh, his lawyer?

A. I mean I didn't talk, I mean I spoke to Billy but I never talked to him about the case out of respect for what his lawyer said.

Q. And even though you knew his lawyer had no legal claim specifically: His case was over by the time this case went to trial; it was relatively minor charges as compared to a death penalty litigation?

A. That wasn't my decision to make, that's his lawyer's decision to make.

Q. Very well. So you are saying that at some point you chose to call members of his family, had the bail hearing at which you called his mother, and at other times you chose not to, such as character witnesses or the penalty stage for mitigating circumstances, but you are saying that was an oversight?

A. At the character stage..; I don't remember specifically. Umm... seems to me I presented a number of character witnesses during the trial stage. I don't, I don't recall whether I decided not to or whether I had planned to present them. I don't really recall just what happened. Seems to me that he --

Q. How about 15, you called 15 out of the 20, list of 20, is that a lot?

A. Yeah, seems to me the Judge stopped me from putting more witnesses on.

Q. The Judge said to you Mr. Jackson, this is cumulative. The Judge can't stop you but he says how many more do you have to go. And in deference to what was common sense, I mean you could have good character, one person could establish it or 50 people could come in and say the same thing, just like was done here before you got on the stand. I mean how much of that do you want to hear?

A. Okay, I am going to tell you: Maybe it was because I put on 15 character witnesses and maybe I thought that 15, 16 or 17 character witnesses were enough without his family. I just don't remember specifically why I didn't do it, sir.

Q. But you did pursue character and you did consider using his family members?

A. I would assume so. Yeah, I mean in any, always. Yeah, sure.

Q. Have you ever had a person facing a capital punishment in any of your trials prior to or since that day where it got to that phase that you didn't put on relatives of the defendant at the penalty or the guilt phase, if the person had good character and you could put them up there without them being attacked?

(Pause.)

A. During the guilt phase I don't remember doing it because the cases that I could recall the defendants had records. So they couldn't put character witnesses on because their record would come out.

Q. So the issue never arose?

A. That's right, the issue never arose.

Q. Now, Mr. Jamal went so far in directing your efforts that he went so far as to presume to tell you to request a Jury instruction in the middle of the trial, didn't he?

A. I don't -- in the middle, a Jury instruction in the middle of the trial, no.

Q. It is strange, isn't it? While there is no Jury deliberating, before it is time for them to receive the law, he wants you to tell them the law before he ever gets to that point?

A. I guess so. I don't remember. But, you know, if it is on the record I guess. I just don't have have any specific recollection.

Q. What if I told you that you did, would you say that the tail was wagging the dog instead of the dog wagging the tail?

A. No, if he asked me to make that request of the Judge, I'd ask him. He is not, if he asked me to ask something, that's directing. If I ask you to give me the paper, I am making you give me the paper? I see it differently, you see it differently.

Q. Well, Mr. Jackson, you have been a lawyer for 17 years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever, ever -- and I don't care who asked you --

A. Hmm-hmm.

Q. -- requested that the judge charge the jury on the degrees of murder when they are still listening to the evidence?

Page 110.

A. No.

Q. One time? Of course you haven't.

A. Oh, no.

Q. Notes of testimony, July lst, 1982, page 55. Mr. Jackson to the Court: I have a statement I would like to read, Your Honor. Your Honor, for the record, as well as for Your Honor's purposes, I would like to make it perfectly clear that my client Mumia Abu-Jamal ordered me to make a motion that the charges against him be dismissed on the grounds that murder as is previously defined by the Courts is not defined to the satisfaction of my client. You said those words. You further went on to state: My client wants to put on the record that he is making a motion for the definition of murder while the trial is still in progress and not after the closing arguments.

Would you deny that you said that?

A. No, sir, and it is consistent with what I have said.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, at the point at which this conversation occurs all the evidence had already been in. We were at the point, or they were at the point in the trial just prior to closing argument. It was an entirely appropriate time to discuss what the instructions of the Court would be. But Counsel in his argument miss, in his question I should say, misrepresents to the witness the time frame in which this happened. Therefore, he misleads the witness and then asks him questions. That's why he should show the witness the transcript, so that the witness can see what was occurring in the context of the trial at that time. So that the witness isn't misled into giving information.

So I object to this line of questioning without the witness seeing the transcript. This was, it wasn't in the middle of the trial, it was the end of the trial. And all the testimony had already been taken. It was an appropriate time to discuss instruction. So I object to this question.

MR. GRANT: First of all, Your Honor, Mr. Weinglass wasn't and didn't know that Philadelphia existed in 1981, and he wasn't at this trial. And Mr. Jackson was and he spoke these words while the trial is still in progress. And I think that lawyer knows what he is talking about.

Secondly, I offered him early on at the beginning of the day whenever he needed to resort to notes of testimony I would make them available to him. And I wish Counsel would quit making speeches and trying to rehabilitate his witness when it is not his turn. He has a right to redirect.

THE COURT: On redirect you could bring up anything you want.

MR. WEINGLASS: But it is common courtesy, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Well, he is reading what he said.

MR. WEINGLASS: Common courtesy to show the witness the transcript.

THE COURT: Well, he said if he needs it he will give it to him. So let the witness ask for it.

If you need anything just ask for it.

THE WITNESS: That's just for point of clarification: You said this was in the middle of the trial?

MR. GRANT: No, you said it was.

Page 113.

THE WITNESS: You asked me the question, you said during the middle of the trial do I remember him saying it?

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Okay, fine. Now, I don't remember him saying that in the middle of the trial. But I am not saying it didn't happen.

Q. What do you call while the trial is still in progress, to quote you?

A. Well, there is the beginning, there is a middle, there is an end. Any time the trial began, before the trial is over it is the middle. Is that what you are saying?

Q. No, what I am saying is when it is the end the trial is no longer in progress?

A. Well, okay, I guess we just have to, maybe I should do this. At what point in time was this said? I don't know what you are talking, you know, I am not going to remember it.

Q. They don't have a clock that comes with the transcript.

A. No, what I mean by this: I don't remember it being asked in any event, but I don't know if you are talking about during the voir dire, during the prosecution's presentation, the defense presentation, character. I don't know at what stage it was made, if it makes a difference, because I don't remember it.

Q. It does make a difference.

A. Okay, fine. But I think you need to understand that what I said was consistent with what I have said all along. When I said Mr. Jamal wants me to ask this, Mr. Jamal's direction. That's when Mr. Jamal was talking. At any other time I was doing the lawyering. When Mr. Jamal wanted me to say something I pointed out that Mr. Jamal wanted me to do it. What you just read was Mr. Jamal wants me to read this. Mr. Jamal directs this. At any other time I was the lawyer, and I made that very clear. So that there wouldn't have to be any misunderstanding about who the lawyer was.

Q. There are so many instances where Mr. Jamal directs and Mr. Jamal demands and Mr. Jamal orders that the question then becomes who was the lawyer. And that's precisely the line of questioning we are engaged in now.

MR. WEINGLASS: I object to the form of the question, Your Honor.

THE COURT: He is answering the

Page 115.

witness' question, so.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, will the Court sustain my objection as to form?

MR. GRANT: I withdraw the question.

Strike the statement, if I may.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Why do you use the word he is ordering me around if you were the attorney?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection, unless the witness is shown where those words appear in the transcript.

THE COURT: Overruled. This is a general question first, then he will be more specific.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, the question contains --

THE COURT: The question, the question is all right. So the objection is overruled. Come on, let's get going.

THE WITNESS: The question, the answer is clear --

THE COURT: Just a minute.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor overruled --

THE COURT: Wait awhile, he is moving around.

Page 116.

MR. GRANT: May I approach, Your Honor? (Handing).

MR. WEINGLASS: Thank you. Date, page?

MR. GRANT: Same date, Mr. Weinglass. Same page, Mr. Weinglass.

MR. WEINGLASS: Okay, July 1st. Page 55.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Why did you, why do you use the word order whenever there is an occasion when you have to relate to the Court Mr. Jamal's wishes if you are in charge? People give orders and they take them?

A. Okay. Sure. I have an obligation as an attorney if a client requests something that he disagrees with that the Court know the difference. That my client wants something. I use the word order, directed. Say whatever you want to say. I mean it happens, it happens lots of times. Lots of times. Client may want to take the stand, I say I don't think you should. The client wants to take the stand. Let it be known that it is not me.

In this instance Mr. Jamal wanted me to make that statement, whatever it was. Apparently, again, I haven't had an opportunity to see the context of when the statements was made. Apparently I would not have made it at that point. That's all. That's all it means. When I say order: I haven't been ordered to do things in a long time, other than Judge Sabo ordered me to.

Q. That's right.

A. But I certainly didn't mean it in the same context.

Q. Only Judge Sabo and Mr. Jamal have ordered you to do anything since you have been a man and been out of the military?

A. Judge Sabo and Mr. Jamal ordered me to do. If I used the word order I used it in a different context. I apologize for the choice of the word.

Q. Again, it wasn't a slip of the tongue, was it, because it appears throughout the transcript?

A. That is the word I used.

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection to the reference. He could only show it in one place. Then he embroiders it by saying it appears throughout the transcript. I would like to have additional references.

MR. GRANT: I could go on ad nauseam and show various places, Judge.

Page 118.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

THE COURT: Go right ahead, then. He wants you to do it, go right ahead.

MR. WEINGLASS: Good.

THE COURT: Okay.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Now, do you recall saying these words in December of '93? And I'm trying, I can't for the life of me get the header that goes with this article. So I don't know whether it is the Philadelphia Inquirer or Philadelphia Magazine supplement that goes into The Inquirer Magazine.

MR. WEINGLASS: Philadelphia Magazine.

MR. GRANT: Thank you.

MR. WEINGLASS: I'm new to the City but I do know that much.

MR. GRANT: Yes, you're in tune, Mr. Weinglass, you probably read it.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. It says here, Jackson quickly discovered that Jamal had his own plans. Well, actually what it does is give you several compliments. Let's just go on to say what it says. A committee was formed to raise money for his defense. State Representative David Richardson and then State Senator T. Milton Street testified on Jamal's behalf at a bail hearing.

Page 119.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Anthony E. Jackson, who had defended MOVE members and served as director of the Public Interest Law Center police abuse project signed on as Jamal's Court-appointed attorney. Jackson quickly discovered that Jamal had his own plans, quote, it became obvious, he says, that it wasn't going to be my show. Did you say that?

A. I may have.

Q. How come you could never remember when you say something, sir? You are in a profession that deals with words and the precision of using them and you have not yet once said I did say something. What's up?

A. Okay, I am going to tell you what --

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection to the form of the question.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. I mean what is going on? I mean can you explain that?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection to the form of the question.

THE WITNESS: I will do the best I can.

MR. WEINGLASS: Now, Your Honor, now we are dealing with compound questions.

Page 120.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

THE COURT: Overruled. This is cross-examination.

THE WITNESS: Mr. Grant, you are asking me if I said something. I dare say I could ask you if you said something last week, I can't imagine that you could say with an absolute degree of certainly yes or no. And I am saying, some things you asked me about 13 years ago you said if I said it and I said I don't know: And you are wondering why I can't remember.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. How about December of '93, that's not 13 years ago?

A. I did, I don't know. I may have said it. You are asking me did I say it. I have to think in the context who it was I mean I was talking to. You can't just pick out words did you ever say it. I have to think where I was, who did I say it to. I can't just remember just like that.

Q. Devon Leonard?

A. Pardon me?

Q. Devon Leonard?

A. I remember the name. I don't, I mean I don't know the context in which I would have said it.

Page 121.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. But you recall words to that effect being said out of your mouth to that man, don't you? Yes or no, Mr. Jackson?

(Pause.)

A. The best I could do, I may have said it. I won't deny it. The best I could say, I may have said it. I don't know what context I might have said it, I may have said it, sure.

Q. May have, let's deal with probability. Is it more likely than not that you said it?

A. Okay, what show are we talking about? If you want me to be that specific, I may have said it. If he was talking about what Mr. Jamal was doing with regard to his political views, that was his show, I had nothing to do with it.

Q. Oh?

A. I mean you have to tell me. Mr. Grant, I am trying to respond to your question but you are saying but did I say that's his show. I may have. He may have been talking about Mr. Jamal's radio show, that's his show. I mean how can I be certain?

Q. I could see that you probably are getting your memory back because in the next paragraph he goes on to talk about his political views?

A. His what?

Page 122.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. Political views, that this Courtroom and this case became a show of his political views --

A. I said that.

Q. No. But it just so happens and it is uncanny that you would have the same thought process that this article would have right after your comment?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection: Counsel's observation that it's just uncanny is an unacceptable predicate for a question. Counsel is not permitted to editorialize in a Court in asking a question. I ask that the question be exonerated from the record and the answer be stricken. May I have a ruling?

MR. GRANT: Judge, if I may respond. I think I can ask the question in any form I want as long as it ends with an interrogatory. And even though it may be laced, to Counsel's dismay, with damaging information, the witness may respond. And this witness is more capable than any other witness we will get on the stand because he is a lawyer, and he does what I do for a living.

MR. WEINGLASS: The fact that he is a lawyer does not permit Counsel to ask unacceptable questions under the rules of evidence. Counsel is not permitted to comment editorially in the course of asking a question.

MR. GRANT: I will withdraw the question.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Now, you commented yesterday, Mr. Jackson, that, when I asked you if you had received full discovery, you expressed some opinion that you got the Medical Examiner's report and you didn't necessarily get it from the D.A.'s office, did you not?

A. Not not exactly. You asked me if I got discovery and I said I got what I got. I did say I got, I did get a Medical Examiner's report from the D.A.'s office and I got another Medical Examiner's report.

Q. Okay, and when you compared the two did you find that the D.A., true to their word, had given you everything that they had?

A. Well.

Q. You can't recall?

A. You are asking me -- let me tell you the -- in fact I know that I got the report, the Medical Examiner's report that I got had one additional page. The one I got from the D.A.'s Office had one page missing. I am not suggesting, because I am not in a position to suggest, that it was the District Attorney's Office that removed it. All I am telling you is the one I got from the District Attorney's Office did not have that page.

Q. The thing you are saying causing me concern: I am not saying it was the District Attorney's Office who removed it?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, that presumes that the District Attorney's Office received it. You see, before you can remove something you must have something. Now, are you saying that you know for a fact that Mr. McGill got what's, the page you are talking about yesterday was an investigator's log from the Medical Examiner's Office noting their having sent their complete case file to you, having sent a preliminary report to the Police Department, and their version of what they thought happened, right?

A. Let me answer the complicated question. And see, I can't... The law has given us a reason not for me to make a decision whether it is the D.A.'s Office or the Medical Examiner's Office. The courts, the law says if there are some agencies within the District Attorney, you know, their apparatus, if I don't get the information the District Attorney is responsible. I don't care if it was Joe Blow the police officer on the street, if he doesn't give a report to the D.A., the report maybe he never got, it is his responsibility. You know that to be the law as well as I do. I don't have to decide whether or not the D.A. got it, it wasn't there.

Q. In fact you are absolutely right. What confidential source gave it to you?

A. A confidential source.

Q. Well, nothing is confidential when you testify in a Court of law --

THE COURT: Quiet.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. -- when you are on the stand and under oath.

A. I am under oath, I am not going to tell you.

Q. That's good, I am not going to ask you again. How about the confidential sources that you had in the Police Department since you were an evidence technician there for five-and-a-half years, did you have any of them?

A. I don't know, I've never had to use them to find out.

Q. You never exploited them?

A. Right.

Q. So you have them?

A. I never had to use them.

Q. So you probably had as much information and as much documentary evidence and knowledge about the case as the District Attorney had, and perhaps a little bit more because you had more avenues because you worked for these people, didn't you?

A. Oh, absolutely not. Think about it. Think about it. You are saying I had more information than the D.A. He gets all the reports, he talks to the detectives who interviewed the people, he gets the flavor, he knows what the witnesses look like, where they live. What their phone number is. And you are saying I have more than him. Come on.

Q. You have his whole file, you know what their phone numbers are, you know what their names are, the only thing you don't know is where they live, and you have confidential sources?

A. Listen, the District Attorney, he had an opportunity, each one of those people who were interviewed, he had an opportunity to talk to the person who interviewed them. Don't you think that's of greater value than just reading the cold page? Don't you think the people who conducted the test, he talked to them, he knew what did happen and didn't happen. He knew what was not in the report. I don't know what was in the report. How could you compare what I knew with what he knew? They had everything. I got what they gave me. They were in control. If they're in control how could it be the same? They are in control.

Q. The District Attorney got witnesses for you, he gave you full discovery, attempted to give you guidance, and when you needed it encouragement during your difficulties with that man, yet you wouldn't even abide by the rules of Court and be reciprocal in turning over discovery to them, that you were obliged under the law to do, isn't that so, because Mr. Jamal wouldn't let you?

A. What, I don't know what I didn't -- what did I have that I didn't turn over?

Q. Let's explore it, then.

A. I don't remember.

Q. Notes of testimony, page -- would you like the transcript?

A. No, go ahead.

MR. WEINGLASS: May I have a reference to the page?

THE COURT: He is just getting ready, he just asked him --

MR. GRANT: Notes of testimony, June 24th, 1982, pages 4 through 7. I will read it in it's entirety, and it has some length to it, but I am going to pose a question at the end. So --

THE WITNESS: I will wait.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. So I will come to that point. Mr. McGill is complaining to His Honor Judge Sabo in your presence, quote, I mentioned this to Mr. Jackson before. I would ask again, I realize this is not his personal fault but the Defendant's. I'd request once again pursuant to the rules of discovery any statements or any names of witnesses that he would call. He indicated to me that as far as he knew -- meaning you, as far as you knew -- the only witnesses that he would call if he decides to call them would be the witnesses he has told me about. And you told him about Dessie Hightower, Robert Pigford, Dr. Colletta and Dr. Cudemo. Cudemo and Colletta were treating physicians for Mr. Jamal at Thomas Jefferson. Hightower and the other one were people who came after the shots were fired and claimed to see a one-armed bandit running from the scene. Mr. McGill then says, I made a request, and I believe I also made a request, yes, before Judge Ribner, the names of all possible character witnesses. And this was done at the same time as requests for criminal records. Any witnesses he may call, I made to Mr. Jackson a request for the name of all potential character witnesses so I could make a check on their records. There is an indication he may call some. I received no names. I will petition to exclude, Your Honor, so that everyone's on notice, to exclude the testimony of anyone who I'm not informed of at this point, because I think that I may rest my case tomorrow. And at this point I received no word except what Mr. Jackson has done pursuant to the rules of discovery.

And you say, regarding character witnesses, aside from the difficulties that I'm having with Mr. Jamal, and Mr. Jamal has indicated to me at least previously that he, that he intended to present character witnesses -- as an aside: You were the lawyer of record at this point?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You further state, Mr. Jamal has previously indicated to me at least that he has several witnesses who were character witnesses who were coming from Europe. Whether in fact that occurs, I don't know. Then you say Judge, let me assure you and Mr. McGill I have no names at this point, I have absolutely no names.

The Court: All we can hope is that Mr. Jackson will talk to Mr. Jamal and try to get them from him and tell him if he doesn't give them to us that they may very well not be permitted to testify. That's all I can do. I can't force him to give them to Mr. Jackson.

Mr. McGill at, I think, I'm sorry, he is still harping about this because you haven't given it to him yet. Two days later, June 26th, '82, pages 137 and 8. Mr. McGill: I was wondering, Your Honor, didn't we understand that I was going to get the names of at least some or at least I requested that I have the names of witnesses.

Mr. Jackson: For the record, I have no names, I still don't have any.

The Court: You mean for character.

Mr. Jackson: For character witnesses, I still don't have any.

Do you recall that exchange, sir?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You do?

A. Yeah, generally speaking, yeah.

Page 131.

Q. So why couldn't you give Mr. McGill the names if you were in control and you knew who you were going to call?

A. You are still on this control thing.

Q. Yes, and I am going to stay on it.

A. All right. I was in control. Didn't have the names. It doesn't mean I was out of control.

Q. No, he was out of control and you had no control.

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection, Your Honor. I ask that that be stricken. I ask that Counsel be admonished not to make references of that nature on this record: He was out of control. I ask the Court to strike that from the record. Clearly --

THE COURT: Just a minute. Rephrase your question. Rephrase the question.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Yes. You were not in control, Mr. Jackson, were you? At any point in this trial were you ever in control?

A. Well, let me just tell you this, Mr. Grant, and I am going to try to tell you for the last time. I have been practicing law for a long time. At no time, at no time that I know of I haven't been in control, when I was a lawyer. Those times that I wasn't, I went to the Supreme Court. I told them let me out. Then they told me be a backup Counsel. That's when I wasn't in control. I wouldn't do it because I wasn't in control. That's what this whole thing was about.

But for some reason you seem to think Mr. Jamal was in control. Mr. Jamal was in control when he got the Commonwealth to respond to some political thing. When I was the lawyer I was the lawyer, I was doing what I wanted to do. When Mr. Jamal wanted me to do something I said Your Honor, Mr. Jamal wants me to do this. Mr. Jamal is ordering me to do this. If I didn't preface my remark that way, I was in control.

Now, you could go on and ask me anything else. I didn't give those names because I didn't have the names. So that means if I don't have the names I'm out of control. If that's your characterization I accept it, but now you can at least understand what I feel.

Q. Why didn't you have the names, then?

A. Because he didn't give them to me, I suspect.

Q. So you suspect that. When his case -- well, on 7-l-82, at pages 32 through 35, the Judge is complaining why aren't you telling us who you want to call next. You call them at the last minute and then you complain because they don't appear out of the woodwork.

You say, I was forced to try and remember everything that everybody said and I couldn't do it. And you said, your reference was back to I don't have the statements anymore?

A. That is something, trust me, I know that is in a different context.

Q. Oh, is it?

A. Yes, sir. It's different than character witness. I don't have to remember anything about character witnesses, all I do is call the name. What I was saying, what I talked about, what I had to remember was I had 150 different interviews and, again, I'm doing this by myself. Remember, the District Attorney, you have two assistants helping him. I'm doing this on my own. I had to remember each and every witness who might testify, who could testify, and make an immediate decision when and how to do it. And sometimes I guess I didn't quite remember when I needed to.

Q. Well, if you had a piece of paper and a pen you could write down the names of people you are going to ask questions, that's pretty simple, isn't it, if you were in control?

A. Hmm-hmm. Well, it isn't that simple, is it?

Q. Well, not in this instance, I imagine. Let me ask you this. On June 29th of 1982, pages 5 through 7, there is a discussion here, I would like you to listen to this, I would like you to tell me if in fact you are still going to maintain this position that you were in control.

Mr. McGill: Also, Your Honor, just for the record, there has been a discussion this morning between the Defendant and Mr. Jackson. I don't know what they were talking about but there's been discussions and during the course of that time Mr. Jackson would come to see me and ask me for statements in reference to witnesses, and I would give it to him and then he would go through them and then he would talk to Mr. Jamal. Again, I don't know what they are talking about. However, I want the Court to know and the record to reflect the continuing effort by Mr. Jackson to represent his client in the very best possible way and at the same time have a continual communication between Mr. Jamal and Mr. Jackson without my knowing what it's all about. Nonetheless, efforts are being made. So if

Page 135.

Mr. Jamal does not wish to assist in any way with Mr. Jackson, he certainly has had the opportunity to speak to him.

You say... I would like to say for the record, Your Honor, that most of the communication has been one way in that aside from Mr. Jamal not wanting to cooperate with me, I nevertheless at each instance that he has been brought into the Courtroom, I have tried to tell him what I intended to do or, when necessary, he is not in the Courtroom, either tell him what has happened or what I intend to do. That has essentially been the extent of the conversation, although today there was a question that I posed to him with regard to some information, and he suggested, he suggested a name and he further suggested in which statement I could find the information.

Mr. McGill: And did you find the information.

Mr. Jackson: Yes. Yes. Mr. McGill gave me the information.

Mr. McGill responds, okay, so he asked you information about a witness that you may call, and then you got the information and communicated to him what the information was. Is that, that was the question. So you communicated to him what the information was.

Mr. Jackson: No, I gave him the information. He told me the name, that was with regard to his brother -- referring to William Cook -- having blood on his hands. I think he said it was Shoemaker but actually it was Magilton. Mr. Magilton was a witness who testified, a cab driver who was at the scene.

A. Hmm-hmm.

Q. Now, if you recall tell us what that was all about?

(Pause.)

A. I'm thinking, I don't know for certain. I'm thinking that obviously I did not have a statement of a witness. And that there was information I needed to find out about a witness. I mean I guess that would be the only reason for me to ask Mr. McGill to look at his statement. And I suspect Mr. Jamal didn't have a copy of the statement either. We were both without the statement. And it may have been something came up, either one of us or maybe Mr. Jamal remembered it. I really don't remember. I don't know. You said why did I ask Mr. McGill to look at his statement. That's the only reason I could think of: I didn't have it.

Q. Mr. Jackson, in that regard, and in the context of the statement, it's become clear during the course of reading these transcripts to you, it's dawning on me that Mr. McGill, through his comments throughout the record, knew you were in a difficult situation?

A. Every trial is a different situation.

Q. And he got witnesses for you. He gave you statements, he looked for witnesses, he gave you addresses. In light of all that --

A. Mr. Grant --

Q. In light of all that, why would you insinuate that the man is withholding or suppressing evidence from you?

A. All right, you are going to go back.

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: I will answer that again.

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection.

THE COURT: Overruled.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor is overruling me before I made the objection.

THE COURT: Well, it is a general objection, I'm overruling it.

MR. WEINGLASS: It is not a general objection, it is specifically directed to the question.

THE COURT: Well; it is overruled, okay. This is cross-examination. He is asking him a question he could answer.

MR. WEINGLASS: This is the first time I've had a question I haven't had a chance to object to to be overruled.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, I believe Counsel is merely trying in vain to interrupt my flow of thought and he will think I will forget where I was, I would ask him to make his objection, admonish me, and have a seat somewhere.

MR. WEINGLASS: I tried to make it and you overruled it.

THE COURT: I am overruling it no matter what it is. I don't have to -- it's overruled, okay.

THE WITNESS: I will answer your question, Mr. Grant.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Yes?

A. Tell you again, unless you could tell me otherwise, I think the statement law holds true: Regardless of who along the chain of command had total control, the D.A. is responsible for any missing information.

Q. Oh, okay.

A. Wait a minute, I'm not finished. You are saying when the District Attorney did all these wonderful things to help me by getting witnesses. Well, remember what I said: The District Attorney is the one that had all of the names, all of the addresses of the witnesses. He is doing me a favor by not letting me talk to them. So he gets those witnesses, so I should be so happy that it's like now I'm not going to let you interview this witness, tell me what witness you want and I will get them for you. He is doing me a favor. I didn't think it was a favor. I had no other alternative. I had no access to the witnesses. That did not please me. So it wasn't, I don't think that that was something that he was doing that was so great.

Q. Well, let me ask you about that. You didn't have to know, you didn't have to be a rocket scientist, Mr. Jackson, to figure out by reading the statement of two out of the three eyewitnesses, or four eyewitnesses, that two of them, if not three of them, were cab drivers. Now, you had their names, and you had everything except where they lived. Now, how many cab companies do you think there are in Philadelphia? You paid the guy 600 bucks, don't you think he could figure that out?

A. Okay. You think Mr. McGill had the three of them.

Q. I don't think he has to.

A. No, because somebody gave them to him, that is the point I am making.

Q. But he is not getting money from the Court to go out and do it. He is not being paid money to go out and hire investigators. He got the money, what did he do for it? You paid him.

A. Well, as I said, you want to give Mr. Greer $600, you want him to contact all the cab drivers.

Q. No, all I want him to look for is two names, X name and Y name and the cab companies that existed. He didn't have to walk one step. He could put his face in a phone and punch some numbers, that's all he's got to do?

A. Okay, Mr. Grant, I don't disagree with you.

Q. I am not even an investigator, I can figure that out.

MR. WEINGLASS: The witness has to be given an opportunity to answer.

THE COURT: Just a minute, he will answer.

Go ahead.

THE WITNESS: Mr. Grant, I am not going to disagree with you. My whole philosophy, my whole position has been and still is: Why should the Court have to pay somebody to find some information that the District Attorney has. Joe McGill preparing for this case, he could talk to the investigator, he could read the statement, he had the address. Why should I be disadvantaged? Why should I be disadvantaged? Because I represented Mr. Jamal? Why should he have all the information? He doesn't have to call up any cab companies. He doesn't have to make any phone calls. And you are saying I should do it because I am getting money from the Court. Mr. McGill works for the Courts, he is a D.A. So what are you saying? Well, we don't want to pay it out on this end, we will pay it out on the other end. It doesn't make sense to me. I understand you disagree with me, it is a point of disagreement.

Page 142.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. When this case was appealed and Miss Gelb became the appellate lawyer, did you meet with her?

A. Yeah.

Q. You said yeah but you gave an expression that was somewhat quizzical, as if you were trying to recall whether in fact it was true.

A. No. How many times I met with her. I know I met with her, oh, sure, I gave her, I mean she got my file so I know I met her. Oh, yeah, I met her.

Q. Did you meet with her son who also worked with her on the case?

A. Yeah, I think Jeremy, her son Jeremy, yeah, I think he was there. Yeah. I am going to say yes.

Q. And when you say you turned over your file to them, did your file include the notes of testimony from the trial and the pre-trial proceedings of this matter?

A. It contained everything I had.

Q. I didn't ask you that.

A. Well. I know you didn't ask me but I am telling you that it had. Because now you ask me specifically what was in the file. I am going to tell you, Mr. Grant, I do not know what was in that file 13 years ago other than everything that I had.

Page 143.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. Did you order anything that slightly resembles what is sitting in front of you, which is called a booklet of notes of testimony from the trial proceeding? Did you order those to complete the file, sir? As a matter of fact, you get it for free when you are Court appointed, don't you?

A. You know what, I am going to assume that I did. Because I think I argued post-trial motions in this case so I assume that I did have the notes.

Q. I most certainly assume you did. So why won't you just answer my question, Mr. Jackson, and say you gave her the notes?

A. Because I don't know if I gave her the notes.

Q. Do you know whether you had the notes? You know you had the notes because they make them available to Counsel free of charge?

A. You are asking me if I had the notes or I gave her the notes? They are two different questions, Mr. Grant, now what question do you want me to answer?

Q. The first one.

A. Did I have the notes. I had the notes at post-trial motions. Now ask me that question.

Q. Did you give them to her?

A. I don't know, I assumed that I gave her them, but I may have given it to Mr. Jamal. I was no longer his lawyer after that. So you ask me if I specifically remember if I gave it to her, I tell you no. I tell you I gave her everything that I had. If I had the notes at that time, I gave it to her. If I didn't have the notes at that time, obviously I didn't give it to her. How can you ask me to answer any other way?

Page 144.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. I am asking you did you give her the notes or didn't you, and you are telling me you don't know?

A. I answered the question, sir.

Q. Thank you. Did you work on any part of the appellate process for Mr. Jamal?

A. No, sir. No, sir.

Q. According to your affidavit, on page 2, Counselor, you say you devoted substantial time and energy to the preparation of cross-examination, you say.

A. Yeah.

Q. So you are admitting that you put in time and effort and preparation to cross-examine the Commonwealth's case?

A. A little bit.

Q. No, not a little bit. That's not called substantial time and energy. That's called a little bit.

Page 145.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. I put in substantial time, trust me.

Q. So you put in a lot of time and energy?

A. I put in a lot of time, yeah.

Q. So you think you were pretty well versed, at least for cross-examination, then, by your statement in this affidavit -- which you declare under penalty of perjury, right (displaying)?

A. Yeah, for most of it, for those witnesses, yeah, I prepared.

Q. And from your training in the Police Department you were already pretty well versed on how to attack the forensic and physical evidence offered by the prosecution, weren't you?

A. No, sir.

Q. You weren't?

A. I wasn't an expert. I collected evidence, I didn't analyze it. Fingerprints, I didn't do forensic stuff.

Q. Well, that also encompasses your experience as a lawyer with 20 homicide trials under your belt?

A. Well, it wasn't -- I am not an expert. You want to make me an expert. I am no dummy either, all right. So I had to prepare. I told you Mr. Fassnacht, he assisted me. The pathologist that I talked to, he assisted me. I had books. During the trial I had the books, I had to read them. I mean I became, I was as well versed in the different areas of forensic science as I possibly could be to examine the witnesses that appeared on the stand. And if it looked like or sounded like an expert then I pulled it off.

Page 146.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. Well, you pulled it off. Now, when you are in the same building and don't talk to these witnesses that you claim that you didn't know the addresses for, that was primarily because they don't want to talk to you or your investigator, not because the Commonwealth stashed them in some hole in the ground somewhere, isn't that so?

A. I had no way of knowing since I couldn't get to talk to them.

Q. 600 bucks, find an important witness, and all he does is look at that witness from a distance for six months and gives you two interviews. You mean to tell me you couldn't find one of these people, just to talk to them or to call them on the phone?

A. Well.

Q. I don't believe you, Mr. Jackson. I want you to tell me that that's true?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection, Your Honor. I believe the comment to Mr. Jackson is utterly

Page 147.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

inappropriate.

MR. GRANT: Yes, I agree with you, I move to strike it. I apologize to the Court and Counsel.

THE COURT: Okay...

MR. GRANT: And to you, Mr. Jackson.

THE WITNESS: Excuse me. I didn't do any investigation in this case. I needed an investigator to do as much as I could do. I had some primary witness. Cynthia White was a primary witness. I only had limited funds. Out of 150 witnesses.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. More than a hundred?

A. Whatever the number is.

Q. All right.

A. I had to try to remember files. Under which file it is going to be. And you keep talking about this $650 like it is a lot of money for all of these witnesses. Do you think he was going to find all of these witnesses? If that's what you believe that's what you believe. It didn't happen. He didn't find the witnesses. Maybe he was a poor investigator. When I see him I'm going to tell him and ask him for the money back.

Page 148.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. I will tell him when he gets on the stand, don't worry about it. Now, $600 in 1981, I don't know what the cost of living increase with the inflation rate has been for the past 15 years, but that could probably be worth a thousand bucks today, right? Today if you sent your investigator out and gave him a thousand bucks you could get a lot of investigation, couldn't you?

A. Yeah, unless he was shaving.

That's right.

Q. That's right, you could get a lot of investigation for that money. Now, the fact that your case was limited to the witnesses you called to testify was not because you had no investigator, Mr. Jackson, but because there were no witnesses that existed to support Mr. Jamal's version of events, wouldn't you say that that's true?

A. How could I say that, Mr. Grant? You know as a lawyer, how could you say that the witnesses wouldn't support Mr. Jamal if you haven't talked to them?

Q. Well, you did put up witnesses on the stand?

A. Those that I could, sure. You know, all I am really saying is this. Look, I'm not saying that if we had the addresses, and I don't think I have the burden of showing that if we had the addresses and talked to them, that their story, we could have gotten something more beneficial.

Page 149.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. No, that is no burden, that is precisely what the issue is in this law proceeding.

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection. The witness was interrupted midway through the response. I ask Counsel to give the witness some courtesy.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. I just want to correct the record as to what the legal standard is for PCRA litigation.

A. I am not talking about that now, I am talking about something else.

Q. In other words, it makes --

A. Sorry, Mr. Grant, what I am talking about: At the time of trial, if I had the address of a witness Joe Blow, he says I saw Mr. Jamal shoot him and say I shot the mother fucker and I hope that he dies, fine. And if I have his address I go to visit him he may say the very same thing. And you say well, you wasted time. Or he may say, no, I didn't say that.

So when you say well, don't you think that those witnesses would hurt him -- how can I tell? The police are in control of all of the witnesses. I don't know what they would say to me if I talked to them. That's why I wanted the investigator. That's why I wanted their addresses. Now, again you could tell me about the policy here in this criminal justice system and how much you got. Fine, but it just seems to me common sense tells you that if you had an opportunity to talk to the witnesses, there may be some possible changes in their testimony.

Certainly every time the Police Department -- well, again you are going to say this is a conspiracy. But each time the Police Department 's witnesses testified in this case, they changed their testimony. And, again, it helped them. Because they had access to the witnesses. Who knows if I had access to the witnesses, they may have changed their testimony as well. And I could give you the whole list of them. They all changed their testimony to the Police Department and helped the prosecution. And again, I am not suggesting that anyone did anything wrong. It certainly could have been coincidental. But again, if I had access to the witnesses, I may have had some beneficial coincidences.

Q. Have you ever heard of the case of

Page 151.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Commonwealth versus Brady?

A. Heard of it, sure have.

Q. And it's progeny, there are a number of cases now?

A. Yeah.

Q. Because in 1981, people lied to police first and then they would tell the truth, now they tell the truth first and then when they come in Court they lie. So they have developed that rule of law which was departing from everything the Commonwealth ever followed because they say there has got to be a way to deal with this situation. So you could bring the person's statement up that they made the first or the second time and say come on, which one is the truth. Do you know that is the law now?

A. Yeah.

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection, Your Honor, to the form of the question.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Do you know that is the law now?

A. Sure I do.

Q. And do you realize that no one is accusing the defense lawyers of controlling those witnesses when they come up on the stand now and they say I don't know nothing, I didn't say nothing? But you are saying that about the Commonwealth, aren't you?

Page 152.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. I am saying two different things. I am saying the Commonwealth was in control of the witnesses, that's one thing. And I'm saying yes, witnesses changed their testimony. I am not saying because they were in control that made them change their testimony. I am simply saying that they had access to them and their statements changed. You know, we wouldn't have this argument if I had access to those witnesses. Wouldn't have this argument at all. All you have to do is give Tony Jackson the addresses and we wouldn't have this big debate. And maybe it is philosophical, Mr. Grant, and I don't mean to do it. I am simply saying that I don't have access to those witnesses and I don't think it should have been.

Q. I am not going to revisit that issue.

A. Okay.

Q. But I would like to inquire of you about your possession of the Internal Affairs statement given by Gary Wakshul.

A. Right.

Q. You said Mr. Jackson had some statements and you had some statements. But Mr. Jamal does not receive the statements from the District Attorney?

Page 153.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. That's right.

Q. The lawyers do?

A. Oh, yeah.

Q. So if he had it, you had it?

A. I said yes.

Q. Do you recall Mr. Jamal giving a summation to the Jury after they convicted him of murder in the first degree?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you recall him to quote John Africa, when a lawyer chooses to follow the conditions of the court he compromises his obligation to his client. He is referring to you there, by the way.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was a legal-trained lawyer who followed Sabo's direction not to introduce the testimony of Mr. Gary Wakshul. A cop who according to his statement of 12-9-82 -- he meant '81 -- arrested me, carried me to a wagon, accompanied me to Jefferson Hospital, guarded me and returned to Homicide later that morning to make a statement. According to Wakshul, quote, we stayed with the male at Jefferson until we were released. During this time the Negro mail made no comments, unquote. He further states, according to Wakshul's statement of February llth,

Page 154.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

1982 -- which is the one I gave you this morning from IAB, over two months later, Wakshul recalls, quote, oh, yeah, Jamal said I shot him, I hope the M'F'er dies. Did he consider that comment.

Now, this is in the closing argument at the penalty phase of capital litigation.

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection, it was not closing argument. I just want to correct Counsel.

MR. GRANT: Well, Your Honor --

MR. WEINGLASS: Mr. Jackson made the closing argument.

MR. GRANT: If the Court pleases: Mr. Jamal considered it closing argument because he didn't think he would be cross-examined. Much to his dismay, he was.

MR. WEINGLASS: It wasn't closing argument. You can't cross-examine someone on closing argument.

THE COURT: He was just saying what he thought Mr. Jamal said.

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

THE COURT: Do you have problems hearing?

MR. WEINGLASS: I can't hear you,

Page 155.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Judge, I'm sorry.

THE COURT: I said he just made the comment as to what Mumia Abu-Jamal thought he was doing. We understand he was cross-examined on that. Supreme Court had ruled on that issue. Okay.

Go ahead.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Unless somebody snuck into your office in the dark of night, rifled your files looking for one statement, and ran out with it undetected, and in no other way, could Mr. Jamal get that statement unless you gave it to him; wouldn't that be fair to say?

A. Absolutely you are right.

Q. So you would admit you had that statement?

A. I must have had that statement.

Q. So when you didn't call Mr. Wakshul to the stand, do you think more probably than not that it was because of your strategic decision based on what was in that statement not to present that to the Jury?

A. Again, I don't ever remember, and I am saying this with all sincerity, I don't ever remember seeing

Page 156.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

the statement.

Q. Okay.

A. It is obvious, and I am telling you now, if Mr. Jamal had the statement I had the statement. I don't ever remember seeing that statement. Now, if I did, I just don't remember. And if I read the statement, it may be a tactical decision not to do it. But I don't remember having to make that tactical decision.

Q. Okay. That's fair enough. You stated in your affidavit, paragraph 4 -- sorry, paragraph 3 on page 4 -- that you called to the witness stand Miss Veronica Jones and Mr. Hightower to testify for the defense. And you said yesterday that you didn't know how you got in touch with Miss Jones.

A. Yeah.

Q. But she suddenly appeared and was available for you on the day you needed her?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you consider that an incredible statement?

A. Yes.

Q. In other words, not worthy of belief?

A. Pardon me?

Q. Incredible means not worthy of belief?

A. Well, if that's what incredible means. To

Page 157.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

this day I still don't remember how I got her to come to Court. Other than I told the D.A.

Q. Well, you think you sent out some telepathy vibes and she said man, Anthony wants me in to testify today?

A. No, I don't think that was the way. I think, I'm saying I don't know how I got her into Court. I really don't.

Q. Maybe it's because you had her address?

A. Okay, fine. Maybe I did. I don't know how I got that address. Maybe, I don't remember.

Q. Okay.

A. Tell me. I don't remember 13 years ago.

Q. And you said these were the only two eyewitnesses available for the defense in your affidavit?

A. Yeah, you know, I think Dessie Hightower and his friend, the way we were able to get their addresses, I think because of some admixture of their statements we could glean their addresses.

Q. Ahh. Just like if you had a guy who said I drove a cab for United and you know United Cab's office is at 12th and Locust and his name is X, then you could call up and say do you have so-and-so there?

Page 158.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. No, it is different, but I am not going to argue with you.

Q. All right.

A. But anyway, the address was in the statement somewhere, that's how we got their, that's how we got those addresses. If you say I had Veronica Jones' address then fine, I don't remember. I didn't remember that we had her. I think it was just Dessie and one other person. If I had Veronica's then fine.

Q. When you said that these were the only two eyewitnesses available for the defense, what you really meant to say was that of the people who saw the killing, these were the only ones from whom you could create an impression that Mr. Jamal was not a murderer, isn't that what you mean?

A. No, sir. Debbie Kordansky is one.

Q. Oh, really?

A. I would think based on the statement that I had, that she saw somebody else running away. And everyone else -- the cab driver, one time, as you know, he said he saw a man run up, shoot the police officer and run away. Of course he changed his testimony. But when you say these are the only two, when you said these are the only two witnesses I could find for the defense, Debbie

Kordansky in my

mind --

Q. You said these were the only two eyewitnesses --

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. -- available for the defense?

A. I'm sorry, I forgot the eye --

MR. WEINGLASS: Once again the witness was interrupted midway through.

THE COURT: Well. He is refreshing his memory.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. These are the only two eyewitnesses that you mentioned. Now, isn't it a fact that not even Mr. Hightower was an eyewitness by his own statements: He hears five shots and he is around the corner of a building and he comes out when there is no more shooting because he was afraid to come out, and that's what he testified to at trial, didn't he, sir?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection to the form of the question.

THE COURT: Overruled.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Didn't he, sir?

MR. WEINGLASS: It omits the fact --

Page 160.

MR. GRANT: I would object to him preparing the witness. If you want to prep him prep him before.

THE COURT: If you want to see me at sidebar ask, but please don't try to tell the witness what to say.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am not doing that. I don't know on what basis the Court makes that observation, also, unless it is an improper observation. With all due respect, I object.

THE COURT: With all due respect, the objection is overruled.

THE WITNESS: To answer your question --

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. He was not an eyewitness, was he, to the shooting?

A. To answer your question: If I called in the eyewitness I must have had a reason to call in the eyewitness at that time. And his testimony was whatever it was.

Q. What was it, was it an eyewitness, or did he say he didn't see the shooting? You certainly could remember that. It is the only death penalty you have ever tried and lost. You remember that, tell us you remember that?

A. I don't think he saw the shooting.

Q. Thank you.

A. You're welcome.

Q. And neither did Debbie Kordansky, according to her statement, did she?

A. No.

Q. So those weren't eyewitnesses that weren't available to you, were they?

A. Now, see, Mr. Grant --

Q. Yes or no, sir?

A. Mr. Grant --

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Well, he could answer yes or no and then explain it if he has to.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Yes or no, sir?

A. She was an eyewitness.

Q. Oh.

A. Now, see, but you're making the distinction and trying to make me buy into what you want me to say. She was an eyewitness to -- you are saying she wasn't an eyewitness to the shooting. Fine. But she was an eyewitness to seeing the man run away. There are differences. And I am not going to buy any of what you say. So when I say she was an eyewitness, I still say she was an eyewitness. She eyes the man running away. Doesn't that make her an eyewitness?

Q. Yes.

A. Thank you.

Q. She witnessed something with her eyes, is what you mean. You implied during the trial that the person seen running away was the shooter of Officer Faulkner?

A. I sure would like to know who he was.

Q. No.

A. Maybe I did.

Q. Did you or didn't you?

A. I must have. At times I don't know who he was.

Q. At times you didn't even know the person existed but that's what you implied throughout the trial?

A. All I know is what those people say. If they said it, I wasn't there. They said they saw the man run, so what should I say, oh, they're lying?

Q. Well, not exactly.

A. Oh, okay then.

Q. Mr. Hightower claimed to see someone running away and he didn't know if it was a man or a woman;

Page 163.

that was his testimony, wasn't it?

A. Fine, but who was it who ran away?

Q. What was his testimony? It could have been a woman who shot Police Officer Faulkner in the back and stood over him and shot him in the face: That was his testimony, wasn't it?

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, may the testimony be given by the witness?

THE COURT: Well, if he doesn't remember.

THE WITNESS: Look, I will accept that. If you are saying he said it, fine. I mean I am not going to try to remember the specific testimony of these witnesses. If you say he says it I have no reason to disagree. He said whatever he said.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Thank you. Now, the truth is that no matter how much investigation you did, over how much time, and notwithstanding all the resources and groups available to Mr. Jamal and to you, and notwithstanding all the organizations offering monetary and other support, you just did not find any evidence that showed him to be innocent; isn't that the simple truth in this case?

Page 164.

A. I did. The simple truth is I didn't find it. That's right. If I had more resources I may have. I don't know.

Q. And you may have found out that there was no such evidence that you could unearth no matter how much money or how much time you could have had?

A. You are absolutely right.

MR. WEINGLASS: You may have found out: I object, it is a speculative question. You can't ask the witness to speculate.

MR. GRANT: He gave a speculative response and I was giving him the converse of what he stated.

MR. WEINGLASS: May I have a ruling?

THE COURT: Objection overruled.

Go ahead.

Quiet.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Now, the people that you called as character witnesses in the guilt phase that testified on Mr. Jamal's behalf, none of them were called in the penalty phase and in your -- this is a declaration as opposed to an affidavit; is that right?

A. Yeah.

Q. Okay. Those people did not testify at the penalty phase and you say in your affidavit, sir, I had no tactical or strategic reason for not putting on mitigation evidence on behalf of Mr. Jamal. And you know very well what the legal effect of saying that in a proceeding like this is, don't you?

Page 165.

A. Yeah.

Q. What is the legal effect of it?

A. No tactical reasons, must have been for ineffectiveness, sure, I understand that.

Q. Yes. If that is accepted by the Court, if that bald assertion that is in your affidavit is accepted, what happens as a result of that?

A. The Court has the option of granting a new trial or some other remedy.

Q. Yes, precisely. Now, you didn't build ineffectiveness into this record so that if you lost he would be guaranteed a new trial, did you?

A. Never have, never will.

Q. And the people that you didn't put on at the penalty phase that were called at the guilt phase who testified as to character, more than likely you passed them as you came into the Court and you probably looked in their faces as you walked into the room on the very day of the penalty hearing, because they attended the trial in this case, they came to

Page 166.

Court and followed the case, didn't they?

A. No, no, no, no.

Q. They didn't?

A. No, most of the people weren't. I think there may have been one or two. Most of these people did not attend the trial everyday, no. Not the character witnesses, no, sir.

Q. Now, Mr. Jamal -- well, strike that question. Are you telling the Court that you don't know why you didn't call these people at the mitigation phase?

A. No. I don't know why. I don't know why.

Q. Well, tell us some reasons that could have gone through your mind, since your recollection is faulty and you don't want to read the notes of testimony to refresh it for whatever reason that may be, tell us why you tactically may not have used them?

A. Tactically?

Q. Yes, sir.

(Pause.)

A. I can't think of any tactical reason not to put them on.

Q. How about practical instead of tactical?

A. Practical, they weren't here.

Q. Well, how about another one?

Page 167.

A. Such as?

Q. Such as Mr. Jamal was saying all along that you were working for Judge Sabo, that you were going to get him killed, and that you were a no-good, law-trained lawyer, and even shouted this on a number of occasions in this very Courtroom out loud, that you were going to get him convicted, didn't he, to your face, didn't he?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection, Your Honor, to the form of the question, number one.

THE COURT: Overruled.

MR. WEINGLASS: He never shouted.

MR. GRANT: How do you know?

THE COURT: You weren't here, Counselor, I was. And your objection is overruled. He could answer.

MR. WEINGLASS: The questioner wasn't here either.

THE COURT: Well, he was the attorney.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, the questioner puts it in the record.

THE COURT: Well, that's all right, he could answer. His answer is what counts, not his question.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, I objected.

Page 168.

THE COURT: Counselor, I have overruled the objection. Please sit down.

Go ahead.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. He shouted in your face a number of times, didn't he?

A. He may have, sure.

Q. No, Mr. Jackson, you have never been so humiliated in any case, you can't remember that?

A. Mr. Jamal called me a bunch of names, a whole bunch of things to me.

Q. In other than conversational tones at times, didn't he?

A. Oh, yeah, sure.

Q. Would it be fair to say that he shouted things at you during the course of the trial in a public forum?

A. Okay, fine.

Q. Why do I have to spar with you for every answer if you are telling the truth here?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection. Objection to the form of the question.

THE COURT: Overruled.

THE WITNESS: Mr. Grant, let me tell you, this is why you are sparing -- and I don't mean to spar with you -- but you are asking me about specific words that somebody said 13 years ago and you want me to give you an answer with absolute certainly. Don't you think that that may be part of the reason why I said I don't really know? That is the reason. I do not know word-for-word what he said or anybody. I don't know what I said 13 years ago, let alone what somebody else said. That is the reason, sir.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. A shout doesn't have to even be a word, shouting at someone could be nonverbal?

A. Mr. Jamal shouted at me a number of times, I agree.

Q. Thank you.

A. If that's all you wanted to know, if he shouted, say shouting. Yes, he shouted at me.

Q. Okay. Now, 13 years ago your memory is not too good when it comes to answering my questions, but you detailed chapter and verse in your affidavit or your declaration here all the things from memory 13 years ago after talking with Mr. Weinglass on only a few occasions?

A. Sure.

Q. How come your memory is so great for him and

Page 170.

so lousy for me?

A. Good explanation: Mr. Weinglass talked to me and showed me the notes. You didn't bring me over to your office to look at the notes.

Q. I showed you notes every day since you have been here and I have been talking to you for eight hours?

A. But Mr. Weinglass wasn't cross-examining me when he was, when the affidavit was there and he could find the transcript and say well, during the time of this part of the declaration, here is the transcript. What you are doing is you are asking me a question and giving me a transcript all at the same time and asking me to remember. I'm not that good.

Q. Well, a practical reason why you may not have put those witnesses on, sir, is after he berated, humiliated and degraded you in public, and basically had been saying throughout the trial that no law-trained lawyer could acquit him except John Africa who wasn't a lawyer, when he got the verdict of murder in the first degree and was facing death, he told you in no uncertain terms anybody could have done that and if that's what 20 years of education gets you I don't need you, from now on this is my show, I don't need you for the penalty phase, I will tell you what I am going to do, I am going to give my own statement, you don't do nothing for me -- isn't that what happened to you?

A. Didn't happen.

Q. Isn't that why you were afraid to go to the cell room?

A. I was afraid?

Q. Apprehensive, whatever you want to call it? You testified that you were yesterday?

A. Yeah. I maybe, I mean I wasn't afraid but I am telling you that never happened what you said. Never happened.

Q. Never happened?

A. Never happened.

Q. So you were in control of the penalty phase too?

A. There you go with the control again.

Q. Yes, I am.

A. Listen, one of the things, if you are saying that he told me he didn't want me to do something: As I recall, I did speak during the penalty phase. So if I was following orders then I wouldn't have said anything. I did. I talked for a good while.

Q. But when you found out that Mr. Jamal was going to read a declaration to the Jurors, was it something that was written?

A. I think. I think he had something written. I don't know if the entire address to the Jury was from a prepared statement, though. But he did have something written.

Q. And did you see that before he delivered it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ask him for it?

A. No, sir.

Q. And you knew you'd better not, didn't you?

A. I have never been -- I mean if that's what he wanted to do what difference does it -- yeah, that's right, why would I want to ask and see it? I don't know what it contained. He wanted to exercise his right. That's his right. I am not going to trample it. Who am I to do that?

Q. Well, who are you, you are the person that said basically because I didn't do those things I was totally ineffective as Counsel at the penalty phase. That's why I'm asking you these questions. Why didn't you look at it? Because you were afraid of the man, because you failed him in his mind and you didn't want to quarrel with his decisions thereafter; isn't that so?

A. At no time up until now have I ever been afraid of Mr. Jamal or any other man.

Q. Well, how about being apprehensive of contact physically or verbally?

A. What was he going to do? I have been called a lot worse names than Mr. Jamal has called me, believe me, a lot worse names. So that was it. I wasn't afraid of being called names. I wasn't afraid of him beating me up. I don't know what else I was supposed to be afraid of. I mean what are you trying to say?

Q. I am trying to say you didn't have a clue as to what he was going to say but sit in that chair and say nothing at all at the penalty phase, let him get up and read a statement, or basically outburst as he had been doing all trial, because he was going to tell you what he was going to do because he no longer had any confidence in you?

A. Well, he didn't have any confidence in me. Mr. Jamal wanted to make this address to the Jury. All along he had been claiming that the Court, through me, through Mr. McGill and Judge Sabo, had been trampling on his rights and not letting him exercise his rights. If he wanted to address the Jury and he had a right to address the Jury, I was not going to stand in the way. Plain and simple.

Q. In other words, you didn't abdicate your responsibility, you were giving him the freedom and the latitude to do what he thought he had to do to save his life?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would that be fair to say?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why would you call it ineffectiveness, then?

A. I didn't call that ineffectiveness.

Q. You most certainly did.

A. When Mr. Jamal rose to address the Jury during the sentencing phase I had no knowledge of what he was about to say. He indicated to me that morning when I met with him in the holding cell prior to the start of Court, he wanted me to call him up to the stand for the purpose of making a statement. I complied.

Q. Sounds like you are taking orders again. But I did not see the statement --

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection. Objection for the record: Form of the question.

THE COURT: I will interpret it. Go ahead.

MR. WEINGLASS: Is my objection overruled?

THE COURT: I said that I am not listening to what his interpretation is, I will interpret it myself at the proper time.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. I did not see the statement, I did not see the statement, counsel him on the consequences of his doing so, did not discuss what impact his appearance might have, and did not advise him of the risk inherent in such a move, including cross-examination. No strategic or tactical reasons governed my actions in not preparing for the sentencing phase. And you already told us, sir, that you know that that means the possibility of a new trial just by those magic words. What do you mean you are not claiming your own ineffectiveness?

A. Okay, Mr. Grant, I didn't say it was ineffective of me to allow Mr. Jamal to address the Jury. The penalty phase is where I said there was -- see, you are, you are trying to confuse me. You know how you lawyers are.

Q. Yeah, I know how.

A. Listen, what I am saying was during the time that he made the address I had no, he made the address to the Jury, I felt that there was no reason for me to interfere with his right to address the Jury. I still feel that way. Because of all that had gone on before that time. And I concluded the declaration of course by saying that there was no strategic reason or tactical reason for me not to prepare for the penalty phase. That's all inclusive.

Q. I am almost through, Mr. Jackson.

A. Well, take your time, sir.

Q. Page 6, paragraph 1 of your affidavit. You state -- I'm paraphrasing because I don't have the exact quote -- Gary Wakshul, the police officer whose name has been bandied about so often in this Courtroom in the last three weeks, went on vacation despite a notation on Wakshul's report that he not be allowed to go on vacation during the trial. Now, what report are you talking about, and what notation are you describing?

A. As I recall, and I think Mr. Weinglass had shown me a statement, but I didn't have the statement when I did it.

Q. Oh, he showed you a statement that had some writing on it?

A. Or something of that sort. I mean that's the only way.

Q. Was that a police statement that he gave about this crime?

A. I mean I had to get it from somewhere, it certainly wasn't something that I recall. And of course I don't have the statement.

Q. Well, Mr. Weinglass had it then he showed it to you, right?

A. He showed me a statement or another report or something. I don't know whether it was... I don't think it was his statement. I don't know what it was, I don't remember. See, I don't even remember something within the last year, so. I mean that's the only reason I would have said it.

Q. Well, maybe Mr. Weinglass remembers?

A. Maybe.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, it was read into the record at trial. And if Counsel will look at the page reference for July lst, he will see that Mr. Jamal read into the record with the statement in front of him the words no vacation which appears on the front of the December 9th statement of Officer Gary Wakshul.

I'm sorry Counsel has overlooked the statement himself. Maybe he's read it 10 times and he overlooks parts of the statement. But the fact remains it is on the statement.

MR. GRANT: December 9th statement of Gary Wakshul.

Page 178.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

MR. GRANT: Ahh, I see. Now we are getting down to cases, aren't we.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. You know what this means, don't you, Mr. Jackson? You worked in the Police Department. I want you to look at this so you could tell Counsel from New York City what this means?

A. No, I am not doing that.

Q. Yes, you are going to do that.

A. Not unless you order me.

Q. Yes, you are going to do that.

THE COURT OFFICER: Quiet in the Courtroom, please.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Why don't you look up there in the upper left-hand corner, sir?

A. Upper left-hand corner.

Q. Now we are starting to figure out what this mystery is all about. Tell us in Philadelphia how things work. Up in the corner it gives the police officer's name, badge number and district, doesn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it has in the parentheses no dash V-A-C:

Page 179.

Vacation, right? Now you tell this man what that means, sir, and you tell the Judge what that means to you?

A. No vac?

Q. Yes.

A. Umm, well, just like I couldn't elaborate on the 44 C-A-L, I don't think I better elaborate on this either.

Q. I don't think you want to elaborate on it.

A. It doesn't matter whether I want to or not, and I think the same thing is true.

Q. Tell me what you think it means now? Because you are telling everybody else what you thought it meant, now tell us what you thought it means?

A. No vacation.

Q. No. Not scheduled in 1981? Not scheduled for the next three months? What does it mean to you, having been a former member of the Police Department, or at least an employee?

A. That he worked in 3 squad.

Q. Yeah?

A. Group zero. No vacation.

Q. And does that mean if this trial goes to Court in the next 10 years he is not going to be on vacation?

Page 180.

A. I don't know.

Q. Was the trial date set on 12-9-81 for a murder that happened on 12-9-81?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, how could anybody say he wasn't going to be on vacation when the case went to trial? Tell me that?

A. I made a mistake, then.

Q. Yeah, you sure did. Give me that, sir?

A. Yes, sir (handing).

Q. So that notation that Mr. Jamal is reading, did you interpret it the same way in 1982?

A. No, sir, I didn't. I didn't pay any attention to it.

Q. Because you knew it had no significance in terms of whether this man was allowed to take a vacation at any time in his life. At that time in the interview he was not scheduled to be on vacation in the foreseeable future. And as a matter of fact, you know as a matter of practice by you working there you don't even submit your vacation requests until May of the following year for the next year's vacation, don't you know that?

A. You flatter me a little bit too much. I was a civilian, it was different. I am not quibbling with you. But again, at the time of the trial, I am telling you that it had no particular significance to me. His or anyone else's. I mean that is the first time I really remember seeing anybody else's or whatever. I mean the other police officers, I don't know what they had to do. If you just randomly selected another police officer's statement, it may have the same thing. You don't have to do that, I am just simply telling you I have never paid it any attention.

Q. That is a good point.

A. There was no reason, because all the other police officers I wanted were in Court.

Q. Why didn't you tell Mr. Jamal the significance of that instead of putting it in the declaration?

A. Mr. Grant, I don't really know it has no significance. Let's be truthful, I really don't.

Q. It was clear enough, it was significant enough to make it a basis to have a new trial for him. It had significance back on December 18th, how could the significance disappear by whatever date we are here today?

A. The significance was the officer wasn't here.

Q. And the significance was that Mr. Jamal didn't ask for him to be here either until that very moment;

Page 182.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

isn't that so?

A. We asked for him to be here, he wasn't here, sir. I don't think it really makes any difference whether he was scheduled to be on vacation or not scheduled to be on vacation. I requested that he be here, he wasn't here. That is the thing that is significant, isn't it?

Q. Yes, that's significant, that's very significant. Is that what, the statement that I showed you, is that what Mr. Weinglass showed you?

A. You know, I don't know. It may have been. It may have been a reproduction or something. I just don't know.

Q. Well, the one that I showed you earlier that's been marked C-6 for identification was from the Special Investigations Bureau.

MR. GRANT: Could you show that, Mr. Bullard, to Mr. Jackson?

THE COURT OFFICER: (Handing.)

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. This was taken closer in time to the trial?

A. This doesn't even have anything like that.

Q. Isn't that a miracle. Of course it doesn't. Because maybe he had vacation scheduled then. Did you ever think of that? They write no vacation when

Page 183.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

he has none scheduled and they don't put anything when he does have it scheduled, how about that?

A. Mr. Grant, I really don't, I have no knowledge of that.

Q. You are saying things about which you know not, and you put that in your affidavit, didn't you?

A. No, I am saying that I have no knowledge of the hypothetical you are presenting to me right now.

Q. Oh.

A. Your hypothetical is not in my affidavit. But I am simply saying I don't know why they would have it, have it on that statement on those occasions and not on this statement. I don't have any, I have no clue. I have no clue. Why is it on one and not on another?

Q. You had both of those statements at the time of trial, or at least Mr. Jamal had them, therefore you admit you must have had them, and the one of them in 1981 is the year, that had no vacation scheduled, and the other one is the year 1982 and it doesn't say anything about vacation. Now, does that mean in your mind, being a reasonable person, that Gary Wakshul is not allowed to go on vacation on July 1st of 1982 because back on December 9th of 1981 it said he had no vacation scheduled?

Page 184.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. Okay, Mr. Grant, to answer your question, what does this mean. Because it doesn't say no vacation on it, then, does that mean he isn't going on vacation or that he is?

Q. Well, it means we shouldn't speculate if we don't know, doesn't it?

A. Well, wait. Why does it have it on one and not the other?

Q. I guess you will have to ask Officer Goldberg.

A. Well, it seems to me that what I said now becomes valid. He had no vacation on it. Because it doesn't have it on there doesn't mean he was going on vacation or not on vacation. I don't know what else to say. It has no vacation. That's what it said on the statement. The statement speaks for itself, that's all I could say.

Q. What do you mean it makes it better? Better for Mr. Jamal?

A. Pardon me?

Q. You just said that, having seen this now it makes it better?

A. Yeah.

Q. No, better for Mr. Jamal?

A. You asked me the question and said no, no, no, whichever answer I was giving you. Tell me what the

Page 185.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

answer that you want, order me to --

Q. You answer the question that you want to answer and then you answer my question.

A. I want to ask you the answer. You ask me, sir, and I am going to give you my answer, though.

Q. All right, what do you mean that makes it even better, that's my question?

A. Sure. I am simply saying you have two statements, one of them has no vacation, this one has nothing. I am simply saying what does this one mean when it has nothing on it, that he is not on vacation or he is on vacation? It seems to me if the other one has no vacation, he is not going on vacation, so this one has nothing on it so he is going on vacation. If I follow your line of thought.

Q. What is an R-D-O?

A. Pardon me?

Q. What is an R-D-O?

A. I have no idea. I don't know what that is.

Q. That is kind of an acronym for regular days off.

A. Oh. I didn't know that.

Q. For the majority of the human race, regular days off are Saturday and Sunday, but policemen have to work whenever they are told so they have regular days off but they may be Monday-Tuesday.

Page 186.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. Right.

Q. Or Wednesday and Thursday of the week.

A. Okay.

Q. That is an RDO.

A. Okay.

Q. Do you know whether Officer Gary Wakshul was entitled to any RDOs because he was a police officer, or should he work seven days?

A. No, he should work five days a week, sir.

Q. And you didn't know that when you wanted him, whether or not that was his RDO, do you?

A. No, sir.

Q. And do you think if you got off on a Saturday that you have to stay at your house and not be allowed to go down the shore if you wanted to just because there may be an Anthony Jackson or a Mr. Jamal somewhere waiting to summon you unexpectedly?

A. No, Mr. Grant, look, I can see that I should have made plans to call the officer early and I didn't. I mean that's all I can say. You know, but this other --

Q. But you didn't see --

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection.

BY MR. GRANT:

Page 187.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. I'm sorry, continue. Finish.

A. I am simply saying that I didn't request that the officer be present earlier and I should have. And that's what I am admitting to. I don't understand all this other jargon.. About his regular days off and his vacation and this. The fact is he wasn't here. He was requested to come and I was told that it was at the last minute, I couldn't get him in. Now, when I made the request I didn't know if he was on vacation. I didn't know if he was on his regular day off. I didn't know if he was outside in the hallway. If he was here we would have put him on the stand and we wouldn't have this discussion.

Q. Well, we would because you said on cross earlier today that if you had read the statement he gave to SIU -- or, I'm sorry, the staff inspector in the Internal Affairs Bureau, you as a good lawyer may very well have made the tactical decision I don't want them to hear what is in his second statement?

A. I may have, that's right.

Q. So maybe it wasn't a mistake that he wasn't on the stand, isn't that so?

A. Listen, I didn't, I wouldn't know this officer if he walked right through this door.

Q. That is not the point.

Page 188.

A. No, but if I requested that he be brought to Court then I must -- when I asked the question, it isn't because I knew he was on vacation. The only tactical advantage I would have to ask for him to be in Court is because I knew he was on vacation. I didn't know he was on vacation. So if he was available they would have brought him in and I would have put him on the stand, right?

Q. Right.

A. Okay.

Q. Page 7, paragraph 8. Your affidavit. Also during our last conversation -- this is you in your affidavit -- I thought perhaps other members of his family -- meaning Mr. Jamal -- who were present might also want to testify. We are talking at the penalty phase here I believe. Yes. Other members of his family were present may also want to testify. When asked Mr. Jamal if he wanted me to put them on, he declined.

A. When is this? What are you reading from?

Q. Yeah, it is puzzling to me too.

A. What are you reading from?

Q. I am reading from your words, if I am not mistaken. Page 7, paragraph 8.

MR. WEINGLASS: May I see that?

Page 189.

MR. GRANT: Yeah, I will read it with you. Come here.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Also during our last conversation I thought perhaps other members of his family who were present may also want to testify even though they hadn't been prepared.

MR. WEINGLASS: They hadn't been prepared was omitted in the question.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. When I asked Mr. Jamal if he wanted me to put them on in any event --

MR. WEINGLASS: In any event.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. -- he declined. Now, was he controlling whether you put them on in the penalty phase or not?

A. Tell me...

Q. I will rephrase it, it is a control word. Let's forget the control word. He told you don't put my people on?

A. Because they weren't prepared.

Q. So he said you haven't prepared my family so I don't want to take the risk that they will not know how to say good things about me because they've known me all their life?

A. I am not saying he said those specific words. You could ask me but that's where we get into problems.

Q. Mr. Jackson --

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection, Your Honor. The witness was interrupted again. Please show the witness courtesy.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. You are under oath, Mr. Jackson.

MR. WEINGLASS: May the witness answer the question?

THE WITNESS: Mr. Grant, you keep and continue to ask me to recall what someone's specific words were 13 years ago. And I am going to tell you again, sir: I do not, do not generally have any specific recall of what anyone's specific words were 13 years ago, not only my own. That's my usual objection, sir. Now, so when you asked the question you said well, he said so and so and so and so. So what am I answering? I don't know if I am answering your question or trying to recall the words. That's the reason that you have problems getting an answer from me, sir.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Isn't the very purpose and reason that everybody is sitting in this room because of words that were said 13 years ago, which you remember selectively for him and not for anybody else? That's what we are talking about. That's called a PCRA. That's why you are testifying. That's why you are an affiant, do you understand that?

A. Yes, sir.

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection to the form of the question.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Well, why didn't you read the record? If you knew you were going to be on the stand making assertions bald in nature, why didn't you do your own work so you could help everybody reach the truth?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection to the form of the question. May I have a ruling from the Court?

THE COURT: Objection is overruled.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. You could answer the question.

A. I did my homework, sir.

MR. WEINGLASS: Is the objection overruled?

Page 192.

THE COURT: I said he could answer.

MR. WEINGLASS: I object on the grounds of form, compound, improper question, argumentative, lacking in foundation, all or any of those grounds.

MR. GRANT: I withdraw the question.

THE COURT: He is withdrawing the question.

Go ahead.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. I withdraw the question --

A. Yes.

Q. -- that you heard.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, based on what you heard of my withdrawn question -- and you knew you were going to be asked questions about things that occurred 13 years ago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who do you think it would benefit if you didn't read the record, Mr. Jamal, or the Commonwealth, or the truth?

A. Mr. Grant, I did review the record.

Q. What record?

A. You know, I am trying to answer the question but you are interrupting me. I did review the

Page 193.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

record. I did not review the entire record. Now you are upset because I haven't reviewed the part of the record that you wanted me to review. All you had to do was to ask me in advance and I would have done that. I wasn't going to sit here today, take my time and read the transcript of the record for you.

THE COURT: Mr. Weinglass, I appreciate it if you don't nod at the witness.

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

THE COURT: Don't nod to the witness,

MR. WEINGLASS: I am nodding in agreement after I hear what the witness said. I am not nodding in advance.

THE WITNESS: I didn't notice, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Just please don't.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. What transcripts did you read, then, since you told us yesterday you hadn't read any?

A. When I told you -- Mr. Grant, you are missing -- I never told you. I told you that I did prepare and I did read excerpts of transcripts. I did not read this entire transcript. And you are asking me if I wanted to read -- how long would it take me to read the entire transcript of this trial?

Page 194.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

I've already lost three days I am not getting paid. Before I didn't get paid. Nobody gets paid in this thing. Do you understand what I am saying? Why would I read the entire transcript? Why would I want to know what the medical examiner said now? I mean is that relevant? So I only read the portions of the transcript that I thought were relevant.

Now, because it didn't coincide with yours you are chastising me. Well, I will take it. I will take that hit.

Q. I am not chastising you, because I just want to know, tell me which portions you did read so maybe I could examine you on those?

A. The ones that are consistent with the statement that I made in the declaration, sir.

Q. So the things that support the motion for a new trial you read?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay, those are the things that we have been talking about for the last two days, basically, anyway? So you read the important parts, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Okay. Let's just look at a summary of the good things you did like a good lawyer should. Tell me if I'm wrong.

Page 195.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You filed a motion for discovery, omnibus discovery, meaning typical discovery: You got all the documents a lawyer should get to defend his client?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then within 21 days of the shooting you filed the complaint against the police by which you generated a new investigation, and that brought you many possibilities for you to have conflicts in the witnesses' statements so that that could benefit your client; correct?

A. At least that.

Q. And then you filed a motion for a lineup, didn't you, for the eyewitnesses?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you filed a motion to have all kinds of experts appointed to assist your client, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Including an investigator?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you wrote a letter to the then District Attorney Ed Rendell, now Mayor, demanding that in addition to the Homicide investigation and the Police Internal Affairs Bureau investigation, you wanted him to launch an independent investigation, and then you wrote a letter after that to him, didn't you? Think carefully.

Page 196.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. Umm, I may have written a letter to him but it certainly wasn't an additional investigation. I don't --

Q. Well, the D.A.'s not the police and the D.A.'s not the Internal Affairs Bureau so it would be an additional investigation if you asked for it, wouldn't it?

A. Well, the way I understood it, or the way it was intended, I didn't expect that there would be two investigations going on by Internal Affairs and the D.A.'s Office. It was just a question, when there is a use of deadly force there is a question whether the District Attorney's Office would conduct the investigation or Internal Affairs. As I understood it. That was the reason for the other request. I wasn't asking for, I didn't want all those investigations going on.

Q. Do you remember writing a letter to the D.A.'s Office demanding the results of discovery from their investigation?

A. Say that again, sir.

Page 197.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. Yeah. You demanded an investigation and then you presumed one was conducted, and then you wrote a letter demanding the results from the District Attorney in addition to the Internal Affairs Bureau and the Homicide detectives who investigated the murder; do you recall that?

A. No, I don't recall. But it just seems to me if I did that it must have been I had some reason to suspect that they conducted an investigation. With all the things I had to do, I don't think I would just waste time asking for the results of something that hadn't been done.

Q. I agree with you.

A. So I don't know why I would do it, unless maybe they did. I don't know.

MR. GRANT: C-7, Your Honor, please (handing).

(Letter was marked Commonwealth Exhibit C-7 for identification.)

THE COURT: Do you want to staple that together? Is that stapled?

THE COURT OFFICER: I will staple it, Your Honor. (Handing)

THE COURT: All right.

MR. GRANT: And could I have this

Page 198.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

marked as C-8, please (handing).

THE COURT OFFICER: Yes, sir.

(Letter was marked Commonwealth Exhibit C-8 for identification.)

MR. GRANT: By the way, Your Honor: C-7 purports to be a document over the letterhead of Mr. Jackson addressed to Edward G. Rendell, Esquire, District Attorney; and C-8 purports to be a document with the District Attorney's Office letterhead addressed to Mr. Anthony Jackson.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. While they are looking at those, sir.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You constantly stayed in communication with Mr. Jamal even when he shunned you, disrespected you, you tried to tell him things that were going on when he was ejected from the room, you whispered and told him things when he was in the room, when he told you to get away from him you didn't abandon him, you stayed with him, you tried to interpret the rules for him, you basically tried to make it understandable to him, did you not?

A. Yes, sir. Yes, sir.

Q. And you realized while you were dealing with

Page 199.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

this man that he was a very intelligent human being, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. One of the smartest defendants that you had ever seen?

A. Probably so.

Q. And from reviewing this record, one of the smartest people I have ever seen.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. This man was not a lawyer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was by profession a journalist?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he mastered to a certain degree the practice of examination, voir dire, tactics and strategy?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the Court six months after having been arrested for his case, isn't that true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You admired him and you respected him, did you not?

A. Well, I respected him, yes. I admired what he was doing for himself, yeah, trying to protect his life. I admire a man for doing that.

Page 200.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. With his native intelligence and demonstrated ability, and with your assistance, advice and counsel, don't you think you gave him a good trial?

A. Don't you think what?

Q. Don't you think that you give him an effective representation as a lawyer?

A. Mr. Grant, and I am going to tell you this, I did the best that I could. I am simply saying that in retrospect if there are things that I should have done and I didn't do, then I didn't do what I was supposed to. I knew at the time that I did everything that I could do the best I could. Plain and simple answer. And if you are saying well, the best you did wasn't good enough, then I have to accept that.

Q. I am not saying that.

A. Well.

Q. They are saying that. They are saying that.

A. Well, if the law requires a certain degree of proficiency, effectiveness, and I haven't provided it, then it really doesn't matter how good I thought I was. And I'm only saying, I am telling you what happened, what went on. It's not my decision to make. When I use -- it's up to the Court to decide if I am ineffective, and I am simply admitting to whatever errors I may have committed.

Page 201.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. All right. All right, you are looking at C-7 and C-8, sir. Do you recognize the document that purports to be over your signature?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is it, sir?

A. C-7 is a letter that I have written to Ed Rendell.

Q. For what purpose?

A. I am reading it now.

(Pause.)

A. Oh, you want me to lead read it out loud?

Q. Not necessarily.

A. Oh.

Q. You are demanding an explanation?

A. Yes.

Q. And an investigation into the alleged brutality of Mr. Jamal; correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. By the way, what was the result of all those complaints and demands and all that, was there ever a finding of brutality in that case?

A. Could I finish this for a second?

Q. I don't want to distract you, you could answer that later.

Page 202.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. Oh, okay.

(Pause.)

Q. What that basically says, sir --

A. Hmm-hmm.

Q. -- is that the D.A. says when police are investigating, when police are investigating these type of cases, we don't belong to the Police Department, we don't interfere, if they make a finding and we think we should prosecute then we will, but they are doing a separate investigation because you asked them, the Homicide Division did an investigation because it is their job, and if things arise that we think we should deal with then we will do that and give you all the results, did he not say that?

A. Yes, essentially.

Q. So basically you were going to get a third set of discovery, weren't you, or you hoped?

A. You know what I was trying to do? I was trying to get as much information as the D.A. had.

Q. That's right.

A. That's what I was trying to do. I was trying to as much as possible be as prepared as the D.A. was. Because I knew I was at a disadvantage. That's what I was trying to do every minute of every moment

Page 203.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

that I was trying this case, yes, sir.

Q. And you filed a motion to suppress every one of the statements that the Commonwealth wanted to use at trial, didn't you?

A. Yes, I did. Or in cooperation with Mr. Jamal, yes, sir.

Q. And you filed a petition not to act like the regular routine lawyers have to be dealt with, you wanted all your experts to be paid up front, or as close to up front as possible, and you wanted them to get more money than the normal person gets, and you accomplished both things, didn't you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, you got more money than is normally paid, and you got the money before it's normally paid, right?

A. No, I could just tell you something, Mr. Grant, since you asked this now. And this issue came up yesterday, I was talking to some colleagues. I found out there were a lot of other lawyers getting a lot more money for their experts than me.

Q. Oh, yeah?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are they here to be cross-examined on this or is this going to be some hearsay you will throw into

Page 204.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

the record?

A. Let me just tell you this. You have Mr. Greer coming in tomorrow. Ask him how much money he's gotten for other investigations for Court appointments, you'll find out.

Q. Well, if he was collecting --

A. He's gotten thousands of dollars for investigation, Court-appointed cases.

Q. If he was collecting it from more than one source, as apparently Mr. Greer was, I am sure he did.

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection, Your Honor. There is no evidence for Counsel's statement. I ask it be stricken. I object to the form.

THE COURT: He said there was some indication that some of the money went to him.

MR. WEINGLASS: There is no indication whatsoever in this record that any money went to Mr. Greer. There is some allusion to the fact, no more than that, that some money went to Mr. Bill Peraneau, the photographer, for work that he did for a committee, which was no part of Mr. Jackson's effort.

THE COURT: Well, whatever is in the record is in the record.

Page 205.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I ask the Court rule on my request that Counsel's question be stricken because there is no basis for it in the record.

MR. GRANT: Actually, there is, Your Honor. And I read to Mr. Jackson yesterday from the affidavit of Mr. Robert, Mr. Robert T. Greer, and I read a letter that he had written to an individual making reference to an E. Steven Collins who testified, in which letter he stated I have been retained by the Mumia Abu-Jamal Defense Fund, of which Mr. Jackson claims he knows not about any money. So all he knows about is what he was paid by the Court. And the word retained has a connotation. I think I am entitled to draw the inference that he was getting more money from somebody else.

MR. WEINGLASS: I think Counsel has a point.

MR. GRANT: Thank you.

MR. WEINGLASS: And we are going to hear from Mr. Greer. Who will disabuse him of that point.

THE COURT: All right.

BY MR. GRANT:

Page 206.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. Lastly, last thing, Mr. Jackson. I told you by three o'clock. It's only a few minutes after.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During the course of the trial, the first six Jurors, the first six Jurors were selected but they had not been sequestered, meaning locked up, at that point. And you went on the radio station WDAS, where Mr. Jamal formerly worked?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall that?

A. I remember going to a radio station at some point in time, yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember basically being asked by the commentator why there were no blacks on the Jury, do you remember that question?

A. Yes. I assume you are asking me because it was asked, yes. Yes, I really remember that question.

Q. I don't want you, I know you've had a storied and voluminous broadcast and print journalistic history, and it's hard to remember all the quotes you have given to all the various sources that you've had?

A. It really is. I mean sometimes it just, I just don't remember.

Page 207.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

Q. Do I like look like I'm kidding? I'm not teasing you.

A. Okay.

Q. You did not claim in that interview, by the way, that race had anything to do with the reason why no blacks were on that Jury, but because blacks don't vote for the death penalty, and basically that's the reason? Didn't you say that?

A. Maybe I, I may have, sure.

Q. Well, no, did you?

A. Did I say that was the only reason?

Q. Well, let's read what you said here. Well, tell me: Did you say that was the only reason? Did you say Mr. McGill was exercising peremptory, racially-motivated strikes, have you ever said that anywhere in the history of this world?

A. That he -- I may not have said it outside of the Courtroom, if that's --

Q. Have you ever said it inside the Courtroom, that Mr. McGill, Your Honor, is using peremptory challenges based on race-motivated reasons and I object and I want the record to reflect that? Did you at any time at any point in this trial raise the Spector that Mr. McGill 13 years ago was exercising peremptory challenges in a race-motivated way?

Page 208.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. All right, let me answer you this way. Trying cases in City Hall, I know most D.A.'s, most homicides, will get rid of as many blacks as they possibly can, first to the death qualification and then peremptory. Actually, in the beginning of this trial in the Jury selection I asked the Judge to state the race of the Jurors there for that very reason. I wouldn't have asked unless I thought it might be happening.

Q. That was based on your history in trying cases, so you say, and the question now is are you saying that Mr. McGill was exercising peremptory challenges in a racially-motivated fashion?

A. Sure.

Q. You are saying that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you say that 13 years ago or is that your memory now 13 years later?

A. I don't think I said it then. But I am --

Q. I don't think you did either, sir. When is the last time you practiced criminal law in this town?

A. It's been a few years.

Q. Yes, it has. Would it surprise you to know that the majority of juries that come back have almost 50 percent black people on it?

Page 209.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Cross

A. Yes.

Q. Even the ones that return death verdicts?

A. No.

Q. So maybe your statement then to WDAS was as ridiculous as it is now?

A. But it was true. You may call it ridiculous but it was true, wasn't it?

Q. I don't think so. Mr. Jackson --

A. Yes, it was true.

Q. Okay. I have been practicing in this town since 1981.

A It was true.

MR. GRANT: Mr. Jackson, I have no further questions for you.

THE WITNESS: Thank you, Mr. Grant.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, there will be a very lengthy, in light of the cross, redirect.

THE COURT: How lengthy?

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

THE COURT: How lengthy?

MR. WEINGLASS: It will go at least several hours, probably.

THE COURT: Do you want to recess until Monday?

MR. WEINGLASS: I would prefer to do that. I could start with a very small part of, just to deal with some of the most recent issues and then stop at that point maybe 15, 20 minutes down the road. Or I could start on Monday.

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, may I say something? I have some practical problems. I have been here for three days. I haven't been able to work, Your Honor, and I am not Court appointed in this case.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor.

THE WITNESS: I have some other things to do in my life. And this is no disrespect to Mr. Jamal or Mr. Grant or anyone else in this Courtroom. But, you know, I hadn't anticipated being here this long.

MR. GRANT: The only problem I have, Your Honor, is that Mr. Jackson, being an excellent lawyer, knows full well the import of filing something like this (displaying) and he should expect to be here for a month and a day if necessary. Notwithstanding his schedule.

MR. WEINGLASS: All right, and, Your Honor, Mr. Grant has had Mr. Jackson's affidavit for six weeks. And they are friends. And he never called him in.

THE COURT: I know that, Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: He never called him in to review the transcript which would have shortened this questioning, and made it more accurate, as a matter of fact.

MR. GRANT: I apologize.

THE COURT: Do you want to --

MR. WEINGLASS: He is entitled to an apology.

THE COURT: Do you want to proceed today or Monday?

MR. WEINGLASS: I don't want to inconvenience Mr. Jackson anymore. If he refers to continue now, I will continue. If he wants to put it --

THE WITNESS: I will do it. I will stay. I am used to staying with Judge Sabo until six o'clock.

THE COURT: Okay. Go ahead.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, there is a deep groan from the well of the Court.

THE COURT: I am not, I don't know what a well of the Court is.

MR. WEINGLASS: I will not finish until probably by 6:00. I would prefer to put it over if that's possible. I have an obligation here also.

THE COURT: Well, I know that, but he is your witness and you tell me what you want to do. Do you want to go over until Monday? It's all right with me.

MR. GRANT: What is convenient for you, Mr. Jackson?

THE WITNESS: I just can't be here all day Monday. I mean seriously, I have four days.

THE COURT: Let me say this: Monday morning we have something else, so I don't know what time --

MR. GRANT: Is there any day next week that you have three hours, three hours worth?

MR. WEINGLASS: A couple of hours.

MR. GRANT: From 10:00 to noon any day next week?

THE WITNESS: Yeah.

MR. GRANT: I am not going to recross.

THE WITNESS: Thanks. I am glad to know that.

THE COURT: Well, don't believe that entirely. Wait until --

THE WITNESS: I know lawyers, Your Honor. He is trying to suck me in. But you say Monday morning. Is Monday afternoon -- I will try to do it Monday afternoon. Is Monday afternoon --

THE COURT: Monday afternoon better for you?

THE WITNESS: All right.

THE COURT: Monday afternoon would be better for him. Could we say one o'clock? Is that all right?

THE WITNESS: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: Okay, how about that?

MR. WEINGLASS: That's fine.

MR. GRANT: That's fine, Judge.

THE COURT: Okay, you could come back Monday at one o'clock.

THE WITNESS: Thank you, sir.

THE COURT: You're welcome. All right, adjourn until Monday morning.

THE COURT OFFICER: 9:30, Your Honor? This Court now stands adjourned until 9:30 a.m. on Monday morning at the call of the Crier.

THE COURT OFFICER: Step out, please.

He will not be allowed back in for the rest of the trial.

Sorry for the interruption, Your Honor.

THE COURT: That's all right.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I believe a person in the spectator section has been removed for allegedly having a sign. And the sign that he had said, as he stood there quietly and respectfully standing, was standing under protest. Or under duress, I believe it said. And I just think the record should reflect that. Because the gentleman did not interrupt the Court proceedings at all. And he just held up an explanation as to why he was standing. I understand the man's name is Mr. Dubside. He is opposed to standing as a matter of religious scruple. He felt that his religious scruples compelled him to make a note of why he was standing.

THE COURT: Counselor, I told you before: If they don't want to stand, stay outside until the Court begins and then they could come in. But there are to be no signs in the Courtroom. That's what I specifically ordered. Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT: All right, we have a motion to quash on behalf of the State.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, before we begin --

THE COURT: No, that's what I set for this morning. So once we get finished with that, then we will take up whatever you have.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Okay, Your Honor.

MS. MIDDLETON: Good morning, Your Honor. My name is Stephanie Middleton. I am Deputy General Counsel for Governor Ridge.

And with me is Greggory Melinson, also General Counsel.

We have the privilege of representing Governor Thomas Ridge; Paul A. Tufano, General Counsel; William Chadwick, Executive Deputy General Counsel; Syndi Quido, Deputy General Counsel; Timothy Reeves, Press Secretary to Governor Ridge; and John Taylor, Deputy Press Secretary to Governor Ridge.

Page 5.

The reason we are here is last Monday Governor Ridge was served with a subpoena to appear here on Wednesday to testify and also to produce documents. We filed our motion to quash on Tuesday, the next day. The subpoena for documents demanded that Governor Ridge produce all files, notes and memoranda regarding the review of the case of Commonwealth versus Mumia Abu-Jamal and the signing of the death warrant for Mr. Jamal on June lst, 1995, and all statements of protocol, memoranda or directives regarding procedures to be followed by the Governor's Office in signing a death warrant, the service of the death warrant, and public pronouncements about signed warrants.

The subpoena for documents served on the Office of the General Counsel requested all files, notes, memoranda regarding review of the case of Commonwealth versus Mumia Abu-Jamal, and the recommendation, if any, that the Governor sign a death warrant for Mumia Abu-Jamal; And it goes on.

Page 6.

The threshold issue in connection with this subpoena, these subpoenas, is whether the material or the testimony requested has any relevancy at all. Whether it could be at all material for the issues before this Court, which was whether there was a fair trial back in 1982.

Another issue before the Court is whether a stay should be granted.

There is nothing that Governor Ridge or any of his staff could add to this proceeding that would affect one way or the other the decision on those issues. The purpose of a subpoena is not to allow counsel to conduct fishing expeditions or to intimidate or harass, which is what we believe is going on here. But rather a subpoena is issued by the court to aid the court in determining the issues before it. And that is the only valid purpose of a subpoena.

So before we even get to the issue of any of the privileges, the issue of relevance and materiality of any of this information that Counsel for defense is seeking must be addressed.

The Counsel for Mr. Abu-Jamal claim that the Governor rushed to sign the death warrant. In January the Governor announced that he would be signing death warrants. He announced that they would be signed in chronological order based on when the files were sent from the Supreme Court to the Office of General Counsel. And there is no evidence that this warrant was signed out of order at all.

One reason that information from the Governor's Office really has nothing to do with this proceeding is that the Governor's role in this has clearly been ministerial. Under the statute he must sign death warrants within 90 days of receiving the file from the Supreme Court. And his role under the Morganelli case from Commonwealth Court, his role, he really has very little, if any, discretion: He must sign these death warrants. So his deliberative process, his reasons, what his lawyers told him, really have nothing to do with this proceeding.

We have raised several privileges. One clear privilege is the attorney-client privilege. Under the Commonwealth Attorneys Act, the Office of General Counsel is the lawyer for the Governor. And advice given to the Governor by the Office of General Counsel is clearly protected by the attorney-client privilege. It's also protected by work product privilege.

Page 8.

In addition, this is a very unusual circumstance where a Governor has been subpoenaed. There is an executive privilege recognized by the Supreme Court, Pennsylvania Supreme Court, in the Hancraft case. And that executive privilege has never be weakened in any way. The purpose of the executive privilege and the deliberative-process privilege here, the reason for having it in this case is clear why there is such a privilege. If the Governor, who has now signed nineteen death warrants, could be subpoenaed and have to turn over this sort of information every time a death warrant is signed, it would, first, chill any advice given to him by his Counsel, they would not be able to be candid and frank in reviewing these files. They would have to worry about the fact that it would become public, and it would interfere with the purpose of having Counsel for the Governor review the files from the Supreme Court.

In addition, it would interfere with the Governor's ability to run the state, which is what he is required to do.

The response to our motion to quash I received just this morning. And it raises an argument that the information from the Governor is relevant, they claim, because he was aware that the PCRA petition was going to be filed on June 5th. He signed the warrant on June 1st.

First of all, if you look at the affidavits that were filed in connection with previous pleadings, what they have done in this response is mischaracterize what was said. In the letter to Mr. Melinson in April they didn't say they would be filing the petition shortly, they said they would file it when they had all the information that they need. Again they have mischaracterized what Syndi Quido allegedly said to someone on the phone. She did not say she had not been asked to commence such a review. And again I haven't seen the Patriot News report that they rely on, but I question whether it says that he was going to file the PCRA Petition on June 5th. He claims that we were aware that his attorneys were visiting him in order to get his signature on a petition, a PCRA petition.

And that's not at all what the letter said. It just said they needed to come by to get his signature on legal documents, which has been going on for a long time.

The last event in this case occurred when the U.S. Supreme Court denied a request for reconsideration back in June of 1991. It was four years later that the Governor signed the death warrant. Under the Morganelli case, waiting for a governor to wait three or four or five years to sign a death warrant was clearly an abuse of the governor's statutory duty. He was required to sign it much more quickly. Now we have a statute that requires him to sign it in 90 days. So the accusation that the Governor acted in haste or didn't completely review the record or had some other motive, it is harassment and intimidation. Governor Ridge will not be intimidated from signing the death warrants as he is required to do by law.

Thank You.

MS. PERKINS: Your Honor, if I may: First of all, I have just looked at the memorandum that defense Counsel has presented to the Governor's Office. And their relevance argument is that it responds to the argument of intentional delay. Well, perhaps that might be correct, Your Honor, if the entire argument regarding intentional delay had to do with what occurred between June 1st and June 5th of this year. Unfortunately, it's not. The Commonwealth's argument for intentional delay has to do with what has occurred in this Defendant's case, or the lack of proceeding with the case for the past five years. The fact is that Mr. Weinglass has been involved in representing this Defendant and preparing for a PCRA petition for at least the past three years, by his own admission, and then Miss Wolkenstein has been assisting the Defendant for that length of time as well. So their claim that somehow bringing in staff from Governor Ridge's Office or Governor Ridge himself would somehow refute the argument that there was intentional delay I would submit to the Court is simply misguided and does not address the issue that was raised by the Commonwealth.

The newspaper article that Counsel cites is very interesting for the reason; Your Honor, that he omits the fact that there were also many other newspaper articles where Counsel was quoted as saying as recently, or as late as two years ago, that they would be filing a PCRA petition and were in the process of getting it together. Now they say it takes them two years to do it. I would submit to the Court that it does not take two years to do it and given what has been presented here certainly it didn't take two years to do it because there are so many gaps for what they have presented as their reasons for desiring and being entitled to a new trial.

Furthermore, Your Honor, the purpose of this proceeding is to find out whether or not there is anything involved in the truth-determining process that is somehow suspect or invalid. Whether the Governor signed a warrant on June 1st or not is immaterial to that issue. And that is the reason why they are here for a PCRA: To attack the truth-determining process. And that is an issue for the Court's review. Defense Counsel is simply attempting to revisit the issue of whether or not they are entitled to a stay prior to the PCRA hearing or prior to the actual execution date. Perhaps if this Court had ruled on the stay question they would have a point. But this Court has not done that. The Court has held the stay issue in abeyance, held it under advisement until such time as it becomes more relevant.

There is no reason to delay these proceedings. There is no reason to revisit that question. The Supreme Court has specifically stated that this hearing was to proceed. The Court has done so. And I would submit to the Court that there is no reason to entertain further this issue regarding a stay at this point or anything that the Governor's Office may have done. It is irrelevant to these proceedings regarding the PCRA. The Court has stated that if a stay is warranted as we approach the execution date, then if this Court has not ruled it will at that time review that issue and the Defendant is certainly entitled seek additional relief from the Supreme Court if so warranted.

So I would submit to the Court that the subpoena that they have submitted to the Governor's Office should be quashed: It is irrelevant for these proceedings. And it is nothing more than an attempt to revisit issues that have already been resolved for the time being.

MR. WEINGLASS: Very simply: The reasons why this subpoena was issued for the Governor plus five of his aides is very obvious to this record no matter what Counsel now claims. The reason why the subpoena issued -- and it didn't issue until after the accusation was made -- was because the representatives of the Commonwealth in this Court and before the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania made the allegation and repeated it often that Mr. Jamal intentionally delayed filing his Post-Conviction Relief application until after the Governor signed the warrant. The actual fact of the matter is and the truth is that Mr. Jamal announced his intention of bringing his Post-Conviction Relief before a Court of competent jurisdiction, where his 19 claims could be litigated in an orderly proceeding, and knowing that fact, the Governor moved expeditiously, out of order, in violation of his protocols, and after the ordinary course of Page 16 is missing. Attempts will be made to locate it.

Page 16.

Commonwealth is correct, that Mr. Jamal purposely and deliberately delayed.

Your Honor, I want to try to avoid this if I could. And I make this offer and suggestion. We do not need the Governor, we do not need any of his aides. If the Commonwealth will now withdraw the false accusation that Mr. Jamal delayed until after the Governor signed the warrant, we will withdraw the subpoenas and we can move on. It is a simple concession that they could make. And they have the power to make it. Then this record would be clear, and the record would be truthful, and the record would be honest. That it was the Governor who moved quickly to sign a warrant, knowing Mr. Jamal was coming into Court.

And I will go even further. If the Commonwealth will not make that concession on the record, which I feel in all honesty they ought to, if for no reason but to prevent the Governor from being embarrassed publicly, then I make this offer... that Mr. Jamal will agree to a stipulation without the need for the Governor to appear, if the Governor will stipulate to the time and date that he signed that warrant, and if he will further stipulate to when he received information that Mr. Jamal was coming to Court on June 5th, and if the Governor's Office will, furthermore, release the protocol under which the Governor is to consider these death warrants, if we have that stipulation, then we will withdraw the subpoenas.

So I offer the Commonwealth two particular ways of resolving this issue without the need for further litigation. One is to concede that Mr. Jamal did not delay. And secondly, to enter into a stipulation as to the time and the date the Governor signed that warrant, as to when he knew that Mr. Jamal was coming to Court, and a submission of the protocol. It would be that simple and I think we could move on and I think the record would be complete on that issue.

When we talk about a warrant, a death warrant, a death warrant is one of the weightiest responsibilities of a Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. We are not talking about a minor act. We are talking about the Governor putting the authority of his Office behind a killing of a human being. Is there anything more weighty than that? Is there anything that calls more for testimony from the Governor than that act? That's why his testimony is essential and important.

Are we asking for what the Commonwealth suggests, the deliberative process? Are we going to ask Governor Ridge what was going through your mind when you signed that warrant? The answer is no. We are merely seeking into a ministerial act: Governor, when did you put your signature on this document, could you give us the time and the date. That is a ministerial act. That is not an act that is subject to the privilege of deliberative process because the time and the date of signing an official public document is a ministerial act, pure and simple. So we are not seeking anything of a privileged nature here.

Beyond that we are going to ask the Governor a second question. When did you receive the information that Mr. Jamal was on his way to Court with a Petition of over 300 pages, with 19 claims. When did you get that information. That also is not a deliberative act. I am not going to ask the Governor what did you do with that information, how did you process it; I'm just asking him when did you get it. Because if we have the time that the Governor knew Mr. Jamal was coming to Court, and the time he signed the warrant, we will then see precisely what happened on this occasion, which is the Governor running quickly, expeditiously, and in violation of protocol, to preempt Mr. Jamal's litigation.

THE COURT: Which protocol are we speaking about?

MR. WEINGLASS: The Governor's protocol, Your Honor. Counsel referred to it but not precisely. Counsel said that in January when Governor Ridge took office there was a document setting forth the procedures for signing warrants. I believe that's true. That document is a protocol. That document should be made public.

THE COURT: You mean within 90 days?

MR. WEINGLASS: That was the statute.

THE COURT: Well.

MR. WEINGLASS: But within the Governor's Office, the Governor has a staff and he wrote out the procedure for his staff: This is the way I want the cases reviewed inside, this is the way I want you to handle it.

THE COURT: You mean he has to tell us this?

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

THE COURT: He has to tell us this?

MR. WEINGLASS: I believe it's a written document.

THE COURT: Well, so what? You mean he has to tell us how he does these things?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT: If he commutes a death sentence, does he have to tell us why he did it?

MR. WEINGLASS: Oh, I'm not seeking that, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Oh, I know you're not, but you are talking about protocol.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right. If he commutes a death sentence and he does it pursuant to written guidelines, yes, we should have the guidelines.

THE COURT: Why?

MR. WEINGLASS: Because the guidelines, he might be violating his own guidelines.

Page 21.

THE COURT: So what? He is the Governor, he could do anything.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, that's not --

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: Not in the United States, Your Honor. We are --

THE COURT: The United States.

MR. WEINGLASS: We are still a government of laws, not of people.

THE COURT: He could commute a death sentence, he could commute a life sentence, he could even pardon. You've heard of that, haven't you?

MR. WEINGLASS: I have vague recollections, yes.

THE COURT: Well, he has that right.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT: And if he did that, could this Court complain?

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, we are not asking the Court to complain. If someone --

THE COURT: Well, could the victim's family complain?

MR. WEINGLASS: Could the petitioner complain? The answer is yes. If the

Page 22.

Governor --

THE COURT: What petitioner?

MR. WEINGLASS: If the Govern --

THE COURT: Wait awhile. What petitioner? Who are you talking about? You mean the victim's family could complain?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes. Judge -- no.

THE COURT: That's what I am talking about. If he would pardon somebody, okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right.

THE COURT: Can the victim's family complain?

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, Your Honor, that's an interesting hypothetical.

THE COURT: It is, sure it is, but it doesn't happen.

MR. WEINGLASS: Unfortunately, to my perception it is of no moment to this issue but it is an interesting hypothetical that ought to be posed somewhere.

THE COURT: That's why I say that the Governor has this power. You know, whether or not you like it, we have three separate and distinctive branches of government here: We have the executive, legislative and the judiciary. The Governor doesn't tell me how to run the Court, I don't really tell him how to run the State. That is his prerogative.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, Your Honor, my understanding is in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania very frequently the courts do tell the Governor what he may or may not do, with all due respect.

THE COURT: Only if he violates somehow the Constitution. But under the Constitution he has this authority.

MR. WEINGLASS: Or if he violates a statute. Or if he violates a protocol.

THE COURT: Well, whose protocol?

MR. WEINGLASS: If he violates his internal protocol.

THE COURT: If it is his own protocol, you mean he can't violate his own protocol?

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, this is my position.

THE COURT: I know what your position is. You say this is all important because of the stay. And I told you I have taken the stay under advisement.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yeah.

Page 24.

THE COURT: Well, I told you not to worry about it.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well --

THE COURT: I told you not to worry about it.

MR. WEINGLASS: I appreciate the Court knows what I am trying to say but I would like to have the opportunity to say it.

THE COURT: All right, say it.

MR. WEINGLASS: The question of granting a stay is a discretionary one.

THE COURT: You mean now?

MR. WEINGLASS: At any time.

THE COURT: No, no, no, no. I don't consider it discretionary to any extent.

MR. WEINGLASS: Discretionary one for the Court.

THE COURT: Well, somebody will grant a stay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Acting under their discretion, right.

THE COURT: Because when somebody files his first PCRA petition, he has a right to have that decided all the way up to the Supreme Court, wherever he has to go. I know that, you know that. So I don't know where you are going.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor, if you give us a new trial which we seek --

THE COURT: Well, wait awhile. Wait awhile.

MR. WEINGLASS: We will not go up, we will go to a new trial. It doesn't have to go up.

THE COURT: We are talking about a stay at this moment, we are not talking about a new trial. I haven't heard all the evidence yet.

MR. WEINGLASS: This case will not go anywhere beyond this Court if the Court grants our Petition. But the Court is indicating it's already made up it's mind.

THE COURT: I haven't made up any mind. I said you are asking me to make a decision when I haven't heard the whole case yet.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right.

THE COURT: Right now we are talking about a stay and you are saying that's why you need the Governor here, as far as this stay is concerned.

Page 26.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT: I don't need the Governor to make a decision on the stay.

MR. WEINGLASS: You have taken me a little far adrift from my point. Let me just go back to it.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. WEINGLASS: If this Court is told that the Governor violated his own protocol, that might be a fact you want to take into account when you decide whether or not to grant the stay.

THE COURT: I am going to grant the stay on what you told me the law was. It has nothing to do with the Governor.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, if the Governor --

THE COURT: I don't need the Governor for that.

MR. WEINGLASS: You're looking at the Governor's warrant. It's his document.

THE COURT: Well, you said you want to know when he signed it. Look at it, you could see when he signed it.

MR. WEINGLASS: But --

Page 27.

THE COURT: But I don't need his testimony in order to help me make a decision on the stay.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, you may or may not, but another court might want a record and we are being prevented from completing a record.

THE COURT: No. I took it under advisement, Counselor. And I don't think we need anyone else.

MR. WEINGLASS: But we are preparing a record, if nothing else, and another court might want to know is this a case where Mr. Jamal deliberately delayed as the Commonwealth accuses him.

THE COURT: No.

MR. WEINGLASS: Or is it not.

THE COURT: They are saying you delayed from 1991 or whenever it was the last time, up until the time that you filed it. That's the delay they are talking about. But that has nothing to do with the stay.

MR. WEINGLASS: No. I submit, Your Honor --

THE COURT: No, it doesn't have --

MR. WEINGLASS: It has a great deal.

Page 28.

THE COURT: No, it will not influence me in the stay at all.

MR. WEINGLASS: But it might influence another court.

THE COURT: Well, why would it?

MR. WEINGLASS: You are preventing us from making a record.

THE COURT: Why would it? Why would it?

MR. WEINGLASS: Because another court, seeing that Mr. Jamal did not delay, but that the Governor signed a preemptive warrant, might then on that ground alone issue a stay.

THE COURT: I told you before the purpose of a stay in a situation such as this. Where the Defendant files his first PCRA matter, he is entitled to have that matter go all the way up. We are not talking about a second PCRA or a third PCRA or anything of that nature. This is the first PCRA matter.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right.

THE COURT: And it will be taken care of at the appropriate time.

MR. WEINGLASS: While we are on that issue, which I will follow up to the Court's comment: Today is August lst, as I understand it.

THE COURT: Yeah.

MR. WEINGLASS: We have an execution date of August 17th.

THE COURT: Oh, that's far away. That's 16 days away, don't worry about it.

MR. WEINGLASS: And the Court is of the opinion that this matter could be heard through it's entirety?

THE COURT: Well, I don't know.

MR. WEINGLASS: And a transcript prepared? And the Supreme Court reviewing it if the Court turns us down? And all that could happen before the 17th?

THE COURT: Well, I don't think so. I don't know, it depends on how long you are going to take. I don't know what you are doing or how long you are going to take. I don't know who your witnesses are. Could you tell me how long you are going to be? I don't have a crystal ball, I don't know.

MR. WEINGLASS: Probably another 10 days.

THE COURT: Okay, take it up --

Page 30.

MR. WEINGLASS: That would put it to August 10th. Could you imagine the transcript being transcribed of the entire hearing and the Supreme Court resolving it on the record?

THE COURT: You said by August the 10th. Why don't you see me on August the l0th?

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, Your Honor, you're talking about a man's life.

THE COURT: I am, I understand that. But see me on August the 10th.

MR. WEINGLASS: For what purpose?

THE COURT: Well, because you will say I'm finished, Judge, I want you to rule. You held under advisement the petition to stay, I want to know what you are going to do. I will give you my decision then.

MR. WEINGLASS: You will be able to make a decision, Your Honor, without reading the record?

THE COURT: I already read the record.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, the transcript of this proceeding.

THE COURT: Oh. I am not basing it on the transcript. I told you before when someone for the first time files a PCRA matter, he is entitled to have that go all the way up to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, maybe even into the Federal courts. So I will take it up at that time. I don't think you need the Governor to help you on this.

MR. WEINGLASS: But I observed that the Court is not taking notes during the testimony. And the Court is going to make a decision on this life-and-death issue without reading the transcript?

THE COURT: I am going to make a decision on the stay. Don't get excited, Counselor. And I don't need the Governor or his staff to help me on that.

MR. WEINGLASS: Let me just say --

THE COURT: Let me say this to you: Suppose I had denied the stay, where would you have gone?

MR. WEINGLASS: We are talking hypothetically?

THE COURT: Yes. Of course hypothetically. Because I took it under advisement.

MR. WEINGLASS: If the Court denies the stay.

Page 32.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: And the Court has not done so but is taking it under advisement.

THE COURT: No, I said let's assume for the sake of argument I denied your stay. Where would you run?

MR. WEINGLASS: On August l0th?

THE COURT: I don't care, August l0th, today, tomorrow, August l0th, where would you go?

MR. WEINGLASS: We would go to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court.

THE COURT: Okay. Don't you think they would grant you the stay maybe?

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I think the Court that we are before has an obligation to consider that on it's own and not pass it off to another court.

THE COURT: I am not asking about another court, I just want to know where you would go. That's where you would go.

MR. WEINGLASS: If we lost.

THE COURT: That's where you ran when I wanted to proceed immediately to take testimony. You wanted August the 1st. As I said to you before, the Court took the position we're going to give a piece to you and a piece to me. And I said I swallowed mine and I ate it and we started on the 26th. You still refused to swallow yours and proceed on the 26th.

MR. WEINGLASS: We did proceed on the 26th.

THE COURT: Yes, but rather reluctantly. You keep throwing it up to me. You needed to August the 1st.

MR. WEINGLASS: On the 26th we put on four witnesses. We have been going.

THE COURT: I know that.

MR. WEINGLASS: We have been going full-time ever since.

THE COURT: I know that, but you told me you couldn't do it.

You needed August the 1st.

MR. WEINGLASS: There is no question but that we are hampered.

THE COURT: Hampered.

MR. WEINGLASS: I want to state for the record that we can not put this case together in it's adequate form on such short notice.

Page 34.

THE COURT: Well, we are here for a PCRA, not to retry the case necessarily. But a PCRA, you are limited to what the PCRA says you could do. And that's all I am interested in.

MR. WEINGLASS: And the PCRA has 18 claims, which is very hard to prepare with one week's time.

THE COURT: No, it isn't. There is a lot that could be done.

Go ahead.

MS. PERKINS: Your Honor, just to interrupt Counsel's constant rhetoric and posturing.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I object to this young woman, this young lady saying Counsel's constant rhetoric and posturing after I stood here this morning without interrupting her. And she had no right to argue because only the Governor's Counsel has a right in this proceeding on the question of subpoena. And she argued and argued long and loud with a lot of rhetoric, and saying things like a lot of newspapers without even appending them to her papers.

MS. PERKINS: Your Honor, that is the reason why I have stood up.

THE COURT: You submitted newspaper articles to me, didn't you?

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

THE COURT: You submitted newspaper articles to me.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, you know what's interesting? We did submit newspaper articles. As the Commonwealth came into Court, in response to our position they submitted one exhibit. What was the one exhibit that the Commonwealth submitted? A newspaper article. We submitted 13 affidavits and 47 exhibits. Only the Commonwealth relied on one newspaper article. That's it. In response to about 500 pages.

THE COURT: I don't know, how many did the Commonwealth submit?

THE COURT OFFICER: What I have here, Judge, I have --

MR. WEINGLASS: Not in the hearing. Not in the hearing.

THE COURT OFFICER: 1 through 8.

MR. WEINGLASS: No.

THE COURT: C-l through 8, whatever

they are.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, that is not true. In their written response to the Petition they submitted one exhibit. One. And it was a newspaper article. That's all they relied on in their written response. In the hearing, yes, they are putting in newspaper articles and when they don't put them in Counsel just stands up and says willy-nilly oh, there are lots of newspapers out there, Your Honor. And the Court doesn't stop her. The Court --

MS. PERKINS: Your Honor --

MR. WEINGLASS: The Court doesn't even stop her from interrupting me. The Court doesn't stop her when she has no standing to argue. I won't permit the interruption. I am arguing, I don't allow Counsel to interrupt me.

THE COURT: I will let you go when he finishes.

MS. PERKINS: I don't know when that is going to be.

THE COURT: I don't know either but.

MS. PERKINS: Fine, then I have something to say whenever he finishes.

THE COURT: Okay, whenever you get finished. I interrupted him because I am trying to find out why we need the Governor here. I don't see that we need the Governor. He is not going to do any good at all as far as I'm concerned. He knows nothing about the case itself. Not as far as PCRA is concerned.

MR. WEINGLASS: Why we need the Governor is the scurrilous accusation that the Petitioner delayed purposely.

THE COURT: What scurrilous accusation?

MR. WEINGLASS: That the Petitioner delayed purposely until after the warrant is signed and then we could move on.

MS. PERKINS: If I can stand up I could respond to that but since I am not allowed by Mr. Weinglass to speak.

THE COURT: Well, what I understood she said was the delay was from 1991 to 1995. That is the delay they are talking about.

MR. WEINGLASS: Let me address myself to that issue. Because we visited that issue before. On that issue I have informed this Court, and you will hear testimony within 24 hours, let me assure the Court you are going to hear it from the witness stand from the administrator in charge of the Court reporters, that notes of testimony have been lost. Transcripts have been lost. I have been trying to get them. They still don't have them. That's one reason for delay. Another reason for delay: In April of --

THE COURT: Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: April of 1995 the FBI provided us with 700 pages of materials on Mr. Jamal. And last weekend...

(Discussion was held off the record at this time.)

MR. WEINGLASS: They provided another hundred. We are still getting them.

THE COURT: Yes, but what does that have to do with the PCRA? I don't control the FBI, what they do or what they investigate.

MR. WEINGLASS: Or the Court reporters.

THE COURT: No, a lot of times notes are lost. I don't lose my notes, Counselor. I have them, I have all the notes that were taken in this particular case. If you want them, I will let you look at them.

MR. WEINGLASS: We have subpoenaed Judge Ribner. They were all before Judge Ribner. And there is a motion now to quash Judge Ribner's subpoena.

THE COURT: We will take that up too later.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, we will. And the Court indicates with a smile on it's face.

THE COURT: What do you want me to do, cry. What do you want me to do, cry.

MR. WEINGLASS: The fact of the matter is, the fact of the matter is we have a client who is on death row.

THE COURT: I understand that.

MR. WEINGLASS: Who faces execution.

THE COURT: So let's proceed.

MR. WEINGLASS: So we do not, as responsible attorneys, file a post-conviction petition until we have the full record, until we have all the documents he is entitled to, and until all the issues are investigated. And in this case, investigated for the first time. And researched. That's why the delay.

THE COURT: How many do you have, 19?

Page 40.

How many issues do you have?

MR. WEINGLASS: 19.

THE COURT: Okay, so you have the 19 issues.

MR. WEINGLASS: Now we have them.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: Did we have them at the start? No. Are we still getting more? Yes.

THE COURT: Well, I don't know, you mean you could change it?

MR. WEINGLASS: Oh, yes, we are entitled to file an amended petition based on --

THE COURT: No.

MR. WEINGLASS: Based on new information. And we are in the process of working on that.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Of course. But you are dealing with a death penalty case and you are dealing with post-conviction relief. And you don't file a petition until you have gathered together the transcripts, the trial record, the outstanding documents, the necessary witnesses, and you have investigated the case thoroughly. That takes time. And that's not delay. That's moving ahead as quickly as you can.

THE COURT: Do you want to answer?

MS. PERKINS: Is it my turn now, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

MS. PERKINS: First of all, the Commonwealth does not concede that there was no intentional delay and will not stipulate that there was no intentional delay. Now, I suppose the reason why Mr. Weinglass referred to the exhibit, the one exhibit the Commonwealth referred to or attached as an exhibit, is because he knew exactly what I was going to refer to. I am referring to the answer to the Defendant's motion for a stay of execution. On page 12. The Commonwealth, referring to the June 1st date and the June 5th date which they have discussed, but the Commonwealth also argued, indeed according to the February 17th, 1995 edition of the Philadelphia Tribune, Defendant's attorney -- Mr. Weinglass here -- is quoted as having said he admitted that he will file his paperwork with the Common Pleas

Page 42.

Court --

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection, Your Honor. I am not quoted in that article. Counsel is purposely misstating. If she'll look at that article which is in front of her, I am not quoted. That is the journalist's impression. That's very different.

MS. PERKINS: It is a quote from the article, Your Honor.

MR. WEINGLASS: There are a number of quotes from me in that article. That one that she referred to is not quoted.

MS. PERKINS: Again, Your Honor, without interruption --

MR. WEINGLASS: Will she concede that she misspoke? There is no quote on that particular item.

MS. PERKINS: Your Honor, it is an excerpt from the article. I don't know if Mr. Weinglass spoke to these people or not, I didn't see him talk to them. I am presuming that he did because he has spoken to everybody else involved in this case in the media, so I have no reason to believe that he didn't speak to this reporter. But the article does state, Your Honor, that he admitted he will file his paperwork with the Common Pleas Court seeking a new trial for Abu-Jamal only after Ridge signs his client's death warrant. Now, that's in February of 1995. Assuming it occurred --

Page 43.

THE COURT: All right.

MS. PERKINS: -- again we are at the issue --

THE COURT: Let's get back, though. As I said before, what is the purpose of a stay where the Defendant for the first time files a PCRA petition?

MS. PERKINS: It's whether or not he can litigate those issues before the stay becomes ripe, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay, I but how is that done?

MS. PERKINS: You have a hearing, which is what we have asked for.

THE COURT: But where does he go? You know there is an automatic appeal to the Supreme Court.

MS. PERKINS: That's exactly right, Your Honor, he has an automatic appeal to the Supreme Court. If these issues are resolved before August 17th, and the Court denies a stay, the Defendant can petition the Supreme Court, as he already has done. I wish to remind the Court, however, Counsel is saying that this case will end here if a new trial is granted. I doubt that seriously because the Commonwealth would have the right to appeal.

THE COURT: I understand that. Anybody would. Go ahead.

MS. PERKINS: Again, the claim that he is asserting now has nothing to do with the PCRA. The Act is specifically dealing with the truth-determining process, meaning the trial.

THE COURT: Absolutely. That's why I say I don't know what the Governor could possibly add.

MS. MIDDLETON: Your Honor, I would just like to say one thing. Mr. Weinglass has said this warrant was signed out of order. That is incorrect. There is absolutely no evidence of that.

THE COURT: I don't think for a minute think the Governor signed anything out of order. These things have been up there for a long time. Other governors have been here and haven't done anything about it. The legislature had to change the statute in order to get things moving. And if he doesn't sign it, the Department of, the Commissioner of the Department of Corrections will sign it. Somebody is going to sign it. So I wouldn't worry about that.

All right, the motion to quash the subpoena seeking to compel the testimony of Governor Thomas J. Ridge; Paul A. Tufano, General Counsel; and William G. Chadwick, Executive Deputy General Counsel; Syndi L. Quido, General Deputy Counsel; Timothy Reeves, Press Secretary to Governor Ridge; and John Taylor, Deputy Press Secretary to Governor Ridge, the motion to quash is granted. Okay.

Is the Clerk here? Because I don't have the original papers here, I would like to sign the originals.

Oh. Do you have the original motion to quash the subpoena?

THE COURT CLERK: I will look for it.

(Pause.)

THE COURT CLERK: (Handing).

THE COURT: No, I don't see any orders

Page 46.

here. Did you file orders?

MS. MIDDLETON: I know we FAX'd them to you.

THE COURT: They were filed?

MS. MIDDLETON: I believe the original with an order was also filed. But I know we FAX'd the order to chambers.

THE COURT: Yes, you did FAX me. But I am talking about the original with the orders. You don't have the originals? You don't have them here?

THE COURT CLERK: There is a lot of papers in this file.

THE COURT: Well, I had orders attached to mine. Which I will sign and make part of the record. And we will send everybody copies.

Is Gina here?

Oh, Gina. Do you have her FAX number?

MS. FURIA: Yes.

THE COURT: All right, we will FAX it to you.

MS. MIDDLETON: Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. MELINSON: Thank you, Your Honor.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, all right, two preliminary matters before we begin with continuation with testimony.

First of all, Police Officer Gary Bell was served a subpoena on Friday afternoon by Petitioner and I want to note that he is in the Court. Pursuant to the sequestration order for subpoenaed witnesses, I would ask for him to be --

THE COURT: Who is he?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Gary Bell, Police Officer Gary Bell. He should be ordered to leave the Courtroom and not return until he appears as a witness.

THE COURT: Jeremy Gelb?

MR. WEINGLASS: No, I am talking about Gary Bell, Police Officer Gary Bell.

THE COURT: I don't have him on your list.

MR. WEINGLASS: He is not a witness, Your Honor, today. He is subpoenaed and he is sitting here in the Courtroom and he is not supposed to be because he is a subpoenaed witness. All subpoenaed witnesses have been instructed that they are not to be in the Courtroom until after they have testified.

Page 48.

THE COURT: Do you know if he is in the Courtroom?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Yes, he is in the Courtroom.

MR. GRANT: Yes, Your Honor. You see, the problem is Counsel would like to subpoena me so I can't enter this Courtroom. You can't use and abuse the process of the Court merely for your own purposes. Now, Gary Bell was the police officer who testified and was a partner of Police Officer Faulkner on the night that he died. They had been separated for physical reasons to separate patrols but he was there in the hospital. Now, he is not an affiant with respect to their PCRA. They have given us no notice as to what purpose he is here for. There's been no offer of proof.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Gary Bell --

MR. GRANT: Excuse me.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I could give you the reason.

MR. GRANT: I don't want to hear your reason.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: You just said --

MR. GRANT: I don't want to hear your reason while I am talking.

Page 49.

THE COURT: Let me hear what he has to say. I will let you talk.

Go ahead.

MR. GRANT: So for the sole purpose and expedient of removing Mr. Bell from the Courtroom they serve him a subpoena, then they ask Your Honor to roust him from the room. And not even entertaining a motion to quash that subpoena, which is what I am doing at this point in time. Unless there is sufficient relevance and materiality to any testimony he may offer, and further, that it is in support of the PCRA Petition, I would ask Your Honor to quash that as well.

There are a number of subpoenas floating around, one of which is for Judge Ribner. They are subpoenaing everybody in the world, none of which have they alleged are witnesses in their PCRA. And I think they are abusing the Court's process. And at some point in time I am going to ask Your Honor to take some sanctions because I think this is becoming harassment, intimidation, nothing more or nothing less.

Page 50.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: If there is a specific objection to specific subpoenas I suggest the District Attorney bring a motion to quash on each one as they come up.

THE COURT: Well..

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: As to Gary Bell, Gary Bell is a police officer who, as far as we are concerned, fabricated a confession allegedly made by Mr. Jamal in the hospital. We have said that in our papers, we have said that repeatedly.

We have subpoenaed Police Officer Gary Wakshul, who we believe absolutely rebuts and makes very clear that Mr. Jamal made no so-called statement, confessions that night. Gary Bell is the police officer who filed no reports, no police logs, no investigative reports which gave any indication whatsoever that Mr. Jamal made any so-called statements or confessions on the night of December 9th.

Two months later, in the course of proceeding into the allegations made by Mr. Jamal that he was beaten, Gary Bell comes forward and says oops I forgot, I forgot to mention the fact that Mr. Jamal made a confession that night of December 9th. We believe that confession was fabricated. I can imagine almost no issue which is more relevant to this hearing than the question of fabrication of evidence by a police officer under the direction and control, as a legal matter, of the District Attorney's Office. This is highly relevant. Highly material.

And Mr. Bell is subpoenaed as a witness in this proceeding. So I would ask that he be requested to leave the Courtroom until such time as defense Petitioner calls him as a witness.

MR. GRANT: If it were highly relevant and highly material, it was highly litigated in this Courtroom 13 years ago. He was cross-examined on that 13 years ago by competent Counsel. The Supreme Court, as a matter of direct primary appeal, litigated the sufficiency of the evidence, and affirmed Mr. Jamal's conviction. And Mr. Bell's testimony took place at that time. So, at least, Counsel is trying to re-litigate issues and claims that have already been raised and been decided on by the highest reviewing authority in this State.

Page 52.

Moreover, he is not part of their PCRA Petition. And I move to strike and quash that subpoena.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: The issue here is the fundamental question of due process and fairness. It is a question of Brady versus Maryland. The fact that Mr. Bell, obviously, as a working police officer that night, filled out patrol logs, filled out reports in the course of doing his duty. Those records, which I believe absolutely show no evidence of any statements being made by Mr. Jamal, were not turned over to the defense as they should have been under the requirements of Brady versus Maryland.

MR. GRANT: I would ask Your Honor to rule.

THE COURT: Well, I am not going to evict him at this time. I don't think that there is anything that is coming out now that would in any way affect his testimony one iota. He has already testified at the trial itself.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, we had a Mrs. Lydia Wallace and Representative Richardson testify. After they testified they were excluded from the Courtroom that day.

Page 53.

THE COURT: I didn't exclude anybody from the Courtroom.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, they were told that they could not come back into this Courtroom after that.

THE COURT: Who told them that?

MR. GRANT: Just a minute, Judge.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Let me finish.

MR. GRANT: Very well.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Until the next day when there was a whole inquiry with Counsel as to whether or not they were going to be called again as a witness were they allowed into the Courtroom. I believe again there is a question of bias towards the prosecution, prejudice against the defense, and unequal treatment from top to bottom.

THE COURT: That's what you say. Those are words that come out very easily but with no basis for it.

MR. GRANT: Mr. Weinglass could speak to this issue in contravention of what Miss Wolkenstein says. The Sheriffs said there is a lady named Ruth Ballard and Miss Lydia Wallace who would like to come back into the room.

Page 54.

There is a sequestration order in effect. You asked for sequestration, meaning me. I said but they are witnesses as to the Defendant's character and they are relatives, or their neighbors, I don't think they are going to testify again, let me ask Mr. Weinglass. I went and I asked Mr. Weinglass. He said no, that's the extent of their testimony. I said well, I have no objection if they come back in. And now I hear this turned around and I'm being accused of keeping people out of a Courtroom. I don't know --

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: The point of fact is we have a witness under subpoena, we have a sequestration order which says that no witness is to be in this Courtroom prior to their completion of testifying.

THE COURT: Well, I think, I told you I wanted to have a list of who you are going to call. I didn't see the list.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: We prepared a list on a day-to-day basis.

THE COURT: If you want to do it on a day-to-day basis I rule on it on a day-to-day basis.

Page 55.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor is denying the sequestration order and asking Police Officer Bell to leave the Courtroom?

MR. GRANT: I am asking Your Honor to quash it unless they should show relevance and materiality in support of their PCRA that hasn't already been litigated. And it has, it has no relevance, it has no materiality. And I am saying not just to not ask him to leave the room, I am asking him to quash the subpoena process.

THE COURT: At the present time I will quash the subpoena.

MR. WEINGLASS: I object to that.

THE COURT: Okay, your objection is overruled and you are given an exception. But the thing is, if you are going to subpoena him in the future, please attach an affidavit to it so we know exactly what the issue is with him, so the District Attorney could be alerted.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, there is another matter here. I wanted to present to the Court a copy of a letter I sent to Sheriff John D. Green this morning. Also I want to give the District Attorney's Office a copy of said letter

Page 56.

(handing). And bring this matter to the Court's attention. I think the Court recalls that a few days ago I requested that all participants, all observers in the Courtroom be treated equally as they came into the Courtroom. And that included going through metal detectors. The purpose of that was to insure that no one, one of the purposes was no one was being treated differently. And that anyone who was carrying weapons would in fact not be allowed to bring their weapons into the Courtroom.

THE COURT: If you remember, if you remember, I said that didn't apply to police officers.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: No, I don't recall you saying that.

THE COURT: Yes, I did that the other day, last week.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I don't recall you saying that. In any event --

THE COURT: Counselor, they are in here for my protection, okay.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I am not talking, Your Honor, about people who are part of the Sheriff's Office and are on duty. I am talking about police officers.

THE COURT: I am talking about any police officer that is in here is authorized to carry a gun, as far as I am concerned, 24 hours a day.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, my --

THE COURT: And he is here for my protection.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, an off-duty police officer, in our opinion, should be treated the same as any other citizen who comes into this Courtroom.

THE COURT: No, no, it's all together different.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: And we are requesting, have made the request --

THE COURT: All together different. I consider the police officers for my protection in this Courtroom. I will make the decision who can carry a gun in this Courtroom and who can't.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, there are people attending this Courtroom getting designated seats as representatives of the Fraternal Order of Police as part of a contingency of people who have a position in opposition to Petitioner Jamal.

THE COURT: What does that have to do with carrying guns?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Some of these people I understand are police officers. They come into this Courtroom as spectators, as members of the public. They are off duty. We are requesting of the Sheriff's Department that those police officers be treated the same as any other citizen and they not be allowed to come into the Courtroom carrying their weapons. We believe that this situation is not, is a violation of security and dangerous to Mr. Jamal. We believe --

THE COURT: Dangerous to whom?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: A form of intimidation to the other people who are in this Courtroom who are supporters of Mr. Jamal. And we believe, then, in a highly charged and emotional situation, this is potentially volatile and dangerous.

I further represent that this is a very important issue because the Chief of the Fraternal Order of Police has made many representations, including in the past few weeks, publicly that Mr. Jamal's supporters, including his attorneys, are a bunch of terrorists. And with that as their attitude and that as their position, I believe that speaks to the fact that the Fraternal Order of Police does not believe that people have the Constitutional right and ability to, to take a stand in support of Mr. Jamal. That indicates a state of mind that I believe is highly dangerous and a provocation in this Courtroom during these proceedings. So the request has been made of Sheriff Green to establish and set forth security procedures that make it clear that off-duty police officers who are attending this Courtroom as spectators be treated like any other member of the public, which is they do not bring their weapons inside this Courtroom.

MR. GRANT: I don't know if this exercise of polemics, Judge, is a filibuster to avoid proceeding with more evidence in this case. But in any event, under Police Department guidelines, every active police officer, whether on duty or off, as a peace officer, must carry his weapon. Now, I don't know if Sheriff Green has the authority to disarm these individuals, but I would tend to doubt it.

In any event, I think this is a lot of rhetoric and I would like to proceed with the proceedings if we may.

THE COURT: Let me say this: I decide the procedure of what is going to happen in this Courtroom. I make that decision. And I told you last week that the police officers are entitled to carry their gun in this Courtroom. All right.

All right, anything else before we go forward?

MR. GRANT: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I understand that they wanted to call Mr. Jackson.

MR. GRANT: Mr. Gelb, Mr. Gelb is supposed to be coming this morning and Mr. Jackson at one o'clock, as I understand.

MR. WEINGLASS: No.

THE COURT: He said they were changing that now.

MR. GRANT: I am glad they let me know these things.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT: Who is coming in now?

Page 61.

MR. WEINGLASS: I spoke to Mr. Jackson when he got off the stand Friday and indicated that perhaps it would be better if he started Monday morning so that there would be continuity. He said he would come Monday morning.

THE COURT: Is he here?

MR. WEINGLASS: He called this morning. I spoke to him on the Court's telephone.

THE COURT: Is he here?

MR. WEINGLASS: At 9:30 he said he would be here at 10:30.

MR. GRANT: They have no witness, what they are saying is they have no witness.

THE COURT: Wait awhile. It is 11:00 o'clock. Is he here?

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

THE COURT: Do you know, is he here?

MR. WEINGLASS: No, I don't know.

THE COURT: Is Mr. Jackson here?

THE COURT OFFICER: I have not seen him, Your Honor, but I will check.

THE COURT: Check it again, if he is here we will take him.

Page 62.

MR. GRANT: I would like to make a request.

MR. WEINGLASS: If he is not here we have another witness.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. GRANT: Counsel knew, Counsel knew that he was going to change the order after he advised me what the order was going to be. He advised you as to the change.

THE COURT: I know, one o'clock.

MR. GRANT: I am kind of getting a little tired of this gamesmanship and I think we are here to try the case or to litigate the issues. If Counsel doesn't want to obey the protocol of the legal profession, at least he could give some notice that we are having a trial by ambush so we could both participate.

THE COURT: Yes, when I left on Friday I was convinced that he was going to be here at one o'clock.

He is not here. Well, I think he is not here.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, the Court is again jumping to a conclusion.

THE COURT: I have somebody checking.

Page 63.

Why didn't you tell the D.A. you were going to call him?

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I don't want to quarrel with Mr. Grant. I spoke to Mr. Jackson right here in the well of the Court. It was my impression -- and I have no way of knowing if Mr. Grant heard it; I assumed he did but apparently he did not -- I apologize for that -- I thought this was an understanding with all Counsel. If Mr. Grant didn't hear it I'm sorry.

THE COURT: I didn't hear it because when I left on Friday I was convinced that he was going to be here at one o'clock.

MR. WEINGLASS: You had already left.

THE COURT: Is he back there?

THE COURT OFFICER: He is not here, Your Honor.

THE COURT: He is not here. Okay, what will we do in the meantime?

MR. GRANT: Okay, the Commonwealth could bring some witnesses if you have none. Have you any?

MR. WEINGLASS: We have, sure. We will call Peggy Garvin.

Page 64.

THE COURT: You are not taking them in the order you have on this sheet.

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

THE COURT: You won't take them on the order you have on this sheet?

MR. GRANT: May we have an offer of proof as to this person?

THE COURT: This one you don't have either?

MR. GRANT: Of course not.

THE COURT: Why don't you tell somebody. Come on. Why do you do this?

MR. WEINGLASS: I can't help Counsel if he is not familiar with the record. We provided 10 days ago a series of exhibits appended to the findings of fact which included, I believe, reference to Peggy Garvin. The fact that she is a Court administrator in charge of the trial notes, and that she has indicated that four days of pre-trial hearing notes are missing. And we are calling her to establish the fact that notes pertaining to Mr. Jamal's pre-trial hearings are missing and not available. This morning, after I came to Court, I was informed that they have just, just now, found three of those four hearings. One is still missing. And so as we stand here on August lst, 1955, the Court reporters are still in the process of assembling the record in this case. And I want to call Miss Garvin to establish that fact. It's very simple.

THE COURT: Well, we don't need her. If that's what is happening, fine.

MR. GRANT: Plus Counsel misrepresents, as usual, the truth of the matter. I have received nothing with Miss Garvin's name on it and I suggest to Your Honor if you required of Mr. Weinglass what document he refers to, it will probably be dated this morning, which we have not received. I move to preclude this witness and any other witness from now on that he hasn't given us notice of.

THE COURT: All right, we will exclude her at the present time.

MR. GRANT: May I have the Court's indulgence for one moment?

THE COURT: When you get the notes let us all know.

(Discussion held off the record at this time.)

Page 66.

MR. WEINGLASS: Is the Court precluding us from calling to the stand the Court reporter administrator in the Common Pleas Court of Philadelphia for the purpose of establishing that the full record in Mr. Jamal's case is not yet completed?

THE COURT: At this time, yes. Because you told me that they are getting three of the dates completed. So let's wait and see what it's all about.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT: I want to see whether it has any materiality as far as this PCRA matter is concerned.

MR. WEINGLASS: But I think it is important for the record to indicate, in light of the charges made by the Commonwealth, that the record in Mr. Jamal's case was not completed and is still not completed as of August lst, 1995.

THE COURT: Well, but see, these are records that are preliminary matters that may not really be relevant in any way. But if they could get them together, fine. They will get them together when they get them together. All

Page 67.

I am saying: At the present time we don't need her to testify to that.

MS. PERKINS: Your Honor, it is a little amazing to me that now these three documents have surfaced when I believe we had Mr. Weinglass' representations a week or two ago that he had exhausted every effort to find them. And now they are, they can be retrieved. So.

THE COURT: Well, let's wait until they retrieve them and transcribe them, let's see what they say. Let's see whether they have any bearing on this PCRA matter.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes. Counsel is right: I didn't know that I had them until this morning.

THE COURT: Okay. So calling her to tell me that they are going to look for them, I don't need that. If you say to me that the three of them have been found, and they are going to transcribe them, that's good enough.

MR. WEINGLASS: I don't, I have to look through them because I don't know which one is still missing.

THE COURT: Okay, we will find out when you get the three. We will see what's missing.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, I would like Your Honor to know that

-- and I invite Your Honor's attention to the series of events this morning -- Counsel engaged in what appeared to have been a rhetorical diatribe, filibuster, extensive rhetoric. And I was curious as to why this was going on and why the issue just wasn't presented and dismissed or disposed of with a ruling. And now I understand they were supposed to have Jeremy Gelb here this morning, they knew that present he was not. They changed the order of witnesses and they were supposed to have Mr. Jackson here instead, and lo and behold he is not. So they try to hurry down a Court administrator to fill in the gap because they have no witnesses, knowing the relevance and materiality of that was remote at best. So now we are faced with the prospect of them asking for a continuance until the afternoon. And what they are trying to do is to not have these claims litigated. And as it gets closer to the date proposed for the execution of Mr. Jamal, they will say whoops, see, we have to ask for a stay now Judge.

Page 69.

And therefore, I am asking Your Honor at each instance where this occurs to allow the Commonwealth to reverse bifurcate the proceedings and we will put on evidence to meet whatever burden that exists on the Commonwealth after the presentation of their claims. We do have a witness here this morning. If they would like to have one heard. I would suggest to Your Honor that it is a waste of everybody's time to sit here while they decide what they are going to do on a moment-by-moment basis.

MR. WEINGLASS: We have, Your Honor, the Court attendants will inform the Court...

(Pause.)

THE COURT: Well, we have here, let me see what he said. You see, Wakshul is available right now.

MR. WEINGLASS: As the Court read into the record on Friday a note.

THE COURT: Yes, he said he would be available until 1:45 p.m. It's now nine minutes after 11:00. He is available now. Do you want to call him? We could have him here in no time at all.

MR. WEINGLASS: We have Mr. Gelb on his way here, he should be here momentarily. We have Mr. Jackson on his way here. He should be here. Mr. Wakshul informed the Court that he couldn't come to Court because of a medical condition.

THE COURT: No, no, no, that's not what I read. I read he will be available on Monday until 1:45 p.m, when I again leave for therapy and also on Tuesday. So he would be available today to 1:45 and tomorrow until 1:45. In other words, you have to get him in the morning.

MR. WEINGLASS: If we may have a moment, Your Honor.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, if I may: They subpoenaed him, if I am not mistaken, two weeks ago. So they were ready for him to testify then. And I assume he is under a continuing subpoena. So they are prepared to present him as a witness. It is just whether or not they choose at this time to find it convenient.

MR. WEINGLASS: In the ordinary course of things, when the witness is called to the stand and cross-examined for a day-and-a-half, and then is asked to do redirect, it would appear that the Court would be interested in hearing that witness in the regular order --

THE COURT: But the thing is, he said he wouldn't be available until one o'clock today and I agreed to that. Now you tell me that you changed it somehow.

MR. WEINGLASS: I did not change it.

THE COURT: I don't know anything about that.

MR. WEINGLASS: I did not change it. And I want the record to be clear on this.

THE COURT: I want the record to be clear too. When we left on Friday, I was under the impression he was going to be in at one o'clock. We were going to take up the motion to quash first thing in the morning.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right. And I want the record to be clear on this. Mr. Jackson called this Courtroom and the Court's attendants asked me to take the call. It was about 9:40 this morning. He said he would be here at 10:30.

THE COURT: Okay. But what I am saying to you, Counselor, it's 11 minutes after 11:00 and he's not here.

Page 72.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right.

MR. GRANT: All Counsel is doing --

THE COURT: We have a witness that you could bring in who you've had on the list for Friday. July, yes, July 27th. Gary Wakshul.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, we indicated the next witness after Mr. Jamal would be Jeremy Gelb.

THE COURT: Today you gave me that list. This morning I just picked that up.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, it was discussed on Friday.

THE COURT: No, no, no, no. On Friday the list that I had was Jeremy Gelb.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right.

THE COURT: Gary Wakshul, Joe McGill and Robert Greer. That's what I had on Friday.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right. I represent to the Court that Mr. Gelb will be here within 10 minutes. His office is here in downtown Philadelphia. He is a practicing attorney. As a courtesy to counsel I had him on call. He is available, he is on his way, he will be here in 10 minutes. We are dealing with a practicing attorney and I ask the Court to give him the opportunity to come here and testify.

MR. GRANT: I would ask, Your Honor, you see what he is doing is more filibustering. He is trying to buy time, I don't know what for. I would ask Your Honor to either make Mr. Wakshul come down, who they subpoenaed for last week to be here and they obviously felt he was ready to testify, or to allow the Commonwealth to put on it's witnesses. I don't think we should need to engage in anymore extended rhetorical conversation.

MR. WEINGLASS: We don't need anymore conversation. Mr. Jackson is here. We can put him right on now.

MR. GRANT: Fine.

THE COURT: Well, you stalled long enough.

(Pause.)

Anthony E. Jackson, Esquire, having been duly affirmed, was examined and testified as follows:

- - - - -

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

- - - - -

Page 74.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Redirect

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Good morning, Mr. Jackson.

A. Good morning, Mr. Weinglass.

Q. Mr. Jackson, you testified for approximately 10 hours, I am sure it seems much longer to you by now, but I just wanted to ask you some questions on redirect pertaining to the answers you have given in your cross-examination. Incidentally, have we had an opportunity to discuss your testimony since you testified on Friday?

A. No, we haven't, sir.

Q. Now, your affidavit was presented to the Court and to the Commonwealth on June 5th. That's approximately six weeks ago. In the interim and prior to your testimony last Thursday, which is July 27th, were you contacted by any representatives of the District Attorney's Office and asked to be interviewed between June 5th and July 27th?

A. No, sir.

Q. If you had been contacted by representatives of the District Attorney's Office (indicating) and asked to come in to be interviewed, would you have gone?

A. Certainly.

Q. As a matter of fact, you would consider among

Page 75.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Redirect

persons who are your acquaintances, if not your friends, the Assistant District Attorney who cross-examined you: Mr. Grant?

A. Yes, I did before he cross-examined me. Yes, sir.

Q. So you would have responded if he had asked you Tony, I would like to talk to you about this matter that happened 13 years ago?

A. Yes, I would have, sir.

Q. And so you were asked on Thursday and Friday about matters that happened 13 years ago, about matters that you hadn't reviewed previously with the District Attorney; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Was it your impression as trial Counsel that they were attempting to put a surprise into your testimony?

MR. GRANT: I would object to Counsel leading his witness. It's clearly his witness.

THE COURT: I will have to sustain that. Please don't lead your witness.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Now, Mr. Jackson, you were asked a series of questions by Mr. Grant about your prior experience before being appointed to the Jamal case in December

Page 76.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Redirect of 1981; do you recall that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in the seven years since you graduated law school and were admitted in 1974, and the time that you started the defense of Mr. Jamal, as I understand your answers to Mr. Grant, you worked for the District Attorney's Office for a brief period of time, for a Federal monitor, and for a public interest office; is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in those seven years when you held those positions, do you recall how many death penalty hearings you were involved in?

A. One as co-counsel and I believe -- excuse me -- two others as counsel.

Q. Incidentally, it would be correct to say, would it not, that in your last three years when you worked with the public interest office full-time as the director, you were not doing death penalty cases in those three years prior to '81?

A. Well, actually, I think I did one or two because I was appointed to those cases before I began at the public defender's office. I don't recall specifically but I assume one or two.

Q. You haven't had occasion to check a calendar?

Page 77.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Redirect

A. No.

Q. Going back to 1978?

A. I certainly have not, sir.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, if Counsel asked the question he doesn't know the answer to, and he gets the answer he doesn't want to hear, I would ask that Your Honor not allow him to lead and make gratuitous comments to the witness.

THE COURT: Please, no leading. He is your witness now, come on.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Now, in your recollection, in those cases that went to a penalty phase hearing, do you recall if you put witnesses on in the penalty phase other than the defendant?

(Pause.)

A. Well, first of all, the one, the case I was acting as co-counsel, I, I was not in the decision-making position so that case I won't decide. The... other case, again, as I said I believe on cross-examination, before Judge Sabo, I don't recall whether that was before Mr. Jamal's case or after Mr. Jamal's case.

And a third case... I believe I put on

Page 78.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Redirect

evidence other than the defendant.

Q. Do you recall the name of that case?

A. No, sir, I sure don't. I don't, I don't remember. I remember the name of the case I was co-counsel; I don't remember the case, those two cases where I was, where I was counsel.

Q. So that would be a total of three?

A. Yes, maximum.

Q. Including one where you were co-counsel?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. And are you sure these are all prior to 1982?

A. I'm sure of two. As I say, the one before Judge Sabo, I just don't recall whether or not that was before or after Mr. Jamal's case.

Q. And in any of those cases which involved the penalty phase, do you know if the defendant had a prior criminal record?

A. Yes. There was one -- umm... I'm trying to think if... co-counsel case, the defendant had a prior record. The case before Judge Sabo, the defendant had a prior record. The other matter, I believe it was before Judge Latrone... I don't... I don't remember. I just don't.

Q. To your recollection, was Mr. Jamal's case the first case that went to the penalty phase hearing

Page 79.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Redirect

where the Defendant had no prior criminal record?

A. Other than the one that I don't recall, he would have been the only one.

Q. And to your recollection, was Mr. Jamal's case the first case that went to a penalty phase where the Defendant had a professional background?

A. First one, sir.

Q. And do your recall, was this the first case that you had tried that went to a penalty phase where the Defendant was the president of a professional organization?

A. It's the first one, sir.

Q. And do you recall if this is the first case you handled where the Defendant went to a penalty phase and the Defendant had a state legislator from the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania who testified at his bail hearing?

A. First one, sir.

Q. Now, you were asked by Mr. Grant on Friday if you had filed on behalf of Mr. Jamal a complaint against various police for allegedly abusing Mr. Jamal when he was in the Jefferson Hospital. Do you recall those questions of you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What, Mr. Jackson, if any, was the information

Page 80.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Redirect

that was available to you at that time, if you recall it, that led you to file that complaint?

A. Two matters. Number one, the fact that Mr. Jamal was shot. Contrary to what the District Attorney and prosecution evidence was to suggest that it was: He was shot in response to shooting Officer Faulkner -- my understanding and belief was to the contrary, that there was no reason for Mr. Jamal to be shot.

The other was that Mr. Jamal was also abused at the scene and as he was being transported to the hospital. And I believe at the hospital as well. When I say abused: He was struck, he was pushed, things of that sort. And that caused me to file a complaint, sir.

Q. Now, you also indicated in response to Mr. Grant that because you had filed that complaint Mr. Jamal's defense received the benefit of additional discovery. Do you recall being asked that question?

A. Yes.

Q. And giving that answer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now looking back at the discovery that that produced, do you recall having read all the police statements that were given to you in the regular course of discovery?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the statements that were given you with respect to the investigation of the complaint, whether or not anyone in the regular course of discovery in the criminal matter had indicated in any statement that Mr. Jamal had ever uttered any statement at the Jefferson Hospital on the morning of December 9th, 1981?

(Pause.)

A. Mr. Weinglass, sir, I really don't -- excuse me. I really don't have any specific recall. The sequence of events was that of course Mr. Jamal was arrested, he had a preliminary hearing, and at the preliminary hearing there was a statement. And I may have -- because I know that there was a, a lieutenant or captain Giordano, or something of that sort. And I think I, I don't believe I got discovery until after the preliminary hearing. And as I recall, this lieutenant, he testified at the preliminary hearing. So to answer your question...

Q. Directing your attention to the Jefferson Hospital statement.

A. Yeah... I just don't know, I just don't know when I found out. I just can't make that distinction whether it was when I got the regular discovery or after the abuse complaint was filed.

Q. Let me ask it the other way. Do you have a recollection of whether or not the first time you read in a report that Mr. Jamal had allegedly uttered a statement at the hospital was after the investigation into your complaint?

(Pause.)

A. Let me answer it this way. I recall after having filed the complaint I felt -- or I remember hearing all kinds of admissions. And I felt it was only in response to filing the complaint. Now --

MR. GRANT: Objection. Move to strike what he feels as opposed to what he knows.

MR. WEINGLASS: Recording his recollection.

MR. GRANT: He is recording his vague remembrances and I move to strike them.

MR. WEINGLASS: According to his recollection. I think it is allowed.

THE COURT: It is stricken, what he is assuming.

If you don't remember, fine. But if you can be specific it makes it a lot easier for the fact-finder.

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, I am doing the best I can.

THE COURT: I know.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Now, in your experience at Pilcop, where you initiated complaints and suits against the police --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- what if anything did you observe as a pattern or practice that the police would do if someone had initiated a complaint against the police?

MR. GRANT: Objection: Relevance as to what the pattern and practice was and it's relevance to what happened in this case, Judge.

THE COURT: Could you rephrase your question to this case and time.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Did you develop as a result of your experience at Pilcop an understanding of what pattern the police would use to respond if a complaint was made against the police of abusive treatment?

A. Well, generally speaking, when there were confrontations between the police -- in some cases, confrontations between a police and a citizen, oftentimes the citizen would have cover charges. Cover, you know what the cover charges mean. Those charges can be assault on an officer, resisting arrest and disorderly conduct. The officers would thereby be in a position, well, the prosecution would thereby be in a position of course to drop those charges against the individual if the individual would withdraw or refrain from filing any complaint against the police. Once a complaint was filed, it tended to reinforce a police officer's posture if possible to prosecute the case or to continue with the case.

Q. Would you say, therefore, Mr. Jackson, that it was your impression that if a complaint were filed that that would be retaliation against the defendant by the police?

MR. GRANT: Could Mr. Weinglass be sworn since he will be testifying here today.

THE COURT: Please, Counsel, he is your witness, stop leading him.

THE WITNESS: I didn't hear the question.

THE COURT: Okay. Rephrase your question.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Did you reach any conclusion based on your work at Pilcop as to what the police would do by way of retaliation if anything, if anything, for a complaint that was filed?

MR. GRANT: Objection: Relevance, as to what they would do.

THE COURT: I will sustain that objection. Stick to this case.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Mr. Jackson, you were --

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor, I am going into the areas that were probed on cross on his experience at Pilcop. We heard a lot about that and I am asking him about his experience, the same as the District Attorney did on cross.

MR. GRANT: Well, Your Honor, what he is talking about is he wants to re-litigate that complaint that Mr. Jackson filed, which it is my understanding was unfounded. He can't found it here today. And so it doesn't matter what the result of that was. And even though it is redirect, I didn't go into police retaliation and police intimidation or any of that. And I object.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Okay. I want to show you a document that was shown to you by the District Attorney of an interview of Officer Wakshul that was conducted on December 9th, 1981 (handing). And direct your attention to the second page where at that time Officer Wakshul in that interview indicated that the male Negro made no comments.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you see that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was a document that you were relying on, right?

A. Yes, sir.

MR. GRANT: Move to strike the answer. And move to object to leading. Continual leading.

THE COURT: Please remember, he is your witness. You are not supposed to lead your own witness.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. I now show you the interview of February llth, 1982 (handing) of the same police officer, Officer Wakshul, and directing your attention to the third page of that interview (handing).

Does Officer Wakshul there indicate that he claimed that he heard an utterance by Mr.

Page 87.

Jamal?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, that second one, on February llth, 1982, that interview was conducted with Officer Wakshul after you had filed your complaint against the police; isn't that true?

A. I believe so. Because I believe I filed the complaint in January.

Q. So the two statements of Officer Wakshul, one where he said he heard nothing, and the other where he said he heard a so-called confession, were separated in time by the fact that you had filed a complaint against the police?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Now, you indicated in response to Mr. Grant that you had some involvement or contribution in a case that was brought by the Justice Department of the United States against the Philadelphia Police Department in 1979; is that correct?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. Do you recall in that complaint brought by the Justice Department that one of the allegations that the Justice Department made against the Philadelphia Police Department is that they were intimidating and threatening witnesses who filed complaints against the police for police abuse?

A. Absolutely, yes, I do recall that.

Q. And that was an allegation by the United States Department of Justice?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. To your knowledge, had the Department of Justice of the United States ever made such an allegation against an entire police department of any city in the United States?

MR. GRANT: Objection: Asked and answered on direct.

MR. WEINGLASS: He could answer: It was gone into on cross.

THE WITNESS: Answer?

THE COURT: Go ahead.

THE WITNESS: It is the first time it had ever been done in the history of the United States, sir.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. And you, Mr. Jackson, had contributed information to the Department of Justice that led to that very lawsuit?

A. Yes, sir, substantially.

Q. Now, you were also asked a series of questions by Mr. Grant about your work in trial preparation in this case. Do you recall that?

Page 89.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I just want to go over it with you for a moment in segments. Let's first look at the first four months of your involvement in the case, from December 15th, 1981 to April 15th, 1982. Those first four months.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And this is the period when you're opening your private practice; is that correct?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. You're leaving Pilcop?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are working, essentially, on your own?

A. That's right.

Q. You had no paralegals?

A. No, sir.

Q. No investigators?

A. No, sir.

Q. You had a part-time secretary?

A. Well, I shared a secretary with another attorney, yes, sir.

Q. And in those four months you conducted a preliminary hearing in this case?

A. I did.

Page 90.

Q. You conducted a bail hearing in this case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You applied to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court after bail was denied?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You prepared and filed a motion for the appointment of an investigator?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You prepared and filed a motion for the appointment of a ballistics expert?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you did the same for a photographer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You filed a motion to suppress?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Statements?

A. That is correct.

Q. You filed a motion for a lineup?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. You filed a motion for the production of a police file: Officer Faulkner?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You engaged -- you asked for discovery?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you also handled a number of special issues related to Mr. Jamal's physical condition having been shot and operated on and hospitalized as well as his dietary needs with a Superintendent Owens?

A. With Superintendent Owens and Judge Ribner, yes, sir.

Q. And the Judge. And you filed a complaint for police abuse?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, did all of these things that you did in those first four months occupy most of the time that you committed to this case?

A. When you say all of those things occupy most -- did I spend more time doing that than I did the actual trial, is that what you are saying?

Q. No.

A. I don't --

Q. Did you have any time left over?

A. Oh, had very little time to do very much else.

Q. That's what I am asking. And, Mr. Jackson, this wasn't your only case, you had other cases you had to look after also?

A. Yes, sir, I was certainly trying to.

Q. You had responsibilities to those cases?

A. Absolutely.

Page 92.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Redirect

Q. As a lawyer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So after you performed all of these things in the first four months that we set out which was all necessary for the case --

A. Right.

Q. -- you had little time for trial preparation?

A. Well, absolutely. In effect, many of these things were of course to assist me in trial preparation. So actually, well, that's right, there was very little time to do anything else but to file all of these motions and to argue the motions themselves.

Q. Now, so on April 29th, 5 weeks before the trial, you came into Court and you asked Judge Ribner to appoint another lawyer to help you because you couldn't prepare for the trial in the time that was left?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. And Judge Ribner denied you?

A. That's right.

Q. And as your affidavit indicates, you had been asking throughout February, March and April for more money for your investigator, and that was denied?

A. That's correct, sir.

Page 93.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Redirect

Q. And you were asking for money for pathologists, and that was denied, other than $150?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. And for a firearms expert?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. We are going to come back to those in a minute. But I'm just trying to set the stage here for what was happening to you as this case is moving into trial. April 29th we've already covered. Then within two weeks, on May 13th, Mr. Jamal asked to represent himself; is that correct?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q And you were asked to be backup Counsel. Is that correct?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. And you immediately protested that order that you be backup Counsel?

A. Immediately.

Q. Because as you have told us over and over, you had never been backup counsel, you didn't know what the responsibilities were of backup counsel; is that right?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. Now, you remained backup Counsel from May 13th when Mr. Jamal took over the case until June 18th,

Page 94.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Redirect

when you were directed by both Judge Sabo and the Pennsylvania Supreme Court to take over the case as Counsel, trial Counsel?

A. I believe these are the dates.

Q. And is it your testimony that between May 13th and June 18th, which is the date opening arguments were to be given, you were serving as backup Counsel?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So for the five weeks preceding the giving of evidence in this case, you were backup Counsel from May 13th to June 18th?

A. That is correct.

Q. And it's in that period of time that you have told this Court you didn't know what your role ought to be?

A. Didn't know what my role was, sir, didn't do anything.

Q. And no one would tell you what your role was?

A. Well, quite the contrary. Everybody told me what my role was.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, could Mr. Weinglass phrase a question that isn't leading or isn't testifying? I haven't heard one yet. I am trying to be fair with the man.

THE COURT: He answered that, he said

Page 95.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Redirect

everybody was telling him what his role was.

MR. GRANT: Could Your Honor advise Mr. Weinglass not to ask leading questions.

THE COURT: I told him not to lead his own witness but evidently he doesn't pay attention.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Did you know yourself what your role was to be?

A. No, sir, I sure did not.

Q. Mr. Jackson, in your way of thinking back then, does backup counsel plan trial strategy?

A. Certainly not.

Q. In your way of thinking back then, does backup counsel plan trial tactics?

A. No, sir.

Q. To your way of thinking back then, does backup counsel prepare the case for trial?

A. No, sir.

Q. And in the last five weeks before evidence was taken in this case you did none of those things?

A. No, sir. I did not.

Q. In your experience as a trial attorney, are the last five weeks prior to the taking of testimony a very critical time in terms of the preparation of

Page 96.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Redirect

your case?

A. Unquestionably.

Q. Would it be fair to say that it's the most critical time when an attorney begins to focus on his case?

A. I would say that's the most critical time, sir.

Q. And during that time you were backup Counsel, and not knowing what your role ought to be?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Incidentally, they have quoted you in Philadelphia Magazine as saying that you believed it was Mr. Jamal's show. Was it during that period of time that Mr. Jamal was Counsel and you were backup Counsel that you believed it was now his show?

A. No, Counsel, I can only answer you the same way that I answered Mr. Grant. I really don't remember the context of the question from the Philadelphia Magazine. I don't know if I was talking about while he was Counsel, whether I was talking about some other aspects of his affiliation with MOVE. I just don't know the answer, quite frankly. When I made that response. Assuming I made that response, I don't know what it refers to.

Q. Now, would it be fair to say, Mr. Jackson --

Page 97.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Redirect correct me if I am wrong -- that on June the 19th, after you went to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- and after Judge Sabo directed you to proceed, that at that point you had reacquired control of the case?

MR. GRANT: Objection, and leading.

MR. WEINGLASS: I phrased it if it's his belief.

THE WITNESS: Okay, well, once the Supreme Court, once the Supreme Court told me I had to remain in the case, then came back to Judge Sabo and Judge Sabo directed that I then participate, I had no choice. I had no choice. And when you say reacquired control of the case, well, I guess because I was then made Counsel, yes, sure.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. And so would it be fair to say that you reacquired control of the case on the day that you had to give an opening statement?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Now, you were asked a lot of questions by Mr. Grant on whether or not Mr. Jamal had at various times ordered you to do things or directed you to do things or requested that you do things. And I want to ask you this question about that. Assuming that all of that had occurred, did that in any way interfere with your ability to call witnesses in the penalty phase of the case?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Jamal ever direct you not to call witnesses in the penalty phase of the case?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, the issue came up in cross-examination about the question of race in the selection of the Jury in this case. Do you recall Mr. Grant asking you a series of questions about that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you prior to the questioning of jurors in 1982 request that the Court put on the record the race of the jurors who were questioned?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And why, Mr. Jackson, did you do that?

A. Well, it was my understanding of the state of the law at that point that the only way that an appellate court could review the argument with regard to discriminating against one race or another is to have the race of the prospective juror on the record. So I requested the Court to inquire as to the race of the individual, as opposed to defense Counsel asking the prospective jurors what race are you, because I thought it might be offensive to the juror coming from me.

Q. And in the eight or nine days of Jury selection, was it your understanding that the representative of the Commonwealth in selecting the Jury used both peremptory and cause challenges in a racial way against otherwise qualified black venire persons?

A. There is no question about it. The majority of his peremptory challenges were used against African Americans.

MR. GRANT: I object and that is not the question.

THE WITNESS: I mean --

MR. GRANT: Being the fact it is not the question, the question is not what the race was, but what the intention of the prosecutor was. As I remember.

THE WITNESS: Oh --

MR. GRANT: I move to strike his prior answer.

THE COURT: I will strike it. And rephrase your question.

Page 100.

THE WITNESS: I don't know what his intention was. I know what the result was.

MR. GRANT: Thank you.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Was it your, having gone through the process with the representative of the District Attorney's Office, were you left with the impression that the District Attorney's Office had used racially-motivated peremptory strikes?

A. Yes. It was my belief and my strong feeling and impression that in fact the prosecutor had used peremptory challenges to exclude African Americans from the Jury.

Q. Right. And as a matter of fact, Mr. Jackson, you filed an affidavit with the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania saying precisely that?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. And in that affidavit you noted the 11 persons of African-American backgrounds who were struck peremptorily by the Assistant District Attorney?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. So the issue of racial exclusion in this trial was not something that came up during the PCRA, it was with this case from day one?

A. From the first day I was on the case, sir, I brought it up as an issue. I thought it was part of the case and to the best of my ability I tried to make it an issue that the Court could deal with.

MR. GRANT: Objection. I believe he said he brought up an issue of racially-based peremptory challenges from day one.

THE COURT: That's what he said.

MR. GRANT: That's what the question was, and that was his answer. I want to be clear before we go any further.

THE WITNESS: Okay, obviously, day one we didn't start the peremptory challenges. Let me back up. I thought race was an issue in the case from, in the case from day one.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. And on day one of Jury selection you indicated to the Judge you wanted the race of the jurors noted?

A. Certainly; that was simply another aspect of the race issue within the case. It's implicit in the case, there is no way I could get around it. We have a black Defendant shooting a white police officer. Contrary to what anyone and everyone might want to believe, race was an issue.

Q. And you saw the District Attorney eliminating African-American jurors through the use of peremptory challenges?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you called that to the attention of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court?

A. I did, sir.

Q. Incidentally, Mr. Jackson, to your knowledge as it existed in 1982, as a criminal law practitioner in Philadelphia, was that the pattern and practice of the District Attorney's Office of Philadelphia?

MR. GRANT: Objection.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. WEINGLASS: I would like to show you an affidavit, a copy of an affidavit which was filed with the Pennsylvania Supreme Court.

Showing Counsel a copy (handing).

And ask you to identify it.

That would be marked as Petitioner's next exhibit.

(Copy of affidavit was marked Commonwealth Exhibit D-l0 for identification.)

(Pause.)

THE COURT OFFICER: D-10, Your Honor. Do you want to see it, Judge?

THE COURT: No, I don't want to see it.

Page 103.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Redirect

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Mr. Jackson, would you examine a two-page document that's been marked P-l0 and indicate whether or not it is a copy of the affidavit with your signature appearing?

A. Yes, sir.

THE COURT OFFICER: P-10, sir (handing).

(Pause.)

THE WITNESS: This is my affidavit, sir.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. And it is the affidavit that you were referring to in your last few questions and answers?

A. That is correct.

Q. Moving on. You were asked questions about the witness Chobert, Robert Chobert, the cab driver, by Mr. Grant on Friday. Do you recall being asked questions?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now let's examine that witness for a moment.

First, do you recall if you had a statement from a witness named Veronica Jones who was a prostitute on the corner of 12th and Locust who said that she saw two men run from the scene to the police?

Page 104.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Redirect

A. I had a statement from her. I recall that she said one or two men had run from the scene, I do recall that.

Q. Do you recall if you had a statement from a witness named Dessie Hightower, who said he saw a man run from the scene?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall if you had a statement from a Debbie Kordansky who said that she saw someone run from the scene but it was unclear in her statement whether that person had run from the scene before or after the police had arrived?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And lastly, did you have a statement from a fourth witness, Robert Chobert, who said he saw the shooter and the shooter ran from the scene 35 steps going east down Locust?

A. I don't entirely remember it. I believe he said the man was 200 pounds, and height I don't recall. But I always remember him saying in this statement that he saw a man run from the scene who was the apparent shooter. And he weighed I believe in excess of 200 pounds. And the reason I remember that is because I think at the time Mr. Jamal weighed a hundred and, about 157 pounds, something like that.

Page 105.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Redirect

Q. So you had in your hands a potential of four witnesses -- Chobert, Kordansky, Hightower and Veronica Jones -- who told the police that they had seen someone run from the scene?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. And the three who identified the direction all had that person running in the same direction?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. And was it your belief that Officers Shoemaker and Forbes, who were the first to arrive on the scene, also wrote a statement saying that Mr. Jamal was laying on the sidewalk when they arrived moments after the shooting in a pool of blood?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Now, at trial Robert Chobert withdrew his statement that he saw someone run 35 steps down Locust and said he was mistaken; isn't that correct?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And you wanted to cross-examine him on his change of position?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And so it would have been helpful for you, would it not, to have been able to attack his credibility on the basis of his bias for having been

Page 106.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Redirect

on probation at the time for an arson for hire?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall that another witness called by the prosecution...

MR. WEINGLASS: Hold on just a minute, if I may.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time between defense Counsel.)

MR. WEINGLASS: We will come back.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. So you have Mr. Chobert changing his story?

A. That's right.

Q. And you have Veronica Jones doing the same thing?

A. That's right, sir.

Q. So two changed their story, and Debbie, and Debbie Kordansky wouldn't come to Court?

A. At least not for me, sir.

Q. So you lost three of the four in terms of your ability to project what they told the police?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now let's talk for a moment about Debbie Kordansky. Because Counsel read to you parts of the record about Debbie Kordansky.

MR. WEINGLASS: If I may have just a

Page 107.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Redirect

moment.

(Pause.)

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Now, this is a most peculiar situation. Debbie Kordansky you spoke to in the, from the Judge's chambers on the Judge's telephone. Isn't that correct?

A. Yes, sir. During the midst of the trial.

Q. And do you recall her saying this to you?

Page 5, Counsel. June 30th, 1982.

As reported in the record. She said I'm afraid to tell you what I said because I really don't want to help you. You said I read the statement to her. And she said I really don't want to help you. And she says she doesn't like black people. She says I was raped by a black male about five years ago, and if I could avoid coming into Court I will.

Do you recall that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So you lost Debbie Kordansky as well?

A. Sure did, sir. I would have called her in any event if I knew where she was. It didn't matter to me if she liked black people or not, if she was going to make a statement consistent with what she had given the police it certainly would have been beneficial to the Defendant.

Page 108.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Redirect

Q. And as you recall her statement, it was unclear, she had written it out in longhand, and she said that she was watching television, it was 3:45 in the morning, she heard shots, she got up, she looked outside, she saw police there, and then she wrote at the bottom of it I saw a man run from the scene?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And you didn't know whether that was before the police arrived or after but you sure wanted to talk to her?

A. Well, certainly, because certainly there had not been any others -- her statement about a man running from the scene was consistent with the statements of the other witnesses. There was no one else that said that they saw someone run from the scene after the police arrived. If in fact she saw it then or after that point in time, I certainly thought it was worthwhile exploring. But it was certainly consistent with the statement of the other witnesses that the shooter or someone else at or about the time the shots were fired ran in the same direction that Miss Kordansky saw this person run. So it seemed consistent to me, it seemed to confirm the statements of the others that someone ran from the scene. And obviously it was something significant for the defense to explore.

Q. Moving on. Officer Gary Wakshul. The officer who did not appear to testify.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Jackson, did you want Officer Wakshul as a witness?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Jamal want Officer Wakshul as a witness?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the two of you argue at length with the Court, pleading with the Court for a continuance so that Officer Wakshul could be brought in?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, did Mr. Jamal indicate -- I'm sorry to get into this -- on the record that he in part blamed you for not bringing in Officer Wakshul in that heated moment? And I will read from you the record --

A. I believe he did blame me, sir, yeah.

Q. Do you recall -- page 48, Counsel, July lst, 1982 -- the Defendant: I told him -- meaning you -- at the motion to suppress and he didn't show up.

Page 110.

And then on page 50 of the same day: I told him -- meaning yourself -- about pertinent information. He had the statements for months. And he can't find the man. The man is on vacation. It's not my fault, Judge.

Do you recall Mr. Jamal saying that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Indicating that at that moment he thought you had the information and the statements and that he had told you back in June at the suppression hearing to bring in Wakshul?

A. Yes, sir. I recall him saying that, yes, sir.

Q. Now, you were shown an Exhibit which I think is in front of you of Mr. Wakshul's interview of February llth, 1982?

A. Yes, sir. It is --

Q. Do you have that in front of you?

A. Yes, I do, sir.

Q. Would you look at the last page, which is page 4, the very last line. If you can make it out. Where Officer Wakshul tells the police on February llth, 1982 the reason why he didn't recall Mr. Jamal allegedly confessing in the hospital was because --

A. I'm sorry.

Q. Yes.

Page 111.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What does he say? Because I didn't attach any importance to it?

A. That's essentially what he says, sir.

Q. Do you think you might have had a field day in front of the Jury with that comment?

A. It seemed awfully strange to me that it wasn't until this time that he thought it was significant to tell someone that the Defendant admitted the crime to him. He didn't think it was important before that time. I... It boggles my mind that a police officer wouldn't think an admission was important.

Q. An admission of shooting a fellow police officer is something that Officer Wakshul claimed in that February 11th interview that he didn't attach any importance to it?

A. That's what he said, sir.

Q. Is that conceivable?

A. Not in my mind.

MR. GRANT: Move to strike what's conceivable in the mind of another. Since his mind is not in question.

THE COURT: I will.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. As a matter of fact, Mr. Jackson, if you had

Page 112.

Officer Wakshul saying that kind of thing in front of a Jury, would that have given you the basis to argue to the Jury that the police were lying in this case and this is the proof?

A. I think so, sir. I don't think there is any question. I just couldn't imagine someone believing that the officer was not attaching any importance to hearing a Defendant admit that he shot a police officer. And he said he didn't think it was important until later on. I just -- and I, I just couldn't imagine that all 12 Jurors would believe that statement. Or any of it, for that matter.

Q. Yes, would it have given you an opening in the case to attack the whole case?

A. Absolutely.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, could we break at this point? I'm just about halfway through.

THE COURT: Any objection to breaking?

MR. GRANT: Yes, I do, Judge. I would just like to get on with the program. He stalled this morning for an hour and a half.

THE COURT: The Court will just take a two-minute recess.

THE COURT OFFICER: The Court will take a brief recess to the call of the Crier.

Page 113.

- - - - -

(Brief recess.)

- - - - -

MR. WEINGLASS: I am going to try to finish by going quickly.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. I want to talk briefly about something that Mr. Grant discussed with you at great length. That is the resources that were available to you and the funds that were available to you and the experts. I want to draw your attention to the transcript of June 3rd, 1982, just as the trial is about to begin, that is Jury selection.

Counsel, page 3.92 on June 3rd.

Did you indicate to the Court on June 3rd the following? Quote, at this point Mr. Jamal has no funds to pay that investigator. I have paid that investigator out of my pocket. I have no additional funds to pay him. He -- meaning Mr. Jamal -- is without any investigator, Your Honor.

Did you make that statement to Judge Sabo on the record on June 3rd?

A. I did, sir. As I had indicated before, Mr. Greer agreed to accept the job of investigating this case. However, asking him to wait until the Court paid the money would work a hardship. Notwithstanding the hardship it worked on me, I was able to provide him some funds in advance of the conclusion of the case.

Q. And as a matter of fact, directing your attention to May 23rd, 1983 -- this is one year after the trial had concluded, approximately, and it was on the motion for a new trial which you had filed, argued before Judge Sabo -- do you recall Judge Sabo saying --

-- on page 41, Counsel, of the transcript --

-- to you I didn't even see this investigator?

A. Absolutely.

Q. That you put a bill in for?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He wasn't even in the Courtroom?

A. I think -- well, yes, I recall the Judge saying that, yes, sir.

Q. Now I want to for a moment go over something with you that I don't completely understand. I want to show you what Counsel has used, which was the Exhibit that Judge Sabo brought to Court the other day, namely, your petition for fees. And I want to direct your attention to page 1 of that document, particularly where the amounts --

MR. WEINGLASS: May I approach, Your Honor?

THE COURT: (Indicating).

MR. WEINGLASS: Thank you.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Where the billing amount is indicated for the investigator, and where the approval amount is indicated for the investigator. Do you see those two numbers (handing) If I have them right.

A. Yes, sir. It appears from this that I was reimbursed $562.50, but only $150 was approved for the investigator.

Q. In other words -- correct me if I am wrong -- and I don't know these critiques -- is it true that you asked for $562.50, for an investigator and Judge Sabo would only approve $150?

THE COURT: Counselor, please: If you don't know the procedure, don't infer that I did anything with this. This was beyond my jurisdiction. It goes to the President Judge.

THE WITNESS: Yeah, I think in all fairness to the Court, I think the $150 was approved even prior to Judge Sabo. I think I may have requested some additional funds from Judge Sabo and was denied.

Why I took, why I took a chance on paying the investigator more than what's approved, well, I did for whatever reason.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. And my question is -- and with all due respect to the Court, I don't know the procedure --

THE COURT: I know. That's why you should be talking to your home Counsel.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, I'm asking the witness.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Does that document indicate that the amount that was finally approved for your investigator was $150?

A. Yes, sir. Prior to, prior to the time $150 was approved. Or prior to and during the time, as far as I know, from reading this, $150 was approved.

Q. And you told this Court, Judge Sabo, on June 3rd, as you are about to go to trial, Mr. Jamal doesn't have an investigator?

A. That's correct. Because I think at that point I may have exhausted my funds at that time in even paying the investigator.

Q. All right. Now, again talking about May 23rd, 1983 -- Counsel, on page 36 -- in argument for a new trial, did you inform Judge Sabo, quote, I talked personally to six forensic pathologists. The cheapest forensic pathologist that I spoke to indicated that there would be an initial fee of $300 up front before he would do anything else. That amount did not include any examination, nor did it include any testimony. For that reason, Your Honor, we are saying simply that by virtue of Mr. Jamal's being indigent he was denied due process of law. Do you remember saying that to the Court?

A. Absolutely.

Q. You had talked to six pathologists and not one would take this case for the $150 that was authorized?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Now, there was much discussion with Mr. Grant about the photographer Bill Peraneau. Do you remember that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And whether or not Bill Peraneau had received money from other people besides yourself?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, do you recall -- page 44, Counsel, of May 23rd, 1983 -- you engaged in this colloquy with Judge Sabo?

The Court: How about all the money that was collected for him by his group.

Mr. Jackson: That was not for any defense purposes that I know of, sir.

The Court: What was it for then.

Mr. Jackson: Let me beg your pardon. One fee for the photographer was paid out of that. $300, as I remember.

So you did inform the Court, did you not, back in 1983 that Bill Peraneau had received $300 from a support group?

A. I guess I did, sir, I can't recall at the time.

Q. And that was for, do you know if that was for photographs that the committee wanted that Bill Peraneau had taken for your purposes but they wanted copies and they paid Mr. Peraneau for those copies?

MR. GRANT: I object to leading.

THE COURT: I will have to sustain that. Please, Counselor, stop leading your witness, will you.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Now, you were questioned about a Philadelphia Inquirer article by Mr. Grant that appeared on July 23rd, 1995. And he asked you the question as to whether or not there was a thousand dollars that was raised and available. And he read part of it but he didn't read this part. Jackson said he never received any private money raised to help the defense.

Did you tell the Philadelphia Inquirer that?

A. I'm sure I did, I told everyone. I've never received any money in my hand, even the money of Bill Peraneau went directly to him. I never received any funds outside of what the Court gave me from any source, from anyone at any time.

Q. Now I just want to go back once again briefly and revisit the questions in a short period of time of your ability to gather witnesses prior to trial. And I want to call your attention to the transcript from April 29th, 1982 on the bottom of page 6 where you informed Judge Ribner of the following. You may recall, Your Honor, that I had asked in fact for the addresses of several witnesses that the Commonwealth had interviewed, some of whom we have been able to contact by other means. And I find that notwithstanding Counsel for the Commonwealth's representation that these witnesses would not speak to me, that in fact they will speak to me. I'm not suggesting that Mr. McGill has been sledding me, I don't know. Nevertheless, some of those witnesses are talking to me. And in fact those witnesses have proven to be important.

Page 120.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Redirect

Do you recall informing the Court of that?

A. Yes, I do, sir.

Q. So you didn't have the names and addresses of the witnesses; is that right?

A. Didn't have the addresses of the witnesses.

Q. I'm sorry?

A. I had the names.

Q. You had the names?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't have the addresses or the telephone numbers?

A. That's correct.

Q. And there were representations made to you that they didn't want to speak to you in any event?

A. That's right, Mr. McGill had suggested that the addresses weren't important because people either

Page 121.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Redirect

didn't want to talk to me or they would not be helpful to me.

Q. And you found out the end of April that people did want to talk to you?

A. That's correct.

Q. I am not saying intentionally mislead but he did mislead your work on the case?

A. Absolutely. I didn't have the addresses to pursue the witnesses. Mr. McGill made certain representations again, as I said, that either witnesses did not want to speak to me or they would not be helpful. As if to suggest that I didn't need resources in which to find those witnesses. It just seemed inappropriate of course for the prosecution to be suggesting or trying to influence what witnesses the defense would interview. But I think it was part and parcel of the whole scenario of not being able to obtain or go to the witnesses. And I have said it throughout my testimony, and my arguments to the Court then and here, just seemed patently unfair that the Defendant wouldn't have equal access to the witnesses.

Q. Now, to conclude -- I am cutting this short -- you testified on Friday that you did the best that you could do. That's true, is it not?

Page 122.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Redirect

A. Yes, sir. I sure did.

Q. But at trial did you have a firearms expert to testify?

A. No, sir.

Q. At trial did you have a pathologist to testify?

A. No, sir.

Q. During the trial did you have an investigator actively involved in finding witnesses?

A. No, sir.

Q. At the time of trial, during the trial, you had no opportunity to interview Dessie Hightower, Veronica Jones, or Dr. Colletta before putting them on the stand?

A. No, sir, I could not interview them before them being on the stand.

Q. And at trial you were denied the witness Wakshul?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. And during the five weeks immediately preceding the taking of testimony, you were in this never-never land of being a backup Counsel?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. In other words, Mr. Jackson, is what you are saying that you were doing is the best you could

Page 123.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Redirect

under all those circumstances?

A. Sure, I assume, yes. It was, I did the best that I could under extremely adverse circumstances. Under the circumstances we just went over, I did the best that I could under those circumstances. No money, no investigator, no experts, no prior preparation with the witnesses. I did the best that I could, sir.

Q. You were in effect like a boxer in a ring with both arms tied behind your back doing your best to bite your opponent?

A. That's about as close to it as I could characterize it.

MR. WEINGLASS: I have no further questions.

MR. GRANT: I have very brief recross, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Are you going to cross or do you want to break for lunch or what?

MR. GRANT: I think we could dispose of Mister, we can let Mr. Jackson go.

THE COURT: Go ahead, then.

MR. GRANT: If I may.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Mr. Jackson, I am not going to belabor points.

A. That's all right, sir.

Q. I am not going to ask you leading questions. What was the result of the complaint you filed with the Police Department charging police misconduct in this case, sir?

A. I think it was unfounded, sir.

Q. You think it was unfounded?

A. Yes.

Q. You know it was unfounded?

A. All right, I know it was unfound -- yes, sir, I know it was unfounded.

Q. And you know that when you file such complaints that these complaints are not brought before a jury of 12 or before a bench trial, they are brought before an administrative board of police personnel and perhaps sometimes community persons; isn't that so?

A. Not at that time.

Q. So was it brought before a court of law?

A. No, sir.

Q. So if it's not brought in a court of law, and it's brought before the police review board --

Page 125.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

A. No, sir, it wasn't, there was no police review board at that time, sir.

Q. Okay. What do you call it, then?

A. The Police Commissioner.

Q. Okay. It was brought before the Police Commissioner. Is it important then whether or not a person is on vacation? In other words, does the Police Commissioner have a right to say to the officer who is in question get in here and answer these questions whether you are on vacation or not?

A. Sure. I would assume so.

Q. So if a person from the Internal Affairs Bureau doesn't write what the person's vacation is on the interview they are taking regarding police misconduct, does that have any relevance whatsoever as to whether the Commissioner is going to bring him in?

A. As far as I know it doesn't.

Q. You mentioned that Miss Kordansky, who you felt to be a crucial witness for you, was crucial because she said that after she heard the shots she looked out her window and she saw someone run from the crime scene; isn't that right?

A. That's correct, sir.

MR. GRANT: Could I have this marked as Commonwealth Exhibit 9 for identification.

(Police interview of Debbie Kordansky was marked Commonwealth Exhibit C-9 for identification.)

THE COURT OFFICER: C-9, Your Honor. C-9, sir (handing).

THE WITNESS: Thank you. Yes, I have it.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Why don't you read that, sir, into the record?

A. Certainly. I was watching --

Q. Do you recognize what that is?

A. Yeah, this looks like the investigation statement that was provided to me after the address and things of that sort during discovery.

Q. And it looks like the original, does it not?

A. I would assume so, yes, it looks like it.

Q. Very well.

A. Okay. This is Debbie Kordansky. She was interviewed 12-9-81 in reference to the shooting of police officer, 1234 Locust Street. I was watching TV and I heard about five gunshots sometime between 3:45 a.m. and 4:00 a.m. The gunshots seemed to be in succession. I thought that it was firecrackers. I didn't look out the window at first. I heard sirens a short time later. I saw about 10 squad cars and two vans at 13th and Locust. I saw a male running on the south side of Locust Street.

Q. Now, does that say I saw somebody run from the crime scene?

A. No, it doesn't say those words.

Q. It could have been somebody running to a phone booth, into her hotel, running to assist other officers, it doesn't say I saw someone running from the crime scene, does it, sir?

A. No, you would have to know where the crime scene was.

Q. No, you would have to be able to read English. Look at the statement and read it again?

A. Sure, I will read it again.

Q. The last line.

A. I saw a male running on the south side of Locust Street.

The south side of Locust Street is where the shooting occurred. I made what I considered to be a reasonable assumption that he was running from the crime scene.

Q. Okay. Let's look at that and be practical about it.

A. Okay.

Q. The crime scene is in the middle of Locust between 12th and 13th?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Now, if the person is running south from 13th, they are going to run right into the dead police officer or the police officers who are attending him?

A. Well.

Q. Right?

A. No, that isn't true.

Q. Okay.

A. Because you have to assume what, what you want me to buy into is that she is giving it in succession. It is really not clear. She simply gave, in my mind she simply stated a number of things that she saw and heard. Not necessarily in succession. The fact that she saw a male running on the south side of Locust Street doesn't tell me that she saw that after the police officers were there. She said she heard the sirens, she said that she saw the police cars, and she said she saw a man running. She didn't say one happened first, second and third.

And, Mr. Grant, I don't know: It may be that in fact this is the succession that she saw it. But what I'm saying is I wanted the opportunity to talk to her so I could nail it down, because it was unclear.

Q. Okay, Mr. Jackson, you said that you were ready, willing and available to have a conversation with me at any time prior to your testimony so that we could review your testimony?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Yes, you did. And what is your office address?

A. 6800 Stenton Avenue.

Q. Where is that published?

A. Where is what?

Q. Where is that published?

A. It is not published, sir.

Q. Oh. What is your office phone number?

A. Ahh, 849-7190.

Q. No, sir, that is a Mt. Airy exchange. Is that your home?

A. Oh, no, I have another number for my home, it is not published.

Q. Where is your phone number published?

A. My home number is not published.

Q. You have no published numbers, do you? Now what am I supposed to be, a clairvoyant?

A. No, you are a very able Assistant District Attorney, sir, and I am sure if you wanted to get in touch with me you would have found some way to get in touch with me.

Q. So in other words, you weren't readily available to anyone except who you wanted to be available to and who knew your personal numbers; isn't that true?

A. Well, I still say no.

Q. Didn't you get my beeper page? I paged your beeper number, I never got a response. Did you ever get a beep from the D.A.'s Office?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection. Could we have the time? I believe the beeper was last week.

MR. GRANT: Oh, really, you know about it?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yeah, he told me.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Okay, how come you didn't respond to that beeper since you were so ready, willing and able to come down here and talk to me?

A. Oh, I don't, Mr. Grant -- typically, if I get a number that I am not familiar with, I may not call it back.

Q. I said --

A. But if you have a voice mail or number, if you would have said, ahh, this is Joey Grant, I would have called you.

Q. Oh, most certainly?

A. Sure.

Q. You don't know what a 686' number is, do you?

A. Sure, Mr. Grant, I don't recall. That's the Municipal number.

Q. That is a what?

A. Municipal number.

Q. That is a City number for City employees and City institutions?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Easily a D.A.'s number also?

A. Yes. Mr. Grant, I assure you, I do not recall receiving a message from you. If I had gotten the message from you I would have called you at least and told you that I was busy. At least.

Q. I am sure you would have, sir. Now, you said you had very little time because of all the things that you were doing for Mr. Jamal in trial preparation, looking for witnesses, strategy, tactics, filing numerous motions in the courtroom, et cetera, and therefore you had no time for anything else?

A. Pretty much so.

Page 132.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

Q. Well, then how did you have time to practice law and handle these other cases that Mr. Weinglass brought out that you were handling?

A. Well, as a result of this case, I wasn't able to handle very many. Some of which I was able to request the assistance of others to take over. But again, as you recall, I just left Pilcop, so it isn't that I had a large practice. I mean I was back to private practice. Well, three weeks prior to going back to private practice is when I got this case. So it wasn't that I had a tremendous amount of cases. But I had some.

Q. Yeah. You had this case and this case alone, and you didn't have any other cases that you were actively pursuing while this case of your career was being tried -- now admit that, will you?

A. To admit that would be to admit a lie. How was I to eat? I didn't get paid for a year and a half after this case. I had to eat somehow. So why would I admit that? No, I had other cases that provided me with a way of eating everyday and paying my rent, sir.

Q. Okay.

A. So there were other cases, trust me.

Q. Okay, Mr. Jackson, I trust you. By the way,

Page 133.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

you said that Debbie Kordansky, according to you she was made less than available because the D.A. was misleading you as to what her willingness to come in and testify was; correct?

A. Well, I made one statement earlier with regard to all of the Commonwealth's witnesses. And then specifically with regard to Debbie Kordansky, made that in front of Judge Sabo. I think the earlier remark was made in front of Judge Ribner with regard to obtaining the addresses of the witnesses. When I said something to the effect that notwithstanding the remarks by Mr. McGill that the witnesses either didn't want to talk to me or would help me, I think I told him at that time that two or three of the witnesses indeed had talked to me and in fact were helpful. And I think at that time I was probably talking about Debbie -- Dessie Hightower and perhaps another witness. I'm not really certain. But then I think later on during the trial, in the midst of trial is when I specifically referred to Debbie Kordansky who I couldn't get in touch with.

Q. So you couldn't get in touch with Debbie Kordansky, Dessie Hightower, Dr. Colletta and Veronica Jones?

A. No, sir, I am not saying, no, no, no, no.

Page 134.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

Q. Who couldn't you got in touch with that you wanted to get in touch with, Mr. Jackson?

A. Everyone -- I couldn't get -- I got in touch with Dessie Hightower. There was another person, a friend of his who was with him.

Q. Robert Pigford?

A. Robert Pigford.

Q. Who else?

A. And I think Veronica Jones, and I think, as you correctly pointed out to me, that I did have her address. I think that was one of those.

Q. Yes?

A. One of those cases that slipped through the crack, I got her address on the statement.

Q. One of those peoples' names who slipped your mind who you had her address?

A. Whichever way you want to characterize it.

Q. No, I want to characterize it the correct way. And you had her address and it slipped your mind?

A. What slipped my mind?

Q. Her address, your ability to contact her?

A. We did contact her.

Q. That's what I am saying. So that wasn't deprived you by the Commonwealth, was it?

A. No, that was the only one that the

Page 135.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

Commonwealth provided. She was the only witness that the Commonwealth provided out of over a hundred witnesses, there was one witness the Commonwealth provided the address to. Veronica Jones, yes, sir. I admit that, they were generous.

Q. Okay. Now, Mr. Jackson --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- Dessie Hightower, which you say you were deprived of speaking to him, is that right? Did you get the statement that you paid your investigator for of Dessie Hightower, and listened to it, I believe it was tape recorded?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On page 4 of that statement which was attached as an exhibit to your affidavit here, at the very bottom, question: Did the police say they wanted you to testify in this case.

Answer: They just got my statement. And they've been very cooperative as far as I'm concerned. They haven't been leaning on me. They haven't tried to force me into saying anything. They can't. I'm only going to say what I seen.

Does that sound like people are trying to hide this guy from you? Your own investigator wrote this down.

Page 136.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

A. I never said they were trying to hide them from me. Never said that, never said that at all. I simply said the District Attorney wouldn't give me his address.

Q. Let me take you to the next interview of your investigator: Robert Pigford.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is also attached as an evidentiary item here, apparently they have some value to the defense as an exhibit to Mr. Greer's affidavit. On the last page of that interview, last question: Were you ever told not to talk to me or anyone else involved with the defense of Mumia.

Answer: No.

You read that, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now back to Mr. Hightower. First page of his affidavit. Mr. Hightower -- this is Mr. Greer, your employee, speaking --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- I don't have your statement with me but I have read it. How many times were you questioned by the police.

Answer; Three times.

Did you ever tell the D.A. that you

Page 137.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

did not want to talk to me or anyone else connected with this case.

Answer: I told them I didn't want to give a statement to Mr. Jackson. His attorney. I didn't say I wouldn't talk to an investigator or anything like that.

You understand I am working for Mr. Jamal and his attorney.

Yes, you told me that over the phone. I decided what I told them I can tell you.

Now the man doesn't want to talk to you. Miss Kordansky doesn't want to talk to you. You said you were able to contact Veronica Jones. You knew where Cynthia White lived because you had guys walking around following her, at least, couldn't talk to her. The only person that leaves is Dr. Colletta. Now, did you have a hard time finding your way from your offices at Broad Street four blocks to 10th Street where this large edifice called Jefferson Hospital is?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, why didn't you walk down there then instead of casting dispersions on the --

A. I will continue to cast dispersions against the Commonwealth where they are appropriate. In this

Page 138.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

case with regard to the doctor, I believe the doctor indicated his lawyers or some lawyers suggested that he not talk to me. I am not really certain. I have some vague --

Q. Some defense lawyers like yourself?

A. No, I think this must have been another breed, I'm not really certain.

Q. You are not saying they are D.A.'s, though?

A. No, I don't think it was a D.A. It may have been hospital lawyers, I really don't -- I think in fact it may have been hospital lawyers, Mr. Grant, with regard to the doctor.

Q. Why does your testimony always change from the 20 minutes it takes to go from direct to cross, Mr. Jackson?

A. Because the questions are different.

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection to the form of the question.

THE WITNESS: But anyhow --

MR. WEINGLASS: May I have a ruling on my objection? It is argumentative.

MR. GRANT: I think it is an appropriate question.

MR. WEINGLASS: Counsel's opinion.

THE COURT: Well, I don't know if it

Page 139.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

is an opinion.

Could you answer that question?

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor --

THE WITNESS: I will try to answer. Mr. Grant's questions are always compounded and he asked why they are different. It's because he asks about four or five questions in one question and I try to respond to each of them and then when I give one he stops me. But I will try to answer him because he asked me about each of these different witnesses, he asked me about four or five witnesses in each question, and the answer to each one is different and he thinks my answer is changing. It's only because he has different names and each one requires a different answer. If he wants an answer for each of them specifically I could give him that. But he is trying to make the reason for each one of them the same because, I'm sure it's because he is a great lawyer that he is. But that is not going to get it with me.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, may we have a ruling on my objection?

THE COURT: He answered the question already, he said he could answer it.

Page 140.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

MR. WEINGLASS: So the Court overrules --

THE COURT: All he is saying is please give him one question at a time. That's what he is asking.

Is that right?

THE WITNESS: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: Give him one question at a time.

MR. GRANT: Very well, Your Honor, I will give him one question at a time.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. This question is going to be preceded, Mr. Jackson, so you could follow me --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- by reading from the notes of testimony. And it is talking about race relations. And you are talking to the Court and you are discussing the phraseology of the questions that are going to be propounded to the prospective venire persons.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Because you, because you were a good lawyer then, you had a questionnaire proposed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it had never been used in a criminal case

Page 141.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

in the history of the City of Philadelphia and the City of Philadelphia has been around 300 years?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And you were one of the first to propose this and to use it and you even got the Judge to go along with some of the questions from it, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that unusual?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that good lawyering?

A. I understand it was, yes, sir.

Q. Well, listen. June 7th, 1982. Pages 17 through 20. You are discussing this issue.

Mr. Jackson: Your Honor, if I could at this point with regard to, quote, what is your race -- which was the question that you were trying to find how to delicately put to the jurors --

A. Yeah.

Q. -- I agree that this may be obvious, but the record of course can not reflect what is obvious to the eye. That is the reason for asking the question. Judge Sabo says, well, you could say, you could in your question say that.

And you say, we can say, quote, you are of the white race and the Defendant is of the black race, for instance. But then again the problem is you take the chance of offending someone by assuming that there are only going to be two races and someone considers them self something else. So then we run the risk, rather than asking them what is your race, we are going to accuse someone. We would prefer, we would prefer not to run that risk.

Page 142.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

At page 20 the Judge then says, well, in other words, are you going to be the one that asks the question.

Mr. Jackson says, Mr. Jamal is going to ask that.

The Court: If you want to ask it, go ahead, I'm not going to worry about that. What else.

Now, when no questions were asked about race, or when they were intermittently asked about race, you knew it was incumbent upon you as trial Counsel to ask the question, didn't you?

A. Ahh, well, yeah, I know it was incumbent upon me to take that, to make that decision to take the risk of asking the question, yes.

Q. Weren't you just insinuating that it was requested of the Judge that he ask it, and because it wasn't asked the issue of race wasn't perfected for appeal?

Page 143.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

A. Well, because there --

Q. Yes or no, sir, then you could explain. Yes or no?

A. Okay. Yes.

Q. Weren't you inferring it?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Explain it?

A. Okay. And the reason I want to explain: Because I thought if the Judge asked the question it wouldn't offend. It would cut both ways, towards the prosecution as well as the defense. If I were to ask the question, and again if I were to ask the question when I was conducting the voir dire, because of course some of that time Mr. Jamal was conducting the voir dire, and I think certainly while he was conducting it, it would be even more offensive for him to ask that question. And then when I was asking the question, it might in fact be considered an accusation. And the accusation, the person might respond in such a way that would hurt Mr. Jamal.

Q. What did you just say?

A. What did I just say?

Q. Yeah.

A. What part of it?

Q. Simple five cent words in 25 words or less,

Page 144.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

what are you talking about here? Are you saying yes the Judge was denying you the right to voir dire these jurors on race, or no he wasn't?

A. No, he didn't deny me.

Q. Thank you. Yet you were left with the indelible impression and the strong belief, I think are your words, that the prosecutor was peremptorily using racially-based strikes; you said that on direct, didn't you?

A. There was no question about it.

Q. No question. And if there was no question, why is it that in 4,000 pages of trial record you never once opened your mouth and made a peep, not even close to a peep, that something like that was transpiring in front of your face?

A. I don't know that that was true. If it's true, then --

Q. Well, show me in the record where it's not true?

A. Well, I guess if it's true then that is something else that I failed to do, sir. I am sure I would have done it.

Q. You saw some racially-motivated activity and you failed to note it because you were an ineffective lawyer; is that what you are saying?

Page 145.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

A. No, I didn't say that; you said that, sir. I am saying that is something if I noted it and I didn't say anything I certainly should have said it.

Q. Wasn't Mr. Jamal being the guardian of the racial issue: Since he was going to ask the question, didn't he tell you to ask the question?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection to the form of the question.

MR. GRANT: I will withdraw the question.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Didn't Mr. Jamal tell you Counselor, ask the race question now?

A. No, sir. Mr. Jamal, I don't know how many -- I think he may have interviewed -- I don't know how many prospective jurors, three, four, I don't know how many he did.

Q. 30? 40?

A. Pardon? Is that how many he interviewed? I don't know.

Q. You were there. I wasn't there.

A. I am telling you, I don't recall how many prospective jurors he questioned. He conducted the voir dire of a number of jurors. Then, of course, I, and we have already gone through the issue of when he was released of his, yeah, responsibility of being Counsel and I was lead. He didn't tell me what questions to ask as I remember. I know you still want to believe that but --

Page 146.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

Q. How many black jurors did you strike?

A. One.

Q. And five years later, five years after a month-long trial, all of a sudden what you couldn't recall while it was happening, oh, I just remembered racial activity was going on and I think I better write an affidavit here and send it up to the Supreme Court; is that the way it happened?

A. No, sir.

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection to the form of the question. May I have a ruling?

THE COURT: Objection is overruled. There is nothing wrong with the question. He could answer it.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. You could answer it.

A. Yeah, the answer is no. And if I could explain.

Q. Well, you could explain to Mr. Weinglass, I don't want it.

THE WITNESS: May I answer, Your

Page 147.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

Honor?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection to the comment by Counsel.

THE WITNESS: I don't need this.

MR. WEINGLASS: Ask it be stricken. Let the record --

MR. GRANT: He said he doesn't have to explain.

THE WITNESS: I don't. I don't.

THE COURT: I could only hear one of you at a time. Rephrase your question.

MR. GRANT: He doesn't want to explain it, Your Honor.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I ask the comment be stricken.

THE COURT: The comment is stricken.

But rephrase your question, whatever it is or whatever you want to bring out.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Now, this recollection of this racism that's pervading the trial just so happened to come right on the heals of a U.S. Supreme Court case that had just come down not one-and-a-half years before, 12 months, called Batson versus Kentucky. And it said if lawyers can say I see racial activity going on, and if they can justify it based on numbers, then maybe we'll consider granting you new trials; isn't that pretty much accurate?

Page 148.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And after you came up with this brainstorm, did you contact appellate Counsel and say I think I have another issue for you?

A. I don't know if that was the first -- if I didn't bring it up in post-trial motions. I don't know whether it was me or Counsel or Marilyn Gelb who brought it up.

Q. Let's assume you didn't bring it up in post-trial motions -- which was a year later --

A. Okay.

Q. -- but five years later you brought it up. Now, did you bring it up to defense Counsel who was doing the appellate brief for the Defendant?

A. Yeah, that's when it came up. Again, whether it was Marilyn Gelb or myself that brought it up...

Q. Oh. When you were looking for ways to attack the verdict, this just happened to pop up five years later?

A. I don't think it just happened to pop up. Listen, if, if, seems to me if this was ever in the trial, whether it was by me, the prosecutor or the Judge, I think it would be incumbent upon his appellate Counsel to bring it up. And if there was an error with regard to the selection of the Jury, it is incumbent upon everyone to bring it to the Court's attention if we are all supposed to be serving justice.

Page 149.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

Q. I agree. Now with respect to Mr. Hightower, Mr. Hightower, who you felt was to be one of your best witnesses: Do you recall him saying that the person that he saw running from the scene might have been a woman?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection to the comment. The witness never said it was one of his best witnesses.

THE COURT: Please.

MR. GRANT: I will strike that.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Mr. Hightower was a witness put on by you to support the theory that the actual shooter ran away; correct?

A. At least someone ran away, yeah.

Q. So someone now.

A. The shooter, someone ran away. Who was the person who ran away? Sure, it could be the shooter,

Page 150.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

I don't know.

Q. Was the shooter thought to be a female by all accounts that you were investigating?

A. According to the police, it was Mr. Jamal who was the male.

THE COURT: Counselor, will you please stop shaking your head no.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, the witness --

THE COURT: I am watching you now.

MR. WEINGLASS: The witness can not see me. I mean the witness cannot see me, I am blocked in the line of --

THE WITNESS: I can not.

MR. WEINGLASS: And I object to the impression of the Court.

THE COURT: I object to you nodding your head like this (indicating). Don't do it anymore. I told you before.

MR. WEINGLASS: I nodded before and after the question. I cannot see the witness from where I am sitting. The witness cannot see me either.

THE COURT: I don't know whether he could see you or not.

Page 151.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

MR. WEINGLASS: The witness is nodding his head no.

THE COURT: I am asking you please not to do it.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor knows that --

THE COURT: I said please don't do that.

MR. WEINGLASS: There was no signaling of the witness.

THE COURT: Counselor, will you please not do that. All right. Now let's cut it out.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, the Court's implication is --

THE COURT: I said don't do it anymore and that's it. Now sit down, please.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Mr. Hightower states in response to a question: Now with reference to this individual you say you saw running, the one I believe you said you were unsure, and correct me if I am wrong, from what your testimony was you are unsure whether or not that was a male or it could even been a female, that's what you said.

A. Yes.

Page 152.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

Q. All you saw was the back of the head.

A. Yes. And the sweater.

Q. Now, this witness is the same witness who said they didn't want to talk to you or anybody involved in your case until sometime later when your investigator finally came to them; correct?

A. No, that isn't true. You see, that's what I am saying: Compound question. You said this witness didn't want to talk to me or anyone involved in the case until sometime later on. Some of that is right, some of that is incorrect.

Q. I just read to you what he said. When he said I don't want to talk to Mr. Jackson?

A. That's me. He didn't say anybody else connected to the case. You see, you added that.

Q. The record will reflect what the affidavit states.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now getting along: Mr. Chobert said he saw the shooter run 35 feet. Point to somewhere in the Courtroom that is 35 feet from where you are?

A. Oh, 35 feet might be beyond, beyond the Bar of the Court (indicating).

Q. Right, so he saw somebody after the shooting run about this far (indicating)?

Page 153.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I object to this form of questioning. Counsel is misstating the record. Mr. Chobert, if Counsel will read the statement --

THE COURT: Councelor, please.

MR. WEINGLASS: -- said he saw the witness run 35 steps.

THE COURT: I don't want you to discuss it. If you want to discuss it I will take you where the witness can't hear our discussion. If you just want to make an objection I will rule on the objection.

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection: Misstates the record.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. GRANT: I will withdraw the question, I don't want to misstate the record.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. With respect to the money that you had, sir, on 6-3-82, page 3.91 -- and I am glad that Counsel brought this out, this very area -- I am going to follow that up first or proceed that first, however, by reading what Judge Ribner said you could do if you wanted more money. I am referring to the notes of testimony of January 20th, 1982. Judge Ribner, attorney Jackson present. Page 36 to 41, by Mr. Jackson: Your Honor may recall that I had also brought to Court, sir, a petition to employ a ballistician, a petition to employ a pathologist, forensic pathologist, and petitions to employ an investigator and a photographer.

Page 154.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

Court: That might be proper in this case. All right. Those are the four petitions that you have. Present those four orders and I will sign them.

Mr. McGill: As far as the employment of an investigator, photographer and so forth, forensic pathologist, would there be a dollar limit on that, sir.

At page 38. The Court: Well, I would follow our policy in that regard. We will allow the standard initial amounts and if there is additional work that needs to be done, you can file an itemization with your fee petition and itemize the statement of what was done and the trial judge will give that consideration. Generally, you won't run into any great problem if it's shown that the work was necessary and was relevant to the proceedings.

Do you recall that, sir?

A. Yes, sir.

Page 155.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

Q. And then do you recall on 6-3-82, at page 3.92, you discussed your investigator resources and you say there hasn't been an investigator, and Mr. McGill mentioned Robert Greer. Mr. Greer had been working for quite some time. We had requested the Court to increase the $150 that we are allowed. The Court has not seen fit to increase that amount and requested that I submit an itemized bill.

Well, was that so incredible? Why didn't you just submit the itemized bill for additional amounts of time and money?

A. Because that's done at the conclusion of the case.

Q. Oh. Well, let's go, then, to notes of testimony from January 20th, 1982, at page 37. At the bottom... I'm sorry, page 41.

Your Honor -- and you are speaking to Judge Ribner now, who has already told you I am going to give you the money -- Your Honor, one of the problems, and I am not even sure that Your Honor has the authority to resolve this problem, I am not sure the forensic pathologist and the investigator, sir, would want to wait until the case is over and I file a petition as Your Honor suggests. I'm not sure they will want to wait that long to be paid. And I am wondering whether or not there is some provision or might be some provision for an interim -- meaning in the meantime -- payment?

Page 156.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

A. Yeah.

Q. The Court: Well, give me a short memorandum on that and I will look into it. I am not promising you any definite results but maybe we will work something out that will enable you to proceed with the case.

Mr. Jackson: Thank you, sir.

Now, did you file a memorandum or not?

A. I don't...

Q. You don't recall, do you?

A. No, I don't think so. No, I don't think I did.

Q. I don't think you did either, Mr. Jackson. That's why you didn't get the money, isn't that so?

A. That's not the reason I didn't get the money. Mr. Grant, Mr. Grant, I begged, I pleaded with the Judges often. And Judge Ribner, in all due respect, Judge Ribner says yeah, come on, you could ask for more money. Judge Ribner wasn't going to give me more than $150 for anything. I could have walked stark naked in that Courtroom, I could have wrote all kinds of memos: I wasn't getting another penny. I had a number of things I had to do. One of the things I didn't need to do was waste time filing frivolous motions. And I knew I wasn't getting anymore money. I asked the man over and over again. If he wanted to help me he would have helped me. Why would he need the District Attorney to ask is he just going to be given $150? Why wouldn't the D.A. just be silent about it? Let the Court give me the money that it wants to give me. But I mean I am going back and forth, back and forth. Please give me some money, more than $150, when $150 is patently unfair. And you say why didn't I file a motion. I mean there could be have been a million things I could have done. I know at least based on my sense I wasn't getting another penny. I had other things to do other than to keep on filing a motion where he was just going to tell me, as he ultimately said, go to the trial Judge. That's why I didn't ask him again. I just got tired of it.

Page 157.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

Q. All you had to do was do what he asked you, file an itemized receipt, but you didn't want to file an itemized receipt as to what was being done to justify the money being paid, isn't that so?

A. I didn't want to do that because Mr. Jamal would have the assistance of experts, that's right, I didn't want him to have that assistance.

Page 158.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

Q. When you paid your investigator 562 bucks you got reimbursed from the Court for that money?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You got all of the money, even though you were only entitled based on your itemizing to 150, they still gave you the 560 bucks anyway, didn't they? Yes or no, sir? Before you go on a tirade, yes or no? They gave you the money, and you didn't deserve it, but you got it anyway because the Court gave you the benefit of the doubt, didn't they?

A. What part of that question do you want me to answer?

Q. Did they give you $562 or not?

A. Yes, sir, they gave me that.

Q. Were you entitled to $150 according to this Exhibit here or not?

A. Was I entitled to it or was it approved? 150 was approved; subsequently an additional amount was approved. I had received $562. More than, I believe in fact it may have been more than $562 that I paid out. I think that was the amount that was paid. The problem that I had with this, with the investigator and every other expert, is that you file your petition and you don't know what the Court is going to approve. And again, as you know, in January I started my practice and this is all during the time I'm trying to represent Mr. Jamal, didn't have a lot of cases, didn't have a lot of money. Put money out of my own pocket for these experts.

Page 159.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

MR. GRANT: I only have a few more questions, Judge.

THE COURT: That's all right.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I have never accused you on cross-examination of illicitly receiving funds raised by groups supporting Mr. Jamal and pocketing it, have I?

A. No, I don't -- no, sir.

Q. Okay. Just so we got that straight.

A. Oh, yeah.

Q. Mr. Weinglass seems to think so, apparently.

A. Oh.

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection to the comment. Ask it be stricken.

THE COURT: Strike the comments.

MR. GRANT: Move to strike it, Judge.

THE COURT: No comments.

BY MR. GRANT:

Page 160.

Anthony Jackson, Esq. - Recross

Q. You stated you were able to contact some witnesses by other means and now the witnesses are talking to me. Name the witnesses you were able to contact without the help of the D.A., sir?

A. Okay, I think at that point it may have been Dessie Hightower.

Q. One.

A. Pigford.

Q. Two.

A. And Veronica Jones.

Q. Three.

A. And let me see if there were --

Q. Cynthia White: You knew where she lived? Your investigator was talking --

A. You ask one question and say Cynthia White. I had not talked -- you said the question was I able to contact other witnesses. I had not contacted Cynthia White.

Q. You were able to?

A. Mr. Grant, you are confused. The question is isn't it a fact you were able to contact. I had not been able to contact Cynthia White so she is different. So that is your answer, not mine.

Q. Okay, let me just give you some simple English terms and ask you a question.

Page 161.

A. That helps.

Q. Able means I have the power, I can, I am able to. Now, if your investigator is watching her working as a prostitute, what is to prevent him from having the power to walk up to her and open his mouth?

A. There may be a reason that I am not aware of, sir.

Q. So don't speculate, then. You had the power to contact her, didn't you?

A. I am not speculating, sir.

Q. Did you have the power to contact the woman that you had in your sight and you knew where she was living or not?

A. Yeah, but she wasn't there.

Q. Thank you.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Jackson, you will admit, because you are under oath --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- that during the course of your testimony on this stand you have made several, if not many, misstatements of fact which the transcripts reveal were untrue, would you not agree with me?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection, Your Honor:

Page 162.

Form of the question. Argumentative. Improper.

THE COURT: I will let him answer it if he can.

MR. WEINGLASS: It includes a comment by Counsel which is not founded in the record.

THE COURT: He is asking him if he can.

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

THE COURT: He is asking the witness this question.

MR. WEINGLASS: May I have a ruling on my objection?

THE COURT: The objection is overruled.

THE WITNESS: Answer is yes, I have been corrected by you and Mr. Weinglass on a few occasions.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. I am not asking you if I corrected you.

A. Oh, I'm sorry.

Q. I am saying did you make misrepresentations while you were under oath on this witness stand which the transcript that occurred with words from your mouth 13 years ago showed to be false?

A. The answer is no. I will repeat, what I did was I -- there were things that you corrected me, Mr. Weinglass corrected, what I said 13 years as opposed to now.

Q. Well, were these corrections that issued from me or prior to the correction there was a statement by you?

A. Okay.

Q. Were those statements false or true?

A. I guess they were, they were certainly in error. False seems to suggest some intention.

Q. Well, just give me a false or true?

A. Well, we are going to get into semantics. They weren't true. They weren't true.

Q. Were they lies?

A. They weren't true. Lies indicates to me some intentional act, sir.

Q. Yeah, it does. I am asking you.

A. Okay, you see, you are trying to get me to say I lied. I didn't say I lied. I don't recall. And whenever I said I don't recall, you seem to think that I'm lying.

MR. GRANT: Thank you, Mr. Jackson.

THE WITNESS: You're welcome, Mr. Grant.

MR. WEINGLASS: A few questions.

Page 164.

- - - - -

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During your questioning by Mr. Grant when he was standing here, were you able to see me seated at defense table?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was his body blocking your vision of me?

A. It was, sir.

Q. Could you see my head at all?

A. No, sir.

MR. WEINGLASS: May I have an apology from the Court? No.

MR. GRANT: Before you issue an apology --

THE COURT: I said that you were not to do anything like that. I am not sitting where he is, I don't have any idea. I am looking at you from where I am sitting and I said I don't want you to be shaking your head yes or no or anything like that. You did that. I told you you are wrong.

Page 165.

MR. GRANT: You may recall last week that I felt free to ambulate around the Courtroom on cross. However, I am standing here in this position for a very good reason. And the body movements of Mr. Weinglass were not lost on me either and that's why I am not over there, I'm standing over here.

THE COURT: All right. Is that it?

MR. GRANT: That's it.

THE COURT: Anymore questions?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT: Oh, this is a second redirect. Okay.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Mr. Jackson, the document which is your petition, which is there --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- for payments.

A. It was here. I think Mr. Grant took it back.

MR. WEINGLASS: May I have that document. Oh, I have it here.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Is there a date stamped on the upper, right-hand corner of that document?

A. There is July 20th, 1994.

Q. 1994?

A. That is correct. Oh, '84. I'm sorry, '84.

Q. 1984?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does that indicate to you that your payment wasn't approved for more than two years after the trial?

A. That's about right, sir.

Q. Now, during the Jury selection procedure, Mr. Grant asked you on recross if you had peremptorily challenged one African-American juror.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And do you recall when you did that Judge Sabo, without any request from the Commonwealth, called the juror back and asked the juror to state for the record his race?

A. That's correct, sir. It's the only time the Judge asked the question, is when I challenged him, peremptorily challenged a juror. Then the Judge said well, let that witness come back. That juror came back and put his race on the record. Nobody else did that.

Q. Now, the Commonwealth had peremptorily challenged 11 African Americans?

A. Absolutely.

Page 167.

Q. Did the Judge at any time ever ask any of those jurors to state their race for the record?

A. Not once.

Q. Have you testified honestly in this proceeding?

A. I certainly have, sir.

Q. To the best of your knowledge?

A. The best of my knowledge and recollection.

Q. There are some things you couldn't recall completely about 13 years ago?

A. And that's clear and obvious. And as I said to Mr. Grant and to you, I've been mistaken. If he wants to say I lied about things I didn't remember, there are some things I just clearly, sincerely did not remember. It happened 13 years ago. To the extent that you or Mr. Grant corrected me, I stand corrected. I had no intention to lie, falsify any testimony, or to make any misrepresentations to this Court, or anyone else for that matter.

Q. Would it have been helpful to you if Mr. Grant as your friend had reviewed the trial transcript with you before he questioned you?

A. Well, it may have been helpful as a friend but I understand the adversarial process in which we are engaged, sir.

Page 168.

Q. Did I review portions of the transcript with you before you testified?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When Debbie Kordansky spoke to you on the telephone, did she say to you that she didn't want to help you?

MR. GRANT: Objection. That goes beyond the scope of my recross. I didn't bring up any conversation.

THE COURT: I think we have gone over that before, Counselor. There is no need to go over it a second time.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, the record will speak for itself.

THE COURT: That's right.

MR. WEINGLASS: If the Court will just give me a moment.

(Pause.)

MR. WEINGLASS: I'm sorry. June 30th, 1982. Page 5.

BY MR: WEINGLASS:

Q. I am afraid to tell you what I said because I really don't want to help you. She said I really don't want to help you. Do you recall now?

MR. GRANT: Objection.

Page 169.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor just sustained that. Move to strike it.

THE COURT: I just said that was asked before, Counselor. How many times are we going to ask the same question.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, the question on recross was asked if he was sure of what Debbie Kordansky might say. I'm only pointing out that the witness indicated --

THE COURT: I know, but you had brought that out before that she had said that, and you are doing it again.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right, I just wanted to point out that whatever the witness would have said, the witness indicated to Counsel that she had information that would help him.

THE COURT: Counselor, Counselor, I know all of that already. Counselor, you are beating a dead horse a number of times. It has already come out, let's leave it go at that.

MR. WEINGLASS: Okay. I have no further questions.

MR. GRANT: Nor do I, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right, you are

Page 170.

excused.

THE WITNESS: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Oh. We will break for lunch until, it looks like 2:15?

MR. GRANT: Yes, Your Honor. Can we be informed as to which witness if any is going to appear at that time?

THE COURT: Oh, yes, do you have any idea?

THE COURT OFFICER: Quiet in the room: Court is still in session. Thank you.

THE COURT: Do you know who you are going to call at 2:15, Counselor?

MR. WEINGLASS: Jeremy Gelb.

THE COURT: Do you have that other motion too, with Judge Ribner?

MR. WEINGLASS: We will be ready.

THE COURT: When will we do that?

MR. WEINGLASS: Whenever the Court would like.

THE COURT: Well, whenever you tell me. Because we have to let them know when to come over.

MR. WEINGLASS: 2:15 is fine.

THE COURT: All right. Then after that who would we have?

Page 171.

MR. WEINGLASS: Jeremy Gelb.

THE COURT: Jeremy Gelb.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes. And there is a matter in connection with that which Mr. Grant and I will have to discuss and possibly take up with the Court. Which I don't want to go into. Mr. Grant and I will first discuss it.

MR. GRANT: Well, I don't know what I am discussing so I am not taking up anything with the Court.

MR. WEINGLASS: Fine. The courtesy is overwhelming.

MR. GRANT: You act like a lawyer you get treated like a lawyer, Mr. Weinglass.

MR. WEINGLASS: I hope that is on the record also.

MR. GRANT: It is on the record.

THE COURT: All right, we will adjourn until 2:15.

THE COURT OFFICER: Yes, Your Honor.

(Luncheon recess was held until 2:35 p.m.)

Page 172.

MR. HOLMES: Good afternoon, Your Honor. My name is Howard Holmes; I am an attorney with the Administrative Office of Pennsylvania Courts. I have the honor to represent Judge Paul Ribner, who has been subpoenaed to appear in this matter and testify.

Your Honor, Judge Ribner was originally subpoenaed by a subpoena dated, or subpoena which asked him to appear on Tuesday, July 18th, and for the duration of the proceedings. And to bring with him, quote, any and all records and notes concerning the assignment of judges from December 1981 through June 1982, and then any records pertaining to the composition of judges in 1982, and any sitting in homicide cases in June of 1982. And subsequently Judge Ribner was advised of the postponement of that July 18th hearing date. Approximately July 25th he was notified that he was being asked to appear this afternoon. And I attempted to speak with and finally did speak with opposing Counsel, a Miss, I think it was a Miss West, I may have said Miss Wells but I think it is a Miss West, Valerie West or Valerie Wells, who advised me as to the nature of the information sought.

And according to Miss West, she said that what she wanted from Judge Ribner was, had to do with the following areas of inquiry. One, when a defendant was removed from a courtroom in or about 1982, but the proceedings continued in his absence, what if any, quote, equipment, unquote, was available to allow that person to observe the proceedings from whatever location he or she had been transferred to.

The second area of inquiry was the race of judges sitting in the homicide program in or about 1982, and how they were selected for the program.

And three, Counsel indicated that she wanted assistance in reconstructing a record which allegedly could not be located. That was, and that was really all that was said about the so-called record: No specific information was provided. Although I was told that I would get a return call with more specific information and I never did.

So with respect to those areas of inquiry, Judge, we have filed a motion to quash on Judge Ribner's behalf on several grounds.

Aside from the issue of relevance, the question is, first of all, does the Judge, what information can the Judge provide as to the so-called equipment or lack of equipment. I think this Court could take judicial notice -- and certainly the attorneys for the Commonwealth and for the Petitioner should be able to agree -- that at the time in question, 1982, there was no video equipment or anything similar provided or available to the court so that somebody who had been removed from the court could observe the proceedings from another room. So I don't think Judge Ribner's testimony is necessary in that regard.

Second, Judge Ribner has no records from which to determine the racial composition of the homicide program judges in that period. And he was not involved in the process by which they were selected for the program. That information should probably come from Court Administration for the First Judicial District and not from an individual judge.

C, with respect to the record, we still don't know what record is being talked about or spoken of; but we respectfully suggest that at least in the first instance, a sitting judge who has his own criminal docket should not be called to another court to reconstruct a record. A judge is not a court reporter, he is not a transcription machine, he is not a record. So it seems to me that in the first instance the parties should make an attempt to, to put together a record before they attempt to subpoena a judge, or at least one side attempts to subpoena a judge to supply missing information.

THE COURT: Well, Counselor, I think the record you are looking for is what I received a copy of just a short time ago. They were notes that were taken on December 2lst, 1981 before Judge Ribner. Notes of February 22nd of 1982 before Judge Ribner. And April the 1st of 1982 before Judge Ribner. And of course they already had the May 13th, 1982 record.

MR. HOLMES: I can't speak to that, Your Honor, because I was never told. I was never told what the record was that was at issue.

THE COURT: I know, but I think that is the issue that they are talking about. If it is not that --

MR. HOLMES: We also provided Your Honor with a brief talking in general terms about the case law of calling a judge as a witness in another case concerning matters which hadn't been before him in the previous case. It may be that Counsel, my colleague, Counsel for the Petitioner, would suggest that the assignment of cases is not a judicial act but an administrative act. However, I would certainly contend that it is a judicial act. My familiarity is with the area of civil rights law and I would suggest, and several Federal courts have said, that the assignment of cases by a judge is a judicial act.

Usually the basis of a lawsuit against a judge is I am suing this judge because he assigned this case to judge A as opposed to judge B. That is a judicial act. And I can give Your Honor cites to several cases, recent cases, Federal cases, which have held that assignment of cases is a judicial act.

I say that because much of the case law that has developed about judges testifying has developed in the context of judges should not be required to testify regarding judicial acts, particularly where, as in this case, they would require, I think, going into the Judge's mentality, state of mind, opinions and so forth. And assignment of cases seems to fall in that category.

So we would respectfully request that Your Honor quash the subpoena, particularly in light of the fact that the record that was at issue has been found.

Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. WILLIAMS: Good afternoon, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Good afternoon.

MR. WILLIAMS: We subpoenaed Judge Ribner, again, in an effort to take advantage of the Court's offer to us to have a full and fair hearing. And the reason why Judge Ribner is needed for a full and fair hearing is that two of the claims of the 19 that we are raising touch upon facts that Judge Ribner could testify to.

THE COURT: What are they?

MR. WILLIAMS: First of all, claim 12 in our Petition, claim 12 in our Petition concerns in part the issue of the special tribunal. Now, I am from New York, as Your Honor knows --

Page 178.

THE COURT: What do you mean a special tribunal?

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, my understanding is that in Pennsylvania, or in Philadelphia, that there is a special homicide unit.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. WILLIAMS: And if my understanding is correct, that special homicide unit constitutes a special tribunal. And that is a term of art.

THE COURT: I know that, but Judge Ribner has nothing to do with that.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, he does, Your Honor, in this sense --

THE COURT: No, he doesn't. He doesn't have a thing to do with it. He was not the calendar judge forever. There's been different calendar judges even before him and after him. They have nothing to do with the composition of that.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, he has something to do with the special tribunal, or the homicide unit, in so far as he was the calendar judge for this case.

THE COURT: I know that, yes, but you said you wanted to know about the composition and how it was selected. He has nothing to do with that. I have nothing to do with that.

MR. WILLIAMS: Let me first address the claim that's at page 154 in our memorandum of law. The claim there is that Judge Ribner assigned the trial --

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. WILLIAMS: -- of Mr. Jamal to you --

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. WILLIAMS: -- for a particular reason. And the reason is that it was his understanding, given Your Honor's reputation, that --

THE COURT: I had no reputation back in '82, Counselor.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, it appears that you had based upon our motion for recusal, and that has been explored extensively here in Court. But the point is this, that the reputation, as understood by Judge Ribner, and as understood by other members of the judiciary, is that by having the case assigned to Your Honor, it would maximize the chances that Mr. Jamal would be convicted of the charges.

THE COURT: Oh, I don't think that's true.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, Your Honor may differ, but that's why we would like to have testimony elicited.

THE COURT: I understand that there is a rule from the Supreme Court, our Supreme Court, that no judge can be subpoenaed to testify in a court without their approval. I think that's still in existence.

Is that still in existence?

MR. HOLMES: The rule exists, Your Honor, but it relates to character testimony.

THE COURT: Oh, just character?

MR. HOLMES: Although apparently Counsel wants to call Judge Ribner as to your character, but I don't think that that's quite what the rule has in mind.

MR. WILLIAMS: Unless, Your Honor, we could show a particularizing need. And that is a particularizing need. That is what I am articulating to you. Our particular need relates to our claim 12 as to why the case was assigned to Your Honor.

THE COURT: I may have been available at that time, I don't know.

MR. WILLIAMS: And we would like to explore that, that's precisely the point.

THE COURT: But what does that have to do with the PCRA petition?

MR. WILLIAMS: Because if the case was assigned to Your Honor under the conditions that I've just described -- that is to maximum the chances that Mr. Jamal --

THE COURT: You are speculating on that, Counsel.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, I don't wish to speculate, I wish to have testimony from the witness stand. Isn't that the point?

THE COURT: That is mere speculation.

Yes.

MS. PERKINS: If I may, Your Honor.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, I haven't completed my argument.

THE COURT: Well, you are talking about this one point that he raised?

Page 182.

MS. PERKINS: This one particular point.

THE COURT: All right, this one particular point.

MS. PERKINS: The Post-Conviction Relief Act is very specific regarding the types of claims that a Petitioner may raise, and this is not one of them. This does not deal with the truth-determining process, meaning the trial. We are not reviewing the evidence that was put before the Jury. These are extraneous issues that the defense has tried to throw into this case, and now go after, now find witnesses to support it. It was, you know, it was a very suspicious claim when they raised it in the Petition; it is still suspicious.

If they want the record, if they want it reconstructed then they could do it in the normal fashion the way things always are reconstructed when the notes, when the notes of testimony are missing.

If they want to establish that there is some sort of special tribunal, this issue has been dealt with in other cases before the State Supreme Court. Specifically, the Career

Page 183.

Criminal Program which used to exist in the Court of Common Pleas in Philadelphia. And it was specifically held that it was not a special tribunal which in any way infringed upon anyone's rights. And the Homicide Program is very similar to that. It is the exact same situation. Judges were put in a program and they handled specific types of cases. That program was upheld as the homicide Program is, and there is absolutely no issue here. It has nothing to do with any claim under the PCRA that is cognizable under the Act.

I would submit to the Court again: The motion to quash is a valid argument, that the subpoena should be quashed. They do not have a relevant issue here or material basis for subpoenaing Judge Ribner or anything that he may have. And we should proceed with this hearing as scheduled, Your Honor.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, it does go to the heart of the truth-determining process. When a case is assigned to a judge for purposes of maximizing the chances of a conviction, I can't think of another, anything that goes more to --

Page 184.

THE COURT: I didn't manufacture anything in this case.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, I appreciate the comment, Your Honor, but we would like to have sworn testimony to test that assumption.

THE COURT: You may like to have a lot of things but if it's not cognizable under the PCRA statute, it's not cognizable, period. We are not going to speculate here.

MR. WILLIAMS: That's precisely what I am trying to avoid.

THE COURT: Well, yes, you are trying to bring in a lot of issues that are not proper before this proceeding.

MR. WILLIAMS: So let me understand the Court, as I am trying to understand the Court. Is Your Honor suggesting that even if we could establish that the case was transferred to you under very sinister auspices, that we still would not have a Constitutional claim? If that is the case then Your Honor is correct: We ought not be able to present that witness. But our claim is if indeed the testimony bears out our allegations, we do raise a significant Constitutional claim.

Page 185.

THE COURT: That is a lot of ifs. That is a lot of ifs.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, it is an if that we would like to answer, that is the point.

THE COURT: Well:

MR. WILLIAMS: We would like to have testimony on this. I am trying to avoid the speculation --

THE COURT: Well.

MR. WILLIAMS: -- the conjecture. We would like to have sworn testimony. And it can be challenged on cross-examination.

THE COURT: Well, I will tell you what: You raised a lot of other issues with the Supreme Court, you could raise that one with them too.

There's already been a case that says it's not an issue, right?

MS. PERKINS: Yes, Your Honor. There is a case that says --

THE COURT: Do you have that case?

MS. PERKINS: It's cited in our discovery answer, I believe it is. A finding that the Career Criminal Program was upheld, that this was not a special tribunal. And the

Page 186.

Career Criminal Program is exactly the same situation as the Homicide Program in the Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia.

MR. BURNS: Actually, Your Honor, if I may? The case is Commonwealth versus Moore, and it states that the Homicide Program is Constitutional, it is not a special tribunal.

THE COURT: They already said that.

MR. BURNS: That issue was decided by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court in 1993, Commonwealth versus Moore, 633 Atlantic Second, 119, 1993. Certiorari denied by the United States Supreme Court, Your Honor.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, let me be clear. The claim with respect to Judge Ribner doesn't go to just simply a facial challenge to the homicide panel. What it goes to is the reason why this particular case was assigned to you pursuant to that panel. That's the point. And if Your Honor is suggesting that even if the testimony that's elicited proves what we are asserting in our Petition, that, nonetheless, we do not raise a Constitutional claim, then we will take that issue up with the Supreme Court.

But our contention is -- let me be clear about this -- that if we can establish our allegations in the Petition, that in fact it was transferred to you for reasons of maximizing the chances of getting a conviction, that raises a severe and important Constitutional issue. And that's why we believe we have manifest need for Judge Ribner on that claim. That is the claim number 12 in our Petition.

THE COURT: All right, could you answer that?

MR. HOLMES: Well, Your Honor, it is the kind of argument that I hear all the time from prison inmates who sue judges claiming that the people have conspired against them, that in the assignment issue that the judge specifically assigned another judge or himself to a case because he wanted to get the inmate. What's always missing is any facts which would lead a judge to say well, we better explore that issue, maybe there is something to it.

In other words, a person could contend anything they want, but without some, some basis for making the statement, it's just fiction. And I respectfully suggest that in the absence of some evidence presented to Your Honor which would suggest that this is an issue that should be explored by calling a sitting judge to explain his reasons why he performed a judicial act -- and I contend that assigning a case is a judicial act -- that it should not be done. There is a body of case law that says you don't question judges about their judicial acts except in the sense of what's on the record, what are the opinions, what is the conduct.

Also, it seems to me that whatever the motive was for assigning a judge to a case, it's how that judge acted in that case that seems to be important, if I understand the PCRA process correctly. It is how Your Honor performed it, not how some other judge performed. Maybe I am wrong in my understanding of the PCRA, but that seems to be what it's about.

So in the absence, I would respectfully suggest that -- I realize this is a death case and therefore it has that greater urgency and greater importance -- but nevertheless, it is the kind of argument that any inmate is liable to make about any case which is assigned, you know, within the context of a criminal division or a civil division, criminal division, of any particular judge, that the assignment itself was suspect. And I respectfully suggest in the absence of some evidence which would support that contention, that one should not be questioning the judge who committed the judicial act of assigning the case.

So I would respectfully continue in my motion to quash the subpoena.

THE COURT: Yes, you had Anthony Jackson on the stand, you didn't ask him about anything --

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, I don't think Mister --

THE COURT: Well, he was there. He was there when the case was assigned. I wasn't there. I didn't ask for the case. I've never asked for a case. And I've never refused a case. Whatever is assigned to me I do.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, the question is not whether you would refuse the case or whether you even solicited the case.

THE COURT: Well, then what does it have to do with this case?

MR. WILLIAMS: The question is not whether Mr. Jackson had a suspicion in that regard.

Page 190.

THE COURT: Well, the thing is you are making general allegations with no basis to support it.

MR. WILLIAMS: It is a very specific allegation.

THE COURT: No; it isn't. And the only one that could tell us that would be Jackson since he was there.

MR. WILLIAMS: The only one that could tell us is Judge Ribner.

THE COURT: Not Judge Ribner. To get to Judge Ribner you have to put something in evidence first to say that it is an issue for him to come in. At this moment and at this time I am quashing the subpoena for Judge Ribner. Later on --

MR. WILLIAMS: I haven't reached the other basis for it yet so I would appreciate the opportunity to do that.

THE COURT: In the future, if you could come in with some concrete evidence, or at least something that would justify calling him, fine. But he is busy in another case.

Page 191.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, I understand that.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WILLIAMS: The question is whether we can establish a cognizable Constitutional claim by bringing in the only witness that is competent to testify about that subject matter. And the subject matter is why the case was transferred to Your Honor.

THE COURT: Well, why don't you go talk to him. Maybe he will talk to you, I don't know.

MR. WILLIAMS: It seems to me that Counsel's argument puts the cart before the horse. Counsel's argument suggests that we don't have a good faith basis for making the claim, but then at the same time the very witness that we are, that we wish to call who could make out the claim is unavailable to us. That puts --

THE COURT: Well, do you have any cases to supply to me? He is giving me a case.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, I think this may be a case of first impression.

THE COURT: Well, fine, but give me a case that would justify my calling, permitting you to subpoena a judge who made a judicial decision. Give me a case. If you don't have a case, Counselor, please, I will quash the subpoena. If you find a case, then I will reconsider. But I am not going to waste time arguing about something. He has given me cases that says you don't have this right. Now, if you could give me a case on point I will reconsider.

MR. WILLIAMS: Very well, I appreciate that.

THE COURT: Well.

MR. WILLIAMS: The other point, Your Honor, is that Counsel has directed, or has advised us to direct our inquiry regarding the homicide panel to the Court Administration for the First Judicial District. And we intend to take up that invitation.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. WILLIAMS: That goes to the issue of timing. We would need time to pursue that avenue because we are embroiled in this hearing and it is taking up the balance of our time. So we would, in order for us --

Page 193.

THE COURT: You have to show somehow that it has some meaning under PCRA. You could be subpoenaing everybody. You could even start subpoenaing the Supreme Court Justices next. Who else do you want to subpoena?

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, we want to subpoena people who are relevant to the claims that we have articulated in our Petition.

THE COURT: Well, the Supreme Court controls our Judicial District here. Are you going to subpoena every Supreme Court Justice?

MR. WILLIAMS: No; we wish to take up the invitation by Counsel that we --

THE COURT: Well, I don't know if it is an invitation, that is up to you people. If you have an invitation go at that time. But don't look to me, I am not extending invitations.

But as I told you before: If you could give me a case, Xerox a case for me and I will read it, that you have a right to subpoena a judge like in this case, I will be glad to read it.

MR. WILLIAMS: Now, Your Honor, there was a second basis for our need for Judge

Page 194.

Ribner. The second basis goes to claim 6 in our Petition. Claim 6 deals with the fact that Mr. Jamal was banished from the Courtroom during significant portions of his trial.

THE COURT: Yes, by his own conduct. And the Supreme Court has already ruled on that, Counselor, so that's already been decided.

MR. WILLIAMS: And that will be an issue for future courts.

THE COURT: That's all right it is an issue for future courts. But the Supreme Court has already taken up that issue and has ruled on it. It's not a proper thing to rehash now in a PCRA petition.

MR. WILLIAMS: As Your Honor knows, in our Petition, a prong of that argument on the banishment of Mr. Jamal relates to whether the Court had taken sufficient action to insure Mr. Jamal's rights to assist his Counsel and to be apprised of his proceedings.

THE COURT: Counselor, the Supreme Court has already looked at all of that.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, Your Honor, they didn't have the benefit of whether the Court took sufficient action.

Page 195.

THE COURT: Yes, they did. They went over, they went over the entire record and they made a decision on that. That decision stands.

MR. WILLIAMS: The Court never, the Court was never directed to --

THE COURT: The Supreme Court has already ruled on that issue, Counselor.

MR. WILLIAMS: The Court did not rule on that issue.

THE COURT: Yes, they did. They went into that whole issue.

MR. WILLIAMS: Into the issue of banishment?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. WILLIAMS: That is just not true, Your Honor.

THE COURT: It is true. Well, you read the decision again. It's another matter you could preserve, you could argue it before the Supreme Court a second time. If they will listen to you, fine.

MR. WILLIAMS: What we need in this hearing is to establish that there were no, the Court did not provide sufficient means by which Mr. Jamal could maintain knowledge of what was happening in these proceedings.

THE COURT: The Supreme Court... I'm sorry.

MR. WILLIAMS: If I may, Your Honor: Judge Ribner's testimony would be relevant insofar as he could testify to the technological equipment that was available to the Court.

THE COURT: He has already told you we had no such technical equipment.

MR. WILLIAMS: It is indicated that we should accept a stipulation that there were no video equipment or similar aid available.

THE COURT: Well, I didn't have it at the time.

MR. WILLIAMS: We don't want to accept a stipulation, we would like to have it under oath on that subject.

THE COURT: Judge Ribner won't know anymore about that than I do.

MR. HOLMES: I think Your Honor could take judicial notice of the state of Common Pleas Court at that time. Your Honor was sitting at that time.

THE COURT: That's what I was saying to him. So did the Supreme Court. They know what we have.

MR. HOLMES: The answer is obvious. There was no audio-video mechanism of the kind Counsel is talking about, as far as I know. And Your Honor is in a better position to know than I am.

THE COURT: The only two things were to either tie or gag the defendant or to evict him. The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania had said the better procedure would be to evict him, not to bind and gag him in front of the jury. That was the Supreme Court's opinion back in those days. And that's what I did.

So, Counselor, I have heard enough on the subject. You have an exception to my ruling. I am quashing the subpoena.

MR. WILLIAMS: Let me just be clear in terms of the full and fair and the adequacy of the hearing, that we would like to present testimony to support our claim that Mr. Jamal was not given sufficient, that the devises that were available to the Court were not used to allow Mr. Jamal --

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WILLIAMS: -- to be apprised of

the proceedings.

THE COURT: Okay, we know about what was available. His attorney, as a matter of fact the notes will show you that his attorney told him what happened during the proceedings. That's the only technological equipment that we had at the time. And I only had one of two choices: Either gag him so he could sit here and listen -- and the Supreme Court wasn't happy about gagging any prisoners in front of the Jury so we didn't do that.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, with regard to the reconstruction of the record, which also was another reason why we needed to call Judge Ribner --

THE COURT: For what, what record?

MR. WILLIAMS: The missing minutes.

THE COURT: Well, I told you. Which ones are you talking about? I just read you the ones that we have.

MR. WILLIAMS: Right.

THE COURT: Don't you have these?

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, we have --

THE COURT: These copies?

MR. WILLIAMS: We have now been given the Clerk's copy to review here.

Page 199.

THE COURT: Didn't you get the one for December the 2lst, 1981, the notes before Judge Ribner? And didn't you get the notes dealing with February the 22nd of 1982? And were you not given the notes of April the 1st of 1982 before Judge Ribner?

MR. WILLIAMS: I was given those notes just a moment ago.

THE COURT: Well, that's all I got a moment ago. You said you got them. Go over them.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, I understand, I am not suggesting that anything is out of order here. I am just alerting the Court that we just received them.

THE COURT: I know, I just received them myself.

MS. PERKINS: We don't have them at all, Your Honor, and I would request a copy.

THE COURT: You don't have them?

MS. PERKINS: We don't have them at all.

THE COURT: Maybe they are in the process of getting over to you. I just found them when I went back for lunch, and I found them on my secretary's desk, that's how I found them. But if they don't deliver them to you, let me know and I will have copies made. But I am sure they must be on their way to you.

MR. WILLIAMS: Let me be clear here, that the Clerk has indicated that this is not our copy and we are also awaiting our copy.

THE COURT: You didn't get your copies either?

MR. WILLIAMS: We just got copies to review that the Clerk was kind enough to allow us to look at.

THE COURT: Let me say this to you, Counselor: If you don't get yours either you give us a call and I will make copies of the notes that I have.

MR. WILLIAMS: I appreciate that.

THE COURT: I will get them to you.

MR. WILLIAMS: Now --

THE COURT: As a matter of fact, he shouldn't have even given you the original notes.

MR. WILLIAMS: That is something you will have to take up with him.

Page 201.

THE COURT: Well, you shouldn't give out anything from the original Clerk of Quarter Sessions without the Court's approval. You could have asked me and I would have given you my copies to look at. You should never have those things leave your possession.

THE COURT CLERK: He was just looking at them, Judge.

THE COURT: I don't care what he is doing, you should not let them leave your possession. If he needs copies I will see that he gets copies. Or probably on the way to his office. Because they are not necessary right this minute.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, if I may -- and again, in defense of the Clerk, I am the one that asked if I could look at them.

THE COURT: I know what you asked and all I am saying is the Clerk of Quarter Sessions should not let anything out of his possession without the approval of the Court.

MR. WILLIAMS: I knew that I would have to argue in front of Your Honor.

THE COURT: No, you are not going to argue. I am not going to have any argument about it. I was just going to give you copies if you didn't get yours. I assumed because I found these on my secretary's desk when I broke for lunch that you would also have yours. Yours are probably over in your office, probably delivered. Just as the D.A. doesn't have hers either. But if you don't have them there, you give me a call and I will see that you get copies.

MR. WILLIAMS: I will give these back to the Clerk. And may I take up Your Honor's invitation to look at Your Honor's copies?

THE COURT: Later on, if you don't have yours. Because it is not something that we will hear now.

MR. WILLIAMS: It is clear that we have three of the four missing transcripts.

THE COURT: What other one --

MR. WILLIAMS: The March 18th, 1982 minutes are still missing.

THE COURT: March what?

MR. WILLIAMS: March 18th, 1982.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, you can't resolve this. Your Honor has ruled on a motion to quash. Can we proceed with a hearing? I think the witness is probably not here again.

THE COURT: I will try to look into it and I will check with the Clerk to see if they have it. If they don't have it I will see what I could do about getting it.

MR. WILLIAMS: The March 18th transcripts are probably the most important of these four. So we are going forward without the benefit of a full record. And in fact --

THE COURT: You are going forward with what witnesses that you have available to testify. They don't need these records. These witnesses that are going to testify certainly do not need these records. You may have them for whatever purpose you want, but these witnesses were not present there. This was something between -- and you should have asked Mr. Anthony Jackson what happened on that day. He was the one who ought to know what happened.

MR. WILLIAMS: That is precisely the point, Your Honor. We had Mr. Jackson on the stand --

THE COURT: Wait awhile. Could I see the Court file, please?

Let's see what happened on that day.

Page 204.

The Court record ought to tell us what happened. Let's see if we could find it.

What was that date again? March 18th?

MR. WILLIAMS: March 18th, 1982.

THE COURT: Didn't we have something the other day, Gina, that had those? Do you have those?

MS. FURIA: (Handing).

THE COURT: Well, March the 18th, '82, docket entries indicate there was an application for a writ of habeas corpus to be released from administrative segregation at the Philadelphia County Prison. It was filed that day. 3-18-82 the application was granted. And it says see the file.

And then right underneath that, same date, petition to distribute questionnaire to venire persons, to proposed venire persons filed. That was when he filed that.

Then I guess they must have had a hearing on it.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, that sounds like --

THE COURT: Just a minute. Just a minute. That's all those dates were, they were just dates that he filed. And I think that was heard on April the 1st. And I think when you get the notes of testimony here, you will see that was taken up at that time. But there was no hearing or anything on that date.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, what's happening now is that we are reconstructing the record as we speak. And it's really not in an orderly fashion. And the accuracy of the way we reconstruct the record is extremely important.

Your Honor is directing us to transcripts of April lst, you are making representations from docket entries. And from my experience, docket entries are often truncated and not complete. We've had Anthony Jackson on the stand, we had to question him without the benefit of the April 1st minutes, which are not insubstantial.

THE COURT: Well, first, why don't you wait until you get copies of this. If you have a problem you bring it up later on again, will you.

MR. WILLIAMS: That's what we had asked for several weeks ago.

THE COURT: Okay, well, bring it up

Page 206.

later on, will you please.

MR. GRANT: May we proceed now, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Let's proceed with this. The motion to quash the subpoena for Judge Ribner is granted. And that's that. You could bring it up later on if it becomes necessary. After you read these notes.

MR. WILLIAMS: On the issue of the reconstruction of the missing transcript of March 18th.

THE COURT: Well, there is no transcript for March 18th, I am trying to tell you that. It's just what Jackson did: He filed something and the Court makes a record of it.

MR. WILLIAMS: That is the record we would like to see. I assume it is in the minutes.

THE COURT: Well, it should be in here somewhere. See if you could find it for the gentleman.

MR. HOLMES: May I be excused while that happens?

THE COURT: Yes.

MS. PERKINS: Your Honor, if they wanted to reconstruct a record the way to do it is with the parties who were present. They had Mr. Jackson on the stand for three days. Not a single question was asked as to what happened on this date. That's how you reconstruct the record. Now that Mr. Jackson is gone, after he's been there for days on end, now they said oh, we've got to reconstruct this and we have to have the calendar judge to do this. Judge Ribner, you know, did not just preside over this one case. He had many other cases. There's absolutely no reason to believe that he would even remember what happened that date other than what's in the Quarter Sessions file. I submit to the Court we should proceed with their next witness. Let's find out if he's here. I don't see Mr. Gelb in the room. Maybe he is in the back or something, but let's proceed with the testimony.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, I appreciate their anxiousness to proceed, and we are anxious to proceed, but it's very difficult to proceed when we don't have the confidence in the full, that we have the full record.

THE COURT: You don't need that in order to proceed with any of these witnesses that you have listed here, that's what I am saying to you. In the future, why don't you wait until you get copies of these notes, read them over, if it doesn't satisfy you let me know. We could take this up at another time.

Let's not stand here and argue forever, Counselor.

MR. WILLIAMS: I beg your pardon, Your Honor, but we don't have the luxury --

THE COURT: Counselor, I have ruled. Proceed with your next witness. Come up later on. If after you get these copies, if that doesn't satisfy you as to what happened on March the 18th, '82, we will see where we go from there. But these witnesses that you are calling, they don't need to know about that. That was something even before trial, with Judge Ribner.

All right, who is your next witness?

MR. WEINGLASS: Petitioner calls Jeremy Gelb.

THE COURT: Is he back there?

MR. GRANT: I think what you'll find, Your Honor, the reason why we spent an hour talking about something that could have been said in five minutes is because the witness is not here. They knew he was not here, they knew he wasn't there then and they do this everyday at the beginning of the proceedings.

THE COURT: I know. We will wait a few minutes.

MR. WEINGLASS: Excuse me. Did the Court say who is your next potential witness? Robert Greer.

THE COURT: Let's assume he doesn't show.

MR. WEINGLASS: Mr. Gelb is here, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Well, so far he is not here. Assuming that he is not here, who is your next witness?

MR. WEINGLASS: He is here, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I know you keep saying he is here. The Court Officers can't find him. He's here now? Is he here?

THE COURT OFFICER: Yes, Mr. Gelb.

THE COURT: Okay? he's here.

Jeremy C. Gelb, Esquire, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

- - - - -

THE WITNESS: Good afternoon, sir.

- - - - -

DIRECT EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Good afternoon, Mr. Gelb.

A. Good afternoon.

Q. Mr. Gelb, would you state your current occupation and employment?

A. I am an attorney.

Q. And do you maintain offices for the practice of law?

A. I do.

Q. Under what title is your office?

A. I am, I am a sole practitioner. I am licensed to practice by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

Q. And in what year were you admitted to the practice of law?

A. 1980.

Q. Now, are you appearing today pursuant to subpoena?

Page 211.

Jeremy Gelb, Esq. - Direct

A. I am.

Q. And did more than one subpoena come to your office?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, have you had occasion prior to today to speak to myself?

A. I have.

Q. On approximately how many occasions?

A. I believe twice. In person.

Q. Did you have an opportunity prior to today to speak to Mr. Grant, who is seated here at Counsel's table?

A. I have spoken to Mr. Grant I believe twice by telephone.

Q. And in the course of speaking to both Mr. Grant and to myself, did you discuss an issue related to another attorney other than yourself?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And did you bring with you today a document pertaining to the other attorney?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And was the other attorney subpoenaed as well?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have the document with you?

A. I do.

Page 212.

Jeremy Gelb, Esq. - Direct

MR. WEINGLASS: Could you present the document to the Court.

And I ask that the Court examine it and seal the document.

THE COURT: What document are you talking about, a subpoena?

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor.

MR. GRANT: May we approach sidebar, Your Honor?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, I would appreciate that.

- - - - -

(Discussion held in the Judge's robing room was transcribed and was sealed by Court order.)

- - - - -

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Mr. Gelb, after your admission and prior to the year 1985, could you briefly summarize for the Court your practice?

A. Yes, my practice during those years was primarily criminal trial and criminal appellate litigation.

Q. And prior to 1985 had you ever filed in your own name an appeal in a death penalty case?

Page 213.

Jeremy Gelb, Esq. - Direct

A. No.

Q. Now, did there come a time in 1985 when you were asked to assist the assigned appellate Counsel for Mr. Jamal?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know if his assigned appellate Counsel at that time was the first attorney assigned by the Court to handle Mr. Jamal's appeal?

A. I believe the answer to that is no. And I gleaned that only recently from a review of the appellate brief. I believe there was a prior attorney who for some reason was released and I believe that appellate Counsel was thereafter appointed.

Q. So that would explain the time gap from 1982, the date of conviction, followed by a 1983 date of formal sentencing, and then 1985, assigned appellate Counsel being assigned, who was I believe the second --

MR. GRANT: I would object. That is not explaining anything, Your Honor, that is purely speculation. He knows from the time that his firm entered this appearance, that's all he knows.

MR. WEINGLASS: I will move on.

Page 214.

Jeremy Gelb, Esq. - Direct

THE COURT: Because I think the Court records ought to show what happened.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Mr. Gelb, did you play any role in the preparation, in the filing of the appellate brief before the Pennsylvania Supreme Court of Mr. Jamal's appeal?

A. Yes, I did. I assisted appellate Counsel in some of their research with respect to many of the appellate issues that were raised in the brief. By that I mean I was assigned to do some of the research, to discuss some of the issues with appellate Counsel. To assist in working and reworking the brief, so to speak. I recall having a hand in doing some of the editing of the brief. That's pretty much it. It was mainly legal research, discussion, editing of the brief.

Q. Do you recall if you reviewed the completed brief prior to it's being filed?

A. I believe that I reviewed a draft of the final brief. Candidly, at this point I don't recall if I actually reviewed the final document word-for-word, but I know that I reviewed at least one draft before it was filed.

Q. And you signed the brief?

Page 215.

Jeremy Gelb, Esq. - Direct

A. No, I did not. Appellate Counsel signed the brief.

Q. In the course of your research of the various issues which you researched in preparation of the filing of the brief, did you draw any conclusions about the strength of any of the issues that you reviewed?

A. Yes, I did. I felt that there were several issues that were very strong issues. In particular, there was a Caldwell issue which we felt was very meritorious. I recall that there had been a decision of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, I believe it was Commonwealth versus Baker, which had been decided several years previously, which supported the position that we were taking. Namely, it was directed to certain aspects of the prosecutor's closing argument. And we felt that Mr. Jamal's case was on all fours with Baker and with Caldwell.

There were several other issues that we felt strongly about as well. One had to do, if I recall, with the cross-examination of a character witness for Mr. Jamal, Miss Sonia Sanchez.

Another had to do with really an issue of a first impression in many regards having to do with a question of, involving Mr. Jamal's political beliefs and whether the cross-examination of Mr. Jamal contravened his First and Fourteenth Amendment rights under the Constitution, and his similar rights under the State Constitution. Those are the issues that I recall with greatest clarity. And I felt that they were very strong issues.

Page 216.

Jeremy Gelb, Esq. - Direct

Q. Incidentally, Mr. Gelb, did you have occasion to meet Mr. Jamal?

A. I have not, no.

Q. Did you, in rendering the assistance you described, engage in a review of the entire trial record for purposes of identifying appellate issues?

A. No, sir, I did not review the entire trial record. I reviewed portions of the record, as the record pertained to the issues that I was asked to research.

Q. Did you discuss with the assigned appellate attorney issues that were ultimately raised in the appellate brief and argued in the Supreme Court?

A. Yes.

Q. And could you describe for us how the research that you performed was directed?

A. Well, I was given an issue, so to speak, and asked to research the law as it pertained to that issue. Obviously, later on in my career I had many occasions to review an appellate record or to review a trial record and issue-spot myself. That was not what I was doing myself in this particular appeal. My involvement was not that extensive. Instead, I was simply asked to review the pertinent law with regard to the issues that I had mentioned just a few moments ago and perhaps a few others. And I sort of hit the books and found what I can that supported the position that appellate Counsel sought to take in the brief.

Page 217.

Jeremy Gelb, Esq. - Direct

Q. And did you then have occasion to discuss with assigned appellate Counsel the issues that you had researched?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever have occasion to discuss with appellate Counsel issues that were not researched by you and not raised in the brief?

A. Okay. Just so I understand your question: You are asking me did I ever discuss issues with appellate Counsel that I did not research and were not raised in the brief?

Q. Correct.

A. Is that correct?

Q. Yeah.

A. I would have to say the answer to that is no,

Page 218.

Jeremy Gelb, Esq. - Direct

I did not. At least not to my recollection.

Q. And in your work on this case on the appeal, and your discussions with appellate Counsel, did you become aware of any decision that was made by appellate Counsel to purposely or consciously reduce the issues that were raised on the appeal out of concern for the length of the brief or for any other tactical or strategic reasons?

A. No, I recall no such discussions. I will say that the brief was fairly lengthy, to my recollection, but I do not recall a specific discussion concerning the length of the brief or concern for the length of the brief, no.

Q. Have you examined and been provided with a copy of the Petition for Post-Conviction Relief that has been filed in this case?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And have you had an opportunity to generally review the content of the Petition?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. I draw your attention to an issue that has been denominated point 2A in the Petition which claimed that there was a denial of a continuance so that a key defense witness could appear to testify. Do you recall if you read back in 1985 or '86 that part of the trial record dealing with the issue of whether or not the Court had properly or improperly denied a continuance for the appearance of Officer Wakshul?

Page 219.

Jeremy Gelb, Esq. - Direct

A. I do not believe I reviewed that portion of the record, no.

Q. Do you recall if you researched the issue of denial of continuance?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Do you recall if you had a discussion with assigned appellate Counsel about that issue?

A. I do not recall any discussion, no.

Q. Do you have any knowledge or information indicating that there was a tactical or strategic decision not to raise the issue of denial of continuance?

A. No.

Q. Drawing your attention to point 2C like in Charley, the allegation in the Petition for Post-Conviction Relief that there was a limitation imposed on the defense in cross-examination of a prosecution eyewitness. Do you have that?

A. May I have just a moment.

Q. 2C.

A. Yes, I have that.

Page 220.

Jeremy Gelb, Esq. - Direct

Q. That was an allegation that the cross-examination of eyewitness Robert Chobert with respect to his prior record was not properly raised by trial Counsel. Did you read that back in 1985 or '86 in the record?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you asked to research that issue?

A. No, I was not.

Q. Did you have a discussion with appellate Counsel about that issue?

A. Not to my recollection, no.

Q. Do you have any knowledge or information as to why that issue was not raised in the appellate brief?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Drawing your attention to point 2B like in boy, the allegation that the cross-examination of defense -- I'm sorry -- the allegation that the defense was barred from eliciting testimony from defense witness Veronica Jones: Did you read the trial record on that issue?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you research that issue?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you discuss it with appellate Counsel?

A. No.

Page 221.

Jeremy Gelb, Esq. - Direct

Q. To your knowledge was there any tactical reason not to raise it?

A. No.

Q. Drawing your attention to the allegation in point 3 of the Petition that Mr. Jamal's absence from two conferences in camera were improper: Did you read the trial record respecting the two in camera conferences?

MR. GRANT: Objection, Your Honor, as to that question. I believe that's been decided on appeal directly. As to whether or not the right of self representation allows one to absent themselves from sidebar conferences, from the room generally based on their conduct.

THE COURT: Has that already been resolved by the Supreme Court?

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor, that issue was never raised in the brief nor addressed in the Supreme Court's decision.

MR. GRANT: If that is the case I will withdraw my objection.

THE COURT: Okay.

THE WITNESS: Mr. Weinglass, my answer would be the same with respect to that issue. I did not research it, and I do not have any

Page 222.

Jeremy Gelb, Esq. - Direct

recollection of discussing that with appellate Counsel.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Respecting point 4 of the Petition, the ineffective assistance of Counsel in the guilt phase of the proceeding: Did you read the trial record of the guilt phase to determine whether or not that was a viable issue on appeal?

A. I'm sorry, point 4?

Q. Point 4 in the brief. In the -- I'm sorry, the Petition.

A. No, my answer is no, sir, I did not review that.

Q. Did you research that issue?

A. Not, not in the context of this appeal, no, sir.

Q. And you neither had any discussion with appellate Counsel about it, nor were you aware of any tactical decision not to include it?

A. I am not.

Q. I will ask you the same questions with respect to point 5 in the Petition. That deals with the question of Mr. Jamal losing his right of self representation. Now, I am not asking you whether or not you read the trial record or researched the question of whether or not the Court improperly stopped him from asking voir dire questions that occurred at one point. Then at a later point subsequently the Court did strip Mr. Jamal of his right to represent himself. Did you read the trial record with respect to the second issue?

Page 223.

Jeremy Gelb, Esq. - Direct

A. I don't recall reading the trial record. I recall there were some discussions with appellate Counsel with respect to this issue. It involves, I think the leading case is Foretta. But I just cannot say whether it was with respect to the earlier point in the trial, the Jury selection, or at a later point in the trial. And I did not specifically research that particular point. Beyond that I don't have any specific recollection one way or the other.

Q. In your discussions with appellate Counsel, was there any discussion of whether or not to include that issue as a tactical matter in the appellate brief?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Referring you to point 6 in the Petition. This has to do with the question of Mr. Jamal's absence in the trial. Do you recall if you read any of the prior record to determine when and under what circumstances Mr. Jamal was absented from the trial?

Page 224.

Jeremy Gelb, Esq. - Direct

A. I personally did not review that aspect of the record. I believe I was aware that Mr. Jamal was absented from the trial at various portions during the trial.

Q. Did you research that issue?

A. I did not personally research that issue, no.

Q. Did you have any discussions with appellate Counsel with respect to that issue, and particularly whether or nat there was any tactical or strategic decision not to include it in the trial brief? I'm sorry, the appellate brief.

A. There was no tactical discussion or decision that I am aware of, no.

Q. Directing your attention to point 7 of the Petition, the allegation that the prosecution engaged in improper guilt-phase summation: Did you, Mr. Gelb, have opportunity to read the trial record of the guilt-phase summation?

A. I believe I did, yes.

Q. Did you research any issues pertaining to improper argument in the guilt-phase summation? Referring now to the guilt-phase summation.

A. I'm sorry, may I just have a moment?

Q. Sure.

A. I think that I'm...

Page 225.

(Pause.)

I do not believe that I did review the guilt-phase summation. I mis heard you, I think.

Q. Right. Was it that you were referring to the penalty-phase summation?

A. Precisely, yes.

Q. Which you did review?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And it was raised on the appeal?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Right. Drawing your attention back to the guilt-phase summation: You are indicating you did not review that part of the record?

A. I don't believe so, no.

Q. Did you research the question of improper comment by the prosecutor in the guilt-phase summation?

A. I don't believe so, no.

Q. Was there any discussion between yourself and assigned Counsel as to whether or not there was any tactical reason for omitting it in the appellate brief?

A. Not that I recall, no.

Q. Drawing your attention to point 8 in the Petition, which alleges, among other matters, the allegation that a note which the Court received from the Juror was improperly handled: Did you read the trial record on that issue?

A. No, I did not.

Q. And did you research that issue?

A. No.

Q. And was there any discussion between you and appellate Counsel as to any tactical reason why that issue was not raised?

A. No.

Q. Lastly, I want to come to the penalty-phase summation by the prosecutor. Do you recall, I think you indicated that you did read that?

A. I believe I did, yes.

Q. And there were portions there that did make it into the appellate brief.

A. That is the Caldwell argument that I referred to earlier, yes.

Q. And also the argument that later became known as the Dawson argument?

A. That's correct, yes.

Q. Both of those --

A. That is correct.

Q. -- are in the appellate brief?

A. Yes.

Page 227.

Q. Now, in point 14 of the Petition the Petitioner alleges a number of other allegations of improper argument by the prosecution. I assume you have looked at those?

A. I did before, yes.

Q. Did you research any of those issues?

A. I can only answer the question in the following way. I was, of course, familiar with the issue of improper argument. We raised the Caldwell slash Baker argument. We did not raise the concerns that you have indicated in your Petition. I can not sit here and give you a reason one way or the other at this point in time for not raising that issue -- those issues. I have no recollection of coming up with an argument similar to the argument that you have made. My only recollection is that I was focused on the Caldwell argument with respect to Mr. McGill's summation and I really can't say one way or the other whether there were other elements of his speech that were considered in a prosecutorial misconduct argument.

Q. In any event, Mr. Gelb, can you recall whether or not there was a discussion with assigned Counsel in which it was decided not to raise any other issues which have been raised now in the Petition for tactical reasons?

A. I don't recall any such discussion, no.

MR. WEINGLASS: May I have just a moment?

(Discussion was held off the record at this time between Defense Counsel.)

(Pause.)

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. I wanted to draw your attention also to point 15 in the table of contents.

A. Of your Petition?

Q. Yes. And I will read it into the record. Mr. Jamal was sentenced to death without the benefit of adequate assistance of Counsel in the penalty phase.

A. Yes, sir. If your question is the same as the previous questions?

Q. Yes.

A. I do not, I do not recall a specific discussion or discussions with regard to Mr. Jamal's representation to the Jury in the penalty phase. And therefore I don't recall a conscious decision one way or the other as to whether or not that issue should have been raised. I see the argument that you have outlined in your Petition and it just does not ring a bell with me as having been a point of discussion.

Page 229.

Q. You don't recall researching the issue of ineffective assistance of Counsel in the penalty phase?

A. I don't recall researching that issue, no.

Q. Now, there is another issue I would like to call to your attention, it is now known as the Simmons issue. Are you familiar with that, Mr. Gelb?

A. I know a couple of different Simmons cases, Mr. Weinglass. I am not sure which one you mean.

Q. This is a question of whether or not a jury ought to be advised by the court in it's instruction as to the meaning of life without parole. Was that issue researched by you?

A. Not in connection with this brief, no. No, I had occasion to research it sometime later but not in connection with this appeal. I am familiar with the argument; I do not recall any discussions with regard to that issue in connection with this appeal.

Q. To be fair, the Simmons case came down years later?

A. I seem to recall that, yes.

Q. But what you are indicating is that it wasn't anticipated?

A. It wasn't anticipated or discussed, to the best of my recollection.

MR. WEINGLASS: Thank you very much, Mr. Gelb. I have no further questions.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Good afternoon, Mr. Gelb.

A. Good afternoon, Mr. Grant.

Q. In order to perfect Mr. Jamal's appeal --

THE COURT: I don't know, is that microphone working?

MR. GRANT: Yes, Your Honor.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. In order to perfect Mr. Jamal's appeal, in order to insure that all issues and concerns of appellate Counsel as well as Mr. Jamal were raised, if I am not mistaken, numerous extensions were granted by the Supreme Court, with the agreement of the Commonwealth in this case, to file the appeal; isn't that correct?

A. Mr. Grant, I haven't checked that, I would defer to the record. It would not surprise me in the least. I recall that this was a very large project of the office and that appellate Counsel frequently did request and receive extensions of time without opposition from the Commonwealth, that is correct.

Q. And it was large in some dimension because not only was there prior appellate Counsel prior to the appellate Counsel that you assisted, but there was also an amicus curiae brief submitted by Mr. Carl Baker on behalf of the Defendant; correct?

A. I recall that, yes.

Q. And the Defendant filed his own pro se appellate brief, did he not?

A. He did.

Q. And was that with or without knowledge of appellate Counsel, if you know?

A. That was with knowledge, with knowledge of appellate Counsel.

Q. And thereafter appellate Counsel requested the Supreme Court to allow the unscheduled brief filing, and the Commonwealth agreed that the brief should be accepted and reviewed by the Court along with appellate Counsel's brief and the amicus curiae brief; correct?

A. I believe that is correct, Mr. Grant. I would have to defer to the record on that as well. But I believe that is correct, yes.

Q. And I know you are going back years, and I know you are not primary Counsel, nevertheless, from your recollection, you do recall that Mr. Jamal represented himself as appellate Counsel, Mr. Baker as a friend of the Court representing Mr. Jamal, your firm representing Mr. Jamal, and all filed briefs of some sort, or petitions; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, would you explain for the record what an amicus brief is, what it constitutes?

A. An amicus brief as I understand it is a friend of the court brief. And it, I believe that it arose in that Mr. Baker on behalf of an organization, the name of which I'm sorry I don't recall, felt there was a very small, one or two of the issues in particular that were before the Court. And I believe under the Rules of Appellate Procedure one can petition to file an amicus brief. I believe such a petition was filed, I believe the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania granted the petition. I also have a very strong recollection being present at argument before the Supreme Court, and Mr. Baker did in fact argue in support of the position raised in the brief. As did appellate Counsel, obviously.

Q. Does it refresh your recollection that Mr. Baker represented the National Conference of Black Lawyers in arguing as a friend of the Court at that time?

A. I believe that is the organization, yes. I had known Mr. Baker prior to that time in a different context and that's why I was blanking on the name of this particular organization.

Q. Do you recall -- strike that. Local Counsel assisting Mr. Weinglass and his associates is David Rudovsky. Do you recall Mr. Rudovsky collaborating with Mr. Baker and representing the American Civil Liberties Union and offering parts of and signing that brief?

A. I don't have a recollection one way or the other, I don't.

Q. Okay. This case was not only argued in the Supreme Court, but the petitions were filed for reargument --

A. That is correct.

Q. -- in the State Supreme Court?

A. That is correct.

Q. And thereafter a petition for certiorari before the United States Supreme Court was requested and denied?

A. That is correct.

Q. And re-requested?

A. It could be, I'm not sure.

Q. By Mr. Jamal pro se?

A. I'm not sure. It could be.

Q. And denied?

A. I assume it was denied, yes.

Q. Mr. Gelb, I just have a few questions. In preparation in collaboration with appellate Counsel, did you receive the trial file from trial Counsel? When I say you I mean your offices.

A. Yes, the answer is yes.

Q. And did the trial file contain the transcript of the proceedings in the Court below? When I say that I mean notes of testimony.

A. I know what you are referring to. I don't remember how my office got the notes of testimony. I seem to recall that we received the notes of testimony at an earlier point in time. And that we met later with Mr. Jackson and received the contents of his file. But I don't remember which happened first, but obviously we did get a full set of notes of testimony.

And we also had, we also, I remember, had a meeting, at least one meeting with Mr. Jackson, and Mr. Jackson did bring a rather voluminous file of his own. Which to the best of my recollection contained discovery and some of his motions and things of that nature.

Q. And when Mr. Jackson brought the file, did he bring it to appellate Counsel's offices?

A. Yes.

Q. And did he just drop the file off or did a discussion ensue between appellate Counsel, perhaps yourself, and Mr. Jackson about the viability of any of the claims that appellate Counsel was considering?

A. I was only present during one meeting and I was only there for maybe 18 minutes. And during that 10 minutes there was a general sort of discussion about the trial and about some of the issues in a very generalized form. I had excused myself in that meeting, I had another court appearance, and Mr. Jackson and appellate Counsel stayed in the office and spoke, as I understand it, for some time and discussed whatever they discussed: I was not there. I can only assume -- well, I can't assume. I don't know what they discussed because I wasn't, I wasn't present. But I understand that there was a rather lengthy conference between them at that time and, I believe, on a subsequent occasion as well.

Q. And do you know of your own knowledge if the second meeting also took place at appellate Counsel's offices?

A. I don't recall that, I was not present.

Q. Do you recall how many times Mr. Jackson and appellate Counsel met?

A. I believe it was twice.

Q. Now, when you say that you were assigned particular areas to research and then would have legal discussion with appellate Counsel, would you review appellate Counsel's legal research?

A. Well, it was sort of a joint effort in that regard. My recollection is that appellate Counsel had already done some research with respect to some of the issues that were raised in the appellate brief, and I was asked to follow up. As often happens when you are preparing an appellate brief, a lot of the discussions about organization, a lot of the discussions about arguments that can be made, would be argument. So my recollection is it was sort of a joint effort. I didn't research all of the issues but I do recall researching some of the issues.

Q. Twenty points of error, 20 points of error from the trial proceedings were addressed by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court in the case of Commonwealth versus Mumia Abu-Jamal. Did appellate Counsel, to your knowledge, review the transcript of the proceedings in order to raise any of these claims?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you review any of the transcripts of the proceedings in order to work on the issues that were assigned to you?

A. Yes, I did. Portions of the transcript I did review. And appellate Counsel did review, if not the -- well, I believe the entire transcript. I could only go based upon my observations.

Q. Now, portions of the legal issues were assigned to you, one of which included the Caldwell issue?

A. Yes.

Q. You keep saying. For the record, sir, would you state what that issue is in brief?

A. Well, this was an issue that was raised in the appellate brief. Caldwell was a decision of the U.S. Supreme Court which went to the question of whether the jury is impressed properly with the magnitude of it's duty in imposing a death sentence. And the argument is that if the prosecution makes argument to the jury which attempts to mislead the jury that it's decision is not in fact final, and misleads the jury into believing that what they do is merely a recommendation and it is really not that important then the jury has in essence been deprived responsibility to decide life or death.

Q. And you did raise that issue and it was decided upon by the Supreme Court and rejected; correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now with respect to whether or not the Simmons issue could have been predicted by yourself. And the Simmons issue is whether or not the jury should be told that life without parole is what a life sentence is. You realize, do you not, sir, that that deals with the situation where the aggravating circumstance alleged is the future dangerousness of the defendant, and when a jury is considering that they may consider that the option to future dangerousness is total and complete incarceration forever, and therefore they should be told that? Now --

A. I recall that is the context in which Simmons was decided. I think the flip side of the Simmons argument is of course what's good for the goose is good for the gander. And I think that the issue there becomes if under some circumstances the jury knows that life isn't life, then perhaps under other circumstances the jury should know that life is life. I agree with you, it arrives under a somewhat different factual context. But I submit that it is an argument that could be made and I think has been made in the context of impressing the jury with the, with it's responsibilities in determining life or death. And in letting the jury know that life, at least in this Commonwealth, really means life.

Q. The aggravating circumstances in this case were, A, the killing of a police officer in the performance of his duty, and B, reckless endangerment to another individual during the course of this killing. If I am not mistaken, the Jury rejected the reckless endangerment -- it happened to be the Defendant's own brother who was in the area at the time -- and they found the aggravating circumstance outweighed any mitigating circumstance, if they found any. So the future dangerousness issue was not before them and therefore Simmons would not legally apply even if it were the law in 1982; isn't that fair to say?

A. I think that the way that you have couched the Simmons argument in the way that Simmons was first decided I would have to agree with you. What I am suggesting to you is that the rationale of Simmons I believe can be and I believe it has been extended to cover the flip side, the converse, if you will. But I agree with you in the way that Simmons was decided, yes, there was no issue with respect to future dangerousness. And in that limited sense, I don't believe that issue could have been raised.

Q. Now, Mr. Weinglass asked you if you worked on any research regarding whether or not the Defendant was sentenced to death without the adequate assistance of Counsel at the penalty phase. And you indicated that you did work on the penalty phase in some regard on some issues, such as Caldwell. During the course of doing your research, sir, did you read the record, the trial record of the penalty phase, the arguments, the evidence, if any, that was taken?

A. I do recall reading the closing arguments. And I do recall reading the text I believe of Mr. Jamal's statement. And I do recall reading Mr. McGill's cross-examination of Mr. Jamal.

Q. During the course of your research did you determine based on your years of criminal practice that Mr. Jackson ineffectively, ineffectively assisted Mr. Jamal at that phase of the proceedings?

A. I don't recall discussing that particular issue with appellate Counsel. Nor do I recall treating the issue as such. I do not believe that that was a question, frankly, that was addressed by myself or by appellate Counsel.

Q. You mean to tell me when you are looking at the issue of when a capital sentence has been imposed, you don't look to see whether or not the defendant received adequate representation?

A. Well, I think that's always in the back of one's mind when you review any record, capital or non-capital. Because the first question is did the defendant receive the process that he was due. I can't, I just can't sit here and recall that an issue was discussed with respect to adequacy of Counsel in the, in the context that we know it today, the ineffective assistance cases that have been decided.

My strong recollection, as I said, is in focusing in on the comments of Mr. McGill. And again, I recall, I believe there was an issue raised with respect to whether Mr. McGill should have been permitted to cross-examine Mr. Jamal. But I do not think that was raised under the guise of ineffectiveness.

Q. Mr. Gelb, perhaps you didn't consider it and you didn't discuss it with appellate Counsel. Can you state here with certainty that that wasn't considered by appellate Counsel, the ineffectiveness claim, as opposed to guilt, in the sentencing phase?

A. No, I can't. I can't sit here and say that.

Q. Now, appellate Counsel raised the issue which we now know in shorthand terms as the Batson claim. That is the racially-based or non-neutrally based motivation for exercising peremptory challenges. Now, that was raised to the Supreme Court by appellate Counsel, was it not?

A. It was.

Q. Did you work on that issue?

A. No, I did not.

Q. And there was a request by appellate Counsel for Mr. Jackson to submit an affidavit in support of the trial record which was forwarded to the Supreme Court; do you recall that?

A. I do not recall that, no.

Q. Did you have any discussions with appellate Counsel regarding the Batson claim?

A. Very, very generalized discussions. I was not asked to research that. I was aware of the fact that appellate Counsel was researching it. I was aware of the fact that appellate Counsel was engrossed in a dissection of the apartheid record. It is, frankly, something that I did not get involved in.

Q. Appellate Counsel was engrossed in a dissection of the voir dire record?

A. Yes.

Q. And would it be fair to say, sir, where you have the record of what happened, at a trial, and that forms the basis of making any claims that you want to make on appeal, but you go outside the record, and you go back to trial counsel and you get an affidavit from him, would it be fair to say that that, practically speaking, insinuates that the record in and of itself was insufficient to raise the issue without external evidence?

A. That would certainly stand to reason, yes.

Q. Now, at the time that Mr. Jamal was tried, Batson versus Kentucky, a Supreme Court holding, had not come into being at that point in time; is that correct?

A. I don't recall, Mr. Grant, I would have to check.

Q. Well, I will only say that the Supreme Court holding was published in 1984; Mr. Jamal was tried in 1982.

A. Yes, sir.

I believe -- pardon me, sir. I believe Batson according to the brief here was decided in '86, actually.

Q. '86, okay, that is even later on?

A. Yes.

Q. And that is at or about the same time that you filed your appeal in this instance?

A. I believe that the, yes, I believe the brief was filed in 1986, that is correct.

Q. So that was hot off the press when you filed that, when Counsel, appellate Counsel filed the claim?

A. I believe that's correct.

Q. And did that have anything to do with why Counsel had to go to Mr. Jackson to have him recreate something that did not appear in the record itself?

A. I just don't have any recollection of that, Mr. Grant. I don't know one way or the other.

Q. You don't know that appellate Counsel did not consider issues that were not raised and dismissed them as lacking merit, do you?

A. No, I do not know that. I... I have tremendous regard for appellate Counsel. And I've known appellate Counsel's work for a good long time. And I think Counsel's work has been uniformly excellent over the years. So I can't say one way or the other what was in appellate Counsel's mind at that time. Unless there was some sort of discussion with me so that I could understand what the thinking was, I just don't know.

Q. You were asked and you responded to Counsel that there were four issues that you felt and appellate Counsel felt were very strong issues on appeal: Namely, the prosecutorial misconduct issue under Caldwell; the prosecutorial misconduct apparently with respect to closing argument; cross-examination of a character witness, Sonia Sanchez; and the alleged questioning of Defendant's political beliefs, which Counsel alleged violated the First and Fourteenth Amendments of the Constitution of the United States, and thereafter the Fifth Amendment and Pennsylvania Constitution. All those claims were rejected, were they not, by the Supreme Court?

A. Yes, they were.

Q. And certiorari was denied by the U.S. Supreme Court on all those issues?

A. Yes.

Q. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you said that you did not review the entire trial record. Can you say that appellate Counsel did not?

A. No, I can not say that.

Q. And you said that you did not meet with Mr. Jamal. Can you say that appellate Counsel did not?

A. No, I can say to the contrary: Appellate Counsel did meet with Mr. Jamal.

Q. You also testified on direct examination, Mr. Gelb, that of the issues which were not researched, and not raised in the brief, you can't think of any tactical or strategic reason why they would not be. You are not saying that they were not considered and thought not to be worthy of appellate merit, are you?

A. No, I'm saying I don't know one way or the other, Mr. Grant. I don't know whether they were considered and rejected or whether they were simply not considered. I have no way of knowing one way or the other.

Q. Now, Counsel raised a number of particular areas and asked you if these matters were considered by you or by appellate Counsel, and if not was there a strategic or tactical reason why not. And he talked about the prosecutor's guilt-phase closing argument.

MR. GRANT: And I have, for the benefit of the Court, a document which I would move to mark as Commonwealth Exhibit Number 10 in this matter. It is a 260 page photocopy of the opinion of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court decision in this matter authored by Justice Zappala.

(Pennsylvania Supreme Court opinion was marked Commonwealth Exhibit C-l0 for identification.)

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. At head note number 12, sir, it says that, essentially, the prosecutor's guilt-phase closing argument about the possibility of subsequent appeals and reversal of a capital murder conviction didn't deprive the Defendant of a fair trial. So in fact that issue was raised, though not by you but by appellate Counsel; correct?

A. I believe that's correct. That claim may very well have been raised with respect to both the guilt phase and the penalty phase.

Q. And with respect to the penalty phase, head note 14, prosecutor's penalty-phase closing argument about appeals in capital murder prosecutions and about the absence of execution for more than 20 years of a person in Pennsylvania at that time did not create a risk that the Jury would abdicate it's responsibility to decide the appropriateness of the death sentence. And that is part and parcel of the Caldwell issue in reverse, actually, because if they abdicated their responsibilities and not considered life as the alternative, that's what Caldwell is all about, isn't it, essentially?

A. Well, let me respond this way. I don't know what you mean by the reverse.

Q. Okay.

A. In your question. That is the part that I don't understand, I don't follow. And I haven't, I have a copy of the slip opinion of the Supreme Court's decision but I don't have the head notes here. I'm not sure I follow your question.

Q. Okay. I will withdraw that question. The issue of the appropriateness of the prosecutor's argument as to the death sentence was upheld by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, cert denied by the U.S. Supreme Court; correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Evidence as to whether -- head note 9. I know you don't have your brief allocated that way.

A. Right.

Q. But that's why I am reading it for you, for the benefit of you. Evidence as to whether Defendant's character witness had spoken or written favorably about convicted killers of police officers was relevant in the prosecution for murder of police officer to indicate that witness had enmity towards police officers or to indicate whether community which referred to the Defendant as a peaceful man viewed police officers as oppressors and gave favorable acknowledgement to convicted police killers.

Now, that again dealt with the issue of cross-examining the character witness Sonia Sanchez and that was raised by the appellate Counsel in this case, was it not?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Head note number 5. The right of self representation is not absolute right for defendant to proceed as defendant sees fit. Pro se defendant is subject to the same rules of procedure as represented defendant.

So that the issue of the Defendant's right of self representation was addressed at least in some measure, was it not?

A. I believe that is correct. I believe it was raised with respect to the Jury selection issue only.

Q. And in that regard: Defendant had no right to engage in voir dire questioning whether or not he was represented by Counsel, and thus the trial Court's decision to conduct voir dire himself did not deprive pro se defendant of right of self representation.

So that was more specifically dealt with by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court in this decision in this case?

A. That was the basis for the Foretta claim that was raised on direct appeal, and that was how the Supreme Court dealt with it, yes.

Q. And Foretta is a California case that deals with the right of a person to represent themselves, is it not?

A. The leading case.

Q. And head note 6: The manner in which voir dire is conducted is left to the discretion of the trial judge. That is the inception of the issue raised and then the Court proceeded to discuss the issue of self-representation at voir dire and self-representation altogether.

Now, those issues were all raised by appellate Counsel, or by you and the appellate Counsel, and ruled on by the highest Court of this State; correct?

A. Yes, they were.

Q. So you don't have to have a tactical or strategic reason why those issues weren't raised?

A. No, sir, those issues were raised. And I didn't believe Mr. Weinglass was asking me questions with regard to those particular issues. Those were the ones that were raised and, unfortunately, rejected.

Q. I just have a couple more questions, Mr. Gelb. Did you personally have any discussions with Mr. Jackson about his effectiveness as a trial lawyer in this case?

A. No, I did not.

Q. From your review of the record, though you did not raise that claim, did you form any legal opinion as to whether such a claim would have been viable had it been raised?

(Pause.)

A. Well, to the extent that Mr. Jackson's representation, or the question of his ineffectiveness, was bound up in the issues that were raised on direct appeal, then I would say if they were not preserved or if they were not raised properly that yes, I would contend that he was ineffective. However, it's my recollection that there were a number of issues that were raised on direct appeal where the issues, the merits of the issues were raised in the absence of an ineffectiveness allegation.

So what I am trying to convey here: I know that in reviewing the Supreme Court's decision, that there were I believe two instances -- I believe the Batson claim was one, and there was one other -- where the Supreme Court agreed to review the merits of the claims, notwithstanding the fact that there had been no objection at trial. And to the best of my recollection, had been no post-verdict motion as well.

Q. And you could well imagine that since it didn't come into being for another five years, sir?

A. Well, in the Batson situation, that could well be. Although there were decisions that were decided before Batson. But, but the point I am trying to make here is that capital appeals have what's called a relaxed waiver standard. And that standard was specifically referred to in the opinion. Under normal-circumstances, at least the practice back then was that if appellate Counsel did not assign trial Counsel's ineffectiveness for failing to object, or failing to file a post-verdict motion, then the issue was deemed waived. And in these two particular respects that I recall in reviewing the Supreme Court's decision, the Supreme Court invoked the waiver standard so it could address the merits of the issue.

I know that sounds like a roundabout way of answering your question, but Mr. Jackson's ineffectiveness could have been assigned with respect to those two issues.

Q. But the Supreme Court, nevertheless, dealt with both of those issues?

A. That is correct, the Supreme Court did address both those issues under the relaxed waiver standard, that is correct.

Q. Because in capital penalty litigation when a man's life is on the line, the ineffectiveness of Counsel should not be permitted to keep valid claims from before the highest tribunal of the State; is that the idea?

A. I think that's the idea. And I think it's a, I think it's the right idea.

MR. GRANT: Thank you very much, Mr. Gelb.

MR. WEINGLASS: I just have a few follow-up questions.

Page 254.

- - - - -

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Mr. Grant asked you about the Baker case and the prosecutorial error or misconduct in undermining the importance of the jury's having to confront the fact that they are composing a death penalty. You recall questions to that effect?

A. Yes.

Q. From Mr. Grant?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, do you recall -- and you said you read the record on this issue -- that Mr. McGill argued, paraphrased to the Jury that Mr. Jamal would have appeal after appeal after appeal?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall who argued the case for the Commonwealth in the Baker case?

A. Mr. McGill.

Q. The very same prosecutor?

A. That is correct.

Q. And in that case he said the defendant would have appeal after appeal after appeal; is that right?

A. In at least two contexts, I believe.

MR. GRANT: I object and move to strike any references to any case but this case. If they are attempting to show a pattern for prosecutorial misconduct they could lay the foundation with the conduct itself and not through counsel who was assisting appellate Counsel and didn't participate in that case. And I move to strike it.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, the issue immediately before the Court is this. Mr. Gelb is assisting appellate Counsel. He reads the case law. He reads the Baker case.

THE COURT: He didn't argue before the Supreme Court.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, appellate Counsel argued.

THE COURT: Well.

MR. WEINGLASS: And when the Commonwealth representative, as I understand it -- I wasn't there --

THE COURT: Wasn't that decided by the Supreme Court?

MR. GRANT: Yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: It is the Baker case.

THE COURT: Well, they have decided it so what is the issue now?

Page 256.

MR. WEINGLASS: The issue is was Mr. Gelb alerted to the fact that the Pennsylvania Supreme Court would reverse a case if the prosecutor argued to a jury that the defendant would have appeal after appeal after appeal.

THE COURT: I know that, but --

MR. WEINGLASS: And if he was alerted to that fact.

THE COURT: -- what difference does it make: The Supreme Court considered that, didn't they, and made a decision on it?

MR. GRANT: Yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT: So what are you arguing it a second time for?

MR. WEINGLASS: No, we are, that's preserved in this record.

THE COURT: Preserved?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT: The Supreme Court already ruled on it. Whether it was he or appellate Counsel who argued that before the Supreme Court, the Supreme Court considered it and made a decision.

MR. WEINGLASS: Correct. I have no quarrel with that.

THE COURT: Well, then why are we arguing it a second time?

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, what we are getting at is Mr. Gelb's performance as appellate Counsel. He sits down to review the record in this case. He sees that the prosecutor in this case argued to a Jury using the exact same words that the Pennsylvania Supreme Court reversed on in an earlier case.

THE COURT: I know, and the Supreme Court decided that in this very case and they considered it. And they said it's different.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am not making myself clear to the Court. As Mister --

THE COURT: I am not making myself clear to you.

MR. WEINGLASS: As Mr. Gelb sat down to do his research before Mr. Jamal's case got to the Supreme Court, was he paying attention to the fact that in an earlier --

THE COURT: Let's assume that he wasn't. What difference does it make if the Supreme Court considered it?

MR. WEINGLASS: It makes a difference in terms of highlighting his work, his preparation on this case.

THE COURT: It doesn't make any difference if the Supreme Court has already decided that issue. And the Supreme Court a lot of times decides issues that are not brought up by appellate counsel because they review the whole record themselves.

What I am saying to you: If they reviewed this and made a decision on it, it's not proper for me to consider it again.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor, I have to say this to the Court: We are not asking the Court to review that. Nowhere are we asking this Court to review the Supreme Court's decision on the Caldwell issue. That's been decided by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court. You are right, it's preserved. Of course we will raise it in an appropriate court if and when we have to get there. I am not re-raising that before this Court. It is not in our Petition at all. We are not re-raising the Caldwell case before this Court.

MR. GRANT: Well, can we move on, Your Honor.

Page 259.

MR. WEINGLASS: It's been decided. But then we get to what I was asking him about. Not that issue. I was asking him whether or not he was aware of the fact that in the Baker case, which was reversed, the very same prosecutor used the very same words and that led to a reversal.

MR. GRANT: I am objecting to the irrelevancy and move to strike the answer because that is not the issue here. That's been decided by the Supreme Court. Whether it was --

THE COURT: That's what I said.

MR. GRANT: Whether he had twin brothers, clones or what have you, the issue was decided and it doesn't deal with the individual --

THE COURT: That's what I am saying. I thought the Supreme Court resolved that issue, so why are we going into it again?

MR. WEINGLASS: Okay. I will abandon that line of questioning.

THE COURT: I will sustain the objection.

MR. WEINGLASS: All right.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Page 260.

Q. Mr. Gelb, as an active practitioner in the appellate courts on criminal issues, you indicated that you are aware and familiar with what's called the relaxed waiver doctrine here in Pennsylvania?

A. Yes.

Q. And I think as a practitioner, you are now aware and you were aware then that that is the rule in Pennsylvania?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you were asked about the Batson claim and I just briefly want to get into this. Based on Mr. Jackson's affidavit, appellate Counsel presented to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court the fact that the Commonwealth had peremptorily challenged 11 perspective jurors of African-American background; is that correct?

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. And do you recall that the Commonwealth came back in their brief and they contended that the record indicates that the Commonwealth only challenged eight African-American jurors and that Darlene Sampson, Beverly Greene, and Alma Lee Austin do not appear on the record to be African-American jurors?

A. I remember that there was a dispute over the number of African-American jurors. I do not remember the names but I do remember that there was a dispute between the Commonwealth and the defense on that issue.

Q. And now directing your attention to D-10, which is the opinion of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, the Pennsylvania Supreme Court bought the representation of the Commonwealth and decided the Batson issue on the grounds that the Commonwealth representation was accurate and that only eight African-American jurors were excused, not the 11 that your affidavit from Mr. Jackson indicated. Isn't that correct?

A. I believe that's correct. I would need, I would need to review that portion of the opinion, frankly, Mr. Weinglass. I didn't review it but I believe that's correct.

Q. Yeah.

(Pause.)

A. I have the slip opinion where it indicated on page 7 that appears to be the Supreme Court's finding. That... the Court has found eight.

Q. Eight?

A. As opposed to 11.

Q. Right. And now if it turns out that it wasn't eight, that the Commonwealth under represented by 30 percent the number of African Americans they challenged off this Jury, that that issue ought to be represented accurately?

MR. GRANT: Well, Your Honor --

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. To the Pennsylvania Supreme Court?

MR. GRANT: Unless he is a Fellow Justice I really don't care what he thinks. I think the law is clear as to what should be done. Move to strike the answer if any was given.

THE COURT: Well, I don't think he made an answer but if he did I will strike it. Leave that for the Supreme Court to decide.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, the only reason why I raise it is because we have those three jurors.

THE COURT: He can't tell us, he didn't even argue before the Supreme Court. He wasn't appellate Counsel, so.

MR. WEINGLASS: We brought before this Court the three jurors who were not mentioned in the brief.

THE COURT: I know, I am saying he can't give us his opinion.

MR. WEINGLASS: But we need, we have the need for a new record so that the Pennsylvania Supreme Court will decide this case on accurate information.

THE COURT: Counselor, argue that before the Supreme Court if necessary, and if they think additional evidence must be taken they will send it back down again. They do it all the time. All right.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, on that point, just so that we don't go too far afield, if Counsel wishes to bring in those jurors and state on the record their race I think he should be entitled to do so. So we can dispose of this issue once and for all so when it goes up on appeal they will have Counsels' full and fair claims.

THE COURT: You mean all the --

MR. GRANT: No, the three people that he is talking about bringing in, to say he is supplementing the record.

THE COURT: Well, if you have no objection, I am not going to object. How do I know which three that they are talking about?

Page 264.

MR. GRANT: Well, I don't know, Judge.

THE COURT: Well, how do we know. That's in addition, you would have to really bring in everybody, wouldn't we, to find out who they were?

MR. GRANT: Well, so that Counsel doesn't go too far afield, I think that's ripe for discussion between us to come to some kind of resolution in this matter.

THE COURT: Well, if you can, fine. But I don't know how else you are going to do it.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Lastly, Mr. Gelb, I refer you to the brief that was filed on behalf of Mr. Jamal in the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, Roman numeral XIII, and Roman numeral XIV, which is pages 13 and 14 in Roman numerals on the brief.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And those two pages are denominated statement of the case, are they not?

A. Yes.

Q. And that's the entire statement of the facts that were submitted to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court?

Page 265.

A. That's it.

Q. And you read the Petition that was filed by Mr. Jackson's attorneys in this instance? I'm sorry, Mr. Jamal's attorneys. Have you read --

A. Your Post-Conviction Petition?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And the statement of facts drawn from the record in the Petition now is over 30 pages?

A. I haven't counted them, I will take your word for it. It's much more voluminous. If I may: I recognize that this is not denominated statement of facts, it is denominated statement of case. This was appellate Counsel's practice. It included a procedural history and factual history and it speaks for itself.

Q. All right. So appellate Counsel going to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court on a death penalty case for Mr. Jamal did not provide the Court with the statement of facts?

MR. GRANT: Objection, Your Honor. There is no denomination statement of the facts in Pennsylvania. There is a statement of the case. And there was one provided by Counsel. He just told him what it was. And if he wrote out 500 pages of opinion or 300 pages of argument, it still comes down to the simple issue, that was done. I object to Counsel's question. I object to leading.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Is there anything in the brief that's denominated statement of facts?

MR. GRANT: Objection.

THE WITNESS: No.

THE COURT: There is no such thing in Pennsylvania.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Is there anything in the brief denominating statement of the case?

A. Yes.

Q. And how many pages is the statement of the case?

A. I believe you just said it was two.

Q. Would you settle for a page and a half?

A. Page and three-quarters.

Q. Ah-huh. Page and three-quarters. And that contains the procedural history of the case?

A. Yes. It contains some of the procedural history and it contains a reference to some of the factual issues that appear in the brief. It certainly does not contain an exhaustive statement of the facts, or statement of the evidence.

Q. And you say it contains two paragraphs of facts of the case?

(Pause.)

A. Well, I don't mean to quibble with you. It speaks for itself, really. But what I am -- the answer is the first two paragraphs do deal, are cursory synopses, if you will, of the facts. And a couple of paragraphs that follow deal with things that occurred during the course of the trial. I don't know whether you designate those factual or procedural.

I think that there are three paragraphs that follow the first two paragraphs that deal with things that occurred during the trial which are germane to the brief. And that's it.

Q. Right. What I am getting at, to be short, Mr. Gelb, is did Mr. Jamal's appellate Counsel inform the Pennsylvania Supreme Court about what happened on the night of December 9th, 1981 on the streets of Philadelphia at 4:00 a.m. in just two paragraphs?

A. Ahh, in the statement of the case, that's correct.

Q. That's all?

Page 268.

A. That's correct.

MR. WEINGLASS: I have no further questions.

- - - - -

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Mr. Gelb, was Counsel's statement of the case sufficient for the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania to accept the brief and to independently review the evidence and form their own opinion as to what happened at 4:00 a.m. on December 9th of 1981 on the streets of Philadelphia?

A. The brief was accepted for filing. The appeal was docketed and the matter was presented for oral argument before the Supreme Court. That's all I can say, I don't know what the Justices themselves decided. But --

Q. Do you not know that in every capital penalty case the Supreme Court of this State must enter upon an independent review of the evidence?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And in this case they came to a conclusion and filed an opinion?

A. The Court certainly filed an opinion, yes.

Page 269.

Q. And in it's opinion did it say under the Rules of Appellate Procedure, Counsel's statement of the case should have been five pages?

A. No.

Q. Four pages?

A. There was no statement whatsoever about the length of the statement of the case.

Q. And when Counsel in their supporting affidavit through a Mr. Steven W. Hawkins says that appellate Counsel filed no statement of the facts, I assume he meant no statement of the case, that in fact was --

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection for what Counsel assumed. Improper form of the question.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Well, in Pennsylvania do they have a statement of the facts, sir?

A. My understanding of the Rules is that it is denominated statement of the case.

Q. So that the expert witness on behalf of the defense who filed his expert opinion as to what lawyers should do in capital penalty cases was not expert in Pennsylvania law?

A. I don't know whether he read the Rule recently, Mr. Grant. That's about all I could say: I don't know.

Page 270.

- - - - -

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Mr. Gelb, in your view, was two paragraphs indicating what happened on the night of December the 9th enough for the Court to make a review of the sufficiency of the evidence?

MR. GRANT: I would object, Your Honor. I think the Supreme Court has to decide that.

THE COURT: Yes. I will have to sustain that. I don't think anybody could second-guess the Supreme Court. What they said they said. They wrote an opinion.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor --

THE COURT: After all, he was only an attorney for five years. I don't think he could criticize what the Supreme Court has done. But they didn't think it was necessary. And as Counsel has brought out: The Supreme Court reviews the entire file, including all the testimony. They don't need counsel to tell them what the facts are.

Page 271.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yeah.

THE COURT: They could read it themselves.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Mr. Gelb, as an experienced counsel --

THE COURT: Well, he was not experienced, he was only assisting the appellate Counsel.

MR. WEINGLASS: He is now.

THE COURT: Well, but he wasn't then.

MR. WEINGLASS: But I am asking him about now.

THE COURT: Well, what happens today is a different story. The important thing is what happened back at that time.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, his opinion now, having read the brief, and having been shown two paragraphs indicating what happened on the night of December 9th, is that sufficient in his view in a death penalty case to inform the Court that has to make a review of the sufficiency of the evidence, or should there be more.

THE COURT: I don't think that's for him or anybody else.

MR. GRANT: He is incompetent to answer that.

Page 272.

THE COURT: That's for the Supreme Court to decide that.

MR. GRANT: With all due respect.

THE COURT: If they needed his help they would have asked for it. They don't need any help because they review the entire thing. They have all the notes of testimony, they have everything and they review it all. They don't need counsel down here, or me or you, to tell them what they need.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, in the last two-and-a-half days the Commonwealth's Counsel was invited to ask, and was allowed to ask, I should say, Mr. Jackson if in his view, in his view, his performance was effective.

THE COURT: Well, yes, because you were accusing him of being ineffective. That's okay. Are you accusing the Supreme Court of being ineffective?

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor is switching it around.

THE COURT: I am not switching anything. All I am saying to you is the Supreme Court in every capital case reviews the entire thing, including the notes of testimony.

MR. WEINGLASS: And I --

THE COURT: And for anybody here to say they didn't have enough, Counsel should have done more to inform them -- what more could Counsel do? I don't care if Counsel gives them 10 pages, they are still going to review the notes on their own and make their own decision. And that's exactly what the Supreme Court does.

MR. WEINGLASS: We would like --

THE COURT: So for you or me or anybody to say they didn't have enough, sure they had enough: They had the record, which they reviewed.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. In your view, Mr. Gelb --

THE COURT: Not my view, that is the view of the Supreme Court.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am about to ask Mr. Gelb another question.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. In your view does appellate counsel have an obligation to direct the Supreme Court in their written papers to areas of the record that would favor their client?

Page 274.

MR. GRANT: I object. I object, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Yes, because even if you don't, in this case they looked at it on their own. The Supreme Court brought up issues that weren't raised.

MR. WEINGLASS: What we are talking about is the obligation of appellate counsel, that is the issue.

THE COURT: I am talking about --

MR. WEINGLASS: The issue before the Court is the obligation of appellate counsel.

THE COURT: No, it doesn't make any difference. Because regardless of what the appellate counsel does, if the Supreme Court reviews the entire file on it's own, it makes no difference. And if they make a ruling on any issue, that's it.

MR. WEINGLASS: But that is totally reducing the role of appellate counsel.

THE COURT: No.

MR. WEINGLASS: What we are concerned about here is what did appellate Counsel do or what did appellate Counsel not do. And what I am asking the witness as appellate Counsel, or assisting appellate Counsel, is whether or not in his opinion he had an obligation to inform the Court --

Page 275.

THE COURT: Wait awhile.

MR. WEINGLASS: -- as extensively as possible.

THE COURT: Counselor, he had no obligation to inform anybody. That was the responsibility of the appellate Counsel who was appointed. He wasn't appointed. He was merely assisting that Counsel.

MR. WEINGLASS: And I want to ask him, looking at the final product, two paragraphs in a brief setting forth what happened on the night of December 9th, in his view was that an adequate performance.

THE COURT: Yes, but you would have to ask that of the appellate Counsel. He was merely assisting. He looked at whatever they gave him to do, and that's all.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, you are blocking me.

THE COURT: I am not blocking you. He is not in a position to make that decision: He was not the appellate Counsel.

Page 276.

MR. WEINGLASS: He is an experienced appellate counsel who could give us the benefit of an opinion on what is produced in the brief.

THE COURT: I don't think we need his opinion. The Supreme Court could give you their opinion on it.

MR. WEINGLASS: Then I will desist from any further questioning.

MR. GRANT: As will I, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right, you are excused, Counselor.

Anybody else, Counsel?

Anything else?

MR. WEINGLASS: No.

THE COURT: Who do we have for tomorrow?

MR. WEINGLASS: We are going to start --

THE COURT: Do we have a list? Give them the list so --

MR. WEINGLASS: I can read it, it is short, Judge.

THE COURT: What's that?

MR. WEINGLASS: It is a short list but a long day. The first witness will be Mr. Gary

Page 277.

Wakshul.

THE COURT: Yes, you better get him in the morning because he has to go for physical therapy.

MR. GRANT: Is that it?

MR. WEINGLASS: No, the next witness will be Robert Greer. Next witness will be Joseph McGill.

MR. GRANT: Well, we don't know that. We know that there's been a motion to preclude. That there's been a failure to offer proof, an offer of proof with specificity and exactitude. And they have declined to respond to any of those requests. Therefore, I still have a motion pending before Your Honor to preclude his testimony at all.

THE COURT: Did he file it with me?

MR. GRANT: I am sure he didn't, Your Honor. Oh, did I file a formal motion to preclude?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. GRANT: Well, they haven't formally said we now call Joseph McGill.

THE COURT: Oh, okay.

MR. GRANT: In any event, I look at this as akin to the subpoenaing of the Governor of Pennsylvania and the presiding Judge of the homicide calendar room: Nothing more than a fishing expedition and nothing less without an offer of proof. So at this point, Your Honor, we have two witnesses scheduled for tomorrow and they don't appear to me that they will take all day, based on anticipated cross-examination.

Page 278.

THE COURT: Okay. Could we notify...

THE COURT OFFICER: Who do we want to notify, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Wakshul, 3797. That we will take him first thing tomorrow morning.

THE COURT OFFICER: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Then you will have Robert Greer here?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT: Then we have the issue with Joseph McGill.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

MR. GRANT: I think we should decide that now so we don't have to inconvenience Mr. McGill, and we could schedule another witness if they are not going to provide the necessary proofs. And Your Honor will have to rule on the preclusion.

THE COURT: I told him to give you these proofs.

Will you, please. We will always have this problem if you don't do that.

MR. GRANT: I noticed that Counsel has resumed his seat so I assume that he is not going to address this issue. I would move to quash Mr. McGill's subpoena.

THE COURT: Would you please give him that information.

MR. WEINGLASS: I'm sorry?

THE COURT: Would you please give him the information he is requesting.

MR. WEINGLASS: Of why we are offering Mr. McGill?

THE COURT: Joseph McGill, yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, Joseph McGill was the Assistant District Attorney who prosecuted this case. He provided the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania with an affidavit in which he set forth his conduct during the selection of the Jury indicating the racial makeup of the Jury. We've had a lot of testimony about this. We've heard from Mr. Jackson on this. You've heard from Mr. Gelb on this. You received an affidavit from Mr. Jackson. Tomorrow there will be an affidavit from Mr. McGill which he filed with the Supreme Court, and the brief in which we feel Mr. McGill was a party to a process that misrepresented to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court by some 30 percent the pattern of racial exclusion which the Commonwealth engaged in in picking this Jury. We intend to question him on that.

We intend to question him on his involvement with Officer Wakshul and his failure, indeed his refusal to make Officer Wakshul available when he was asked. Mr. Jackson testified under oath to this Court that in his experience district attorneys make police officers available. But when he asked Mr. McGill for Officer Wakshul, the rules changed and Mr. McGill did not make Officer Wakshul available. In fact, reported he was on vacation.

We want to talk to Mr. McGill about the materials that were made available to him from police sources drawn from files on Mr. Jamal of a political nature. And that he used that information in his cross-examination of Mr. Jamal. And he also used information from the Federal Bureau of Investigation and/or the Civil Affairs Bureau of the Philadelphia Police Department in his cross-examination of Sonia Sanchez.

We want to question Mr. McGill about a document known as the Westerman MacKuch -- M-A-C-K-U-C-H -- document which was in the Medical Examiner's file indicating that another police officer had shot Mr. Jamal. And that that document was somehow removed from the Medical Examiner's Office and the file. And that Mr. Jackson, as he testified to here on the stand, got that document from another source, indicating that somebody was removing documents from the prosecution's or the police files, and that even Mr. McGill didn't see all the documents. Because according to Mr. Jackson, Mr. McGill acknowledged to Mr. Jackson that he had never seen the Westerman MacKuch document until Mr. Jackson showed it to him.

So we want to show through Mr. McGill that there was some doctoring of files here. There was some purposeful omission of documents that were not turned over to the defense. A very crucial position, as Your Honor knows, under Brady versus Maryland, which we are going to explore in greater depth. I want to talk to Mr. McGill about this omission.

He launched a mission in the middle of the trial. And the mission was to bring in Debbie Kordansky for the defense. And in launching that mission he sent out his two aides, Detective Thomas and I believe a Detective Burton. And they met with Debbie Kordansky. And through Mr. McGill, they reported back to the Court. I want to know from Mr. McGill why Debbie Kordansky then wasn't produced by his mission. What happened that kept her out of here and turned her against the defense.

I want to question Mr. McGill about his own trial preparation. And his own questioning of some of the witnesses he produced.

Your Honor will recall that Mr. McGill was the prosecutor in a case called Commonwealth versus Connor -- C-O-N-N-O-R -- where a man in this City was convicted of murder for sexually assaulting and shotgunning a young woman on top of an apartment house and throwing her body off from the roof, I believe. And Mr. McGill prosecuted that case, he handled the police witnesses. And Mr. Connor was convicted and he did 12 years in prison. And at the end of 12 years, the District Attorney's Office asked the Court to release Mr. Connor because the victim in that case had, it turns out, was not killed by the shotgun, but she was stabbed, I believe, 170 times.

THE COURT: That came out during the course of the trial.

MR. WEINGLASS: And that the --

THE COURT: Because I was the trial Judge in that case.

MR. WEINGLASS: So you know that a man was convicted, did 12 years, and then had to be released.

THE COURT: And who released him?

MR. WEINGLASS: The District Attorney's Office of Philadelphia.

THE COURT: No, who gave him a new trial?

MR. WEINGLASS: I don't believe -- I don't believe he got a new trial, I think he was released.

Page 284.

MR. GRANT: He got a new trial.

THE COURT: I ordered a new trial. So when you talk about that case you are talking about me. I know about that case.

MR. WEINGLASS: I know, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Nobody was slow to move. But go ahead. Nothing was thrown from the roof.

MR. WEINGLASS: But she was killed on the roof.

THE COURT: Anything else?

MR. WEINGLASS: I want to talk to him about his preparation here, and did he exercise the kind of caution that a District Attorney ought to exercise when he has a statement from a witness, a police officer, on the night of the event that says the male Negro made no comments, and at the same time he is putting on witnesses who are going to testify about belatedly hearing alleged comments. So I think that there is a great deal in that area that we are going to cover.

But I want to be clear. We want to specifically go into Batson with him. We want to go specifically into the problem around Wakshul. We want to specifically go into the question of his involvement with Westerman and MacKuch. And the fact that he didn't have in his Medical Examiner's report materials that were circuitously given to Mr. Jackson. And how was the turnovers handled in this case. And the documentary materials gathered and safeguarded.

So we have to cover those areas with Mr. McGill and those areas do pertain to the issues raised in the Petition. They involve Batson, they involve new evidence. They involve questions of Brady. They involve questions of prosecutorial misconduct.

MR. GRANT: Now you see why we wanted an offer of proof? Because really all they want to do is they want to try Mr. McGill for trying Mr. Jamal. And they would like to retry the whole case here if they could.

First of all, if they want to bring in a person who is going to tell them what went through Debbie Kordansky's mind when Debbie Kordansky said to Mr. Jackson I don't want to come in and get involved in this case, why don't they bring in Debbie Kordansky? That is the horse's mouth. Why are you going to bring in the trainer of the horse or the feeder of the horse or the groom of the horse? Debbie Kordansky is available to them. I would ask to preclude testimony from Mr. McGill regarding that person when they have that person available to them. Number one.

Number two, they want to know what involvement Mr. McGill had with Gary Wakshul. One thing they could do is go up to the sixth floor and bring him down here, like they failed to do all these days we have been in Court and hesitate and seem apprehensive about doing. They could do that. And I ask that their offer of proof be rejected.

THE COURT: Who do you mean, Wakshul?

MR. GRANT: Gary Wakshul.

THE COURT: He is coming in tomorrow morning.

MR. GRANT: Yes, and I am sure that the information they need could be gotten from him on the witness stand under oath and they don't have to have it secondhand from Mr. McGill. I would ask Your Honor to preclude their inquiry into that area.

Page 287.

Materials were made available to him of a political nature. I don't know what political nature means, but the Supreme Court has ruled as to whether or not cross-examination may occur when a person gives character witness testimony and it is discovered that that person has praise or even in some way encouraged other people to kill police officers. That issue has been decided and it's moot at this point and it is not the subject of Post-Conviction Relief here in this case.

Counsel next cites -- I would ask that Your Honor limit them in that regard and preclude testimony of that nature: It's already been decided.

Whether the Federal Bureau of Investigation, over which we have no control, and the Civil Affairs Bureau of the Philadelphia Police Department, contributed information or evidence to Mr. McGill, that's of course certainly... interesting. But it never entered into any trial in which Mr. Jamal was tried by any jury in this County and therefore it's totally irrelevant. I don't think that should be the subject of an inquiry.

Page 288.

And this Westerman MacKuch document: I think what you may recall from this trial, Your Honor, is that Mr. Jackson, when he began to put on the defense case at the end of the prosecution's case-in-chief, he asked Your Honor for permission to do a preview of testimony of some people that he may want to put on and may not. But he wanted it on the record so that he could assess whether or not they'd be good for him. And he brought in Sergeant Westerman and he brought in an investigator from the Medical Examiner's Office. And at the time when a murder occurs, the Medical Examiner calls over to Homicide and says what occurred in this case and they try to get a background scenario so they could tell the doctor so as they investigate and internally examine the body they could make some sense and put into context what they are seeing.

Now, it just so happened that as soon as Mr. McGill -- it is in the record -- turned over the M.E.'s file, everything that he had to Mr. Jackson, the next day's story in the press was other cop shoots Jamal, police attempt to assassinate Jamal. That was brought to Your Honor's attention; there was discussion between yourself, Mr. McGill and Mr. Jackson. How, hmm, convenient it was that on the day after he gets it, this is released to the press.

Obviously, Mr. Jackson had that document and that's the subject that they are trying to raise now, that he didn't in fact have a document. He says I did not reveal any of that stuff, Judge, and I did receive the materials but I didn't reveal it. Nevertheless, let me cross-examine these people, maybe I could put that evidence on in my case anyway. That's what happened with respect to that. That was Mr. Jackson's doing. Why should Mr. McGill have to answer for that? I would ask that you preclude inquiry in that area.

Purposeful omission of documents not turned over to the defense. There has to be some specificity and some showing made that he in fact omitted to turn over documents and what they were. They have been saying this about everybody in this whole town since they got here and they have yet to offer proof of anything. And I think the reason they don't want to have to prove it by putting on evidence, witnesses on to premise their assumptions before they get to ask other people about them, is because they don't have any.

I would ask that they be precluded from asking anything about discovery. Discovery had been granted. Mr. Jackson admitted he got full discovery. He had the entire M.E. files. He had the documents. If there was anything missing from the M.E.'s documents it was because Mr. Jackson's confidential informants, or whatever they were, purloined documents that the D.A. doesn't even have. So Mr. McGill has to answer for that too? I would suggest that's totally inappropriate.

The question about Mr. McGill's own trial preparation. I don't even know what that means. Were you prepared to try this case Mr. McGill and if you weren't why not. That's ludicrous, Judge. Since when do they have the right to bring in anybody -- are you prepared to sit and preside in this case, why can't they subpoena you and ask you that? What is the relevance of that?

THE COURT: I don't know.

MR. GRANT: Commonwealth versus

Page 291.

Connor. What they want to do, Judge, is bring up some other murder case in which the Commonwealth elected to release this individual, after the granting of a new trial, not because it was tried by Mr. McGill; A, and not because he was innocent, B, but the person who may have been involved -- and there was some question about it -- was dead, and we could never prove that that dead person committed the crime because we had no evidence against him. And out of an abundance of caution, because another person in our Office 15 years later decides that we think that it is a fair thing to do since we have some suspicion, but this man was convicted duly by a jury, perhaps we will try to be fair in this situation and release the individual because the other individual who may be a suspect if he is convicted is dead, and we can't prove that either, so now they want to take that and they want to tell Mr. McGill you are the D.A. who first prosecuted the guy and convicted him. Well, what's that stand for? It stands for nothing, except that because somebody tries to do what they think is arguably a fair procedure -- and I am sure Mr. McGill did not agree with that -- that that's to be used at a PCRA for Mr. Jamal? I'm not getting that. And the question is did he exercise proper caution in preparing this case.

Your Honor, I would suggest to Your Honor and submit that if they want to inquire of Mr. McGill with respect to the Batson issue, I think they should be given full latitude so this claim could be litigated once and for all, whatever their additional evidence is. I think everything else they have mentioned -- Gary Wakshul could be gotten from Gary Wakshul. Debbie Kordansky can be gotten from Debbie Kordansky. And all the rest of this is a witch hunt and I would ask Your Honor to so find and preclude an inquiry in that regard.

MR. WEINGLASS: If I could just be a little more specific for the benefit of Counsel. When I asked about the preparation of, Mr. McGill's preparation, I want to inquire as to the following: Was he aware of the use of polygraphs in this investigation. We have evidence that it was used. And was it used selectively.

Two, was he aware of photo arrays used for purposes of identification. We have some indication it was used. We want to know from Mr. McGill if it was used.

Three, when he put Dr. Hoyer on the stand, who was the Medical Examiner, was he aware of the fact that Dr. Hoyer had found and so indicated on the Medical Examiner's report that Officer Faulkner was shot with a .44 caliber bullet, and that Mr. Jamal's alleged weapon was a .38 caliber.

Finally, did he know when he put Cynthia White on the stand what Veronica Jones testified to. Namely, that she was given the same offer that Cynthia White apparently was given by the police officers at the 6th precinct. And that is if she would turn against Mr. Jamal and offer testimony against him she could work her corner without fear of arrest.

So those are the specific areas. All of them deal with questions of Brady. All of them deal with questions of the prosecution having evidence of innocence and not turning it over. They deal with questions of bias in the investigation.

And I refer the Court to a very recent

Page 294.

United States Supreme Court's decision called Kyles, which came down maybe two months ago, indicating that if there is bias in the investigation, that's tantamount to a Brady violation.

So we would like to ask Mr. McGill these questions. And as the chief prosecutor of the case he is in a position to answer. Because he put the case together, he prepared the case, he either turned over or withheld information from the defense. He either knew of deals that were made with witnesses or he didn't know of deals that were made with witnesses and he should have known. And he either knew that Dr. Hoyer made an entry that was favorable to the defense and he chose not to bring that out in front of the Jury even though he called Dr. Hoyer for whatever reasons. But all of these areas impact the question of Brady. They impact the question of bias, in the investigation. They impact the issue of a fair trial. They impact on issues of depriving the Defendant of the opportunity to present a defense by not having Wakshul, by not having Debbie Kordansky. And they also impact Batson, which is the use of 11 peremptory challenges for racially-motivated reasons. All those reasons are essential for the testimony that Mr. McGill could offer on this record. And we ask that we have a full hearing and a complete hearing and an opportunity to present those matters on the record of this proceeding.

MR. GRANT: And that's what we anticipated happening when he gets on the stand: Oh, we have three more that we forgot to mention to you when we were first talking about what we were going to do with him.

Number 1, polygraph. I subpoenaed a person who could answer that question directly for him. And that is the individual he claimed in his affidavit was given a polygraph. He tells the male not to come to Court. I asked for a bench warrant and he comes and begs and pleads on the man's behalf. Do you want to know about the polygraph? Ask Dessie Hightower. He signed an affidavit. Number one.

Number two, in the State of Pennsylvania, unless you are the defendant and you are given a polygraph examination, there is no such discovery on polygraph examinations because it's not discoverable. And I could tell you without being the trial counsel in this case whether a polygraph exam was given, and I certainly don't have to. So you don't need Joe McGill to tell you that information. You have the witness, you have the affiant. He signed his affidavit, he claims he was given one. Put him on the stand.

As to Cynthia White, that she was allowed to work her corner without fear of arrest if she would just give testimony favorable to the Commonwealth, this was also extended to another witness, allegedly. I think if Counsel does his research on the case and looks at Cynthia's arrest record, that she was arrested not even 96 hours later in the same area, and that she was rearrested again five days after that for the same crime that he is claiming she has immunity from us for. That is totally ludicrous and he knows it. And he could prove it is ludicrous. But he will never bring it out unless I bring it out, so I am bringing it out. That's ridiculous.

And as to Dr. Hoyer: Since Mr. Jackson had more Medical Examiner case files than Mr. McGill, and he is Counsel for Mr. Jamal, why isn't he bringing out, if he thinks it is evidence favorable to the Defendant, that information? Your Honor offered to him, when he was going into areas, going into qualifying him as a ballistician, as a neutron activation analyst, gunshot residue analyst, you said Mr. Jackson, he was offered for cause of death, manner of death. If you want to call him as your witness, then you can call him as your witness and qualify him in all these areas. But at this time he is not qualified to give those opinions. Mr. Jackson declined to bring him in and put him on for those reasons. And I think Mr. Jackson knew very well why. The examination came out, he measured the bullets. He doesn't give calibration but he measured the bullets and those bullets happened to be within a millimeter of exactly what the ballisticians found, and they weighed within milligrams of what the ballisticians found them to weigh. And Mr. Jackson knew that if he tried to make that an issue as Counsel tries to make it an issue, he was going to eat it on the witness stand from both Dr. Hoyer, Larry Paul the ballistician, and

Page 298.

William Carlin, the person who performed the tests.

So Counsel could bring that out by bringing in Dr. Hoyer, Dessie Hightower, and he could bring in the arrest record of Cynthia White to show how much latitude she got from the Commonwealth.

Therefore, I would ask you to preclude those areas. And tomorrow they will come up with some new areas when he is on the stand they will give me. That's why I am asking Your Honor to specifically and with exactitude limit the areas that they will be inquiring into with a person who is not an affiant, who is not named to support any of their filings, and he has not made any showing up to now as to any showing as to what he would prove. Thank you.

THE COURT: I think you have to lay your foundation first. He is giving you the opportunity to call these other witnesses. I think that's the way you should handle it. We will keep McGill in abeyance for the time being.

Anything else?

MR. GRANT: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Well, is there anyone that you need the District Attorney to help you to bring in tomorrow? Besides Wakshul and Greer.

Page 299.

MR. GRANT: That is certainly not going to take an entire day, Your Honor. And I would ask --

THE COURT: That's what I am saying.

MR. GRANT: I would ask who else is coming in.

THE COURT: Do you have somebody else that you need help?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, we can use your assistance to bring in Officer Trombetta, who was subpoenaed today, I believe.

MR. GRANT: Yes.

THE COURT: Trombetta.

MR. GRANT: I never heard of him either. Didn't get any affidavit from him, no offer of proof for him either.

THE COURT: You see why when you don't do these things --

MR. GRANT: Because they don't want to face the music that they don't have a case, and they don't want to put the evidence on to --

MR. WEINGLASS: Counsel should read the music. Trombetta, for Counsel's information, was Wakshul's partner. And he was there that night and he was in the hospital and he was standing next to Mr. Jamal and he didn't hear a thing. And we want to put him on the stand.

MR. GRANT: Well, I guess you are going to have to serve him yourself and I would object to you doing this also.

MR. WEINGLASS: This shows you how bona fide the offer of assistance is. When we take him up on the offer we get you're going to have to serve him yourself, Counsel. Same thing that happened to Mr. Jackson at the trial.

MR. GRANT: Judge, if they wanted to bring in witnesses that they have listed, instead of everybody in the world that comes to their mind, instead of putting on those claims that they have made to the world right there -- they have all these people available -- we will go find any of these people which they want to find, of course, but these people. We are not interested in pursuing their wild goose chases around the City for the --

MR. WEINGLASS: I want to put on the man standing next to Mr. Jamal when others said he made a statement. And that man, who is a police officer in the City of Philadelphia, said that Mr. Jamal made no statement. That is as specific as you can get.

THE COURT: Okay, serve him. Did you serve him with a subpoena?

MR. WEINGLASS: We did serve him. We are asking for the District Attorney to see that he is brought in.

THE COURT: Is he still a police officer?

MR. GRANT: I don't know anything about it, Judge. But just because they want to serve Judge Paul Ribner and bring him in, or the Governor of Pennsylvania, bring them in, I am not going to help them do that. Because that is ridiculous and they don't have a right to do it. They have no basis in law or in fact for doing it. He is not one of their affiants. They have never used him as a witness. But what they want now, they want to avoid doing what they have to do. They want to keep inconveniencing witnesses. Everyday there is going to be somebody different. Anybody but those people. And that's why I am not going to assist him in doing that, Judge.

THE COURT: Why don't we get the people that you say you have all these affidavits for?

MR. WEINGLASS: We are proceeding in order. Tomorrow morning, police. Tomorrow morning we are hearing from Officer Gary Wakshul.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. WEINGLASS: It seems to us that in the interest of an orderly proceeding, the next witness or the witness after that should be his partner. That's the way to proceed. We've subpoenaed the man. Now we've asked for the D.A., who has offered his assistance, to, quote, to use their street vernacular, to put up or shut up. And now they very clearly are shutting up because they don't want to put up. They don't want Trombetta, who they don't even know who he is, but they certainly don't want him near this Courtroom testifying under oath. That's very obvious.

MR. GRANT: He still hasn't told you who is next besides Wakshul and Greer.

MR. WEINGLASS: Trombetta.

Page 303.

MR. GRANT: I am going to object and move to preclude whoever,this person is.

MR. WEINGLASS: Counsel is now moving to preclude people he doesn't know anything about.

THE COURT: Because you just told him at the last minute. How is he going to be prepared to preclude him before?

MR. WEINGLASS: Anybody who spent five minutes with this record --

THE COURT: You have 19 issues here and you have a lot of affidavits. Why don't we get some of those people in first?

MR. WEINGLASS: Oh, Your Honor has heard from them. You have heard from Anthony Jackson, affidavit number one.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Tomorrow you will here from Robert Greer, affidavit number two. We are taking them in order. And we are taking the issues in --

THE COURT: Who is affidavit three?

MR. WEINGLASS: Different issue. We will call him within two or three days as we get to that issue.

Page 304.

THE COURT: Wait awhile. But you said he is number three. Why don't --

MR. WEINGLASS: No.

THE COURT: Are they --

MR. WEINGLASS: I am not saying he is number three. I am saying --

THE COURT: I asked you who is number three?

MR. WEINGLASS: He is in the Petition, the third affidavit addressing a different issue than the first two.

MR. GRANT: George Fassnacht.

THE COURT: Oh, Fassnacht. Why don't we call Fassnacht?

MR. GRANT: He has been on my subpoena on call and he is awaiting a call from us. That's why if we don't have a full schedule tomorrow I will be asking to put him on the stand.

THE COURT: I asked you for this. And you said you want to go in that order you put them down. He's number three. Why don't we call him tomorrow?

MR. WEINGLASS: We are dealing with the order correctly, issue by issue. He addresses a different issue. I am explaining to the Court that tomorrow's issue is --

THE COURT: Well, you told me that you are going according to the affidavits.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, I never said that, you mis heard me. Your Honor mis hears me all the time. There is something wrong in here.

THE COURT: Well, there is something wrong that you are not being very explicit, Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am as explicit as possible. The Court has aversion --

THE COURT: You are not.

MR. WEINGLASS: The Court has a certain aversion which is obvious in the way you selectively hear things.

THE COURT: I told you in the very beginning: Give me a list of all your witnesses that you intend to call. Give him the affidavits of these people so that he could then be prepared to cross-examine them. You are not doing that, Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: You have the list.

THE COURT: I don't have any list. You never gave me a list.

Page 306.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, that's --

THE COURT: Don't tell me you gave me a list.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor sat on the bench and read from two lists we gave you.

MR. GRANT: Neither one of which was accurate and neither one of which any of the witnesses showed up on any of those days. And I am tired of getting those bogus lists from him.

MR. WEINGLASS: Counsel should take a rest.

THE COURT: Get a list by tomorrow morning so we know where we are going. Get that list together.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, may I bring in witnesses tomorrow? Since he only has two and it is only going to take us to noon. Then what will we do?

THE COURT: If he doesn't have any witnesses I will listen to your witnesses too.

MR. GRANT: Thank you.

THE COURT CRIER: This Court stands recessed until 9:30 tomorrow morning.

MR. WILLIAMS: Good morning, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Good morning.

MR. WILLIAMS: The Petitioner Mr. Jamal calls to the stand Gary Wakshul.

- - - - - -

Gary Wakshul, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

- - - - - -

DIRECT EXAMINATION

- - - - - -

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Sir, let me make sure I pronounce your name correctly. It's Wake-shul?

A. That is correct.

Q. Good morning.

A. Good morning.

Q. Now, Mr. Wakshul, you are appearing here under subpoena?

Page 4.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

A. That is correct.

Q. And were you subpoenaed by, which party were you subpoenaed by?

A. The subpoena didn't say but I am assuming the defense.

Q. Now, you understand the nature of these proceedings, do you?

A. Ahh, only what I have heard about them; I don't know the exact nature, no.

Q. All right. Can you tell us what is your understanding of these proceedings?

MR. GRANT: Objection, Your Honor. That's irrelevant.

THE COURT: Sustained. Just ask him questions.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Do you understand, Mr. Wakshul, that Mr. Jamal has filed a Petition for a new trial?

A. I had heard that.

Q. Now, you were a police officer when Police Officer Faulkner was killed?

A. That's correct.

Q. Did you know Police Officer Faulkner?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you work in the same district as Police Officer Faulkner?

A. Yes.

Q. And that is the 6th District?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you friends with Police Officer Faulkner?

A. I would say so.

Q. And I take it that you were upset when Officer Faulkner, when you learned of Officer Faulkner's death?

A. Very.

Q. Is it safe to say, Mr. Wakshul, that you hope that the Commonwealth prevails in this proceeding?

MR. GRANT: Objection, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. WILLIAMS: I think it goes to his bias.

THE COURT: Not necessarily. Whether or not anybody wins depends on the Court's decision, so.

MR. WILLIAMS: I'm sorry?

THE COURT: I don't think it has anything to do with bias, Counsel.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Now, Mr. Wakshul, have you and I ever met?

A. Yes.

Page 6.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

Q. And we met in the witness room back there?

A. That's correct.

Q. Did we engage in a conversation?

A. A short one, yes.

Q. And did I introduce myself as a member of the defense team?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you recall I attempted to talk with you about what I would like you to testify about?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you recall what your reaction was to my request?

A. I said, I believe, something to the effect well, we '11 discuss it in the Courtroom.

Q. In other words, you refused to discuss what you would talk about here in Court in the witness room?

A. I made a decision at that point not to discuss it with anyone, yes.

Q. By the way, have you talked with any member of the prosecution team?

A. I spoke to Mr. Grant on the phone.

Q. Okay, when was that?

A. It would be a couple weeks ago.

Q. And was anybody present on your end of the

Page 7.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

phone?

A. I don't understand.

Q. Were you talking alone or were there other people in the room when you were talking?

A. Umm, I think Mr. Witcher was there.

Q. And who is he?

A. He is a detective.

Q. Where were you when this phone conversation took place?

A. I was in Courtroom 602.

Q. Okay. What did you and Mr. Grant talk about?

A. Umm, Mr. Grant spoke to me about the case, how that the defense would probably want to call me, and he wanted to make sure that I was going to be there one way or the other. And that was the gist of the conversation. It was very short, that I recall.

Q. Was there any discussion about the substance of your testimony, or possible testimony?

A. No.

Q. Was there any discussion about any police reports or interviews that you gave back in 1981 and 1982?

A. Not in that conversation, no.

Q. Was there any conversation?

A. I don't recall if I mentioned to Mr. Grant or

Page 8.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

he mentioned to me anything about them. There was a point where I think Detective Witcher asked me if I could stop at Mr. Grant's office and look at those -- or review those reports. And I don't think that was the same day, I think that was a little later. And I did go over there. Mr. Grant was not there.

Q. So you went to the District Attorney's Office?

A. That is correct.

Q. And did you in fact review some reports?

A. Yes.

Q. What reports?

A. Three statements.

Q. What statements did you review?

A. They were three statements, two of them taken by Homicide, I believe, and one by Internal Affairs.

Q. And those statements were from who?

A. Myself.

Q. Did you recognize those statements when you reviewed them?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you discuss with anyone from the District Attorney's Office the substance of those statements after you had reviewed them?

A. Are you talking about Mr. Grant or an attorney?

Page 9.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

Q. Any member of the --

A. Nobody that I know from the District Attorney's Office, no.

Q. Well, let me ask it this way. Did you discuss what you had just reviewed in the District Attorney's Office with anyone?

A. Well, when Mr. Witcher was there and he asked me if I had any questions and I said no, and that was the only discussion we had on it.

Q. Do you know -- what is it, Richer?

A. Witcher.

Q. Do you know what role Mr. Witcher plays in the defense of this case from the Commonwealth's side?

A. I believe he's just assisting Mr. Grant in contacting people or moving things from one place to the other. I really don't have any other information on it.

Q. Did you discuss at all any aspect of your involvement in the investigation of the shooting death of Officer Faulkner with anyone from the Philadelphia Police Department?

A. Are you talking in this period of time or originally?

Q. Yes, in this period of time?

A. No.

Page 10.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

Q. I will go back to 1981 and '2 later.

A. No.

Q. Now, Mr. Wakshul, when did you join the Philadelphia police force?

A. August 22nd, 1977.

Q. And what is your current occupation?

A. I'm a Tipstaff 2 for the Court of Common Pleas.

Q. Can you explain that to an out-of-towner?

A. Court Crier.

Q. Okay, Court Crier. So at the time of this, of the shooting and then the subsequent investigation, you were a member of the Philadelphia police force for under five years?

A. That's correct.

Q. Can you tell us why you left the police force?

A. I was dismissed from the Police Department.

MR. GRANT: Objection. Move to strike.

THE WITNESS: May I explain?

THE COURT: He's already said it, it's a little late.

THE WITNESS: May I explain my answer, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Sure. If you want to give

Page 11.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

an explanation, go ahead.

THE WITNESS: I was dismissed for an incident that did not occur. I have subsequently gone through court and the Pennsylvania Supreme Court and awarded my job back.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. And when will you rejoin the police force?

A. I, right now I am in negotiations with the City Solicitor's Office, I believe, for the actual settlement, so I have no idea what the final outcome will be.

Q. So it is your desire to be hired by the Commonwealth as a police officer again?

MR. GRANT: Objection.

THE COURT: Could you rephrase the question somehow.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Do you wish again to become a police officer?

MR. GRANT: I have an objection, Your Honor. I thought we were dealing with the events that transpired in 1983. '81, I'm sorry.

THE COURT: What is the purpose of that?

MR. WILLIAMS: The purpose, again,

Page 12.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

Your Honor, goes to -- I hesitate to explain myself in front of the witness -- but it does go to the bias issue.

THE COURT: All right. I will let it in.

MR. WILLIAMS: You will allow it?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. WILLIAMS: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE WITNESS: Could you repeat?

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Do you wish to again become an employee -- I'm sorry -- a police officer here in the State of Pennsylvania?

A. At this point it is not my intention to rejoin the Police Department.

Q. I thought you had litigated the matter and for purposes of becoming a police officer?

A. No, I only litigated the matter to get back my status for my years of service, retirement and back pay and things like that.

Q. I see. Now, between August of 1977 when you joined the force, and 1982, had you ever taken a suspect into custody?

MR. GRANT: Objection, Your Honor. In this case he took no one into custody and I

Page 13.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

think these questions are all irrelevant to his lack of testifying at the trial but giving three statements to the investigating detectives.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, I will make it abundantly clear. I will connect this up with future questions. This is merely foundational questions, questions that I will ask leading to questions I will ask later. It's merely background and foundation.

THE COURT: All right, I will let him do it and later on I will strike it if it's not relevant, okay.

MR. GRANT: Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. WILLIAMS: Thank you.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. So the question again, Mr. Wakshul, is between 1977 when you joined the police force, and 1982, had you ever been involved in the taking into custody of an individual?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you receive training in that regard?

A. That's a little broad a subject.

Q. Let me put it this way. If someone were to ask me to take someone into custody I wouldn't know how to do it. When you joined the police force did somebody instruct you on the proper procedures in taking an individual into custody?

Page 14.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

A. I was trained in the Police Academy in the use of handcuffs and of positioning of bodies when you take them into custody. The only experience that I learned it from was actual participation in arrests and those types of things. So I had some training in the Police Academy and I had some on-the-job training as far as taking people into custody.

Q. And between 1977 and 1982, had you ever in that time period been privy to a suspect or an individual in custody having made a statement?

A. What do you mean by statement?

Q. Well, a suspect confesses or utters a remark or anything of that sort, has that ever happened?

A. I have, I have had people utter a remark, yes.

Q. Have you ever had any individual in custody literally confess to a crime between the dates of 1977 and 1981?

A. One person.

Q. Now going back to the Police Academy: Have you ever received training in how to treat and record statements that are taken by people in custody?

(Pause.)

A. I don't recall if I ever had any such

Page 15.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

training.

Q. In your experience, have you learned how to treat and record statements by persons who are in custody?

THE WITNESS: Could you repeat that, please.

MR. GRANT: I would object unless that experience is limited to the time period from 1977 until 1981 when this event occurred.

MR. WILLIAMS: That's fine, Your Honor.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Yes. Between the time frame my brother at the bar here mentioned, 1977 and 1981, had you ever received any training or instruction or somehow learned through experience how to handle a statement that a suspect gives?

A. I don't believe there's any one policy. There are several methods of recording that if that's necessary. But I don't believe there's any one, set policy for it.

Q. Could you tell me what those methods are?

A. If I was the arresting officer I might, I might, if there was room, put something on a 48. Or more than likely I would tell it to a detective who

Page 16.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

was investigating any arrest. Or any subsequent investigation, or at the bar of the court.

Q. I'm sorry, what was the last?

A. Or at the bar of the Court.

Q. What is a 48?

A. A 48 is an incident report, it's the initial report done by a police officer.

Q. Now, as a young officer did you learn that statements by a suspect, especially when a suspect incriminates himself, could be valuable evidence in a prosecution?

A. Did I learn that?

Q. Yes.

A. No. But I understood that.

Q. You understood that. And can you make the distinction between learning and understanding? Because it's obvious, isn't it, that when somebody makes an incriminating remark it doesn't take police training to understand that that incriminating remark could be very important in the prosecution of that individual?

A. I'm sure it could be.

Q. And you would agree that it doesn't take any legal training to understand the importance of an incriminating remark by a suspect, right?

Page 17.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

A. I wouldn't necessarily agree with that, no.

Q. Do you think it does take legal training?

A. I think it takes a certain amount, yes.

Q. Okay. If you had a suspect in custody, and that suspect looked you in the eye and said officer, I just shot a man, wouldn't you think that it is obvious that that remark is important?

(Pause.)

A. Yes.

Q. And it wouldn't take three years and thousands and thousands of dollars of legal training to know that it's important, right?

A. I don't think it would. That particular statement.

Q. And you say that particular statement because when a person says officer, I shot that guy, it's a pretty stark statement, right?

A. By stark you mean?

Q. Readily understandable.

A. For the purposes of what you are saying, yes.

Q. Now, as a young officer you also learned, did you not, the significance of thorough and accurate police reports?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you explain to the Court why thorough and

Page 18.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

accurate police reports are important in your work as a police officer?

A. Well, for the administration of justice, to make sure that whatever information that you have is properly conveyed to the court or to whoever is going to be needing it.

Q. For the proper administration of justice it's important to have thorough and accurate police reports?

A. I would imagine so, yes.

Q. And because it's important for the proper administration of justice, when you were a young officer did you take the preparation of police reports and the assisting of others in preparing police reports seriously?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you understand between this time period of 1977 and '81 that police reports can be and in fact are used in criminal trials?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you understand between that time frame -- and so I won't encumber the record with this, when I'm questioning you I'm questioning you solely with respect to this time frame, you understand?

Page 19.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

A. Hmm-hmm.

Q. Okay. Did you understand that the prosecution, the Commonwealth uses police reports to prepare for trial?

A. Yes.

Q. And I take it in this time period before December 9th, 1981 you had been involved in other cases where you had to prepare police reports or you assisted others in preparing police reports? Right?

A. Yes, I've prepared police reports before that time.

Q. And you have been interviewed by investigators and detectives who subsequently then prepared police reports?

A. I would imagine so, yes.

Q. Now let's turn our attention to the early morning hours of December the 9th, 1981, okay. You indicated that you had about, you had over four years on the force?

A. I didn't think it was that long.

Q. Well, you said August of '77. Is my math incorrect? Four, yeah, a little over four years?

A. Yeah, you're right.

Q. And who was your partner?

A. Officer Steven Trombetta.

Page 20.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

Q. Now, in the early morning hours of December 9th, 1981, did you have occasion to be at Jefferson Hospital here in Philadelphia?

A. Yes.

Q. What was your assignment, Mr. Wakshul, at Jefferson Hospital?

A. I had transported Mr. Abu-Jamal to Jefferson Hospital under radio orders for examination.

Q. Radio orders for examination?

A. That is correct.

Q. What does that mean?

A. Ahh, we had Mr. Jamal in the back of our wagon, we were transporting him to Homicide when we received an order over Police Radio from CIl to take him to the hospital. So we changed our destination to the hospital, Jefferson Hospital, and took him inside for an examination.

Q. What was your understanding while you were transporting Mr. Jamal to the hospital as to Mr. Jamal's purpose for being in police custody, or reason for being in police custody?

A. I believed that he was a suspect in the matter, or under investigation in the matter of the shooting of Officer Faulkner.

Q. So he was a suspect in the killing of a

Page 21.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

brother officer?

A. That's correct.

Q. And that, not to put it too finely, is a very, very serious matter?

A. Yes.

Q. Probably the most serious matter that a police officer could be involved in; am I right about that?

A. I would imagine so.

Q. And when you got to the hospital, Jefferson Hospital, what was your assignment?

A. My assignment was as I stated: I was to stay with him until released. And that's about what I did.

Q. Was that also Officer Trombetta's assignment?

A. Transport and guarding, yes.

Q. And you had to guard Mr. Jamal because, as you said, he was a suspect in a very, very serious matter?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you take that job seriously, Mr. Wakshul?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did it appear that your partner Officer Trombetta, did it appear that he took it seriously?

MR. GRANT: Objection. Calls for

Page 22.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

speculation.

MR. WILLIAMS: I am asking for his appearance, Your Honor. If he doesn't know he doesn't know.

MR. GRANT: How does a person appear serious about their job?

THE COURT: You have to rephrase your question somehow.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, Your Honor appears serious about your job.

THE COURT: I don't know how you would appear serious.

MR. WILLIAMS: Very well.

THE COURT: I don't know that there is any facial expressions or any other gestures. You have to save that for Officer Trombetta.

MR. WILLIAMS: Very well.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Now, besides Officer Trombetta who was your partner, who else was with you while you were guarding Mr. Jamal?

A. I couldn't tell you. I wasn't with him a hundred percent of the time. And there were several other officers there, none of whom I recall.

Q. Do you recall if a police officer by the name of Officer Bell -- B-E-L-L -- was present while you were guarding Mr. Jamal?

A. I have no recollection of him being there.

Q. Do you know what Officer Bell looks like?

A. Yes.

Q. So if he had been there you would have recognized him?

A. I might have recognized him but I don't recall him being there.

Q. Let me make sure we are clear. Back in the early morning hours of December 9th, 1981, you were familiar with the appearance of Officer Bell?

A. Yes.

Q. And if Officer Bell had appeared in front of your you would have recognized him as Officer Bell?

A. I would have recognized him.

Q. As Officer Bell?

A. As Officer Bell.

Q. When you were with Mr. Jamal, were there hospital personnel present?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember how many?

A. No idea.

Q. Do you remember who they were?

A. No, I do not.

Page 24.

Q. Do you remember the gender of the hospital personnel?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Do you remember if there were any female hospital personnel?

A. No.

Q. Were there any security guards from the hospital among those hospital personnel?

A. I couldn't tell you to this day who was there or how many people of any sort.

Q. Do you recall if any were security guards?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Now, while you were at the hospital guarding Mr. Jamal, you were fully capable of performing your job?

A. I don't understand the question.

Q. Well, you weren't under the influence of any medication or drugs or alcohol or anything like that?

A. No.

Q. That would affect your ability to perform as a police officer?

A. I was not under the influence of any substance at that time.

Q. And so you were mentally alert?

A. I wouldn't say I was at all times, no.

Page 25.

Q. Okay. You say you weren't mentally alert at all times. Can you explain that for us?

A. I was mentally alert when I assisted in getting Mr. Jamal into the hospital and placing him on the floor. At that point Mr. Jamal, there was some discussions, some talk going all around, but I heard Mr. Jamal say I shot him and I hope the mother-fucker dies. I was stunned at that point. I stumbled back into a little alcove and started to cry. Covered myself by going outside, closing up the wagon and getting myself together.

I then went back into the hospital at some period after that. And I have... very little recollection of anything that happened after that point except for some snapshots in my mind of seeing Danny Faulkner's dead feet lying on a gurney, of, of standing next to someplace where I saw Mr. Jamal, and then leaving.

I remember after that being in Homicide but I have no recollection of anything further that night until early in the morning of that morning, the following morning, when I was leaving work in my car, running into a cement pole with my car. And at that point I, I had more control over myself at that point.

Page 26.

Q. After you had hit the cement pole, the experience jarred you to the point where --

A. I realized at that point that I had to pull myself together or I would not be able to get home that morning.

Q. All right. Now let's pick up on what you've just said. You heard Mr. Jamal, as you say, utter the words I shot, I shot him -- what was it again?

A. Him.

Q. I shot him and I hope the mother-fucker dies?

A. Yes.

Q. Did that remark lead you to believe to any degree that Mr. Jamal was the person responsible for the death of a colleague of yours?

A. Are you talking about that night or subsequently?

Q. No, when you heard that remark, when you heard that remark that you said came from Mr. Jamal, did it lead you to believe that Mr. Jamal was responsible for the death of a colleague of yours?

A. I can't tell you what I felt that night exactly then. The remark itself was something so stunning that I was just out of it for most of the rest of the night.

Q. It was stunning. Right?

Page 27.

A. Yes, sir, I'll never forget it.

Q. It was stunning because of it's bravado, right?

A. By bravado you mean?

Q. I shot the man and I hope the mother-fucker dies?

A. I can't say that I recall exactly how it was said. I heard the words approximately 5 feet away from me. And just the weight of the words alone was enough to shock me.

Q. Ahh. It was stunning and now you are saying the weight of the words was shocking. They were very weighty words, were they not?

A. Yes.

Q. Weighty words because a man had just confessed to a killing?

A. Well, at that time I didn't know Officer Faulkner was dead.

Q. Pardon me. Weighty words because the man confessed to shooting a brother officer?

A. Yes.

Q. And weighty words means words that are significant, right?

A. Words that are significant, yes.

Q. Weighty words that are important?

Page 28.

A. Yes.

Q. Now -- pardon me one moment.

(Discussion held off the record at this time among defense Counsel.)

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Mr. Wakshul, now I want to direct your attention to the statements that you mentioned earlier in your testimony that you reviewed in the District Attorney's Office. Do you understand?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, on December 9th, 1981 at about 5:50 a.m, did you meet with a fellow officer by the name of Kaminsky, detective Kaminsky or investigator Kaminsky?

A. I have no idea who he was.

MR. WILLIAMS: Can I have this marked as defense exhibit... 11.

THE COURT OFFICER: 11.

MR. WILLIAMS: Thank you. Defense Exhibit 11. I would like you to look at Defense Exhibit 11. Direct your attention to the upper, right-hand corner.

(Investigative report was marked Defense Exhibit D-l1 for identification.)

Page 29.

THE COURT OFFICER: D-11, Your Honor.

(Handing.)

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

THE COURT: Are we using D or P?

THE COURT OFFICER: D-11.

THE COURT: P-ll?

THE COURT OFFICER: Defense 11.

MR. GRANT: D as in dog.

THE COURT: I know. But have we been using P before? Are all of them being changed over to D so we keep an accurate record?

THE COURT OFFICER: So far everything has been submitted as D.

THE COURT: Nothing P. I thought I heard P before. But okay, go ahead.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Now, does that indicate that you were interviewed by a police officer by the name of Kaminsky?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, on December 16th, a week later, were you again interviewed by a member of the Philadelphia police force?

A. I can't say I remember the date but I remember that there was a second interview.

Page 30.

MR. WILLIAMS: Let me have this marked Defense Exhibit D-11.

THE COURT OFFICER: 12, sir.

MR. WILLIAMS: I'm sorry, 12.

(Investigative report was marked Defense Exhibit D-l2 for identification.)

THE COURT OFFICER: D-12, sir (displaying).

MR. GRANT: Yes. Thank you.

THE COURT OFFICER: D-12, sir (handing).

MR. WILLIAMS: And then if I could, I would also like to mark as Exhibit, Defense Exhibit 13 a statement from February llth, 1982.

(Investigative report was marked Defense Exhibit D-l3 for identification.)

THE COURT OFFICER: D-13, sir (displaying).

MR. GRANT: Yes, sir.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Now, on the February 16th -- I'm sorry, the December 16th statement, Defense Exhibit 12 -- do you see that --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- Mr. Wakshul? You were interviewed by a man named Detective Thomas?

Page 31.

A. I see that.

Q. And that occurred, that interview occurred at about 6:50 p.m?

A. I see that, yes.

Q. Now, and then you have the February llth, 1982 report. You were then again interviewed, were you not?

A. Yes.

Q. And that was by an investigator by the name of Goldberg?

A. I see that name, yes.

Q. Let's focus on Defense Exhibit 11. That is the statement from December 9th, 1981, at 5:50 a.m. Do you see that?

A. Yes.

Q. When you were being interviewed for that statement, the December 9th statement, did you have any reason to deceive detective or investigator Kaminsky as to what you observed in your duties that morning?

A. No.

Q. You wanted to be truthful with the investigator; am I right?

A. I would imagine so.

Page 32.

Q. And in fact, is it safe to say that on December 9th you wanted nothing more than to have the person responsible for the killing of Officer Faulkner to be punished?

A. I can't say how I felt at that time.

Q. Well --

A. I have no recollection of how I felt while giving this statement, if this is my statement.

Q. Well, let me put it this way: Would it be safe to say that you would have wanted the person responsible to be punished?

A. I would imagine so.

Q. Now, in the December 9th interview you tried to provide important details to this investigator to help the investigator?

A. Sir, I have no recollection of this statement at all.

Q. Then you could use the statement to help your recollection. Because it is a long time ago.

What if anything in that interview were you able to note for the interviewer regarding the time that you received a radio call?

A. You want me to read this and find that information?

Q. Yes, if it assists you, yes.

Page 33.

A. In response to the first question I told the investigator that the time of the incident was approximately 3:54 a.m.

Q. So you were able to note the time for the investigator?

A. Apparently.

Q. What if anything were you able to note for the investigator regarding the color of an automobile driven by a person who informed you that an officer was shot?

A. In response to the same question I noted that it was a dark-colored auto, possibly a Ford, with New York license plates.

Q. So you were able to note the color of the automobile and the fact that it had New York license plates?

A. I was unable to note the color. It was dark. I was unable to note the exact make. It was possibly Ford. But I do say bearing New York license plates.

Q. You were able to give your impression as to the complexion of the car, that it was dark?

A. Apparently from this, yes.

Q. And you were able to give a sense of it's make, that is it appeared to you as a Ford?

A. According to my response, yes.

Page 34.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

Q. This was in the dead of night, was it not?

A. At 3:54 in the morning, yes, I would imagine so.

Q. And you only saw this vehicle for a very, very short period of time?

A. Umm, I couldn't say exactly how long it was. The car appeared, I spoke with the driver of the car. My partner at that time was calling headquarters so he was at a phone a few paces away from the vehicle. I was able to get him back into the vehicle and then I remember directing the driver of that vehicle to take us to where he saw the police officer shot, which is what he had told me. That I recall. So whatever length of time it took, I can't say.

Q. Not only were you able to describe the complexion of the car, the possible make of the car, the fact that it bore New York license plates, the time that you received a radio call, you were also able to give some sort of description of the person who informed you that an officer had been shot?

A. Yeah, according to this, a white male approximately 42 and well-dressed.

Q. Now, Mr. Wakshul, were you able to help the investigator by telling the investigator the important detail about the positioning of Officer

Page 35.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

Faulkner?

A. I informed the investigator that we saw him lying on the south side of the street on the pavement.

Q. Were you also able to assist the investigator by telling him the other important detail, that is the positioning of Mr. Jamal when you arrived at the scene?

A. The only thing I state in this is that he was on the sidewalk at the curb near a dark-colored, or dark-blue-colored Volkswagen.

Q. And then you also assisted this investigator by informing this investigator about certain identification that Mr. Jamal had? Were you able to do that?

A. Identification?

Q. That Mr. Jamal had certain pieces of identification on him?

A. Yes. I informed the investigator later in that statement that a wallet was recovered, and it had a press card with a Muslim-type name on it.

Q. Now, for your benefit and for my benefit, I had my colleague write down some of these important details that you were able to communicate to investigator Kaminsky (indicating to chalk board).

Page 36.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

When you provided these important details that are abbreviated up here, these seven categories, you were trying to be helpful, weren't you?

A. I would assume so, sir. I do not recall making this statement.

Q. You certainly weren't trying to deceive anybody, were you?

A. I wouldn't imagine I was, no.

Q. That would be inconceivable, wouldn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, would you say, Mr. Wakshul, when you look at these details about the time, about the New York license plate, about the dark-colored Ford, about the description of the civilian who gave you the information that an officer was shot, about the positioning of Officer Faulkner, about the positioning of Mr. Jamal, about the fact that Mr. Jamal had a press pass, would you say all of those important details were somehow more important, more vital than a confession by a person admitting to the shooting of a police officer?

A. That each of these individually or all together was more important?

Q. Individually.

Page 37.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

A. Than?

Q. Would the confession of a person saying I shot a police officer and I hope the mother-fucker dies, is that more important than noting the time that you received the radio call?

A. I don't believe they are more important, no.

Q. You don't think that the confession is more important?

A. I said those items that you mentioned.

Q. Oh, okay. Pardon me. Right. The confession would obviously be more important than each one of those items, am I right, we agree on that?

A. I would say the confession is more important, yes.

Q. In your statement or interview with Mister -- I'm sorry -- investigator Kaminsky, did you tell investigator Kaminsky that you had heard a man utter the remark I shot him and I hope the mother-fucker dies, did you help investigator Kaminsky in that way?

A. I did not mention that to Inspector Kaminsky's one statement to me. My statement is one question and one answer, very brief, and I don't see that here at all.

Q. Well, so you provided these details but you didn't tell him about the, about this so-called

Page 38.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

confession?

A. No, that's not what I said.

Q. Okay, please --

A. I said that I did not see it here. I have no recollection of making this statement.

Q. Okay.

A. So I have no recollection of whether I said it or not. It is not here.

Q. Very well.

A. But I have no recollection of it.

Q. In using that statement, because of your vague recollection, or lack of recollection, do you recall, did you say to investigator Kaminsky, we -- referring to yourself and Mr. Trombetta -- we stayed with the male at Jefferson Hospital until we were released. During this time the Negro male made no comments?

A. Were you asking me if I recall that or if that's what I --

Q. Is that reflected in the statement?

A. That is reflected in the statement.

Q. And is the statement signed by you, Mr. Wakshul?

A. That appears to be from what I could see in the photostat my signature.

Q. Now let's turn to the next interview, the

Page 39.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

December 16th, 1981 interview. Do you see that, sir?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were being interviewed, as we indicated earlier, by a man named Detective Thomas?

A. I see that.

Q. Now, you had said earlier that you were distressed in the early morning hours of December 9th and you ran into a cement pole?

A. That is correct.

Q. And that at that point you realized that you had to collect yourself, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Now we are a week later, right, on December 16th?

A. Yes.

Q. You had several days to collect yourself; am I right?

A. Yes.

Q. And Detective Thomas was the lead investigator in this case, wasn't he?

A. I don't know who he was, I don't recall him.

Q. Do you recall whether Detective Thomas assisted personally Mr. McGill, the assigned prosecutor in this case?

A. No, I'm sorry, I don't remember.

Page 40.

Q. Fair enough. Now, in this interview a week later, after you have had a chance to collect yourself, you provided some more important details to Detective Thomas, didn't you?

A. I don't know how important they were. I submitted answers to questions given to me in furtherance of that investigation, some of which I can't read here.

Q. In furtherance of the investigation?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay, that was clear to you?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, were you able to note the details regarding the color of pants that Mr. Jamal was wearing on the early morning hours of December 9th, 1981?

A. Ahh, not the color. I remember, I said in the statement I remember that they were dark pants.

Q. Okay, the complexion of the pants?

A. Yeah, they were dark pants.

Q. And the type of pants?

A. That I thought that they were denim.

Q. Okay. You were able to note the color of the jacket and the type of jacket that Mr. Jamal was wearing?

Page 41.

A. Yes.

Q. Were you able to note the color of the shirt that Mr. Jamal was wearing?

A. In my statement I said I think he had a dark blue, some kind of shirt under the jacket. I don't remember, something else -- I can't read it.

Q. And to complete the picture of the attire that Mr. Jamal had, you were able to describe the shoes that he was wearing?

A. I can't tell from here. The only word I could make out is boots.

Q. Okay.

A. Right. But that's the only recollection I could have, is boots. Or possibly short shoes -- I don't remember.

Q. In any event, you recognize that you had mentioned something about boots?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, I can understand the rest of it is literally illegible because of the copying, but let's skip down. Do you recognize there that you discussed with Detective Thomas the fact that Police Officer Faulkner earlier in the day had a camera?

A. Yes.

Q. And you went on to talk about that camera?

Page 42.

A. Yes.

Q. And you talked about certain photos?

A. Yes.

Q. So at this point you had a whole week to compose yourself, and you have these details (indicating) regarding the clothing of Mr. Jamal, and the fact that Officer Faulkner had a camera. Okay.

A. Yes.

Q. Detective Thomas, did he ask you -- use the record to refresh yourself -- is there anything you wish to add to this interview? He asked you that, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you at that point, when he asked you is there anything you wish to add to this interview, try to help Detective Thomas in investigating this important, serious crime, by telling him that you had heard Mr. Jamal utter a remark?

A. Are you saying did I say that, respond that to him?

Q. Did you respond to him with that question?

A. Yes. I said the response to that question: Nothing I can think of now.

Q. Nothing I can think of now. You weren't trying to deceive Detective Thomas, were you?

Page 43.

A. No, sir.

Q. You were being entirely truthful with Detective Thomas, weren't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember earlier I asked you about the importance of thorough, thorough police reports?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you agreed with me that it's important to have thorough police reports for the good administration of justice?

A. Yes.

Q. And you recall earlier you testified that you took your job seriously that night?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Those early morning hours?

A. I recall that.

Q. Now, there came a point where you learned that Mr. Jamal had made an accusation of some sort, right?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, did you learn that Mr. Jamal had accused members of the Philadelphia Police Department of brutality?

A. I recall, I recall that there was an IAB investigation into certain complaints, yes.

Q. Can you share with us what is IAB?

Page 44.

A. Internal Affairs Bureau.

Q. Did you ever meet anyone from the Internal Affairs Bureau?

A. Yes.

Q. In connection with this case?

A. Yes.

Q. You met with somebody from Internal Affairs because Mr. Jamal had filed an accusation against members of the force for police brutality?

A. I didn't know the specifics or the particulars of any accusation but I know that I met with Internal Affairs in response to some complaint of some sort from Mr. Jamal.

Q. Well, if you can look about two-thirds of the way down.

MR. GRANT: Indicating D-13, I believe.

MR. WILLIAMS: Yes, thank you very much. D-13, for the record.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. This is your report from February llth, 1982, taken at about 1l:OO a.m. by Mr. Goldberg. Where Mr. Goldberg lets you know that he is investigating a complaint initiated by Anthony Jackson, an attorney representing Mumia Abu-Jamal, which indicates that police officers physically and verbally abused his client on December 9th, 1981. Do you see that?

Page 45.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

A. I see that, yes.

Q. Now, here is a man who is under custody and indicted for killing a police officer, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That's the subject of this inquiry? And that same man under indictment for killing a police officer you were now told is making an accusation against the Police Department. Does that basically sum up what's happening here on February llth?

A. Yes.

Q. And that made you angry, didn't it?

A. I don't recall having any feelings one way or the other.

Q. You didn't have an emotional reaction to a man under indictment for killing a police officer pointing the finger back at the Police Department?

A. It's not an unusual thing, but I don't have any recollection of my feelings at that time.

Q. It is not an unusual thing. How many times has a police officer that you personally knew from your own district been killed in the line of duty?

A. One time.

Q. This time?

Page 46.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

A. This time.

Q. Police Officer Faulkner?

A. Faulkner.

Q. So it is not an unusual thing, is that what you are saying?

A. No, it is not an unusual thing for someone who has been arrested to make a complaint against a police officer.

Q. No, that I understand. Please understand me here. It is unusual in your experience for someone under indictment for gunning down a police officer to then point the finger back at the Police Department for abusing him?

A. If you say unusual it's because it never happened before in my experience, I would have to agree that that would be unusual. That particular, those particular facts had never happened before, no.

Q. So what I am trying to understand is, did you have an emotional reaction to that?

A. I do not recall any emotional reaction.

Q. All right. Now, after you were informed that this was an inquiry into allegations of police brutality, you were asked a series of questions; is that right?

A. Yeah, I imagine there were a series of

Page 47.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

questions and answers.

Q. Okay.

A. Yes.

Q. And this was two days, this interview of you was two days after a security officer by the name of Priscilla Durham had also given a statement to Internal Affairs?

MR. GRANT: Objection: That assumes facts not in evidence.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Are you aware of that?

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, the Commonwealth introduced the minutes of the trial into this proceeding. And I think that was the trial testimony.

MR. GRANT: I will accept that if that's true. If that was part of the trial testimony.

MR. WILLIAMS: Yes.

THE COURT: You are asking him whether he knew it?

MR. WILLIAMS: I am asking him whether he was aware of it, yes.

THE COURT: All right.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Page 48.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

Q. Were you aware of that?

A. No, sir, I was not.

Q. Now, did you know Priscilla Durham as an employee of the hospital?

A. Not that I know.

Q. So you didn't know a Priscilla Durham?

A. I don't recognize the name.

Q. You recognized that the hospital employed certain security officers?

A. Pardon me? I didn't hear you.

Q. All right. You recognized that some hospital personnel are security officers?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, in this interview regarding the allegation of police brutality, you added an important detail that you never added on December 9th and December 16th; is that true?

A. I don't know.

Q. Well, let's go to page 3, about a third of the way down. The words after he was placed on the floor; do you see that?

A. Yes, I see it.

Q. So in this inquiry into the allegation of police brutality you now add an important detail, do you not?

Page 49.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

A. I don't know if it was added at this point or not. I have no recollection of what I said in the first interview, but this is the first reported instance where I said that the, I did hear him say I shot him, I hope -- I imagine it is the same statement I made -- I hope the mother-fucker dies.

Q. Now, the December 9th interview you said you had signed, right?

A. I had signed?

Q. That you had put your signature on the December 9th?

A. Yes, it appears I have signed both copies.

Q. That's Defense Exhibit 11.

A. Correct.

Q. And on Defense Exhibit 12, the December 16th, 1981 interview, did you also sign that one?

A. I don't think so. No, it doesn't appear.

Q. Now, you were asked on February llth, after you had indicated that you heard this statement, whether other people were present. Do you see that?

(Pause.)

If I could direct your attention: It would be on the following page.

A. I'm sorry.

Q. About halfway down.

Page 50.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

(Pause.)

A. I see it. When he made this comment were any hospital personnel in close proximity.

Q. Yes.

A. Right. My response: I didn't see them at all.

MR. GRANT: Could I ask, Your Honor, how many pages of the statement the witness has?

THE WITNESS: This is the next to the last page.

MR. GRANT: Yeah, how many pages is your statement?

THE WITNESS: Four -- five. I'm sorry, five.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Do you see about halfway down?

A. On page 4?

Q. Yes, page 4. It says when Jamal made the comment --

A. Hmm-hmm.

Q. -- who else -- I know it's very difficult to read because of the copy -- who else was in close proximity to him that may have heard him make this comment.

A. I see that.

Page 51.

Q. Right. And your answer was what?

A. My partner was near him, there were other officers in the emergency room, I just can't recall who they are.

Q. And then you were asked if there were any hospital personnel present?

A. Correct. And I said I didn't see them at all.

Q. And you earlier testified that security personnel are among hospital personnel? Do you recall that?

A. Security personnel are among hospital personnel?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. And you indicated that there were no hospital personnel that you saw?

A. In close proximity to him I didn't see them. I didn't know who they were. I didn't know -- I don't recall who was there at that time, I still don't.

Q. You indicated, I didn't see them at all?

A. That's what it says here, yes. So that was probably my response.

Q. Now, did you indicate in the report that you had seen a brother officer by the name of Officer

Page 52.

Bell?

A. Did I indicate in this report that I had seen him?

Q. Yes. When you were asked -- you are free to look at the entire report, but the most relevant portion is there on 4 where you are being asked who else was present.

A. No, I don't see any, any question or response concerns Officer Bell.

Q. Now, you remember what Mr. Goldberg, the interviewer, what his reaction was when you told him that you heard Mr. Jamal make a remark?

MR. GRANT: Objection as to relevance.

THE COURT: Did he?

MR. WILLIAMS: I am asking him if he saw the reaction of the interviewer.

THE COURT: How could he answer that?

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, it goes again to his impressions. I know Your Honor disagrees with me.

THE COURT: I am asking you.

MR. WILLIAMS: I am asking --

THE COURT: You are asking him to say what somebody else's impression was.

MR. WILLIAMS: No, reaction.

Page 53.

THE COURT: What do you mean by reaction?

MR. WILLIAMS: Was he surprised, did he laugh, did he cry.

MR. GRANT: That's what I am objecting to. What relevance has it to this witness' testimony?

THE COURT: He doesn't seem to remember too much about the report itself. How is he going to remember whether he cried or laughed or shouted or what?

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, if he doesn't remember he is free to say he doesn't remember.

MR. GRANT: It is irrelevant, Judge.

THE COURT: I don't want him to speculate.

MR. WILLIAMS: No, if he doesn't remember, I don't want him to speculate.

MR. GRANT: My objection goes to relevance, Your Honor. Whether he remembers it or not, what's that got to do with it? They could bring that man in but what does it have to do with this gentleman here?

THE COURT: Why don't you bring the person who took the statement in and ask him what he felt.

Page 54.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your advice is well taken, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Your partner, I take it when you referred to my partner was near him you are referring to Police Officer Steven Trombetta?

A. I would imagine so, he was my partner that night.

Q. Okay. And when you referred to my partner was near him, you are referring to Mr. Jamal?

A. Yes.

Q. And when you indicate the close proximity of your partner to Mr. Jamal, you were referring to the time that you heard this remark by Mr. Jamal?

(Pause.)

A. In response to the question who else was in close proximity I said my partner was near him.

Q. Yes. Who else was in close proximity to Mr. Jamal that may have heard him make this comment.

A. Yes.

Q. And you said my partner was near him?

A. Right.

Q. Referring to being near Mr. Jamal, right?

Page 55.

A. Yes.

Q. And there were other officers who were there near Mr. Jamal?

A. There were other officers in the emergency room, I just can't recall who they are.

Q. Right. And your answer was, is that these other officers were there in the emergency room in response to the question who else was present that may have heard this comment?

A. Right.

Q. And again to be clear: Of all the people that you remember seeing, you don't remember seeing Officer Bell, a face you recognize?

A. No. I don't recall seeing Officer Trombetta and I know he was there because we came in together. But I have no recollection of any police officers or any hospital personnel that I could recall or recognize.

Q. Well, I'm a little confused, I have to say. Because you seem to have the presence of mind to, the clarity of mind to remember 3:54 a.m. is when you got the radio call. You seem to have the presence of mind to remember New York license plates. You seem to have the presence of mind to remember a dark car that was a Ford. You seemed to have the presence of mind to give a description of the person who told you that an officer was shot. You seemed to have the clarity of mind to remember the position of Officer Faulkner. The position of Mr. Jamal. The fact that Mr. Jamal had a press pass. But you don't, but now you say you didn't have the clarity of mind to even know for sure if Officer Trombetta was there.

Page 56.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

A. These --

Q. Help me to understand that?

A. These facts all occurred before Mr. Jamal uttered the statement. As I mentioned before, when he uttered that statement, from that point on my recollection is fuzzy.

Q. These things happened before Mr. Jamal uttered the remark?

A. Yes.

Q. But isn't it true that the interview where you gave these details happened shortly after you heard the remark?

A. I don't know how far after they made it, if it was shortly or not.

Q. 5:50 a.m., isn't that true?

A. Yes. According to this report.

Q. So shortly after you heard the remark you still had the clarity of mind, the presence of mind

Page 57.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

to provide those details?

A. Sir, I have no recollection of making that statement or any of the details that are in that statement. So I can not tell you what my presence of mind was at that time or not.

Q. Okay. But you did sign the statement on December 9th?

A. Yes. That appears to be my signature, yes. I would imagine so.

Q. So your testimony today is that back then, at the time, you could remember all those details to assist the investigator, but you were so distraught that you can't even remember who your partner was; is that --

A. No, that is incorrect, sir. I know who my partner was.

Q. Okay, so when you said that you knew that your partner was near Mr. Jamal, you knew that you were referring to Officer Trombetta?

A. Yes.

Q. And when you were asked who else was near Mr. Jamal who might have heard him say these comments, you couldn't identify if Officer Bell was there?

A. That is correct.

Q. And Officer Bell was also a member of the 6th

Page 58.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

District?

A. Yes.

Q. And you knew Officer Bell, as you indicated earlier?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. In fact, did you know that at the time, did you know that Officer Bell was Officer Faulkner's partner?

A. He wasn't that night, but he had been his partner, yes.

Q. Do you remember if --

MR. WILLIAMS: One moment, please.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time between defense Counsel.)

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Now let me go back to this important testimony about your being distraught when you heard the remark.

A. Hmm-hmm.

Q. Earlier that morning in the vicinity of 13th Street and Locust you said you saw Officer Faulkner?

A. Before the shooting incident?

Q. No, no, no, after the shooting.

A. Yes.

Q. You described his position?

Page 59.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

A. Yes.

Q. Right? And I know this is difficult, but you saw, you saw that Officer Faulkner had a bullet wound to the face?

A. I saw he had a bullet wound to the head, I didn't know exactly where it was.

Q. And you saw your brother officer lying in a pool of blood?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you testified earlier that you were still able and fully capable of performing your duties as a police officer even though you witnessed firsthand this terrible episode, or the aftermath of this terrible episode?

A. Fully capable of performing my duties? Yes, I believe so.

Q. Now, did the interviewer on February 11th in connection with the inquiry into police brutality, did he ask you for an explanation as to why in these other, prior statements you made no mention of a confession? Do you remember him asking you that? Do you see that there in the statement?

A. Not yet.

Q. It is on the last page. Do you see where it says during this statement you have indicated that

Page 60.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

Jamal did make statements. Will you explain this?

A. You have indicated that Jamal --

Q. First let me make sure that you see where it says that.

A. During this statement you have indicated that Jamal made statements, is what I could read.

Q. Will you explain this?

A. Will you indicate --

Q. Yeah.

A. No, I don't think I could read the entire part.

Q. Officer -- Mr. Wakshul, bear with me. It says will you explain this. Do you see that there?

A. Will you explain this, yes, I see that.

Q. Okay, he is referring to your, for you to explain why there is no mention of a statement in either, a confession in either of these earlier interviews, right?

A. I can not tell what he is referring to, sir, I can not read this.

Q. Well, let's go through it together. It says during this statement you have indicated that Jamal did make statements?

A. Okay, did make statements.

Q. Did make statements. Will you explain this?

Page 61.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

Do you see that?

A. Yes.

Q. What was your explanation to investigator Goldberg as to why you didn't mention the confession?

A. I responded -- if I can read this correctly -- what I was referring to when I was guarding him, what I was referring to when I was guarding him. At the time he said what he did say the statement disgusted me and I didn't realize it -- I can't read that word -- any importance until today.

Q. I didn't realize it had any importance until today?

A. All right, if that's what it says. That part is black in mine.

Q. Okay. So let me be clear now. You recognize that all of these things had importance. On the December 9th statement, the seven categories here. On December the 16th you recognized all of these items on the blackboard as having importance. And you told investigator Goldberg that I didn't realize it -- referring to the confession -- had any importance until today. Yes?

A. That's what it says, yes.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time between defense Counsel.)

Page 62.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. So after 64 days, 64 days after an officer was slain in this City, suddenly you have an epiphany, you realized the confession was important; is that true?

A. I wouldn't, I wouldn't phrase it as an epiphany. At that time there were several people around when he said it. I had no idea that not everyone would say that he said it.

Q. Okay. We are going to get into that in a moment. So you felt, your testimony was you felt maybe you would not be the one to mention it even though you were right there?

A. No, that's not, that's not correct.

Q. I'm really trying to understand, Mr. Wakshul, because --

A. I will try to explain.

Q. Because you testified earlier that as a young police officer you understood that statements, especially confessions, are important. You remember you said that to us?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you earlier testified how important it is to be thorough, you remember you shared that with us?

A. Yes, sir.

Page 63.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

Q. And you remember you testifying that you weren't trying to deceive anybody in all of these interviews?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But yet you are saying the statement had no importance until today?

A. That's not what I said.

Q. Well, to be fair, you said I didn't realize that it had any importance until today.

A. Yes, that's what it says.

Q. All right. Did the fact that Mr. Jamal's, that Mr. Jamal had the audacity to file a police brutality complaint even though he was under indictment for killing a police officer, did that somehow help you realize the importance of a confession?

A. I don't believe it had any effect on me and what I had to say one way or the other. I was reporting what I heard.

Q. I see. So it's just a coincidence, I take it, that on December 9th you made no mention of it, on December 16th you made no mention of it, but in an investigation of police brutality, suddenly it has importance, that's just a coincidence?

A. Sir, on December 9th the statement I made, if

Page 64.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

that is recorded correctly, I have no recollection of. It's a blank period in my mind. On December the 16th I responded to very specific questions relating to very specific items. And I was never asked it.

Q. Right.

A. And on the Internal Affairs investigation, I was given very detailed questions and which elicited these responses.

Q. Well --

A. And if you look at it, I don't see, I don't see anything that directed me to that except that they were asking me what happened at that time. And I just went through it.

Q. Well, you were asked on the December 16th report, the very last question to you by Detective Thomas, is there anything you wish to add to this interview. Is there anything you wish to add to this interview. And your answer was nothing I can think of now. Isn't that right?

A. That's correct.

Q. Nobody was telling you to keep this confession a secret; is that right?

A. Nobody ever made mention what to do with it, no.

Q. But you did say earlier that confessions are

Page 65.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

important, I did hear you then, right?

A. I believe I said that earlier today, yes.

Q. Now, you testified earlier when you said that you heard Mr. Jamal make the comment, the confession, that it distressed you, and those were weighty words, you said, remember that, you used the word weighty?

A. No, I didn't use that word, that's your word, sir. I said the weight of the words shocked me. What I heard, the thing that I heard was very distressing to me, yes.

Q. The weight of the words, right, you mentioned the weight of the words. And remember I asked you well, the weight of the words (indicating), that means it was important, it was significant, all of those things, right?

A. I believe it was significant, yes.

Q. And so on February 11th when you were being asked questions about police brutality, only then did you realize that these were weighty words?

A. No. Only then did I realize that they might have some meaning because apparently there's no mention of it anyplace else.

Q. Now, you mentioned earlier that because there were other police officers around you thought well, maybe one of the other officers would have told the

Page 66.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

investigator about the confession?

A. No, I did not have the conscious thought of that.

Q. Fair enough. So that was the reason why you didn't mention this statement of the confession earlier, not because you thought other officers had, that was not accurate?

A. I can't recall the reasoning behind that at all.

Q. Well, since you can't remember the reasoning behind it, as you sit here today, would you agree that it is literally astounding that you didn't mention it in the December 9th interview? Would you as you sit here today agree with that?

A. No, sir, I would not.

Q. You would not. Would you say that it is simply astounding that on December 16th when you were asked if there was anything to add you didn't mention the confession at all; you would disagree with that too?

A. I would disagree with that as well, yes, sir.

Q. Now, you said that Police Officer Trombetta was there?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. I want to direct --

Page 67.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

A. Where?

Q. I'm sorry. You said near Mr. Jamal at the time he made the utterance.

A. Okay, yes.

Q. And you said other police officers were there too.

A. Yes.

Q. I want to focus on that for a moment. And you also said there were no, you didn't see any hospital personnel?

A. I don't recall seeing hospital. I don't know if they were there or not, I don't recall them.

Q. As far as your impression was according to your report, you didn't see any?

A. I don't recall seeing any.

Q. Okay. Now, do you recall how many times Mr. Jamal made this alleged statement?

A. That I heard? Once.

Q. Once. And you said that you can't recall whether he had merely whispered it or uttered it in a normal voice? Do you remember the tone of voice?

A. No, I said that I didn't understand your use of the word bravado.

Q. Oh.

A. He said it... as far as I recall in a normal speaking voice as far as volume is concerned, that I heard.

Q. So you would disagree, if I hear you correctly, with Priscilla Durham's testimony -- assuming for the moment this is her testimony, and the record will speak for itself on this -- you would disagree with Priscilla Durham's testimony that Mr. Jamal shouted a confession?

A. I would not disagree with that. Our impression and our position of where we were hearing it would be different. I don't know, I don't remember her being there, I don't know what she heard or how she heard it.

Q. Is it possible, your being 5 feet away, that someone could have construed Mr. Jamal's alleged statement as being shouted out?

MR. GRANT: I object. I object unless he is going to assume what is in the mind and would be in the mind of that person, Your Honor.

MR. WILLIAMS: I am asking the tone of voice that it was heard.

THE COURT: He gave you what the tone of voice was but you are now asking him what somebody else hears. Different people see and hear different things. So I don't know that he is qualified to tell us what somebody else heard or their reasons for what they said. Bring her in and ask her.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Let me ask you this, Mr. Wakshul. Did Police Officer Trombetta have a hearing problem?

MR. GRANT: Objection to that as well.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. That you knew of, that you were aware of?

MR. GRANT: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Not that I know of.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Now, are you aware that Police Officer Trombetta was interviewed on December 9th, 1981?

A. I am not aware of it. I would imagine that he was but I have no recollection of it.

MR. WILLIAMS: I would like to have marked --

MR. GRANT: I would object, Your Honor. He will now try to cross-examine Mr. Wakshul with Mr. Trombetta's statement.

MR. WILLIAMS: No, I don't intend --

MR. GRANT: Those are the interviews you are asking now to be marked, sir.

MR. WILLIAMS: I just --

Page 70.

MR. GRANT: Are they not?

MR. WILLIAMS: They are.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, I object to this line of questioning. It is totally irrelevant and calls for speculation. Bring Mr. Trombetta in.

THE COURT: Call Trombetta in here and ask him about his own statements.

MR. WILLIAMS: We may accept.

THE COURT: He can't comment about anybody else's statements. He just said he assumes he was interviewed like everybody else probably.

MR. WILLIAMS: We may accept that invitation.

THE COURT: You will have to if you want to get this in. I don't think he is qualified to comment on somebody else's statement.

MR. WILLIAMS: So can I not have these marked as exhibits at this juncture?

THE COURT: No, because if you are going to ask him questions about somebody else's statements, get that person in here and ask him about the statement he made.

Page 71.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Now, is it a coincidence, Mr. Wakshul, that not only did you not make a statement about Mr. Jamal's alleged confession, but that your partner Officer Trombetta also told the investigator he didn't hear anything?

MR. GRANT: Objection.

THE COURT: Sustained. I already said that. If you want to bring in whatever Trombetta said, bring him in. It is not for him to comment about somebody else, what somebody else's statement is.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, my question is not what Officer Trombetta said. I am asking for an opinion from him.

THE COURT: Well, he has no expert opinion and he is not making the fact-finding here. So what his opinion is is immaterial.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Let me ask you this. Did you see Officer Trombetta, after you say Mr. Jamal made this confession, leave the scene in distress? Did you see that?

A. I have no recollection about what anybody did. I know that I left the scene in distress. And that I returned sometime shortly thereafter. From that point on I have no clear recollection of what happened the rest of that night, except for pictures that remain in my mind.

Q. Can you explain for us why it is that Officer Bell in an interview on December 16th also didn't mention the interview -- or the confession?

MR. GRANT: Your Honor --

THE COURT: I will have to sustain that for the same reason.

MR. GRANT: Thank you.

THE COURT: Counselor, bring Officer Bell in and ask him.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor yesterday barred us from that.

MR. GRANT: Yes, Your Honor should have barred him because they asked him at trial ad nauseam and this is to litigate any new issues.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, it is in the record, it is in the record that he didn't say it on December 16th. So I want to question him about it.

THE COURT: You can't question him about somebody else's statement. He wasn't even in the Courtroom.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, he may have discussed it with Officer Bell.

THE COURT: Well, you are surmising a lot of things.

MR. WILLIAMS: That's why I am the interrogator, I have to ask.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, anything that he asks him to assume about the state of mind of another person in the law and as taught in every law school in the country is objectionable.

MR. WILLIAMS: My learned adversary is correct.

MR. GRANT: Thank you.

MR. WILLIAMS: And I am not asking Mr. Wakshul to define what was in the mind of Officer Bell. I'm asking if he finds it to be a coincidence that Officer Bell also said, never indicated that Mr. Jamal confessed to the crime as of December 16th.

THE COURT: Well, he is not the fact-finder. You argue that to me later on, okay.

MR. WILLIAMS: Indeed we will. Just so I don't, in deference to Your

Page 74.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

Honor's ruling, does that hold true for Officer Hinkel, Cook, Dunn, Captain Bob and a security guard --

THE COURT: I am not -- will you listen to me for a moment.

MR. WILLIAMS: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: I am not making any rulings in advance. If the D.A. objects I will rule. Don't tell me what my ruling is in advance. I make rulings one at that time.

MR. WILLIAMS: I didn't want to breach the Court's order. I understand, Your Honor. Let me proceed.

THE COURT: All right.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Can you then explain to us if it's a coincidence that Police Officer Heftner also said he didn't hear a confession?

MR. GRANT: I object, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. GRANT: I guess we will go through this with every police officer.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Can you explain why or if it is a coincidence that Police Officer Hinkel, who also indicated he was

Page 75.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

at the hospital, said he didn't hear a confession?

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, I would, without burdening the record, I don't want to continue to stand up and object. I would pose a standing objection, if Your Honor would permit it; but also I would ask Your Honor to preclude Counsel from making speeches to the audience with inadmissible comments about other peoples' statements that I am sure he doesn't want to put up on the witness stand.

MR. WILLIAMS: I am asking questions.

THE COURT: I know you are asking questions.

MR. WILLIAMS: Which Your Honor told me to ask.

THE COURT: You are asking improper questions. He is now agreeing to let me rule on it so I am ruling on the whole thing.

MR. WILLIAMS: Just so the record is clear.

THE COURT: So you understand that these are improper questions.

MR. WILLIAMS: With respect --

THE COURT: You call in these individuals and you ask them. If they testified

Page 76.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

during the course of the trial, they answered whatever questions were asked. Whatever they said during the course of the trial, that's it.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, that's fair enough. And that is exactly why before I launched into this series of questions I was telling Your Honor I would ask is that true with respect to all of these. So I wouldn't be unfair.

THE COURT: Counselor, I told you before I don't make general decisions like that. But if the D.A. is willing to agree to that, fine, then I will make such a decision.

MR. WILLIAMS: Okay.

THE COURT: I am not going to do it on my own.

MR. WILLIAMS: Fine, so we are on the same page. So that applies to Officer Hinkel, Cook, Dunn, Captain Bob and security guard Kenney. That is who I would ask the questions to and Your Honor is ruling that I can not. Fair enough.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Do you recall, first of all, were you aware that this shooting was covered immediately afterwards

Page 77.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

by the news media? Were there news accounts of this shooting?

MR. GRANT: Objection: Relevance.

MR. WILLIAMS: I will connect it up, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Whatever it was it was. What does that have to do with this phase?

MR. WILLIAMS: My question to this witness is since he heard the confession, I was going to ask him if he knew of any news accounts that Mr. Jamal had confessed.

MR. GRANT: Objection.

MR. WILLIAMS: If he had then maybe it is an explanation for his feeling the need not to tell anyone about the confession: Because it's already public knowledge. That's why I'm asking.

THE COURT: Well, what is your --

MR. GRANT: I will withdraw the objection, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Do you want to withdraw the objection?

MR. GRANT: Yes.

THE COURT: He withdraws the objection then ask it.

Page 78.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Immediately in the wake of the shooting on December 9th or December l0th, do you recall if there were any news accounts on December 9th or December 10th about Mr. Jamal having confessed?

A. I don't recall any such accounts.

Q. Now let's move along to your dealings with the prosecutor, if you did indeed have any dealings with the prosecutor back in 1982, okay. Prior to trial, did you meet with any persons from the District Attorney's Office?

A. I believe either in January or February of '82, having a prep meeting with Mr. McGill in reference to this case.

Q. What do you mean by prep meeting?

A. Umm, I believe he was the assigned prosecutor and he was going over different facets of the case with a large group of parties. Police officers I believe were the only ones, and detectives, who were present.

Q. So he was prepping several people at the same time?

A. It was, it was basically a large round-table discussion of events. I don't recall specifics of it. I believe that there were, there were some

Page 79.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

preliminary reports that he was going over, but I don't really recall in depth what happened.

Q. And did Mr. McGill explain to you at all that the reason to have a group meeting is to make sure that all the testimony conforms to each other?

A. No, I don't recall any such --

Q. You don't recall him explaining that to you?

A. No.

Q. Did the subject of the confession come up in this meeting?

A. I believe it did.

Q. This, again, was a discussion with all the police officers present in this round-table meeting?

A. Yes. I believe they were all there, whoever was at the meeting.

Q. And was there any inquiry directed at you personally about the troubling fact that you had not mentioned the confession on December 9th or December 16th or thereafter until February llth?

A. No.

Q. No?

A. No, I believe what happened was Mr. McGill said did anybody hear his statement. And I know I raised my hand but I don't recall any further discussion about it.

Page 80.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

Q. How many times did you meet with Mr. McGill?

A. I only recall that one time.

Q. That one meeting. Do you remember the date of that meeting?

A. I'm sorry, I don't. I believe it was sometime in January or February.

Q. Ahh. Early on in the case?

A. Yeah, it was pretty early.

Q. Were you ever instructed that you should keep yourself available for trial?

A. At that meeting?

Q. No, at any point.

A. I believe later on after our vacations were decided on, they were given out, and the trial date came out, being asked not to go away on vacations.

Q. Who asked you not to go away?

A. That I couldn't tell you. That could have come from, that could have come from Mr. McGill, it could have come from supervisors in the Police Department. I don't really recall where it came from. I recall that, you know, we were asked, or, yeah, I believe it was more than one person at the time, was we were asked if you are on vacation during that period, you know, try to stay available, something to that effect. I don't have specific

Page 81.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

recollections of that.

Q. Do you remember approximately when you were, when you received that instruction or instructions?

A. No, it was sometime before the actual trial began but I don't recall the specific dates.

Q. Now, before you received that instruction that you just indicated, had you gotten approval from anyone at that point to go on vacation?

A. I couldn't tell you if that was before vacation assignments came out or after it came out. I would imagine it came after it came out because before the vacations were picked, it wouldn't have made any sense. So.

Q. Exactly. To give you an instruction but at the same time approve a vacation wouldn't make any sense?

A. Right.

Q. So the vacation schedule came out after certain superiors of yours, possibly Mr. McGill, instructed you not to go on vacation?

A. Are you saying the schedule came out after? No, I believe the schedule was out first.

Q. Right.

A. Before any, any request not to go on vacation, or go away on vacation. Not necessarily go on

Page 82.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

vacation but go away on vacation came out.

Q. So the schedule comes out for the vacation?

A. Right, we picked by lottery who gets what vacation periods. And that's usually done anywhere from March through actually up to May I would imagine, I don't know when. It varied, at that time Police Department procedures varied from year to year.

Q. So you got the vacation schedule and I take it you hit the jackpot: You got the July 4th weekend, right?

A. I don't recall the exact dates of my vacation.

Q. Okay. We'll get back to that in a moment. You got your vacation schedule and then sometime afterwards you receive these instructions that you just mentioned about the not to have a vacation at around the time of the trial?

A. To the best of my recollection, these instructions came after vacations were chosen.

Q. Okay. Now, do you recall if you told Mr. McGill or any member of the District Attorney's Office -- and when I say any member, I mean prosecutor, paralegal, or anyone -- that you had a vacation scheduled, did you inform anyone that in that office?

Page 83.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

A. I have no recollection at all.

Q. Can you share with us at the time -- the policies may have changed -- but at the time, 1982, what the policy was for police officers who had vacations scheduled that might conflict with the trial, what is an officer to do?

A. Generally, once your vacation is scheduled, you go on vacation.

Q. So in other words, if you have a vacation scheduled, that takes priority over the administration of justice?

A. Not necessarily. The way the system was at that time was that when the cases were prepared, if a vacation was known by the investigator, he would note that vacation schedule on his reports. And then when they were scheduling cases with the judge or whoever at that time scheduled cases, they would say this is not a good date or this is a good date, the officer's on vacation. Umm --

Q. Let me stop you right there.

MR. GRANT: May the witness finish his answer?

MR. WILLIAMS: Very well.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. I'm sorry, go ahead.

Page 84.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

A. And if a vacation had not been scheduled already, then they would just note that there was nothing scheduled; and then when it came up for trial, if the officer was on vacation I guess they would try to get a continuance. In the case of this --

Q. Well, I am not asking you about this case, I was asking you about the policy.

MR. GRANT: May the officer finish his answer?

MR. WILLIAMS: His answer is non responsive. I will go into that.

MR. GRANT: How do you know it was non responsive?

MR. WILLIAMS: Because he was referring to this case, he was talking about this case.

MR. GRANT: You don't want to know about this case.

MR. WILLIAMS: I will in due course. In due course.

MR. GRANT: Oh.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Okay, let's probe that answer a bit. When an officer has a vacation scheduled and then a case is called for trial, you said that someone communicates to the court that an officer is on vacation and they would try to work around that; is that what you are saying?

Page 85.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

A. In most cases, yes, that's what would be done. If the officer's on vacation the District Attorney would know earlier on enough I guess to try to arrange a date for that case that doesn't conflict with the vacation schedules.

Q. So the party responsible for informing the court of an officer being unavailable for vacation is the District Attorney?

A. The party informing the court in all cases would be the District Attorney, sir, I imagine that would be it.

Q. So is it your understanding in the Police Department that there is communication between the Police Department and the District Attorney's Office regarding the availability of officers?

A. There were some. I have no idea as to the actual procedures to this day, how that is actually done.

Q. In any event, when an officer requests a vacation, they have to fill out a vacation form of some kind, a request form?

Page 86.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

A. No, if it's an out-of-period vacation, you would ask for a request form and that would be up to your captain's approval according to manpower. During the vacation season there is basically a lottery where all the vacation periods are divided up and all the officers, amount of officers are divided up, and they basically pull from a hat what vacation period they will get. They could make sometimes certain trades with other officers to accommodate their vacations. But once those vacations are pulled you're basically stuck with that vacation unless you take one out of period.

Q. You indicated earlier, Mr. Wakshul, that your being, the scheduling of vacation is noted on an investigator's report?

A. When a detective takes a report on any case that they are investigating from arrest, they, as far as I can recall, usually asked the officer what's your vacation. And if you have taken your vacation, or if your vacation has not been scheduled, you will just say I don't have any, I don't have any vacation yet.

Q. And on December 9th, 1981, did you have a vacation scheduled yet?

A. For the succeeding year? No.

Page 87.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

Q. Can you please look at Defense Exhibit 11. Look up by your name.

A. Yes, I see it.

Q. Do you see there it says no vac: V-A-C?

A. That is correct.

Q. What does that mean?

A. That means that I have either taken my vacation for that year, or my vacation for the next year is not in, hasn't been chosen.

Q. Oh, okay.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time among defense Counsel.)

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Now, so back on that very first interview within, really, literally a few hours of the shooting of a police officer, there was discussions with you concerning your vacation schedule.

A. I would imagine so, yes.

Q. And that was important enough to note on your report, as it appears?

A. It simply could be here no vacation because I didn't recall, I didn't know if I had a vacation scheduled or not, or if it was taken, I don't know when it is going to be. If they don't have the information they simply note no vacation because they don't have that information.

Page 88.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

Q. And you are aware as a police officer that felony matters, as this one was, were on a 180-day schedule, that is it has to be tried within 180 days?

MR. GRANT: Objection, Your Honor. Actually, that misstates the law. And as to his knowledge or awareness of the law, that's totally irrelevant.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, it goes to whether on the vacation issue --

THE COURT: No, it doesn't. He told you, I thought he said in plain English that on that report this means that either he had already taken his vacation for that year, or it had nothing to do with the following year because they don't do that selection until -- When was that? Did you say May?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, usually it starts somewhere between March and April.

THE COURT: March and April?

THE WITNESS: Even into June.

THE COURT: Of the following year?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE COURT: Then you pick for your vacation.

Page 89.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE COURT: Very clear. I don't have any problem with that.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Can you recall approximately when you received approval for your vacation?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you remember if it was cold outside or it was warm outside at that time, the season?

A. I have no recollection when we chose vacations that year.

Q. Would it be safe to say sometime around March or April?

MR. GRANT: Would it be safe to object, because the man said twice he doesn't know.

MR. WILLIAMS: There was reference in the minutes or his testimony earlier about March.

THE COURT: What year are we talking about?

MR. WILLIAMS: 1982.

THE COURT: 1982. I thought he said they don't pick until March.

THE WITNESS: Judge, it would be March

Page 90.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

through maybe even the beginning of June, anytime, I have no idea.

THE COURT: In 1982.

THE WITNESS: In 1982 I have no recollection when vacations were chosen.

THE COURT: Oh.

THE WITNESS: The Police Department puts out schedules every year and sometimes they are early and sometimes they are late. You don't know.

THE COURT: Oh, okay.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. So it could have been any time from March to June?

A. I am just assuming, yeah, it was in that period.

Q. In any event, the scheduling of the vacations as best as you can recall occurred after this meeting that you referred to, this round-table meeting in January?

MR. GRANT: Or February.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Or February? Thank you.

A. I would imagine it occurred after that, yeah. That would be too early.

Page 91.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

Q. And that was the meeting where you raised your hand when asked about the confession?

A. I'm sorry, I missed the first part of that question.

Q. That was the meeting, this January or February meeting, this round-table discussion with Mr. McGill that you raised your hand in response to a question about hearing a confession --

A. Yes, somewhere towards the end of that meeting I remember that.

Q. So let me get the time frame here. You've got January, February you're indicating that you could give testimony about a confession, and then March, it would be sometime between March and June of 1982 vacations are scheduled?

A. Yes.

Q. And then sometime after that you are receiving instructions not to go on vacation to conflict with the trial?

MR. GRANT: Objection, Your Honor: There was no instruction don't take your vacation, I believe.

MR. WILLIAMS: I am going --

MR. GRANT: Don't touch me, and let me make my objection.

Page 92.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

MR. WILLIAMS: I just don't want the objection in front of this witness.

THE COURT: Well, you have done it before.

MR. WILLIAMS: At sidebar.

THE COURT: You have done it before, Counselor.

MR. WILLIAMS: I would ask the witness to be excluded because --

THE COURT: You've had it before, Counselor. What is your objection?

MR. GRANT: My objection, Your Honor, I forget what even the question was.

MR. WILLIAMS: I withdraw the question, then.

MR. GRANT: Thank you. All right.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time between Counsel for the defense and the Commonwealth.)

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Now, in the Police Department are the summer months for vacation the peak periods?

A. Yes.

Q. And are the dolling out of vacations, does seniority have any factor or role to play?

Page 93.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

A. Not as far as persons getting the vacation that they want. Seniority depends on what type of vacation you get. Persons with a longer period of time get longer vacations.

Q. Hmm-hmm?

A. So if you choose to take -- say if you had a two-week vacation and a three-week vacation. If you choose to take your full three-week vacation you would choose from a different lottery of three-week vacations than the persons who are taking a two-week vacation. Similarly for the four-week vacations. If they choose to take them all in that one period, they would have a separate lottery.

Q. And seniority would have a role to play in whether you could take one of these longer vacations?

A. Yes. If you were entitled to a longer vacation due to your service time then that would be the only decision, which lottery you wanted to take. If you wanted to take, if you had a longer period and only wanted to take a two-week vacation, you had a choice, you could take a four-week vacation, only use two weeks, or you could pull from the two-week vacation, as I recall it.

Q. But in terms of what time frame you were permitted to go on vacation, for example, the July

Page 94.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

4th or the Memorial Day or the Labor Day, those scheduled vacations, the seniority of the person makes no difference?

A. Well, the better vacation times?

Q. Yes.

A. It was purely chance.

Q. Purely chance. No, withdraw it. Now, on June 25th, 1982, for the record -- I think it's obvious -- we were in the midst of trial at that point on the Jamal case. On June 25th, 1982, were you in the City of Philadelphia?

A. Sir, I do not recall when the case specifically occurred. During the early part when it was going on, I believed I was indeed in the City. I was on vacation that I recall. But I was here.

Q. You were in Philadelphia while you were on vacation?

A. As far as I recall, during the early part of the vacation, yes.

Q. And on June 25th is when you commenced your vacation?

A. I couldn't tell you the exact date.

Q. If I show you a printout of your vacation schedule would that help you?

Page 95.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

MR. GRANT: I would object to that. I haven't seen anything like that. It hasn't been authenticated. So I would object to him using what he purports to be his vacation schedule.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time between Commonwealth and defense Counsel.)

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, just for the record: I am going to refer to a printout that was provided to us by the Philadelphia Police Department pursuant to a subpoena. In any event, I'm going to show it for purposes of refreshing recollection.

MR. GRANT: And I would object for lack of foundation. If it is only to refresh his recollection, I guess he could use a watermelon to do that. But if this purports to be their vacation schedule, I still object as to authentication. But use it for refreshing recollection without any objection from me.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, we can stand on formalities and in terms of expedition of this hearing because of the execution date, we hesitate to have to go and call some person from the Philadelphia Police Department to come into Court to authenticate what they turned over to us pursuant to a subpoena. Your Honor has discretion in this matter to permit us to enter this into evidence as an exhibit. Otherwise, we would be forced to bring somebody in from the Philadelphia Police Department at taxpayer expense, and that's really ludicrous.

Page 96.

Gary Wakshul - Direct

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, I don't think you do, with all due respect to your powers, have any such discretion, because you can't authenticate this. It caused them no problem at taxpayers' expense to bring in the Governor of the State, or the Judge of the calendar room. And all I am asking for is the proper legal basis and foundation to be met. Simple.

MR. WILLIAMS: If that is the case then we will call a witness, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. WILLIAMS: The one who responded to our subpoena.

THE COURT: Okay.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. In any event, I am going to show you a document.

Page 97.

MR. WILLIAMS: Could we just mark it for identification?

THE COURT: All right.

MR. WILLIAMS: Defense Exhibit.

THE COURT OFFICER: 14.

MR. WILLIAMS: Defense Exhibit 14 for identification. Defense Exhibit 14 for identification only. Okay (handing).

(Police Department document was marked Defense Exhibit D-l4 for identification.)

MR. WILLIAMS: If you could look at that for us, please.

THE COURT OFFICER: D-14, sir (displaying).

MR. GRANT: Yes.

THE COURT OFFICER: D-14, Your Honor (handing).

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, I just want to say to defense Counsel that had we been given this earlier, just shown these documents -- except whenever they find it convenient to themselves they throw a paper on my desk -- I probably could have agreed to this. I just don't know what it is. I never know from day to day.

THE COURT: I know, that's why I have asked them. And I want from both sides here a list of your witnesses, of what they are going to say, so I know in advance. Either side. You just can't drop something on them. If you had given it to them in advance he could have checked it out and maybe agreed.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, Mr. Grant's point is well taken.

THE COURT: Well, then let's do that, would you. I said I want it today. And from both sides.

MR. WILLIAMS: Let me extend my apologies to Mr. Grant through the Court.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WILLIAMS: I apologize to him for not providing him this printout.

THE COURT: All right.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Now I want you to look down there on the date in the left-hand column -- first of all, up there in the upper right it indicates your name, does it not?

A. Upper left?

Q. Upper left, yes.

A. Yes.

Q. Wakshul, Gary?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you see that?

A. Yes.

Q. Now go down to the date June 25th in the lower, left-hand column.

A. These are dates that I assume, the two at the end?

Q. Yes. Yes.

A. But what do you want, Counsel?

Q. June 25th, do you see that there?

A. Yes.

Q. And then from there going to the next page, all the way to July 8th, do you see that?

(Pause.)

A. Yes.

Q. Does the fact that that printout indicates that from June 25th --

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, I object to anything that it indicates. If it's refreshing his recollection he could indicate what his recollection is. But if he wants to introduce this document through the witness, it's legally inadmissible.

MR. WILLIAMS: That's what I am about to ask him.

THE COURT: Why don't you come right out and ask him.

MR. WILLIAMS: That's what I am about to do.

MR. GRANT: The question is does it --

THE COURT: Refresh his memory.

MR. GRANT: Right.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Does this document and what you have, what I just directed your attention to, the date from June 25th to July 8th, refresh your recollection as to whether you were on vacation? And I refer you specifically to the letters V-A-C there, down the row, on those dates, that you were in fact on vacation for that time period?

A. No, it does not refresh my recollection.

Q. Do you recall taking a vacation at some point in the summer months of 1982?

A. I have a recollection of taking a vacation, of not being in work, yes.

Q. And your recollection is that you were in the City of Philadelphia during that vacation?

A. Not during the whole period. I recall in the early parts of it, yeah, I was waiting. I was basically taking days off.

Q. And when did you, if at all, leave the City of Philadelphia during this period?

A. I don't recall that I left the City of Philadelphia or that I just -- I believe towards the end of that vacation period I did take some time out of the City. But I don't know if it was an eight-day consecutive period or it was several day trips out of the City, I have no recollection.

Q. So just to be clear: When you did take a vacation, whenever you did, whenever that happened, you didn't leave the City for a long stretch of time?

A. Not in the beginning of the vacation, no.

Q. Okay. Then you said possibly you left for a few days towards the end?

A. As I recall from my, from independent recollection. This doesn't help. From independent recollection I believe that's how it was done.

Q. Towards the end?

A. Yeah, somewhere at that point.

Q. Okay. Now, let's see, 1982, July 4th weekend in the City of Philadelphia, City of Brotherly Love, the Liberty Bell and all, 4th of July, do you remember if you were here in this beautiful City during the 4th of July weekend back in 1982?

MR. GRANT: Objection: Asked and answered.

MR. WILLIAMS: I am directing him to particular dates.

MR. GRANT: Objection: Asked and answered.

THE COURT: I think he said he doesn't. Is that what you are saying?

THE WITNESS: Your Honor, I said I do not recall.

THE COURT: He doesn't recall.

THE WITNESS: Exactly where I was.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Okay, you said that you were in the City for the early part but then towards the later end of your vacation you left town possibly?

A. My recollection is in compliance to a request to stay while cases were going on, I was here. And as I recall it, my own independent recollection was that I believed the testimony was over in the case and I was just, I had not been called and I figured I would not be needed and I was, I did take some time.

Page 103.

I couldn't say if it was two or three days towards the end of the vacation. But I do recall that I was still on vacation when the information that I got was, or understood was that the trial had reached a conclusion.

Q. How did you get that impression, Mr. Wakshul?

A. I would be disingenuous to say that I recall. I really don't recall how I got it. It could have come from media, it could have come from gossip, it could have come from anyplace, I really don't recall. But it was my impression that since I was not needed that I had no reason to hang around anymore.

Q. You didn't get it from the defense side, did you, that impression, somebody from the defense?

A. I never spoke to defense or prosecutor during the entire time of the trial that I recall.

Q. Did you, were you in City Hall at any point for purposes of possibly appearing as a witness at any point during the trial, if you recall?

A. I don't recall being here. My impression is that I was not, but I really don't have any independent recollection of it.

Q. In any event, you indicated that during the, that you were in town while testimony was being taken, you had that understanding?

Page 104.

A. Yeah, that's my recollection.

Q. And of course had you been asked by Mr. McGill the prosecutor to testify in this trial, you certainly would have made yourself available?

A. Yes.

MR. WILLIAMS: I have no further questions, Your Honor. Just give me a moment.

(Discussion was held off the record
at this time among defense Counsel.)

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, with the Court's indulgence, if you would just give me a moment to consult with Co-counsel.

(Discussion was held off the record
at this time among defense Counsel.)

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Mr. Wakshul, my Co-counsel, lead Counsel, is far more experienced than I, reminded me of a set of questions that I forgot to ask so forgive me. You, you are familiar with the term patrol log?

A. Yes. Can you --

MR. GRANT: I would object. I would object to this line of questioning. Patrol log or otherwise, if he is here -- and I believe he's here because the Commonwealth spirited him away during the trial and sent him on a paid vacation so they wouldn't have him, and that he heard a statement made by the Defendant at some point in time in the hospital -- are the only two areas or bases that they gave as part of their offer of proof. And now, of course, we are going to do what we usually do and go off on some frolic and detour. I object.

MR. WILLIAMS: Let me propose the question that I want to follow up with. He says he is familiar with the patrol log. I just want to ask him --

MR. GRANT: I move to strike that answer so assume he didn't say that.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, my offer of proof for this line of questioning is I simply want to ask him, Your Honor, if he prepared a patrol log on December 9th, 1981, and where that patrol log is. That's what I am asking.

MR. GRANT: I will withdraw the objection.

THE COURT: Well, I would assume -- go ahead.

Page 106.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Did you prepare a patrol log back on December, December 9th, 1981?

A. Going by my duties and my past experience, I believe I was recorder in the wagon at that time so I probably would have been the one preparing a patrol log. So I would assume that a patrol log was prepared. Where it is, I have no idea.

Q. Do you know where patrol logs are lodged after you used them, is there an archives of some kind?

A. I don't really know where they would go. I know they are turned in to my supervisor. The tickets or car stops and various other pieces of paper to go with them are distributed. Where the patrol logs go is still a mystery to me.

Q. Patrol logs are itself something that you carry with you, right?

A. During your patrol for that evening or day or whatever, yeah.

Q. So you can record what is happening?

A. You put down the time you got a call, the address, and the time that you were back from that call.

Q. And do you also put down in an abbreviated form the fact that you made an arrest, or that somebody reported a crime or some details?

A. Details would vary between officers as to what they do. You could put down what the radio call you received was, you could put down what you do. It could be anything.

Q. Is it safe to say that --

A. It's very extremely abbreviated.

Q. Right. I think in New York we call them memo books. But what I want to ask you is, in these patrol logs, of all the functions that they may serve, and they may serve many functions, is one of the functions that they may serve as a memory aid? That is that you could go back and look and find out what time something happened or where you made an arrest or something like that?

MR. GRANT: Is he asking him what purpose it serves for him?

MR. WILLIAMS: Yes, of course.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Did --

A. No.

Q. So it can never have that purpose for you?

A. Generally, once they are turned in I never see them again.

Q. No, while it is in your possession?

Page 108.

A. No, while it is in my possession, no, it is not a memory aid. It is a record that the Police Department asks every 15 to 20 minutes to a half hour what you are doing at that specific time.

Q. Okay. So if that's true; then you remember all of these details back on December 9th, 1981, about the time, the New York license plate, et cetera, et cetera, that was from the fact that you had the presence of mind to remember it?

A. Hmm-hmm.

Q. Not because you had recorded it in a patrol log?

A. That was not recorded in the patrol log, no.

Q. It was from your memory?

A. Yes.

MR. WILLIAMS: Thank you, Officer. Or Mr. Wakshul.

MR. GRANT: Good morning, sir.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Good morning, sir.

A. Good morning.

Q. I guess it is afternoon at this point. Mr.

Page 109.

Gary Wakshul - Cross

Wakshul, did you know that the reason that you were here is because on page 6 of the Petitioner's Petition for Post-Conviction Relief -- which is what this is, this hearing is about -- in the declaration of Anthony Jackson, the attorney for the Defendant, Mr. Abu-Jamal at the time of trial stated in the first paragraph near the conclusion of the defense case I realized my error -- that is in not subpoenaing you -- and asked that he -- you -- be produced. The prosecutor refused, claiming Wakshul was down on vacation and unavailable. This despite a notation on Wakshul's report that he not be allowed to go on vacation during the trial.

Now, once your vacation is selected, sir --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- and it's done by lottery for these prime vacation periods, other than the Commissioner or at the Commissioner's order, does your sergeant have the right to say you will not take your vacation?

MR. WILLIAMS: I am going to object to what the rights of the sergeant are.

MR. GRANT: Then I will go up the line, okay.

MR. WILLIAMS: I object to that line

Page 110.

Gary Wakshul - Cross

of questioning as to the obligations, duties and rights.

THE COURT: We will find out who is responsible for him being on vacation or not on vacation.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, let's bring those people in. When I ask similar questions Your Honor constantly referred to --

THE COURT: But he knows. He at that time was a police officer and he knows who says to him you can't go on vacation, you can go on vacation, or whatever it is.

MR. WILLIAMS: He is not competent to testify, with all due respect to my learned adversary here, as to what rights and obligations his superiors have. We ought to have his superiors.

MR. GRANT: I will withdraw the question. I will withdraw the question.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. On D-11, which was a report on December the 9th, 1981, which purports to be an investigative interview record of your comments that night, sir, up in the top it says name and address and it has 6th District, 3 squad, group C, no dash V-A-C. Now, you say you don't recall much about the incident including the investigator, sir. And I think you mentioned I have no idea who he is; isn't that correct? Kaminsky?

Page 111.

Gary Wakshul - Cross

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Well, would it surprise you to know that Mr. Kaminsky is a Ms. Kaminsky and it is a she?

A. It wouldn't surprise me: I have absolutely no recollection of who interviewed me whatsoever that evening.

Q. Nevertheless, where it says no V-A-C on that statement, whoever Detective Kaminsky is, does she have the authority to tell you you can't go on vacation for a case whenever that may go to trial?

A. To the best of my knowledge in the Police Department, absolutely not.

Q. And by writing that notation, was that indicating to you that you had no right to go on vacation for whenever this case, which just happened that very morning, an hour-and-a-half or whatever before, that you had no right to go on vacation whenever they scheduled this for trial?

A. No, sir. As I explained before, the notation no V-A-C or no vacation is a general notation that's noted by investigators when they ask the person they have been interviewing, police officer they have been interviewing if they have a scheduled vacation, and when it is. If I didn't have one or it's already past, they mark no vacation.

Page 112.

Gary Wakshul - Cross

Q. Now, did you realize, sir, that on February the llth, when Exhibit D-l3 was taken, or purported to be taken, February 11th of 1982, did you realize that the purpose and the thrust of that investigation was essentially the Internal Affairs Bureau was investigating and contemplating bringing charges against police officers for the allegations in Mr. Jackson's complaint?

A. The only information that I had was that there was a complaint and they were as a routine matter investigating any complaints brought against police officers.

Q. And if --

A. I have no specifics.

Q. And if such complaints were founded, then what?

A. Then they would indeed proceed through the regular procedures to arrest those police officers, or discipline them, depending on the outcome of their investigation.

Q. And Mr. Williams, my brother at the bar,

Page 113.

Gary Wakshul - Cross

stated to you on that date you had an epiphany and you added an important detail that hadn't been mentioned before. Do you recall that on direct?

A. I remember that question, yes.

Q. But in fact you had an epiphany that included two important details? One you recalled was a statement made -- since they are investigating police officers -- by someone to the Defendant or the suspect at that time that he was in the care and custody of the police, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. And if that were a police officer, did you realize at that time that that would be the subject of an investigation for police misconduct, sir?

A. You are referring to the statement in response to Mr. Jamal: If he dies you die?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Yes, I was well aware at that time that a police officer, if it was a police officer, was in trouble for that remark.

Q. Nevertheless, you told about that, did you not?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. And at that time, since they were investigating misconduct of the police, did you realize that that comment made by, if it was a policeman, that if it was made by a policeman, that that comment was proceeded by another comment made by the suspect who was there at the scene and to whom the comment was directed by this third party?

Page 114.

Gary Wakshul - Cross

A. That's correct.

Q. Is that what brought the Defendant's statement to your mind: The fact that somebody else who may have been a cop was making a threat, essentially, to this man's life?

A. I can't say 100 percent that that's what brought it to my recollection at this particular juncture. I do recall that the statement was made, and I do recall the response to that statement. And if I'm recalling correctly, I was at this point realizing that that statement was probably the complaint that was being investigated. And so both statements had to be made at this time.

Q. Did you take the statement if he dies you die as a threat of death, or serious bodily harm, at least, by whoever made it?

A. I didn't -- I don't think I took it to mean that. Judging by the way that it was said.

Q. In what way was it said, by the way?

A. It was said in a tear-choked, angry, very

Page 115.

Gary Wakshul - Cross

emotional voice by someone. And I took it at that point to mean that that person would face a trial and because of that statement possible execution. And that's what was a response to the statement that was made originally by Jamal.

Q. Now, you said you didn't see Officer Gary Bell, or that you didn't recall during that transition of events whether Officer Gary Bell or your partner or security personnel from Thomas Jefferson Hospital or anybody else, the nurses, doctors, were there. Would it be safe to say that nurses and doctors were on duty at Jefferson Hospital, whether you recall it or not?

A. Oh, yes, yes, they were definitely there on duty at that time.

Q. And would it be safe to say that emergency personnel in charge of the emergency room where persons walk in off the street were there on duty at the hospital, whether you recall them or not?

A. I don't know about persons walking in from the street, but it's quite possible that anybody could have been there at that time. This was an open emergency ward.

Q. No, I am saying, whether or not you recall seeing them, do you think it would be fair to say that hospital security personnel who work at Thomas Jefferson, in or about the emergency room, whether you saw them or not, would you think that they were not there on --

Page 116.

Gary Wakshul - Cross

A. I would assume that they were there. Especially with all the police there, yes.

Q. Now, despite the fact that you did not see Police Officer, or recall seeing Police Officer Gary Bell at that time the statement was made, would it surprise you to know that Officer Bell was called to the witness stand and testified and he admitted that that statement was made if he dies you die, and he is the officer that made that statement?

A. I can't say I would be surprised. I just don't know who said it. I didn't recognize the voice as it was being said. But it could very well be anyone who was there.

Q. And if in fact Mr. Bell testified, that would be in accordance with what you recall as to what transpired at the time Mr. Jamal made the statement; is that correct?

A. Oh, absolutely. It was an immediate response to the, to Mr. Jamal's statement. It was right afterwards. But I had -- unfortunately, I didn't see who, or hear who said that because as soon as Mr.

Page 117.

Gary Wakshul - Cross

Jamal made his statement I took a step back. And there was a little area I was in. I heard the immediate response within seconds or less.

Q. Do you know Joseph LeGrand or Priscilla Durham, or did you know them in 1981 or '82?

A. I don't know the names. I don't recall them, I have no recollection of those names. I wouldn't know who they were. If I knew them at the time I certainly didn't know their names.

Q. Now, when you finally received your vacation dates, and you looked at what purported to be a submission from the Philadelphia Police Department with dates and letters next to them, acronyms or what have you, does that include regularly scheduled days off for any particular officer, namely, RDO's, to the best of your observation?

A. It does not appear to.

Q. Well, because it does not appear on there, does it mean that you don't get to take a day off or two days off during the week?

A. No, sir, we work six on and two off regularly. At that time that was the Police Department schedule.

Q. So that doesn't accurately reflect the time that you in fact were not working?

A. No, it does not reflect all the times that I was working or not working.

Page 118.

Gary Wakshul - Cross

Q. Now, sir, after your vacation is approved and if somebody says whenever the trial is scheduled, if you're on vacation see if you can stay around, does that mean see if you could stay within calling distance to make yourself available if you are called to testify? Tell us what you meant by that testimony?

A. In point of fact, I've never been asked that before when I was on vacation. I assumed it would mean because the trial was going on stay around and available in case we want to call you or you're called by someone, and see what transpired. Which is the way I took it at that time. And I did not go away on vacation, most of it was spent at home.

Q. To stay around, does that mean stay around the environs of the Courtroom outside in the hallway, to you?

A. Well, I didn't take it to mean that, no. Since I wasn't working, I did not receive a subpoena, I saw no reason to stay around the Courtroom, no.

Q. If you were given vacation by lottery or whatever method, and you wished to go away, and they are asking you this, is this an order or is this a request?

Page 119.

Gary Wakshul - Cross

A. This was a request, as I recall it.

Q. And if they are requesting you to forego whatever plans you had, are you compensated for that in some way?

A. No.

Q. So --

A. No, I would be using my vacation. So if I was called to Court it would still be -- well, I imagine I could put in a case of being called on duty and not use a vacation day. But those days that I was staying around I was not on duty, I was still on vacation.

Q. Did you receive a subpoena or Court notice from the District Attorney's Office during this trial to appear in Court?

A. No.

Q. And I would like you to assume for the moment for the purposes of this line of questioning and this discussion that the trial began on or about June 3rd or June 1st of 1982. From June lst, 1982, until the 4th of July, 1982, do you recall being asked to come into Court for purposes of testimony or anything else by the Commonwealth?

A. I was never called into Court at any time that I know of. I was never called. I never received any subpoena or Court notice.

Page 120.

Gary Wakshul - Cross

Q. Did you hang around in the environs of the Courtroom just out of curiosity to see what was going on in the trial?

A. No.

Q. That is here in City Hall?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Do you know what Courtroom this case took place in?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Now, did the defense at any point in time contact you by subpoena or otherwise and ask you to come into Court and testify on behalf of Mr. Jamal?

A. In '82?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, you indicated that when there are vacation dates scheduled and a trial date is also scheduled, that oftentimes the D.A. either, A, as you said and you felt has the responsibility to notify the court of what dates are good and what dates are bad for trial, or to bring it to someone's attention in the Police Department. Now let's look at the scenario such as occurred in this case where you have scores of police officers, and perhaps a dozen, or dozens of civilians. If the case is scheduled for trial, say, during the month of June, and that is convenient with the schedules of the majority if not all of the police officers involved, except for Gary Wakshul, is it your understanding that the D.A. would ask the Court to continue that case or to cancel that court trial date because one officer is not available?

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, I am going to object to that question because this witness is not competent to address what the obligations of the District Attorney are. We could have Mr. McGill testify as to that.

MR. GRANT: He was competent on direct to give his opinion, I don't see why he can't be competent 25 minutes later.

MR. WILLIAMS: I believe that line of questioning was sustained, Your Honor.

MR. GRANT: It most certainly was not. I didn't even object.

THE COURT: Okay, let the question stand.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. The question is this. When you have scores of officers and dozens of civilians, and one police officer's vacation schedule may conflict with the trial date already set, is it your understanding that, the squad leader even in this instance, that they would cancel the trial because of that one officer? --

A. From my experience I don't believe that that is the case. There are often times when a case can proceed without certain witnesses. And they do in fact. And it would be up to the judge also in those matters to make a decision if the District Attorney were to ask for a date. But generally if the case can proceed without a certain witness it proceeds.

Q. Did someone surreptitiously, stealthfully, by telephone or face-to-face conversation with you, ask you to absent yourself from Philadelphia during the course of the trial so that Mr. Jamal could not have the benefit of your services?

A. At no time.

Q. Did anyone suggest to you that we would like you to leave town, we will pay for your vacation so you won't be around in the unlikely event Mr. Jamal needs your testimony?

A. At no time. Nobody ever offered to pay for my vacation.

MR. GRANT: I have nothing further.

- - - - -

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Now, Mr. Wakshul, you would agree, would you not, that the administration of justice is not beholding to a police officer's vacation?

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, was that a question? And if it is, I would like to object because I don't quite understand it. But could counsel rephrase that.

MR. WILLIAMS: I will try.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Is it your understanding that the administration of justice takes priority over an individual officer's vacation schedule?

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, if there is a policy, I have no objection.

MR. WILLIAMS: Not a policy, if it is his understanding.

MR. GRANT: Well, his understanding has to be based on something. And it doesn't matter what his personal opinion is, that is irrelevant and I object to it on that basis. But if there is some Police Department regulation, I will withdraw my objection.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Is there an understanding? And I will ask you what the basis of that understanding is if there is one.

A. As I recall and understand vacation policy in the Police Department at the time, historically there have been complaints from the FOP that when an officer schedules a vacation, especially if they have plans to go away, and then they are called into court, it is financially disruptive to them as well as to their families. So that I believe before I came on the Police Department that an agreement was reached, an amicable agreement that when a police officer is scheduled on vacation, that the Courts and the District Attorneys and the private attorneys or Public Defenders would arrange those dates around the police officer's schedule, if at all possible. But the police officer, as far as policy is concerned, when he had a vacation, was told you may go on your vacation.

Q. So your understanding was that there was in these Courts and in this Court system, that there is some kind of arrangement whereby the participants in the administration of justice -- that is the District

Attorneys, Judges, and indeed even defense counsel, that they will try to work around police officers to the best of their ability?

A. In the scheduling of the beginning of cases, yes.

Q. And for that to work to accommodate the vacations of police officers, that would entail communication between the Police Department and members of the prosecution staff, would it not?

A. I can only render an opinion that that would be so.

Q. Well, it stands to reason, does it not, it is common sense?

MR. GRANT: I would object. He is saying that's speculation and I don't want to comment, and I agree with him. I move to strike that.

MR. WILLIAMS: I am going by his understanding, Your Honor. That was the line of questioning, if it is his understanding as to the open channels of communication so that the District Attorneys would know whether someone is on vacation.

THE COURT: I am not denying that the District Attorney would know. What's that got to do with this issue?

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, I think the issue --

THE COURT: You are on recross now as to what he brought up.

MR. WILLIAMS: Right, I am following up on that.

THE COURT: What did he bring up that you have to get into this?

MR. WILLIAMS: He brought up the whole aspect of whether Mr. Wakshul went on vacation suggesting it was without the knowledge of the District Attorney.

MR. GRANT: I didn't suggest anything of the sort.

THE COURT: He said --

MR. WILLIAMS: If the position is that the District Attorney's Office indeed knew he was going on vacation, then if they so state that I will withdraw the line of questioning.

MR. GRANT: I didn't state that and I won't state that.

MR. WILLIAMS: That's what I am trying --

MR. GRANT: I am saying it is beyond

Page 127.

my cross.

MR. WILLIAMS: That's exactly what I am trying to pin down.

THE COURT: He is saying it is beyond what he brought up on cross.

MR. WILLIAMS: And, Your Honor, I am saying it isn't. My notes indicate that he was asking questions about the circumstances under which he went on vacation.

THE COURT: Well, he already testified that he was here in the early part, he was here in the City. So what's the problem?

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, there is a big problem, Your Honor, in that he left during --

THE COURT: He left because he felt that he wasn't needed towards the end of his vacation. So what's wrong with that?

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, what's wrong with that is a man is being sentenced to death without the benefit of his testimony.

THE COURT: No one bothered to tell him, as far as I could understand from him.

MR. WILLIAMS: Isn't that the issue: Nobody bothered to tell him? You just heard Mr. Jackson testify that there was no reason, no tactical reason for not calling Mr. Wakshul. In fact, he testified that had he had the reports that I had, he could have done perhaps a better job than I did in questioning Mr. Wakshul. And I certainly think --

MR. GRANT: He misstates the witness. I object. He misstates what Mr. Jackson said. Mr. Jackson said invariably he had the statement because Mr. Jamal couldn't have had it, and we know he did because he gave his summation on his death speech from that, number one. And number two, Mr. Jackson in the notes of testimony from the very day when they asked for Mr. Wakshul asked the Defendant why didn't you tell me, and the Defendant said I did tell you, I told you back at the motion to suppress. I object to Counsel misstating the record in order to get his way with this witness. I still object to the line of questioning.

MR. WILLIAMS: I only seek to inquire into the pivotal question here, not simply on the prejudice aspect of the ineffective assistance claim, Your Honor, but also on the claim regarding the bona fides of his going on vacation. And that is the Brady aspect of our Petition. That a defense witness was sent away on vacation, or at least --

THE COURT: Wait awhile now. Sent by whom?

MR. WILLIAMS: By the District Attorney's Office.

THE COURT: He said nobody told him.

MR. WILLIAMS: Or -- but I didn't get to complete my sentence -- or that he was allowed to go on vacation with the complete acquiescence of the prosecution knowing well full that he was a pivotal witness on the confession.

THE COURT: The only evidence I know about that is at the last minute when the defense asked for him.

MR. WILLIAMS: Yes, you are fully familiar. And you indeed told Mr. Jamal that you and your attorney goofed. That's exactly right. And we did indeed have Mr. Jackson, who said it was his obligation, did indeed goof. Now the question is --

THE COURT: Mr. Jackson said all along that he didn't know who he was going to call next, he has to confer with the Defendant here and decide who he wants to put on.

MR. WILLIAMS: Yes, but I am a trial lawyer myself and I know that --

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. WILLIAMS: -- that you consult with your client but also you make an independent judgment as to who you should call.

THE COURT: Not in this case. Because my memory of the case is Mr. Jamal was running the case.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor instructed Mr. Jackson that he had a moral and ethical and a legal obligation to defend Mr. Jamal to the best of his ability.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. WILLIAMS: Independent of Mr. Jamal.

THE COURT: Right, because the Supreme Court, what happened there was Mr. Jamal didn't want Mr. Jackson to do anything. Not to even cross-examine witnesses. I didn't know at that time that Mr. Jackson had represented the MOVE members. And they caught me up here on, just as I was get getting ready to go out. And I told him, I said the Supreme Court in the MOVE case has said that you are not to listen to him if he doesn't want to call anybody or he doesn't want you to cross-examine anybody. You are to do it to the best of your ability. And that's what I told Mr. Jackson to do. But Mr. Jackson already knew that because he had represented the MOVE. Now, I didn't know that.

MR. WILLIAMS: And Your Honor --

THE COURT: I thought I was telling him something.

MR. WILLIAMS: And I endorse that. Exactly right. He did have a legal obligation to defend Mr. Jackson.

THE COURT: I know. He said he didn't even know what witnesses to call. He was under, really he was under threats. He really --

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, where in the record --

THE COURT: From my talking to him I got that impression.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, if I withdraw my objection is that going to stop Counsel from testifying and just get on with this matter?

MR. WILLIAMS: Of course it would.

Page 132.

THE COURT: Are you withdrawing your objection?

MR. GRANT: Yes, Judge.

THE COURT: All right, he is withdrawing the objection, all right. Now come on, let's go.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Now, is it your understanding, you just described that the Court system and the participants in the administration of justice -- which would include the prosecutor, the judge, and the defense -- would try to accommodate the vacation schedules of police officers. My question to you is, does that suggest to you or are you aware, therefore, for this system of accommodating officers to work, that requires an open channel of communication between the prosecutor and the Police Department?

A. I would imagine so.

Q. And that's because it stands to reason: Obviously the prosecution would need to know the vacation schedules of police officers in order to tell the Court of any possible conflicts; is that not true?

A. It happens. There is also experiences where the prosecutor has absolutely no idea when an officer is on vacation.

Q. And in those circumstances when the prosecutor is derelict in finding out the vacation schedule of police officers --

MR. GRANT: I object to the use of that term also.

THE COURT: Rephrase your question, will you.

MR. WILLIAMS: I will rephrase it, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Without the derogatory remarks.

MR. WILLIAMS: I will rephrase it, Your Honor.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. So in those instances when the District Attorney is unaware of the police officer's vacation schedule, then he is unable to apprise the court and the defense that a potential witness, a potential police officer witness, would be unavailable?

A. I believe that would be the outcome of it. If he didn't know he would be unable to tell the court, sure.

Q. And in this description that you gave of how the administration of justice works in this City, if a police officer doesn't ask, or there is no open channel of communication, and that breaks down, so the police officer is unaware of vacation schedule, that would affect the orderly administration of justice, does it not?

A. Are you saying if a police officer doesn't know when his vacation --

Q. No, when the District Attorney doesn't know. If in those instances where the District Attorney is unaware of a police officer's vacation schedule, and is therefore unable to tell the court or defense counsel, that would impede the orderly function of the administration of justice?

A. It can.

Q. It can. And indeed it did in this case, did it not?

A. I have no idea.

Q. You were unavailable on July lst, were you not?

MR. GRANT: Objection: He said he doesn't recall his whereabouts. And whether it impedes the administration of justice is up to the fact-finder of this Court and the Supreme Court of this State. He is not competent to make a comment on that at all. As Counsel well knows.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Now, by the way, you were required to provide in your personnel file and possibly other files your home telephone number so that you could be reached by superiors if necessary?

A. Yes, I believe that was a requirement.

Q. And therefore, if a District Attorney were in need of your testimony, you could be reached at home?

MR. GRANT: Objection. That presumes that we have his personnel files and they should know now by their subpoena process that is not so.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Is it possible for a District Attorney if you were needed to testify, through contacts with any superiors in the Police Department, to contact you at home?

MR. GRANT: I object to what is possible. Anything is possible.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Well, given the fact that his superiors have access to his home phone number, would that permit a prosecutor to contact you at home, through contact of the superior?

Page 136.

MR. GRANT: Objection.

THE COURT: Well, I think it's obvious that that's a possibility. So what?

MR. WILLIAMS: So I would like to have an answer to that question.

THE COURT: You don't have to ask him, you could ask me. But go ahead.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Do you agree with His Honor that it is obvious that of course a prosecutor could --

A. It is certainly possible to get my phone number. Many people have gotten it recently that had no business having it.

Q. Is that the same phone number that you had back in 1982, by the way?

MR. GRANT: Objection, objection.

THE COURT: I will sustain that.

MR. GRANT: I don't think you have to get into this personal matter.

MR. WILLIAMS: You are right.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. In any event, it is evident and it is clearly evident to you as you sit here today that people could reach you by phone?

A. I'm sure people could reach me by phone, yes.

Page 137.

Q. You had indicated, or Mr. Grant had indicated to you that the February 11th interview, that the thrust, I think was his word, the thrust of that interview related to an investigation into brutality?

MR. GRANT: I said misconduct.

MR. WILLIAMS: I'm sorry, you are right.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Misconduct; is that right?

A. It was an Internal Affairs investigation and by nature that is some sort of police misconduct.

Q. And the interviews that we discussed this morning -- December 9th and December 16th -- didn't deal with misconduct of police, it dealt with the critical question of who shot Officer Faulkner?

MR. GRANT: Objection. He tries to get beyond the scope of my cross by using one document, and after he raises that issue, then he goes back into something which of course he has no right to do. I object: It's beyond the scope. That was very clever.

THE COURT: This is recross and if you want, I think you have gone into that on direct anyway a long time ago. So let's move forward.

MR. WILLIAMS: Very well.

Page 138.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Now, you indicated the remark that you have in the February 11th report that you were asked about, the remark being if he dies you die, or something to that effect; do you recall that?

A. I recall the remark, yes.

Q. Okay. And that is in your February 11th report?

A. IAB report, yes.

Q. And the IAB investigator who was questioning you was not only questioning you about potential or possible verbal abuse, but also about physical abuse?

A. Umm, I don't recall any direct questions on that.

Q. No?

A. There is, one of the, the initial statement of the staff inspector, it says I am investigating a complaint which indicates that police officers, I believe the word is, physically and verbally abused his client.

Q. Right, right.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you testified on direct that when you heard Mr. Jamal allegedly make this confession, that you noticed that your partner was near him; correct?

Page 139.

Gary Wakshul - Redirect

A. I stated that I read that in the report, my partner was near him, on questioning from the investigator, yes.

Q. Right. And your testimony on cross was that immediately after that confession there was this response if he dies you die?

A. By immediate, if you mean within a few seconds, yes.

Q. Yes. So you hear the confession, and when you hear the confession you notice your partner is near him, and you hear the remark if he dies you die: I have that right?

A. Not really, no.

Q. Tell me where I am wrong?

A. I did not take specific notice of where my partner was. My partner was with me, I imagine he was near me, and I was very near Mr. Jamal at the time.

Q. Okay.

A. When I heard the first statement by Mr. Jamal while he was sitting on the floor, I shot him, I hope the mother-fucker dies, I immediately was turned around. I turned myself around, there was a little area, I believe it was like an alcove for a doorway or something and I turned into it. And as soon as that happened I heard the second remark, if he dies you die.

Page 140.

Gary Wakshul - Redirect

Q. So the person who uttered the remark if he dies you die was also an officer that was present?

A. I have no idea who said it. I don't know if it was an officer. I don't know if it was an officer. It was some person present at that location.

Q. And obviously it was near enough to hear this remark?

A. Yes. I would --

Q. And you testified earlier that you knew what Officer Bell looked like?

A. Yes.

Q. And that he was a colleague of yours in the 6th District, right?

A. Yes, he was.

Q. And yet you say you don't recall seeing Officer Bell present when this remark was made?

A. No, I don't recall.

Q. And according to your report, the only person that you recall being there with you, other than a lot of officers, is your partner?

A. And I only recall my partner because he is with me all night. I can't say that I recall where

Page 141.

Gary Wakshul - Redirect

his face was or where he was actually standing. I don't recall that at all. But I know he was there.

And there were several police officers in uniform. There were at least two others because I needed two others to assist us in getting him into the emergency room. And I don't recall who the other people were.

Q. So my question to you, then: Of all these police officers that you say were there, is it surprising to you that not a single one told an investigator that night or the day after or the day after that, or a week later, or a month later, that a confession was made by Mr. Jamal? Is that surprising to you?

MR. GRANT: Objection. And I think I had a standing objection to, despite his histrionics, it is still the same question that he was barred from asking before. And I would ask that Counsel be admonished for his theatrics, good though they are. It is still trying to evade Your Honor's ruling.

THE COURT: I already ruled on that, Counselor.

MR. WILLIAMS: And the rule is?

THE COURT: The same as it was then.

Page 142.

Gary Wakshul - Redirect

Bring him in. If you want these witnesses in here, bring them in. Whether he is surprised or not doesn't make any difference. Bring them in.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. In any event -- withdraw it. Would you have honored a defense subpoena had you been served with one?

MR. GRANT: Beyond the scope: Objection.

MR. WILLIAMS: He was asked, he was asked if he had been given a defense subpoena. I am merely asking a follow-up.

MR. GRANT: I didn't ask that. Why do you misstate the evidence and the record continually, Counsel? I asked him was he ever served. That's beyond the scope: I object.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, of course the Court's recollection holds.

THE COURT: But it's strictly speculation, whether he would or would not. He wasn't served, period. So let's not speculate what he would do.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, that's precisely what I am trying --

THE COURT: No, because he was already

Page 143.

Gary Wakshul - Redirect

here and available. He said that.

MR. WILLIAMS: Okay, so if I understand the Court's comment correctly, if Your Honor is concluding that he was here and available then I need not ask the question, if that will be your finding of fact.

THE COURT: He is speculating as to what he would do. Because if it was necessary, the Court would order him in. So what's the difference what he would want to do?

MR. WILLIAMS: My concern is -- and maybe the Court has allayed my concerns -- is that I am simply trying to establish the fact, which I would ask Your Honor to find at the end of this hearing, that indeed at least for part of the time, as he has testified, he was available to testify.

THE COURT: Well, it's obvious that's what he said.

MR. WILLIAMS: Very well. The Court has indicated it would find that fact, I need not ask that question.

MR. GRANT: I don't believe the Court has indicated it would find any such fact.

MR. WILLIAMS: That is precisely why I

Page 144.

Gary Wakshul - Redirect

need to ask the question. Because I need to establish that fact.

THE COURT: What fact?

MR. WILLIAMS: That he was available to testify.

THE COURT: Well, he said, and I am sure he is telling the truth, that he was here in Philadelphia and hadn't left in the beginning part.

MR. WILLIAMS: And would he honor the subpoena.

MR. GRANT: That's beyond the scope.

MR. WILLIAMS: Is he saying, I mean I think the answer is going to be obvious, and of course he would. But for the benefit of the record, I think we ought to close that gap. Otherwise, we may have in a future submission we would receive from the Commonwealth that there is no testimony that had he been given a subpoena he nevertheless would have or would not have come. I just want to insure that the Commonwealth will not invoke that argument.

MR. GRANT: That is not a basis to avoid the rules of evidence, just because he wants to close gaps and he wants to be sure. We

Page 145.

Gary Wakshul - Redirect

have rules here. Whether you come from New York City or you live in this State, you walk in the room here, the rules of evidence apply in this room.

MR. WILLIAMS: Right.

MR. GRANT: It is beyond the scope: I object.

MR. WILLIAMS: The rules of evidence allow me to ask if he --

THE COURT: It was beyond the scope of cross. This is recross now, okay.

MR. WILLIAMS: I think the answer is obvious but nonetheless --

THE COURT: Counselor. It's beyond the scope.

MR. WILLIAMS: Very well.

THE COURT: Okay.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. You indicated on direct and reiterated on cross -- well, I'm sorry, perhaps not on cross -- you indicated on direct that you would have testified had Mr. McGill asked you to testify?

MR. GRANT: Objection.

MR. WILLIAMS: Do you remember that?

MR. GRANT: If he indicated on direct

Page 146.

Gary Wakshul - Redirect

as their witness, and he didn't indicate on cross, it's clearly beyond the scope of cross. Is that a difficult concept, Your Honor.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor.

THE COURT: Counselor.

MR. WILLIAMS: I didn't ask the follow-up question. I was directing his attention to an area.

THE COURT: Counselor, he is correct on that issue. Counselor, I have ruled he is correct on that issue.

MR. WILLIAMS: If I can.

THE COURT: Counselor, I have made a ruling. You have an automatic exception. Let's not argue with the Court.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Now, you indicated that you weren't, you don't recall physically being in this building at the time the trial was being conducted on cross-examination; do you recall that?

A. That I don't recall?

Q. You were asked on cross-examination?

A. As far as I know, I was not here during the trial, during the time of the trial in this building.

Q. Okay. Okay. Do you mean to suggest when you

Page 147.

Gary Wakshul - Redirect

answered that question on cross-examination that therefore you were unavailable to testify if the Commonwealth had called you as a witness?

MR. GRANT: Objection to the speculation and the indirection.

THE COURT: I will sustain that. You are trying to get in the back door what you can't get in the front door, Counselor. Please. All right.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time among defense Counsel.)

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Now, on the February 11th interview regarding the inquiry into physical and verbal abuse -- and you commented that perhaps there might have been verbal abuse in the form of a threat to Mr. Jamal -- my question to you is did you see any physical abuse?

MR. GRANT: Objection: Beyond the scope of cross.

MR. WILLIAMS: That was a subject that was explored directly by Counsel.

MR. GRANT: I didn't ask him anything about physical abuse at all.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, I am not required to re-ask questions that are on cross.

Page 148.

Gary Wakshul - Redirect

If I am exploring an area --

THE COURT: The thing is, if you could bring it up in direct you should bring it up in direct. You introduced this in direct. Now, if you wanted to bring out anything about physical abuse, you should have done it then.

MR. WILLIAMS: I didn't want to make an issue of it until --

THE COURT: Why not?

MR. WILLIAMS: Because if Mr. Grant wants to make an issue of it then I will direct his attention to it on redirect.

THE COURT: No, if you didn't want to make an issue of it in direct you can't do it in recross.

MR. WILLIAMS: In redirect.

THE COURT: Or redirect. You should have done that, you should have done that at that time.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, I can re-raise it if it is raised in cross.

THE COURT: It wasn't raised in cross, nothing about physical, only --

MR. WILLIAMS: The issue of abuse was. Are we going to slice the baloney that thin that

Page 149.

Gary Wakshul - Redirect

since he could only raise, he can raise the issue of verbal abuse, that somehow the whole category of physical abuse is --

THE COURT: I am saying to you, Counselor, in plain English: If you could have raised this in direct you should have done it at that time. Otherwise it's out.

MR. WILLIAMS: I know of no rule of evidence that fits that.

THE COURT: Well, I'm sorry if you don't know of any rule of evidence. I realize you are from New York, but we're dealing with Pennsylvania law here.

MR. WILLIAMS: I'm becoming acutely aware of that.

THE COURT: Counselor, I have ruled on it. Please don't argue with me anymore.

THE COURT OFFICER: Quiet in the Courtroom, please.

MR. WILLIAMS: Very well.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Now, you have testified on cross-examination and your answers on cross-examination indicated that a case often can proceed without a witness if there are, say, scores and scores of other police officers

Page 150.

Gary Wakshul - Redirect

who could testify, if one officer is unavailable, perhaps a case nonetheless could go forward; do you recall that?

A. I recall that discussion, yes.

Q. By Mr. Grant?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it your understanding that it is appropriate for a case to proceed where there are scores and scores of prosecution witnesses that are police officers, that they can proceed without the benefit of a police officer who is helpful to a defendant; is that your understanding?

MR. GRANT: I object.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, that is squarely within an inquiry by Mr. Grant.

MR. GRANT: I didn't say it was beyond, I didn't say it was beyond the scope, Counselor. I think it's totally immaterial and irrelevant and there is no suggestion whatsoever by either direct or cross that that is the situation.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, all I am asking for is some intellectual tenure here. Now, he asked the question can the case proceed if there are scores of officers and if there is one officer that has a vacation. I am asking the crucial question: What if that one officer that went on vacation happens to be an officer that helps the defense.

THE COURT: Well, you are assuming things here.

MR. WILLIAMS: What am I assuming?

THE COURT: You are assuming that he is going to help the defense.

MR. WILLIAMS: I thought I spent the morning demonstrating that.

THE COURT: I know you have been trying to do that. But there were other officers there and that you say made certain statements. You could have used them.

MR. WILLIAMS: The point is could we have used Officer Wakshul.

THE COURT: Well, whether you could or couldn't, he wasn't here. All right, Counselor.

MR. WILLIAMS: So my question to him, Your Honor, I said if there are scores of officers who were available to testify --

THE COURT: Well, that's something you should argue to the Court, not with the witness.

MR. WILLIAMS: So Your Honor is

Page 152.

barring me from that question?

THE COURT: I am barring you from that question, yes.

MR. WILLIAMS: Very well. In that event, I have no further questions.

MR. GRANT: Nor do I, Your Honor. Thank you, Mr. Wakshul.

THE WITNESS: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Let's take a luncheon recess until 2:15.

THE COURT OFFICER: 2:15, Your Honor? This Court now stands in luncheon recess until 2:15 this afternoon at the call of the Crier.

- - - - -

(Luncheon recess was held until 2:40 p.m.)

- - - - -

THE COURT OFFICER: Quiet in the room, please. Court is now reconvened. Thank you.

MR. GRANT: Before we proceed, Your Honor, I would like to bring something to the Court's attention which I think is of serious, if not of grave, importance. There is a gentleman whose name was Mr. George Ewalt.

Page 153.

THE COURT: Who?

MR. GRANT: Mr. Ewalt 13 years ago happened to be the foreperson of the Jury in Mr. Jamal's case. Mr. Ewalt received a subpoena from the defense to appear here in this Courtroom to testify for tomorrow morning.

I would just like to invite Your Honor's attention to a couple of salient features regarding this subpoena which I think is indicative of the defense's abuse of your authority to do this over and over again to person after person in this case for which there is no affidavit, there is no averment that they have any material testimony to provide, and they are not making offers of proof. And they are not notifying us until the day it happens. Of course they didn't notify me of this either but it just so happens that things come to peoples' attention.

Now, they have what is called in Pennsylvania law, including most other jurisdictions, in this case including New York City, what is known as the no impeachment rule. And that means once the juror has given their verdict, it's been read by the foreperson into the record, there's been a polling of the jury -- and in this case the Jury was polled both as to guilt and as to penalty by Mr. Jackson -- and the verdict is thereafter recorded and in the Quarter Sessions file, unless counsel is bringing to the attention of the court some external or third-party influence impacting upon the jurors' deliberations, the jurors are incompetent, incompetent to testify about their deliberative process. That is, what went on in their minds that led to their verdicts. And if there is interaction among jurors or a lack of it, that still is not subject to impeachment by interview by Your Honor, by affidavit by defense counsel, by investigation and inquiry by investigators.

Now, you may note, Your Honor, that the defense submitted to you the affidavit of one Steven Wayne Hawkins who appeared before Your Honor as an attorney at the Bar of this Court on Wednesday, July 12th, the first day of this proceedings. He is the young man that said he had six years of death penalty experience and went on to state his opinion as to what the law is. He interviewed an individual Juror who sat on the Jury and deliberated -- and her name was Savannah Davis. Because of his expertise, I imagine, as a death penalty counsel, Mr. Hawkins must have known very well that he can not bring an affidavit from a Juror into this Court or have her sit on this witness stand and testify about the deliberative process of the Jury. So instead of doing that, he crafts an affidavit where he purports to relate his questioning of her and her responses.

Now, if that weren't enough, Counsel now purports to bring in the foreperson of the Jury for much, I assume, the same thing. I would refer Your Honor's attention, because I did a little research into New York law to find out if there is something that goes on over there at that table that is different than other parts of this world. And I found out, Your Honor, that their activities are proscribed by and illuminated by a case called Stein versus New York State, which is cited at 346 United States Supreme Court, 156; secondarily cited at 73 Supreme Court, 1077. And as to the pages of the particular, from the U.S. Reporter, it's 178, and from the Supreme Court Reporter it's 1089.

This case is 42 years old. And it stands for the proposition that -- in New York State, by the way, allegations raised by affidavits such as Mr. Hawkins' involving either third-party information -- which clearly from his affidavit did not -- and therefore improperly introduced into the deliberations and not without any objectively demonstrated effect to attempt to impeach the verdict of the Jurors -- in Stein versus New York, the Appellate Division of the New York City Courts, I imagine it is, dropped a footnote in which they said, we disapprove of the conduct of defendant's counsel in obtaining a juror's affidavit. And they cite civil rights laws under the State of New York, People versus DeLucia and People versus Straff, among other cases. And it said, the procuring of such affidavits and the failure to make timely notice to the court of their existence may in fact conflict with disciplinary Rule 7-108 B of the Code of Professional Responsibility. The Code of Professional Responsibility is basically called the ethics board. And it governs the

It is not only illegal now, it apparently is unethical. And that's been the law where they come from for 42 years. Now, I don't know what they think 'the law is here, but I am going to cite their attention if I may to three cases: Carter versus U.S. Steel, 529 PA Supreme Court 409, a 1992 case; Commonwealth versus Jeffrey Carr, a Pennsylvania Superior Court case cited at 370 PA Super, page 1, a 1987 case; and Pittsburgh National Bank versus Mutual Life Insurance Company, another Supreme Court case, at 493 PA 96.

The rule in Pennsylvania, as well as in a majority of jurisdictions, is that a juror is incompetent to testify as to what occurred during the deliberations. This rule is often referred to as the no-impeachment rule.

Now, when it is said as well in a majority of jurisdictions, I want to make it known to the Court that that majority encompasses the State contiguous to ours, that the law still exists there: It hasn't changed since they crossed the state lines. I highly resent what they are trying to do, I highly resent they are trying to intimidate these people. And I ask Your Honor to have a hearing right now as to who served that subpoena and what their intention was. And if they attempted third-party interference with what the deliberative process was, I would like Counsel sanctioned.

THE COURT: Do you want to answer?

MR. WEINGLASS: There is really no need to answer.

THE COURT: Why not?

MR. WEINGLASS: Because, number one, we did not, we never have, and we don't intend to produce an affidavit of a Juror. We produced affidavit number 10, which is appended to our Petition, which is not an affidavit of a Juror, but an affidavit of Mr. Hawkins. Point number one.

Point number two: It would save the Court a lot of time and this record a lot of time if Counsel had read that affidavit. Because -- please, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Let me just say one thing.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am at the Bar of the Court. The Court sat here for 10 minutes listening to utter nonsense. Now I am trying to correct the mis impression that was given to this Court.

THE COURT: Okay. Okay, go ahead. All right.

MR. WEINGLASS: Okay.

THE COURT: When you are done I have something to say.

MR. WEINGLASS: That's how I thought things are ordinarily done.

THE COURT: Don't tell me how to run this Courtroom.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am not, I am only making observations.

THE COURT: Don't make observations, okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: The law is clear beyond dispute that you can not impeach a jury's verdict. If we were trying to impeach a jury's verdict, we are wrong. The fact of the matter is, when you read the affidavit, we are not attempting to in any way impeach a jury's verdict. What the affidavit of Mr. Hawkins alleges is the very exception that Counsel cited to the rule. You may always show outside the deliberation room jury misconduct. And that's what we are trying to show in this instance. And we are showing it by way of an affidavit from Mr. Hawkins, who says that he had talked to a Juror not about deliberations, but about what went on in the hotel after Court. And what he got from that Juror is that the Jury foreman --

MR. GRANT: I object to him repeating on this record what he got.

MR. WEINGLASS: It's public, it's public.

MR. GRANT: Yeah, that's public. That's improper.

MR. WEINGLASS: I will read from it then, I will read from it.

MR. GRANT: I object, Your Honor.

MR. WEINGLASS: I will read from it.

MR. GRANT: What he is doing is placing the Jury's deliberative process before Your Honor.

MR. WEINGLASS: It is not deliberative process, it is the hotel. It is the hotel, it has nothing to do with the deliberations.

MR. GRANT: If it is not outside influence, it is improper.

Page 161.

MR. WEINGLASS: Paragraph 3. The youngest woman on the Jury became very friendly with the Jury foreman George Ewalt. After the first few days of the trial, they were soon joined by a third Juror, who was a young white male. The three Jurors formed a, quote, pact, and they would meet after dinner in Mr. Ewalt's room, which was next to Miss Davis' room. They would meet in Ewalt's room and have the door closed, which was in violation of Judge Sabo's order. Every night Miss Davis heard these Jurors discussing the evidence presented that day at trial. Also parenthetically, I might add, in violation of Your Honor's order. They would discuss witnesses' testimony, and whenever one of them had a different view of the evidence than the others, the dissenting voice was invariably silenced and made to go along.

This is classic juror misconduct in violation of two orders of this Court. It has nothing to do with deliberation. It has nothing to do with any of the cases he cited. And it's entirely appropriate to be brought before this Court. That's why Mr. Ewalt was subpoenaed: In furtherance of this allegation.

Page 162.

THE COURT: All right. Just one minute. I said at the very beginning I wanted a list of every witness you were going to call. I wanted to know the purpose of that witness, what the witness was going to testify, and why is it important in this case, what is the relevancy of that witness. You have not given me that. And I told you I wanted it today. And if you don't give it to me, I am not going to allow you to go out and subpoena anybody and bring anybody in here whenever you choose. I want that list from both sides. Both from the Commonwealth and from the defense. And I want it spelled out, the purpose of that witness. The relevancy of that witness.

MR. WEINGLASS: As I have informed this Court from day one, we are operating under enormous time pressure. Mr. Ewalt --

THE COURT: Counselor, that has nothing to do with you giving me a list of the names so I have it in advance. And they have it, they know exactly who you are going to call, why you are going to call that person. You are the one that's delaying these proceedings. If they had this information, they wouldn't be able to complain about it now.

MR. WEINGLASS: Mr. Ewalt --

THE COURT: We have no idea who you are going to call. I don't have the slightest idea. And I asked for that at the very beginning. And I'm asking for it one more time from both sides.

MR. WEINGLASS: You got two lists at the very beginning.

THE COURT: I don't have anything.

MR. WEINGLASS: Which you read into the record, incidentally.

THE COURT: Well, that was only a couple of names. And every time I look at the name he says well, I don't know anything about this, there is no affidavit, there is nothing, I don't know why you are calling him.

MR. WEINGLASS: The name George Ewalt was given to them on June 5th, seven weeks ago.

THE COURT: Did you give them a statement?

MR. WEINGLASS: His name is contained in an affidavit. If they had read it they would know it. They just apparently haven't read it.

MR. GRANT: Well, we did read it,

Page 164.

Judge. This was in the affidavit of Counsel for them, who purports to be a witness for the Defendant, who took an affidavit of a Savannah Davis, wherein -- who is a Juror, by the way -- wherein Savannah Davis mentioned Mr. George Ewalt in a conversation with Mr. Steven Hawkins. That is putting us on notice that is a witness they are calling? That is ridiculous.

THE COURT: As I said, I don't have it. I want that list, Counselor. And I want it immediately. If you don't give it to me, I am not going to allow you to call any witnesses.

I want it from both sides; I want it no later than tomorrow morning so I know where we are going.

MR. WEINGLASS: I would ask that Mr. Ewalt's subpoena be quashed.

THE COURT: I am quashing it at the present time. Get me that list no later than tomorrow morning, okay. We will proceed with whatever witness you have here now. Which is Mr. Greer, as I understand it. And tomorrow morning I want that complete list from both sides. And I want both sides to be supplied with why it is important, the relevancy of that witness. What, basically, the witness is going, roughly what he is going to testify. What he is going to bring to the Court's attention.

MR. WEINGLASS: The time constraints the Court imposed on us makes it entirely impossible.

THE COURT: It is not impossible. It is an order that I am giving you now. It is not impossible. If you had done it at the very beginning it would have been no problem at all. Because I am wasting more time when you are calling a witness and the D.A. says I don't even know why you are calling him.

MR. WEINGLASS: That's because he hasn't read the Petition.

THE COURT: Counselor, give me that list by no later than tomorrow morning. Both of you.

MR. GRANT: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Now let's get finished with Mr. Greer and then we will worry about tomorrow, see who will be next.

MR. WILLIAMS: Good afternoon, Your Honor. Before we call Mr. Greer, let me, because I think this is probably the best time to raise this issue -- and it was touched upon yesterday -- it concerns Police Officer Bell. And I know Police Officer Bell is in the Courtroom. And we did subpoena Mr. Bell and you quashed that subpoena.

THE COURT: Yes, because you have not given me a list. And I am going to tell you for the last time: Get me that list by tomorrow morning, okay. I want to know who you are going to call, what they are going to testify, what is the purpose, the relevancy of that witness. So that you put the Commonwealth on notice and they can't complain later on. That's why they complain. Because if you had given me this list in the very beginning like I asked you, we wouldn't have this problem.

Now let's proceed. Tomorrow morning give me that list, okay.

MR. WILLIAMS: And, Your Honor, Police Officer Bell will be on that list and we will --

THE COURT: Well, if he is on the list tomorrow morning we will see what he is going to testify to and we will see the relevancy and I will take it up tomorrow morning.

MR. WILLIAMS: Fair enough. The other matter is just briefly: As I understand it, there are two police reports that were handed over to the defense pre-trial that we do not have in our possession. As to why we don't have it I can not enlighten the Court. All I can say to the Court is that we don't have the police reports reflecting the statements of two individuals, a Harry Fairclough -- that's F-A-I-R-C-L-O-U-G-H -- and Arnold Howard. They are civilians and they apparently gave statements to law enforcement. And again they were given to defense Counsel, I believe, pre-trial.

And I am asking the Court to request of the Commonwealth that they extend the courtesy -- and I understand it is a courtesy -- of replenishing those reports to us. And I apologize for the inconvenience of that, but I just would appreciate the courtesy.

MR. GRANT: I will tell him the same thing as I told Mrs. Wolkenstein, and because you may have more pleasing personality, the result is still the same. We extended the courtesy before. Of course they were precise and specific in what they wanted, we gave them what they wanted. And it doesn't matter how much we give them they are always going to want something else as a courtesy because they know there is no Post-Conviction discovery rule. Now they think that they can play fast and loose with the rules of evidence and ethics and morality here and we will continue to abide by their requests.

But with all due respect to Your Honor, since there is no discovery provision, I would deign to think that perhaps it's strictly up to me on a voluntary basis, and I would decline their courteous suggestion.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, Your Honor, this is not about personalities, it's about whether we can pursue a hearing in a fair and proper manner. And all I am asking, I am not asking for new discovery, what I am asking is that we have the same fund of information that was available.

THE COURT: Well, did you ask the appellate Counsel if they had it?

MR. WILLIAMS: We did. We have attempted to get all of the materials from both appellate Counsel, from trial Counsel, and from every other source.

THE COURT: And Mr. Jamal?

MR. WILLIAMS: And from Mr. Jamal. From every source that's possible before we go to the Commonwealth. We go to the Commonwealth in the last instance. And I understand that they are busy. We're busy and they're busy. But all I am asking for is the same fund of information.

THE COURT: Well, see, if you tell the Court why it's necessary maybe I could help you. But I don't know anything about this because you have not given me any list. You haven't given the list to the Commonwealth.

MR. WILLIAMS: This has nothing to do with witnesses that will testify.

THE COURT: Well, if it has nothing to do with witnesses who are going to testify then why is it relevant to this proceeding? Why is it relevant to these proceedings?

(Discussion was held off the record at this time among defense Counsel.)

THE COURT: Counselor, let's take it up another time. Let's get this --

MR. WILLIAMS: No, Your Honor, because of this time frame that you have imposed upon us --

THE COURT: I have imposed it from the very beginning. If you had listened to me you would have had it all in.

MR. WILLIAMS: No, these two names came to our attention in connection with our investigating for purposes of presenting evidence in this hearing. We believe --

THE COURT: Why don't you --

MR. WILLIAMS: We believe that these two individuals who provided information to the police, that are memorialized in reports that we do not have, have relevant testimony in this hearing. And that's what we are asking.

THE COURT: Go out and talk to them.

MR. WILLIAMS: The point is, Your Honor, we don't have their police statements. And this is not an idle request.

THE COURT: Did you go out and talk to these people? Did your investigator who you are now going to call, does he know them?

MR. WILLIAMS: We need these reports of these individuals.

THE COURT: No, you don't. Talk to them. Why don't you ask them what they said?

MR. WILLIAMS: Their statements are memorialized in police reports. Is Your Honor suggesting --

THE COURT: I am not suggesting anything. I am saying that we will --

MR. WILLIAMS: Yes, you are.

THE COURT: I am saying that we will proceed right now with the witness you listed for today. Let's put Mr. Greer on. Try to work it out among yourselves. If you can't, then, fine, come to me later.

But let's get moving.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, I will try to do that.

THE COURT: All right. Bring Mr. Greer in, please.

Robert T. Greer, having been duly sworn,
was examined and testified as follows:

- - - - -

DIRECT EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Good afternoon, Mr. Greer.

A. Good afternoon, sir.

Page 172.

Q. Mr. Greer, would you state for the record your present occupation and employment?

A. I am a security supervisor for SOS Security.

MR. GRANT: Where?

THE WITNESS: SOS Security.

MR. GRANT: Thank you, sir.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Directing your attention back to January of 1982, what was your occupation and employment at that time?

A. I was a private investigator.

Q. Were you a licensed private investigator in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And did you maintain an office in the City of Philadelphia at that time?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And how long had you been a licensed investigator prior to January of 1982?

A. Hmm, approximately three years.

Q. Now, in that month, January of 1982, did you know an attorney in the City of Philadelphia by the name of Anthony Jackson?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And did there come a time where you were contacted by Mr. Jackson relative to your performing investigative services in the case of Commonwealth V. Jamal?

A. Yes, there did.

Q. And did he ask you if you would assist him in conducting an investigation in the defense of Mr. Jamal?

A. Yes.

Q. And as a result of his request, did you in fact become involved as an investigator in the defense of Mr. Jamal?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Incidentally, are you appearing today pursuant to a Court subpoena?

A. Yes and no. I've been asked to come and I was subpoenaed last week and earlier this week.

Q. And who asked you at that time?

A. I was subpoenaed by the District Attorney this week and by you last week.

Q. Now, back in 1982, did you accept a Court appointment as an investigator on the defense of Mr. Jamal?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. And could you explain why that was?

A. Why I didn't accept the appointment?

Page 174.

Q. Yes.

A. It didn't pay enough money.

Q. Were you still working as an investigator for the defense in the Jamal case when the case went to trial in June of 1982?

A. No, I wasn't.

Q. And why was that?

A. I was only offered $150 on the appointment, it just wasn't enough money.

Q. Now, while you were working on the defense case, prior to June of 1982, did you have occasion to examine the discovery materials that were turned over to Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And was that the first thing that you did in the course of your working as an investigator on the case?

A. No, sir. The first thing I did was talk to Mr. Jackson and Mr. Jamal.

Q. And after that?

A. When the discovery came I studied that discovery.

Q. And after that did you have occasion to visit the scene where the shooting occurred?

A. Many times.

Page 175.

Q. Do you recall if, Mr. Greer, whether or not you had occasion to investigate an individual known as Cynthia White?

A. I saw her several times; I've never talked to her.

Q. And did you see her at her residence?

A. No. She never was home.

Q. Where did you see her?

A. Most of the time I saw her on the corner of 12th and Locust.

Q. And on those times that you saw her, was that more than once?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Did you have occasion to talk to her?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Why was that?

A. There was always a car parked adjacent to her with two people in it that appeared to be two plainclothes police officers.

MR. GRANT: I object to what it appeared to be unless he could substantiate that.

THE COURT: Strike that last phrase.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Now, Mr. Greer, at this time you had been an investigator for four years?

Page 176.

MR. GRANT: I believe he said three.

THE WITNESS: Three years.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Three. You knew what a plainclothes policeman looked like?

A. Yes.

MR. GRANT: Objection. Move to strike that.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. To your experience and observation, were those plainclothes police officers who were near Miss Cynthia White?

A. They appeared to me, yes.

Q. Did you ever have an opportunity to talk to her?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Was there ever a time to your observation that these individuals who were in a car left the area when she was there?

A. No, I never stayed there and watched her. The only time I saw her they were there also.

Q. So you never saw her without them?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. And could you, to the best you can recall,

Page 177.

Robert Greer - Direct

describe what these individuals looked like who were at or near her?

A. They were both white, one male, one female. They were in a little red car.

Q. Was the car just parked at an intersection or was it moving?

A. Parked at the curb, yes.

Q. And was it parked at a curb near where she was standing?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, were there any other, was there any other individual who you spent time attempting to locate for the purpose of questioning?

A. I attempted to locate a gentleman who fit the description of the person that was seen running away.

Q. And could you describe the height and the weight of the gentleman who you were trying to locate?

A. I believe it was approximately six-foot-two, over 200 pounds, dreadlock hair, red fatigue or Army-type clothing.

Q. And his race?

A. He was black.

Q. And what information had you received relative to that individual in the locale where the shooting

Page 178.

Robert Greer - Direct

occurred?

A. In statements he was described as running away from the scene.

Q. Now, did you prior to this time know of an individual, know of an individual who fit that description?

A. There was an individual that fit that description, he had been there for years, to my knowledge.

Q. And did you try to find him?

A. I looked for him.

Q. Were you able --

A. No, I never was able to find him. I looked for him many times.

Q. Do you know a gentleman who is an attorney at that time by the name of Ben Johnson?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Did you discuss this with Mr. Johnson?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did he know of this individual?

A. Yes, he knew him.

Q. Was his office located near the intersection of 13th and Locust?

A. No, his office wasn't there, but he, ahh, he was there quite often.

Page 179.

Robert Greer - Direct

Q. And he indicated to you he knew who this individual was?

A. Yes.

Q. And when did you abandon your efforts to find this person?

A. I'm not sure I ever did. I still looked for him when I go down that way.

Q. Even down to this day you look for him?

A. I looked for him the past 14 years. I've never made a concerted effort but I always looked to see if he was around. Because he was always there prior to this.

Q. And to your knowledge, from December 9th, 1981, has anyone ever located him again at that intersection?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Now, were you ever asked by Mr. Jackson to locate an individual by the name of Debbie Kordansky?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. Did you in the course of your work as an investigator on the case have occasion to locate and interview a witness by the name of Dessie Hightower?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And did you tape record his statement? With his permission?

Page 180.

Robert Greer - Direct

A. I'm not sure -- yes, yes, I believe I did tape record his statement. With his permission, of course. If I recorded it I asked him first.

Q. Right. And did you also locate and tape record a statement by a gentleman by the name of Robert Pigford?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Now, how were you able to locate these two individuals?

A. These two individuals' statements still had their address on it.

Q. And to your knowledge did any of the other statements that were received in discovery have the address of the individuals?

A. I don't believe they did, sir.

Q. Have you in the course of your experience working as an investigator for the defense received discovery materials where the address is indicated in the police statement?

A. The address is always there, yes, sir. Normally.

Q. But it wasn't given in this instance?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, Mr. Greer, do you recall if you submitted a bill to Mr. Jackson for the work that you did in

Page 181.

Robert Greer - Direct

the case?

A. Yes. He told me to submit a bill for the time that I had spent, yes.

Q. Do you recall approximately how much your bill was?

A. Approximately $500.

Q. And was that money that Mr. Jackson had paid you himself?

A. As far as I know he did, yes. He gave it to me.

Q. Did he give it to you when you started your work?

A. No, sir.

Q. When did he pay you?

A. I don't remember exactly but it was during the course of the investigation. Towards the end he indicated that he was having a problem with getting money for me so he told me just submit my bill. And I did.

Q. And the hours that you have indicated, you spent 22.5 hours, they were all spent prior to trial?

A. Say that again, sir.

Q. The hours that you indicated in your bill that you spent 22.5 hours on this case was all spent prior to the trial?

Page 182.

Robert Greer - Cross

A. Yes, it was.

Q. And you were no longer available to Mr. Jackson, or Mr. Jamal, during the trial because there was no money available?

A. That is correct.

MR. WEINGLASS: May I have just a moment?

(Discussion was held off the record at this time among defense Counsel.)

MR. WEINGLASS: Thank you, Mr. Greer. I have no further questions.

- - - - -

CROSS-EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Good afternoon, sir.

A. Good afternoon.

Q. You've been a policeman in the past, Mr. Greer?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And how long, sir?

A. Ahh, 12 years, 14 years.

Q. Were you ever elevated to the rank of detective?

A. No, sir.

Page 183.

Robert Greer - Cross

Q. You never were trained as a detective?

A. No.

Q. And what were your duties as a police officer when you worked as a policeman?

A. I worked in traffic, I worked in intelligence.

Q. So when you worked in traffic, tell the Court what you do?

A. In traffic?

Q. Yes.

A. Various duties. From details, traffic assignments, crime. We did everything.

Q. When you say crime, what do you mean by that, sir?

A. We worked the regular crime patrols. We patrolled certain areas, in high crime areas.

Q. And did the Traffic Division wear white hats back then like they do now?

A. We wore white hats and helmet, yes, sir.

Q. And when you say you patrolled high crime areas, was this on the highway?

A. No, in City streets.

Q. In the City streets. Can you tell me how that worked, who you received your assignments from and things of that nature?

A. Well, after traffic was over, we were still working, we went out and we patrolled certain areas. Center City, South Philadelphia, West Philadelphia. We received our assignments from our district.

Page 184.

Robert Greer - Cross

Q. From your district --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- commander? And of the 12 years that you put in with the Police Department, how much time do you think was spent in the high crime areas, as you say, patrolling, if you could give me a percentage?

A. That would be pretty hard to say. I couldn't even estimate that, sir, I'm sorry.

Q. Would you say that once you began being an investigator, knowing the detectives that you knew in the detective divisions, that being a private investigator was very much like being a detective for the Police Department except that you had a different paycheck method?

A. I don't think so, no. It was quite different.

Q. Tell me what the differences are, sir?

A. The difference was you worked alone. You had to do all of your studying within yourself.

Q. I'm sorry?

A. You had to do everything within yourself. You had to study what you were doing. Like when I got an assignment, I would take the assignment and study it.

Page 185.

Robert Greer - Cross

I would read the discovery first. Then I would determine from the discovery who I needed to talk to to reconstruct the crime or the scene. But the difference is I had to do it all myself, I had to take it from beginning to end.

Q. And as a private investigator, when a person would hire you and other ancillary services to yours, such as a photographer, since you talked to Mr. Jamal, you talked to Mr. Jackson, you were familiar with the crime scene there between 12th and 13th and Locust Street, would you direct the photographer's efforts?

A. Would I direct his efforts?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. I would take him along for pictures if I needed pictures.

Q. You would take some yourself?

A. Oh, yeah.

Q. You had your own camera?

A. Yes.

Q. When you submitted your bill, your petition for payment or reimbursement, did that include any expenses you incurred for taking photographs?

A. If it was applicable, yes, sir.

Q. Was it applicable?

Page 186.

Robert Greer - Cross

A. In this case, no, sir. I didn't get to that point.

Q. So did you direct the photographer or not?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, you say at that time you had been a private investigator -- now we are talking December of 1981 -- you had been a private investigator for three years?

A. About that, yes.

Q. And this was immediately after you left the Police Department, or did you have a job in between?

A. No, I had jobs in between. I worked as an investigator with the Strawbridge and Clothier.

Q. Strawbridge and Clothier?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What else?

A. Well, what else did I do? I worked as a special investigator for SEPTA. Ahh... I believe that was, that was it as far as in that field.

Q. Okay. Now, in 1981 you had interacted with detectives and personnel from the detective bureaus I guess throughout the City, would that be fair to say, in your 12 years?

A. Oh, yeah.

Q. And some of those observations and

Page 187.

Robert Greer - Cross

interactions involved undercover police officers, people in plainclothes; correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And have you ever been on any undercover assignments, sir, while you were a policeman?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you work plainclothes?

A. Ahh... I think I did. I'm not sure, it was a long time ago.

Q. Well, it would be kind of hard to be incognito walking around in a police uniform and a white hat, wouldn't it?

A. It would be. It would be, yes, sir.

Q. So you used plainclothes, then, I assume when you were on these?

A. Maybe I misunderstood what you said, undercover. I had worked in places where it was like takeouts. I would not be undercover the way that you described it.

Q. So you never worked as an undercover officer?

A. As such, no.

Q. But you have seen detectives who are in plainclothes; correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. As a matter of fact, there is no uniform for a

Page 188.

Robert Greer - Cross

detective in the City of Philadelphia and never has been, so they are always in plainclothes; correct?

A. Correct.

Q. So when you say you saw these people who were working undercover, you just meant that they appeared to you to be detectives from the Philadelphia Police Department?

A. They appeared to be police officers, yes, sir.

Q. How does a police officer appear?

A. How does a police officer appear? I assumed that they were police officers simply because they never left the scene. If she was there, they were there.

Q. Well, let me ask you this, Mr. Greer.

A. Yes.

Q. When Mr. Jackson sent you out to embark upon this mission to interview these witnesses, you of course had a photograph of each person that you sought out and wanted to interview; correct?

A. That's not correct.

Q. That's incorrect. Well, you knew Cynthia White from having had personal dealings with her, I take it?

A. That's also not correct.

Q. Well, then you knew Cynthia White because she

Page 189.

Robert Greer - Cross

was related to you?

A. That's not correct either.

Q. Well, then you knew Cynthia White and would recognize her face because she was a friend of a friend of yours?

A. Not correct.

Q. Well, then tell us how you knew what she looked like?

A. Cynthia White came to the Court. But I knew Cynthia White because people out on the street that knew her pointed her out to me.

Q. Oh. So you went up to persons. Well, who are those people that pointed her out?

A. It was 14 years ago, I really couldn't even tell you about that. People that knew her. Cynthia White was a prostitute that worked the area. I knew people that worked near her.

Q. And Cynthia White, that's a female name, is that any more or less common than John Brown or Mary Jones?

A. It's probably not as common.

Q. And do you know any other Cynthia Whites, have you come across any persons named Cynthia White in your years as an investigator and human being?

A. Not that I can remember.

Page 190.

Robert Greer - Cross

Q. But you were an investigator at that time, right?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you walked up to people and said do you know Cynthia White and they pointed to some person over there and they said that's her. So you went over there and watched her, right?

A. It wasn't quite that simple. The people that I talked to were people that I knew and people that knew me. But when I asked if they knew Cynthia White, they wouldn't respond unless they did know her.

Q. They knew a Cynthia White?

A. They knew the one I was talking about, sir.

Q. How do you know?

A. Because I had a description of her.

Q. What was it?

A. Short, dark skin, black female. Approximately 20 to 23 years of age.

Q. And are you dark skin?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. Am I dark skin?

A. Yes, you are.

Q. Was she? After you got the description and then you saw the person, did you determine that yes

Page 191.

Robert Greer - Cross

in fact she was dark-skinned, sir?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Was she as dark as me?

A. That's 14 years ago, I don't remember really what she looks like now.

Q. I am not asking you that. I am not asking you what she looked like. I am just asking you how dark her complexion was?

A. If I remember, sir, she probably was as dark as you, sir.

Q. Was she as dark as you?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. So you don't remember her complexion?

A. I don't see myself every other day so I can't tell you how dark I am.

Q. Well, you look in the mirror like everybody else?

A. I am not the type that looks in the mirror constantly. I look at other people.

Q. I see. Now, sir, you didn't have a picture of this person, and you didn't know her of your own personal knowledge, and you took somebody's word for who she was. Did you try to go about any independent investigation on your own to verify that this person was who Mr. Jackson was going to pay you bucks to watch?

Page 192.

Robert Greer - Cross

A. I was positive after talking to the people that I talked to that she was the correct person.

Q. I see. And who trained you to be a private investigator?

A. My experience came from being an investigator at Strawbridge and Clothier and being with the Police Department. I put in law enforcement at that time about 35 years. I was absorbing knowledge from other people.

Q. And you refused to take a Court appointment in this case; is that right?

A. I couldn't afford to take the Court appointment, sir.

Q. Could you afford to take Court money?

A. I took no Court money for this.

Q. Oh. You didn't receive any monies from the Court of Common Pleas even if they had been allocated to you for that purpose?

A. I did not.

Q. You said you worked 22 hours on this case, 22-and-a-half hours?

A. 22-and-a-half hours is what I billed him for, sir.

Q. How do you know that?

Page 193.

Robert Greer - Cross

A. How do I know what I billed him for?

Q. How do you know how many hours you worked?

A. I only billed him for 22-and-a-half hours, I worked a lot more than that. But the money, he could only raise approximately $500. So I kept my bill around the money that he had.

Q. How long, for what period of months did you work for Mr. Jackson on this case?

A. To what period of months? I think I first talked to him in January.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. I probably finished up with him after talking to High, Hightower, yeah, after talking to Hightower.

Q. I know, but I don't know when you --

A. Probably May, April or May.

Q. So you worked four or five months on it, on this case?

A. Off and on, yes.

Q. Did you know that Mr. Jamal was the client Mr. Jackson wanted you to investigate for?

A. I beg your pardon?

Q. Did you know that Mr. Jamal was the Defendant in this case?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you know what the charges were?

Page 194.

Robert Greer - Cross

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did you know that he was charged with a capital murder offense for which his life could be taken?

A. Yes, I did, sir.

Q. Yes, you did?

A. Yes, I did, yes.

Q. Well, you say you worked 22-and-a-half hours. Do you have any proof of that here today?

A. No. I don't have records with me today, no.

Q. Well, did you not receive a subpoena duces tecum to bring any and all records reflecting your pay schedules, your billings, your accounts receivable and any and all money received in this case, did you not receive such a subpoena?

A. A subpoena was left at my mother-in-law's house. I never received the subpoena, I was just told what day to come here.

Q. No, you directed that the subpoena be left at your mother-in-law's house?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. So it was left where you said to send it?

A. Yes.

Q. So you saw it, right?

A. I never knew it was there.

Page 195.

Robert Greer - Cross

Q. Why didn't you look or ask?

A. Actually, I didn't know what the subpoena said; I only thought you wanted me and records of my investigation for Mr. Jamal. I didn't know anything about the other things you were talking about.

Q. Oh, okay, well, tell me where you came up with 22.5 hours?

A. Where I came up with 22.5?

Q. Yes.

A. That was the approximate hours that I billed him for. I worked a lot more than that.

Q. How do we know that you billed him only for those hours? I mean what do you have 13 years later that proves that?

A. I don't have anything, sir.

Q. Well, is it possible --

A. Anything that I billed him for would have been with the Court records.

Q. With the Court records?

A. With his records, his records with the other attorney.

Q. He said he doesn't have any records. Mr. Jackson testified.

A. He doesn't have any records?

Q. No, sir.

Page 196.

Robert Greer - Cross

A. Oh.

Q. So we have to take your word for it, and this is a 13-year-old recollection?

A. I only billed him for the 22-and-a-half hours and I only received the $500 from him. That's all I received.

Q. You didn't receive $562 from him?

A. I received $500 from him.

Q. Well, when you went out to interview these people, who did you tell them you represented and who did you say paid you?

A. I didn't tell them anyone paid me. I told them I was working for the defense of Mumia Abu-Jamal. If they asked.

Q. If they asked?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if they didn't ask you didn't say?

A. I didn't say.

Q. Why did you use that, why didn't you just say you worked for Mr. Jamal through Anthony Jackson?

A. Because that's who I was working directly for, Mr. Jamal. Anthony Jackson was the person I reported to, the person that paid me.

Q. Who?

A. Anthony Jackson.

Page 197.

Robert Greer - Cross

Q. Well, Anthony Jackson, he doesn't have a middle name that he's called Anthony Mumia Abu-Jamal Defense Committee Jackson, does he?

A. I don't think he does, no.

Q. Nor I don't think he does either. And working for the defense of Mr. Jamal, was he being defended by a committee?

A. I didn't say a committee. I don't know, I didn't know anything about a committee.

Q. No, I didn't think you did. But back in March of '82 you did --

A. Back --

Q. Let me read you something. You submitted this as part of your affidavit to Mr. Weinglass.

A. Yeah.

Q. And this is a letter to Mr. Thomas Leon Graves, address I will omit, here in Philadelphia, March 16th, 1982. You are Robert T. Greer, Investigator, 805 One East Penn Square -- or you were then?

A. That is correct.

Q. Dear Mr. Graves, this letter is in response to your phone call to Mr. E. Steven Collins -- who testified here, by the way, earlier in the proceedings -- of the Georgie Woods Show. I have been retained --

Page 198.

Robert Greer - Cross

Does that word have a special meaning to you: Retained?

A. The word has a meaning to me, sure.

Q. What does it mean to you?

A. It means that I have been paid by.

Q. That's what I thought. I have been retained by the Mumia Abu-Jamal Defense Committee to investigate the incident of his arrest. Now, who was the head of that committee that paid you?

A. I didn't write the letter. I signed the letter but the letter was written by Anthony Jackson, it was dictated to his secretary --

Q. Wait, wait, wait. First --

MR. GRANT: May I approach, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. You didn't write this letter but you signed this letter?

A. I signed -- there were several letters sent out of that nature. I didn't write any of them.

Q. Well, let me ask you is this your signature on this particular --

Page 199.

A. That is my signature. I have seen this.

Q. You have seen this?

A. That's right.

Q. As a matter of fact, you attached this to their exhibits?

A. I didn't attach anything to their exhibits.

Q. You submitted this to Mr. Weinglass so he could attach it, didn't you?

A. I submitted nothing to Mr. Weinglass.

Q. What if they were saying in this letter that you didn't read I am the person who killed Police Officer Faulkner?

A. I didn't say I didn't read it, I said I did not write it.

Q. Oh. But you knew what it said?

A. I knew what it said. But it had no significance to me then.

Q. Well, the word retained has significance to you today, though, doesn't it?

A. It has a significance, but it still doesn't mean anything because I wasn't retained by them, I didn't know, I didn't really know who they are.

Q. You were lying to Mr. Graves, you were trying to psych him out?

A. I did not write that.

Page 200.

Q. You adopted the letter by signing it so you presented false statements?

A. I was asked to sign it by Mr. Jackson. He sent out several letters of that nature of people that he was familiar with.

Q. So Mr. Jackson basically was the head of the Abu-Jamal Defense Committee then?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection.

THE WITNESS: As far as I knew, yes, he was.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. As far as you knew yes he was?

A. Anybody was the head of any committee, because he was the one that retained me.

Q. Well, Mr. Jackson testified that he was a member of no committee and received no funds from any such committee?

A. Then it must be true. I am not saying he was, I am saying he was the one that retained me.

Q. Well, how much money did you get from Mr. Jackson and how much money did you get from the committee and how much money did you get from the Court?

A. I got absolutely nothing from any committee, nothing from any Court. And $500 from Mr. Jackson.

Page 201.

Q. And you have no records to prove any of that?

A. I have no records to prove anything other than the fact that -- I have no records, period. I did not take the appointment so I couldn't have gotten any money from them.

Q. Well, for the 22-and-a-half hours, sir, that you were investigating this case -- well, let me go back for a second. Of all the plainclothes investigators that you have met in your lifetime that worked for the Police Department, and of all the undercover detectives that you've known or seen in action, how many of them do you think would be so indiscreet as to be caught out in the street in a little red car?

A. How many would be?

Q. Yeah. How many undercover cops have you seen driving around in a red car?

A. I have no idea, I really couldn't comment on that.

Q. You have no idea because you've never seen or heard of it, have you?

A. I saw two people sitting in the car watching or protecting Cynthia White, or appear to be protecting Cynthia White.

Q. Okay. Let me sit in this car right here

Page 202.

(indicating). Cynthia White is walking down the street. Show me how I protect her?

A. Cynthia White was standing on the corner. She was the only one standing on that corner. They were parked directly in front of her. They stayed there. If she left, they were not there.

Q. Did you see this red car with the same white male and white female every time you went to look for her?

A. If I saw her. I only saw her there a few times. If I saw her I saw them.

Q. How many times is a few?

A. It's been a long time.

Q. How many times is a few?

A. More than three.

Q. How many is a few?

A. At least more than three times.

Q. Every time you saw her you saw the red car and the same man?

A. If the red car wasn't there --

Q. Excuse me, let me you ask you the question first.

A. I'm sorry.

Q. Every time you saw her you saw the same red car with the same man and the same woman and they were in approximately the same position with relationship to her, right?

A. I can't say that's true.

Q. I'm sure. And you being an investigator with keen thoughts and swift mind of course wrote down the license plate and went back to Mr. Jackson and said I think we ought to check these people out and see if they are cops? Did they have a Municipal license plate on their car?

A. No, they didn't.

Q. Well, did they have an FOP sticker on the side of the glass?

A. No, they didn't.

Q. Did you see a policeman's hat in the back window above the seat?

A. No, sir, I didn't.

Q. Did you ever see any of these individuals flash a badge?

A. No, sir, I didn't have to.

Q. Oh, you didn't have to?

A. Hmm.

Q. Did you see Cynthia White ever lean into the window and engage in any conversations on any occasions with these people?

A. No, she didn't.

Page 204.

Q. Well, Cynthia White was a prostitute, was she not?

A. I was told she was.

Q. Over what period of time did this phenomenon occur?

A. I think I asked -- that's hard to remember. I saw her there at least three times. At least three times someone else was there with her.

Q. I know that, sir, but over --

A. I can't tell you exactly, a couple weeks.

Q. For a couple of weeks. For a couple of weeks you saw this recurring scenario. Describe the white woman?

A. Can't do that.

Q. Describe the white male?

A. I can't do that.

Q. Well, were they blond or brown-haired?

A. I don't remember. Young, that's all.

Q. Were they old or young?

A. They were young.

Q. Like younger than me? Younger than you? A teenager? What?

A. Probably younger than both of us.

Q. Are you insulting me?

A. No, it's really hard to tell how old they were. They were sitting in the car with their backs to me. I didn't stay on the corner. I walked up to the corner, I observed what was happening, and I left. I came back about three hours later, I observed the same thing.

Page 205.

Robert Greer - Cross

Q. Do you know that there are people on this planet and in this City, men and woman who may like one another but they may want to procure the services of a prostitute for their own personal entertainment?

A. Not personally, sir, no.

Q. No, I am not asking you personally if you know that, but you know that does occur, don't you?

A. I heard it does, yes, sir.

Q. Yes. Do you know whether or not these people were so inclined?

A. No, I don't.

Q. As opposed to being undercover investigators, who you didn't even see their bandages?

A. They could have been anything else but I still believe that these two people I saw were police officers.

Q. Well, besides the fact that they sat there and they didn't move, tell me what else defines an undercover cop?

A. The fact that they were there watching her

Page 206.

Robert Greer - Cross

with no one else around started me to thinking of who they were. When I left and I came back I saw these same two people still sitting in that same car and she standing on the corner looking perplexed. I was positive that they were there and they were there to protect her.

Q. Okay. Now, this was over a two-week period, more or less?

A. Yes, about that.

Q. But Cynthia White, even though she was a prostitute, was a human being and had to sleep somewhere, sometime; correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And being an investigator you're keenly aware that basically the best time to find somebody unsuspecting is when they sleep early in the morning, late at night?

A. That is correct.

Q. So you found out where her house was, right?

A. I did.

Q. How did you do that?

A. I'm an investigator, I found her.

Q. You found her because you're an investigator?

A. That is correct.

Q. Since you are an investigator and you found

Page 207.

Robert Greer - Cross

out where she lived -- and she was somewhat of a transient person; is that true or false?

A. Say that again, sir.

Q. Was she transient? Does she have a fixed place of address, a fixed abode?

A. I assumed she has a fixed address at that time because when I went to the place where she was living, they say she did live there, they invited me in.

Q. Did they?

A. Hmm.

Q. So you stayed and waited for Cynthia?

A. No, I didn't go in.

Q. You didn't go in?

A. It didn't look like a place I wanted to be found in.

Q. Yeah, I know that, but that's why they pay you money, to go into these places, isn't it?

A. No, sir, they pay me money to investigate, sir.

Q. Okay? so you knew where she lived?

A. I knew that.

Q. And you wouldn't enter her house because it wasn't as important for you to get an interview for Mr. Jamal's defense as it was for you to not be in a place that you thought undesirable?

Page 208.

Robert Greer - Cross

A. No, what I did was I went and asked if she lived there. After I ascertained that she lived there I sat outside the house and watched and waited for her to come home.

Q. And how long did you wait?

A. I don't remember but it was long enough I thought she should have been there. I didn't do that once, I did that several times.

Q. Wait a minute now. You are using the mentality and the mind of a citizen: Long enough so that you thought she should have been there. Did you forget that she was a prostitute?

A. Yes -- no, I didn't forget she was a prostitute.

Q. What makes you think she keeps your hours, sir?

A. I didn't know what hours she kept, that wasn't my concern. It was because I figured after a certain point she would leave the area that she frequented. And no where else would she go to my knowledge but home.

Q. So when she didn't come home, is that when you kept going back to 12th and Locust?

A. Yeah.

Page 209.

Robert Greer - Cross

Q. And when you went there, of course you knew that these were two plainclothes cops because you walked up on the scene in an attempt to interview her with your pad and pencil, and you walked by this vehicle and looked inside and saw the male and female; correct?

A. I did not walk by. I observed them from a distance.

Q. Well, you observed them from a distance so that they wouldn't see you, right?

A. Correct.

Q. So you were at all times behind their line of vision, in other words, you were behind the little red vehicle, right?

A. I can't hear you, sir. I can't hear you.

Q. You were behind the red car?

A. That is correct.

Q. Well, behind the red car. Were they parked on Locust? Were they parked on 13th?

A. They were parked on 12th Street.

Q. On 12th Street, which is a southbound street?

A. That is correct.

Q. And they were parked at the intersection of 12th and Locust?

A. They were parked just behind the intersection

Page 210.

Robert Greer - Cross

on the southwest corner.

Q. On the southwest corner. So you were parked where?

A. I was parked on 13th Street.

Q. What?

A. I didn't drive my car there, I walked up to the scene.

Q. Oh, okay, so you did walk up?

A. Yes.

Q. But you never walked by?

A. I didn't walk by.

Q. How close did you get?

A. From?

Q. From behind?

A. I was on the other side of the street on the northwest corner.

Q. On the northwest corner. Well, if you were on the northwest corner you were kind of on an angle like I am to the Sheriff sitting right there in the front row?

A. Approximately. Possibly.

Q. Well, I am looking right in his face. I am not behind him and I get a good look at his face. Did you?

A. The car was facing the other way.

Page 211.

Robert Greer - Cross

Q. Oh, this car was turned around. You are making this difficult.

A. The car was facing south.

Q. The car was going that way (indicating)?

A. Facing south.

Q. So you saw the back of his head?

A. I saw the side, the side of the face and the back of the head too.

Q. And you saw the back of the female's head?

A. And the side of her face.

Q. And the side of her face. And that is the best vantage point you got?

A. That's the only vantage point I wanted at that time. I didn't want anyone to know that I went there to talk to her. I figured if they knew that I wanted to talk to her, that was fine, but I wasn't going to tell them.

Q. I know that, sir.

A. Hmm.

Q. But you were being paid $25 or $30 an hour just for that purpose, yet you had her in your vision on a number of occasions, you were at her house sitting waiting for her, you were outside her property waiting for her, and you never thought it was worth the money you were earning to just wait long enough or to walk up to her in front of somebody else, to at least contact her, give her your card and say would you please give me a call when you get in?

Page 212.

Robert Greer - Cross

A. Not at that time, no.

Q. Well, at what time did you?

A. The opportunity really didn't come up. Things aren't easy as you suggested.

Q. I am not saying it's easy, sir, but I am saying that you were charging about 30 bucks an hour then, weren't you?

A. 25.

Q. 25. And you worked 22-and-a-half hours from January to May, more or less?

A. More or less, yes.

Q. And did you know that that comes out to about one hours worth of work a week for that time period, so you spent four hours a month during this period to save this man's life?

A. That was the hours that I billed him for. I put in a lot more hours than I billed him for.

Q. Well, did you have photographs of Dessie Hightower, Robert Pigford?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have the photograph of Debbie Kordansky?

Page 213.

Robert Greer - Cross

A. I don't know anything about Debbie Kordansky. I don't remember her.

Q. And Mr. Jackson never sent you on a mission to look for her, did he?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. And you talked to Mr. Jamal in this case too, didn't you, when you were first retained?

A. That is correct.

Q. And Mr. Jamal never told you to look for her, did he?

A. No.

Q. There was a lawyer named John Black who was assisting Mr. Jackson. Did you ever meet him?

A. Who?

Q. John Black?

A. No, I never met him.

Q. Never met him?

A. Never met him.

Q. Did you ever talk to him by phone?

A. I don't believe so.

Q. How often would you report to Mr. Jamal and/or to Mr. Jackson the fruits of your labor?

A. I talked to Mr. Jamal once when I advised him in the hospital. I talked to Mr. Jackson periodically. Almost everyday.

Page 214.

Robert Greer - Cross

Q. Almost everyday.

A. Yes.

Q. And is it true that you spent most of your time on this case looking for Cynthia White?

A. That's very possible.

Q. No, no, no. Is it true that you spent most of your time looking for Cynthia White to interview her?

A. I spent a lot of time looking for Cynthia White, but I don't think it was the most of my time. I spent the most of my time looking for the other individual.

Q. What other individual?

A. The street priest or the large gentleman who was seen running away.

Q. Well, when you said in your interview, in your affidavit, having been duly sworn upon oath, that in addition I recall doing the following investigative work. A, make measurements. B, I spent most of my time attempting to interview Cynthia White the prostitute. Now, if you didn't spend most of your time doing that as you have testified under oath, then what you wrote under oath is false; correct?

A. That was the longest time that I billed him for.

Q. I'm sorry?

Page 215.

Robert Greer - Cross

A. That's what I billed him for.

Q. Oh, you spent --

A. I spent a lot of time out there for hours that I did not bill anyone for. I did that on my own.

Q. I know. Of the time that you were paid, most of that time was spent -- well, no, most of that time was not spent attempting to interview Cynthia White, right?

A. You lost me. What did you say?

Q. Yeah, you just testified --

A. What did you say?

Q. You just testified that you did not spend most of your time trying to interview her?

A. No, not most of my time. Most of my time I spent trying to find that preacher, yes.

Q. By the way, you mentioned a description of the person you were trying to find?

A. That is correct.

Q. And I think I was writing this down properly. You said that you were looking for a person who was the suspect who apparently or allegedly was running away from the crime scene at the time of the shooting, right?

A. Correct.

Q. By the way, were you at the crime scene during the shooting?

A. Say that again.

Q. Were you there?

A. During the time of the shooting?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. No, I was not.

Q. Well, then you couldn't know that anybody was, quote unquote, running away unless somebody told you someone was running away; correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Who told you that someone ran away?

A. I believe it was, I believe it was Dessie Hightower. And also read it in the first statement given by Cynthia White.

Q. And he said the person was running away or the person ran?

A. The person ran away from the scene.

Q. Well, the person you described, I guess you spent off and on 14 years diligently looking for, you described as about six-foot-two?

A. Correct.

Q. Over 200 pounds?

A. That is correct.

Q. Dreadlock hair?

A. Yeah.

Q. Army jacket?

A. Army clothing, yes.

Q. Army clothing. That sounds like Mr. Jamal on the night in question?

A. I don't believe Mr. Jamal was quite that large.

Q. Well, look at him now.

A. That was then we are talking. This is now I am talking about, now.

Q. How tall do you think Mr. Jamal was then? Since you personally saw him at the hospital and you personally interviewed him, give us a description of what you thought he was, sir, 13 years ago?

A. At that time about five-nine or ten, 150 pounds.

Q. Really?

A. Yeah.

Q. What if I showed you a picture and he was measured in that picture and weighed and he was six-foot-one and 180 pounds, would that refresh your recollection?

A. Actually, no. But when I saw him he was in a hospital bed. I didn't see him standing up.

Q. So you were giving the height of a person who is laying down?

A. Approximately, yeah, that's what you asked for.

Q. Well, I asked you how tall he was, I didn't ask you how tall you assumed he was had he been standing up.

A. Well, I saw him lying down, I didn't see him standing up.

Q. So you can't say for certain that he was five-foot-nine, which is about my height?

A. Yeah.

Q. And 150 pounds, which is like 20 pounds less than me?

A. Hmm.

Q. You can't say that, can you?

A. What, now or then?

Q. Either one.

A. Then he appeared to be that.

Q. In a hospital bed?

A. In the hospital bed.

Q. And how long were you with him in a hospital room?

A. 15, 20 minutes.

Q. Well, didn't it occur to you, sir, when you were there and the description you had was -- except for your description of the person's height, and clothes which we can change everyday -- as an investigator and a keen, sharp person who is investigating crime, didn't it occur to you that hey, the person that guy is describing looks like him? Didn't you have a question in your mind how tall are you and how much do you weigh, did that ever occur to you?

A. No, it didn't. It didn't occur to me because the person ran away, Mr. Jamal was sitting on the curb.

Q. No, someone told you the person ran away, right?

A. That is correct.

Q. Okay. Now, by the way, you didn't spend a lot of time looking for Dessie Hightower, did you?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. You found him right away?

A. I had his address.

Q. And you didn't have a hard time looking for Robert Pigford, did you?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. What other witnesses did Mr. Jackson want you to interview, do you know?

A. Cynthia White.

Q. And you found her relatively soon, didn't you?

A. I found her, yes.

Q. As a matter of fact, you found the address for Cynthia White and you found the location where you could find Dessie Hightower and Robert Pigford all within two weeks after you were given the assignment, because you are that good, isn't that so?

A. No, I didn't have their statements then. After I got the statements.

Q. How soon after you got the statements?

A. I don't know, I am not aware exactly when discovery came. We didn't get the discovery at first.

Q. You went up to Mr. Hightower and you said to him I want to interview you, I don't have your statement with me but I have read it, how many times were you questioned by the police, and he said three times. You asked him the question -- and I am going to ask you after I read this question and answer why you asked him that -- did you ever tell the D.A. that you did not want to talk to me or anyone else connected with this case. You asked him that, right?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Why did you ask him that?

A. Because that was a comment that was made when Mister, I think Mr. Jackson had attempted to talk, to talk to him.

Page 221.

Robert Greer - Cross

Q. Were you there?

A. No.

Q. Well, you keep saying these things that somebody else told you. Now, who made the comment? Mr. Jackson made it to you?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. Oh. And you found out that that was a lie, right?

A. No, it wasn't a lie.

Q. Well, what was the answer? I told them I didn't want to give a statement to...?

A. Jackson.

Q. Mr. Jackson, his attorney. I didn't say I wouldn't talk to an investigator or anything like that. Now, you are an investigator, right?

A. That is correct.

Q. So you didn't have any trouble finding him because the D.A. was hiding him from you, did you?

A. No.

Q. Nor Mr. Pigford?

A. No.

Q. Nor Miss White?

A. Ahh, I did not have an address on Miss White with her statements. No.

Page 222.

Robert Greer - Cross

Q. I didn't ask you that.

A. I had no trouble finding her because I knew how to find her.

Q. Did the D.A.'s Office interfere with your attempts to locate her?

A. They did not interfere but they did not supply her address either.

Q. Well, that's why you get paid money, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir, that is.

Q. Okay. Thank you. Now, you interviewed Dessie Hightower, you tape recorded that, right?

A. Yes, I believe I did.

Q. And you asked him a question, but you didn't see the actual shooting. And he said no, isn't that so?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, he says I couldn't see anything, didn't hear anymore shots going off because he was behind the wall hiding because he didn't want to get shot, right?

A. Right.

Q. And when he stuck his head out he said I couldn't see anything so I walked towards Whispers. Now, Whispers is right on the corner of 13th and Locust, right, or it was at that time?

Page 223.

Robert Greer - Cross

A. Yes.

Q. And he continues. And by then it was flooded with other police officers. He said that, didn't he?

A. I believe he did.

Q. Well, would you like to look at it yourself or you take my word for it?

A. I'll take your word for it for now, yes, sir.

Q. Now, he sees a place flooded with cops. Now, you know that the shots went off and the place wasn't flooded with cops right away, so his time frame is obviously taking a little longer than the reality of the situation; would you agree with that?

A. Correct.

Q. Correct. So when he sees this place flooded with cops, the cops at that point are all over Mr. Jamal, and they are taking Police Officer Faulkner bodily in and out of vehicles trying to save his life, and they have Mr. William Cook up against the wall -- from your investigation you figured that out, didn't you?

A. I don't believe that's what he said.

Q. No, that's not what he said, but I am saying, from your investigation you figured that out, that by the time the place was swarming with cops, the

Page 224.

Robert Greer - Cross

shooting's over, the incident's over, you realize that, don't you?

A. The incident is over, yes. But your description of the scene I believe was incorrect.

Q. Okay.

A. Because he also said other things.

Q. Okay. Well, let's just assume that my description of the scene is irrelevant. But by the time he did finally walk towards Whispers -- and he still is about half a block from the crime scene, right?

A. Not quite, but he's away from the scene, yes, sir.

Q. Well, wait a minute. The crime scene is almost midpoint directly between 12th and 13th?

A. Almost, yes.

Q. And he is not even at 13th yet?

A. Okay.

Q. So he is more than half-a-block away?

A. All right.

Q. All right. I walked towards Whispers and by then it was flooded with other police officers and I saw somebody running past the hotel. I don't know if they were running because of gunshots or what. Now, he didn't say I saw somebody run away from the crime scene, did he?

Page 225.

Robert Greer - Cross

A. Not in that description, no.

Q. Well, which one, in which description he gave you did he say so?

A. Actually, maybe I put two statements together.

Q. No, no, no. You recorded this one?

A. You are right, he did not say that.

Q. Yes, he did not say that. As a matter of fact, as far as you knew, that person could have been running into the hotel to try to call the ambulance and get more help there; isn't that so?

A. Anything is possible.

Q. He could have been running to a phone booth anywhere around there because he is a friend who is trying to help this officer who is dying on the street; isn't that so?

A. That's correct.

Q. And you chose to accept the version that this person was the shooter and he was running away from the scene of his misdeeds; correct?

A. I chose the person to be a witness and he possibly saw what happened, that's what I --

Q. Oh, so you weren't looking for this six-foot-two, over 200 pound, dreadlock-wearing, Army-attire wearing male because he was the doer?

Page 226.

Robert Greer - Cross

A. He could have been the shooter or he could have just been a witness.

Q. You were looking for him as the missing witness?

A. That's right.

Q. I see. Did you ever talk to Cynthia White one time, just utter one word to her?

A. No.

Q. How many opportunities when she was in your vision did you have?

A. I believe about three times.

Q. But you knew where she stayed everyday: Basically she was a prostitute and --

A. I knew where she supposedly lived. But I never caught her there.

Q. Yes, sir, my question is: You knew where her place of business was; correct?

A. Her place of business?

Q. You know what I mean.

A. I knew she frequented that particular corner, but she frequented other places too.

Q. Well, did you go to visit those other places?

A. Everywhere, yes.

Q. But the only place you saw her was at 12th and Locust?

Page 227.

Robert Greer - Cross

A. Yeah.

Q. Where this murder happened?

A. That's right.

Q. So you knew that's where you could find her?

A. Possibly. I had a better chance of finding her there.

Q. Have you ever seen those two undercover white persons seen from the side and back of their head in a little red car ever again?

A. I -- no I no, no, I haven't seen them since then.

Q. And you haven't looked for them for 14 years, have you?

A. She left town, she left town after that week.

Q. Well, when did she leave town, Mr. Greer?

A. I have no idea but I know she left there.

Q. How do you know that if you have no idea?

A. Because she was arrested in Boston for prostitution, sir.

Q. And she was arrested in Boston in May of '82, isn't that so?

A. Possibly. I am not sure where she was when she was arrested, to be honest with you.

Q. So you from January to May looked for her to interview her?

Page 228.

Robert Greer - Cross

A. That's right, I didn't see her any longer until I officially was out of it. I stopped looking for her.

Q. Wasn't it a fact that you only looked for her for the two weeks that you saw these alleged plainclothes detectives and then you didn't look for her after that anymore because you started looking for everybody else?

A. I never stopped, really, looking for her, to be honest with you.

Q. Did you have any problem finding Veronica Jones?

A. I didn't look for Veronica Jones.

Q. Why not? Weren't you asked by Mr. Jackson?

A. No.

Q. You weren't?

A. No, I wasn't.

Q. Now I want you to think back, it has been a long time. I want you to think carefully. Did Mr. Jackson ever ask you to look for Veronica Jones?

A. I don't remember him asking me to look for Veronica Jones, no.

Q. Did he ever ask you to locate any Philadelphia police officers?

A. Not to my knowledge. Not that I can remember,

Page 229.

Robert Greer - Cross

I'11 put it that way.

Q. Who were you paid to look for besides Cynthia White, Dessie Hightower, and Robert Pigford?

A. Just the preacher that I told you about.

Q. Just the what?

A. I was paid to look for everyone on that particular, everybody who gave a statement. I didn't have an opportunity to look for all of those people.

Q. You didn't do very much work on this case, an hour a week for five months, did you, for 500 bucks?

A. That's not true. These kind of jobs you never get off of them, you work on them constantly.

Q. Well, did you think based on the amount of work that you were -- you only took two statements, sir, you took two lousy statements in five months, and $562 later, according to Mr. Jackson, not counting the defense committee retainer, whatever that means, and you got two lousy statements?

A. That's all I gave him, sir, that's all I took.

Q. And you didn't take one from Cynthia White?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. And you said you were looking for all these people on the list and you talked to two people?

A. I was looking primarily for the people that he and I discussed. Now, he never discussed Ver --

Page 230.

Robert Greer - Cross

well, whatever the name was.

Q. Jones?

A. Veronica Jones. He never discussed my talking to her. He probably would have gotten around to her but we hadn't at that point.

Q. Didn't he tell you words to this effect: There was a lot of people on this list that the police have interviewed, Mr. Greer -- did he call you Bob or did he call you Mr. Greer?

A. He probably called me Mr. Greer.

Q. Mr. Greer. But there's only three people that I'm really interested in, two people were together, two males, and I think if I can get them in and get statements from them I can create the impression that the real shooter ran away from the scene, did you have a conversation like that?

A. No.

Q. Did he tell you why he was so keenly interested in Mr. Hightower and Mr. Pigford? Since they were not eyewitnesses, you know that, right?

A. I don't know who they were, they were witnesses. They were people that the police took statements from.

Q. Oh. You know they weren't eyewitnesses because they told you that they weren't eyewitnesses

Page 231.

Robert Greer - Cross

to the shooting?

A. Oh, no, not eyewitnesses, no.

Q. Well, did he ever tell you why he was so desperate to get these two men?

A. I don't believe I remember him saying so.

Q. I'm sorry?

A. I don't remember.

Q. You may have had that conversation with him?

A. Not that conversation, no. He never said anything about a diversion and all trying to give an illusion of something else happening. That's not him.

Q. I know. Is it Mr. Jamal?

A. I talked to Mr. Jamal one time.

Q. So you don't know whether it is Mr. Jamal or not?

A. My impression of Mr. Jamal was that he was probably the most gentle person I'd ever met. He didn't have any devious thoughts that I knew of.

Q. No. Was he controlling any of your efforts?

A. Mr. Jackson was the only person that I talked to about what I did out there on the street.

Q. Okay. Mr. Pigford told you that the police didn't try to prevent him from talking to you or didn't tell him anything along those lines either?

A. That is correct.

Q. As a matter of fact, he said the police were gentlemanly to him and cooperative with him?

A. That is correct.

Q. And so did Mr. Hightower?

A. Correct.

Q. Did they ever tell you that the police were trying to prevent you from getting to them?

A. No.

Q. Did you interview anybody in this case in all the 22 or 25 hours you put in, did you ever meet with one person or talk to any person, whether you wrote it down or not, who told you the police told me not to speak to you, or they are trying to hide me from you?

A. No.

Q. Are you certain?

A. Positive.

Q. Well, you are the investigator that tried to reach these people for Mr. Jackson; correct?

A. I didn't reach the people that you are referring to because I didn't have addresses for them and I hadn't found them yet. But I would have found them eventually.

Q. And since you were the person that was Mr.

Jackson's eyes and ears, and who was first in contact with any witnesses that he would come in contact with -- because you would bring them to him, wouldn't you?

A. Say that again.

Q. You would bring him the witnesses once you found out who they were, you would like arrange for them to talk to him, right?

A. If need be, yes.

Q. If need be. Did the need arise?

A. Not with the two that I gave the statements, that I gave him the statements for.

Q. Because you had 10-page, tape-recorded statements from Dessie Hightower and Robert Pigford, right?

A. Probably, yeah.

Q. Now, can you explain, since you would have personal knowledge, as to why Mr. Jackson would come here under oath and say that the Commonwealth was trying to keep him and his investigative team from talking to these witnesses?

A. If that's his belief, sir, I can't explain why he would believe that.

Q. But you don't know of any basis for it, do you?

A. For him feeling that way?

Q. For him saying these words under oath?

A. Not personally, no.

Q. Since you knew people who pointed out Cynthia White to you, and you didn't even have a description of her, but you did frequently see this six-foot-two, over 200 pound, dreadlock, Army-jacket person who allegedly ran past the hotel but not necessarily leave the scene, you knew what he looked like personally, didn't you, you had seen him?

A. The person that I was looking for was someone I had seen many times before.

Q. Ahh. So you had seen that person yourself?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you haven't seen that person one time in the last 13 years; correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you want the fact-finder here to believe that person ever existed?

A. The one person never existed.

Q. Never existed?

A. Oh, he existed. He was a preacher. He preached on Walnut Street, Chestnut Street.

Q. He was one of those street corner preachers?

A. Oh, he was, he was always down there, day and night.

Q. Who else do you know who knew him?

A. Only Ben Johnson, he was the only one that I had.

Q. And Ben Johnson was an accomplished and legendary lawyer in this town at that time?

A. Yes, he was. Yes, he was.

Q. And did you use his investigator to try to find out who this guy was?

A. I was his investigator.

Q. So you were three years experienced and you were his investigator and Mr. Jackson's investigator at the same time?

A. On different cases, yes.

Q. Well, Mr. Ben Johnson had hundreds of clients; would that be fair to say?

A. Well, he wouldn't hire an investigator on all of those cases.

Q. No, I am not asking you --

A. I don't know how many clients he had.

Q. He had lots and lots and lots, more than Mr. Jackson, didn't he?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. And were you working for Mr. Johnson and getting paid while you were working for Mr. Jamal?

A. I doubt it, no.

Q. Why do you doubt it?

A. Because I wasn't doing anything with Ben at that particular time. I worked for a lot of different attorneys.

Q. Well, how many were you working for while you were employed by Mr. Jamal? Since you could only bill what you claim was 22-and-a-half hours and it was under really what you did, but 22-and-a-half hours over five months is not much work, who else were you working for?

A. I probably worked for Tom McGill. Probably worked for Ben Johnson. At least those, those two.

Q. And Anthony Jackson?

A. Of course Anthony Jackson.

Q. And all of those are very accomplished lawyers you worked for with a client base?

A. Yes, but they are all different cases. We couldn't work on those all at the same time.

Q. Did Debbie Kordansky ever tell you she didn't, want to talk to you?

A. I don't even know who Debbie Kordansky is.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson pay you out of his pocket cash, did he pay you in a cashier's check, did he pay you by way of a client's fund check, or did he pay you by money order?

A. He probably paid me by personal check but I am not certain of that.

Q. You filed your taxes on this case, right?

A. Definitely.

Q. So you would have some kind of record, wouldn't you?

A. Not after 14 years, I still wouldn't have that.

Q. Yeah, I guess that's true. Mr. Greer.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever interact with a group called the Mumia Abu-Jamal Defense Committee?

A. No, sir. I don't even know who they were. Honestly, I have never known them.

Q. Did you ever have any contact with people who claimed to be runners, legal runners, for Mr. Jamal, who would come up and seek you out and ask you for information or give you information?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever come into contact with William Peraneau?

A. I don't believe so, the name is not familiar to me.

Q. He is the photographer who worked for Mr.

Page 238.

Jackson on this case?

A. If he did, I had no contact with him.

Q. So you didn't point out to him the crime scene, this is where the weapon was found that belonged to Mr. Jamal, this is where the body was found of Officer Faulkner, this is where the spent shell, spent missile was found embedded in the brick wall, you didn't do any of that with the photographer, right?

A. Not me.

MR. GRANT: May I have the Court's indulgence for just a moment.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Did you tell Mr. Jackson that there was any work that you felt that should be done before you ceased your duties on his behalf?

A. Well, there was a lot of work that should have been done, yes.

Q. Like what?

A. Finishing interviewing all of the witnesses.

Q. All of which ones? The ones he wanted you to interview?

A. The ones that police gave statements to -- that gave the police statements.

Q. Well, let me say this. The police interviewed

Page 239.

50 people?

A. Hmm-hmm.

Q. Some of them more than once, so there may have been some duplication, maybe 65 police interviews. 60, 70 percent of those are police persons. Did you want to interview those police persons also?

A. If need be. But then most of the time we, we don't bother with them.

Q. Right. You are just looking for the civilians?

A. Civilians, yes.

Q. So the people that you are talking about that were left to be interviewed that you wanted to are... about 13 people, 15 people, whatever the number. That's the number that you are actually talking about, the civilians who may have had information about the shooting; correct?

A. Correct.

Q. But you never attempted to find any of them, did you, besides Mr. Hightower, Cynthia White and Robert Pigford, not in five months, not in 22-and-a-half hours, not any hours, you never attempted to find any of those other people, did you?

A. I made no attempt to find any of the other witnesses, correct.

Page 240.

Q. So the fact that you didn't look for them is the reason that you didn't find them; would that be fair to say?

A. I wasn't ready to look for them then, that's correct.

Q. How did you plan to get ready to look for them?

A. When I was told to find them I would have found them. But I was told to go find these people, I never was told to find them.

Q. So you were waiting for the order to go out for these people?

A. When it became necessary to look for them, yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson tell you well, I am ordering you to go look for the people that are most important for me first and then we will get to the other ones later?

A. Correct. He did tell me to look for a cab driver. I was getting ready to start looking for him.

Q. There was a couple cab drivers that saw this killing?

A. I didn't remember which one it was.

Q. But you didn't have to look for the cab driver because you could let your fingers do the walking in the Yellow Pages, couldn't you?

A. I don't know what you are referring to.

Q. Telephone?

A. Yeah, telephone's working. But I don't remember exactly who the guy was. Or what the cab company he worked for. But I could have found him, yes.

Q. Yes, you could have easily found him, because you were good at this?

A. Hmm.

Q. The best lawyers in town hired you, didn't they?

A. That's correct.

Q. So they were confident of your skills and so were you and if you really wanted to find Mr. Chobert, one cab driver, Mr. Magilton, second cab driver, you could have found them, couldn't you?

A. When I was ready to find them I think I could have found them.

Q. But you weren't told to go find them?

A. That is correct.

Q. You were only told to find the people --

A. I was told to find the one cab driver, I don't even remember which one it was.

Page 242.

Q. So you were asked to find the primary Commonwealth witness who was a prostitute who was on that corner who saw the whole thing, and two people who didn't see anything except the aftermath but who said someone was running past the hotel; correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Thank you, Mr. Greer. Oh, by the way, since that's all you did, and you only submitted a bill for 22-and-a-half hours, how much time did you actually work on the case?

A. You are talking about actually worked?

Q. Yes.

A. It's hard to say. Umm...

Q. Twice that much?

A. Probably three times that much.

Q. So you probably worked almost 70 hours?

A. Yeah.

Q. And that would have ended up in a bill of about 1500, 2,000 bucks?

A. Yeah. Uhh --

Q. And you only found two people and you only looked for three?

A. I found the ones that I was looking for. There's more to it than that. You are trying to oversimplify this, and you know it, so I won't even comment.

Q. Okay. How many red cars have you seen undercover detectives using since the date of this observation, if any?

A. I have no idea.

Q. If any.

A. I have no idea, I haven't looked for it since then.

Q. No, no, no. How many police personnel, who you felt by looking at them were undercover or plainclothes officers, how many of them since 1982 have you ever seen driving a little red car, sir?

A. I have no idea. I don't know, I haven't been looking for it so I probably haven't seen any. Is that the answer that you want, sir?

Q. No, I want the answer that's true.

A. I have no idea.

MR. GRANT: Okay. Thank you, Mr. Greer.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

- - - - -

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Mr. Greer, how many days have you been in the

Page 244.

Courthouse prior to testifying today?

A. About four.

Q. Four days. And in the four days that you were here, did Mr. Grant ever put his head in the witness room and say to you Mr. Greer, did you bring any of your records with you to Court?

A. He asked me something about records the first day that I was here. But he didn't elaborate on what they were.

Q. He didn't?

A. He asked me if I had records, I told him no.

Q. Did he show you the subpoena?

A. No, he didn't.

Q. And that was the first day?

A. That's right.

Q. And you came back another day?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you came back another day?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And another day?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he never again showed you the subpoena or asked you for specific records?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, you told us you read the discovery in this case?

Page 245.

A. That's right.

Q. Many, many statements; is that right?

A. Yes, quite a few.

Q. Would you say over a hundred?

A. I don't remember exactly how many there was.

Q. But there were only two statements of all those statements that had the address of the person being interviewed; isn't that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And that was Dessie Hightower and Robert Pigford?

A. That is correct.

Q. And that's why you went to interview them?

A. That's why.

Q. Because you had their address?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you didn't interview them until April 29th in the case of Mr. Pigford, and May 3rd in the case of Dessie Hightower, as your transcript indicates?

A. Yeah.

Q. So you didn't even get to those two witnesses until just a month before trial?

A. That's correct, yes.

Q. Now, in reading the discovery you recall you read a statement by cab driver Robert Chobert in which he described the shooter as being six-foot-two about 225 pounds, and he ran away about 35 steps; do you remember reading that statement?

Page 246.

A. I remember it vaguely, sir, I can't honestly say I remember what he wrote.

Q. Is that, in your recall, what made you think, after reading Commonwealth witness Robert Chobert's statement to the police that night, that this man who you referred to as the preacher, six-foot-two, six to six-two, 225 pounds, might have been the shooter?

A. That's one of the things, yes.

Q. And the cab driver told one of the first officers who appeared on the scene, who also wrote a statement, Officer Giordano, told him that the guy ran away? Is that right?

A. I believe so.

Q. Now, about Cynthia White. Do you know if you saw her when she appeared here in Court at the preliminary hearing and at the bail hearing, both of those occurring in January of 1982?

A. Repeat your question, sir.

Q. Did you see Cynthia White?

A. I caught a glimpse of her. I didn't come into the Courtroom, I just looked in here so I got a vague description of her, yes.

Q. But you caught a glimpse of her here in person?

A. Vague description -- yeah, I was looking through the door when the door opened because I didn't come in. I knew generally what her description was, yes.

Q. So you had seen her before you tried to find her and she was the person you saw in the street?

A. Yeah.

Q. And in all those times that you saw her on the street, you never saw her without a car and several people in the car parked near her?

A. I never saw her without a car parked right in front of her with two people in it.

Q. Was it is always the red car, Mr. Greer?

A. That's the only car that I saw.

Q. Now, you tape recorded the statement of Dessie Hightower; isn't that right?

A. That's correct.

Q. With his permission?

A. Of course.

Q. Is that a good investigative technique?

A. I think it is.

Q. In all of the 40, 50, 60 witnesses that the

Page 248.

Commonwealth had interviewed in this case prior to trial, to your knowledge did they tape record one witness?

A. I have no idea, sir.

Q. Did you ever see a tape recording of a witness?

A. No, I haven't.

Q. The process they use is they would have, they would interview a witness and the police officer would write a statement in most instances, or type it; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. In your experience is that the way in which the investigators for the Homicide Division or the District Attorney's Office controls what a witness purportedly says in an interview?

A. That's a loaded question. I have no idea, sir. I can't answer that.

Q. Now, you weren't here during the trial, were you?

A. No, I wasn't.

MR. WEINGLASS: Page 28.15, Counsel. June 28th.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Question: Mr. Hightower, before the police officers arrived, did you see anyone leaving the scene.

Answer: Going back to the hotel to the best of my recollection at this point in time it was three, I had seen somebody with a red-and-black sweater on. It was very brief. I glanced for maybe a second or two, I didn't pay it full attention, going, first was going in the opposite direction from where the incident happened.

Now, did you have a discussion with Mr. Hightower off the tape as to whether or not he saw people or persons running from the shooting before the police arrived?

A. No, I didn't. I only talked to him on the phone and let him know that I wanted to talk to him. And our return conversation I recorded.

Q. So based on your experience directly with Mr. Hightower, you don't know what the sequence was, whether he saw someone run before the police arrived or after the police arrived?

MR. GRANT: Objection. He took the statement where he said the police were swarming all over the place. What is Counsel trying to do? I object.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Page 250.

Q. You don't know yourself, do you, based on your conversation with him?

A. No. I assume when I talked to him that the person ran before the police arrived. That was my assumption. Now, I could be wrong.

Q. But when you spoke to him he wasn't under oath?

A. No, he wasn't.

Q. And when he was under oath, it was clear that the person ran before the police arrived?

MR. GRANT: Objection. How does he know that? He wasn't there.

MR. WEINGLASS: I read it, it is part of the record. Counsel put the entire record in.

THE COURT: Are we asking him now for his opinion?

MR. WEINGLASS: Right, under oath.

THE COURT: What's that got to do with this case?

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, it has something to do with the cross-examination.

THE COURT: It has something --

MR. WEINGLASS: Which I am entitled to go into in redirect.

Page 251.

THE COURT: I know that, but what does it have to do with the case? What does his opinion mean?

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I will abandon it rather than proceed.

THE COURT: Yes.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Just so that it's clear once again, Mr. Hightower -- I'm sorry -- getting late for me -- Mr. Greer, you received no money from any committee?

A. No.

Q. You only received $500 from Anthony Jackson?

A. That is correct.

Q. And when that money ran out you stopped?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you weren't here for the trial?

A. No, I wasn't.

Q. And of all these witnesses, potential witnesses whose statements you saw in discovery, the only two you really talked to were the two that you had addresses for: Dessie Hightower and Pigford?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. And that was just about a month before the trial began?

A. I believe so.

Page 252.

Q. And to your knowledge, that's the sum total of all of the investigative information that was available from your work to Mr. Jackson?

A. That's correct.

MR. WEINGLASS: Okay. Thank you. I have no further questions.

MR. GRANT: I just have two questions.

- - - - -

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. First of all, sir, when you came to Court and you met me in that room right behind this wall --

A. Hmm-hmm.

Q. -- didn't you show me a copy of your subpoena and ask me about it?

A. No, sir, I didn't.

Q. You didn't bring a copy of your subpoena with you that day?

A. No, I didn't have it.

Q. Do you have it today?

A. No, all I had was the two statements of Dessie Hightower and Robert Pigford. That's what I had in my hand.

Q. Oh, that's what you were showing me?

Page 253.

A. I told you that's what I had, I didn't have any records.

Q. Oh. You were saying this is the only things that I brought in connection with this case are these two statements?

A. That's correct.

Q. Oh, I see. Now, since you reviewed all the discovery in this case, and Mr. Weinglass brought up how the Commonwealth, apparently, or police officers attempt to manipulate witnesses' testimony, you do in fact know that the primary eyewitness in this case Cynthia White was tape recorded, don't you?

A. I don't know whether she was or not. If she was, I have no knowledge.

Q. Well, you reviewed the discovery received by Mr. Jackson, didn't you?

A. Yes, I did. But I don't remember if she was or not. That's what made me say I don't know.

Q. I see. So it is possible that she was tape recorded and you were aware of it in 1981 and you just weren't aware of it now?

A. It's very possible, yes.

Q. Since you saw Miss White in Court that means you got a chance to know what she looked like?

A. I got a glimpse of her, I knew a general description of her. I didn't have a chance to come in and look at her for any length of time.

Q. So you didn't really get a good look at her, you didn't know what she looked like?

A. Not really, no. I really got to know who she really was by someone telling me that's her.

Q. And that's why you had to ask him what she looked like and who she was, because when you saw her in Court you really didn't get a chance to see her well?

A. That is correct.

MR. GRANT: Okay, thanks. Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You are excused, I think.

THE WITNESS: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right, gentlemen, until tomorrow morning.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, we have a witness here who has been here all day.

THE COURT: Well, bring them back tomorrow. I am a little tired. I am tired.

MR. WEINGLASS: Please don't leave the bench in the midst of my --

THE COURT: Well, I adjourned for the day. Whatever you want to say, save it for tomorrow.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am trying to avoid a problem for tomorrow, Your Honor. It is a witness who I have advised Counsel on the other side who was not on the list but who is available. Her name is Carol Young. She was interviewed by the prosecution, they have her statement. We would like to put her on. And I am asking for the Court, I would like to put her on.

THE COURT: I told you I am finished for the day. I am tired. We had a long day, I have to get some rest too.

MR. WEINGLASS: May we put her on tomorrow?

MR. GRANT: I object.

THE COURT: Take it up with me tomorrow. I told you to leave it go until tomorrow morning.

MR. WEINGLASS: I don't want to inconvenience this person.

THE COURT: I'm sorry. I'm sorry, we are all working people.

MR. WEINGLASS: Her name is Carolyn Young, Your Honor.

Page 256.

THE COURT: Fine. Bring her in tomorrow morning then.

MR. WEINGLASS: We will do that.

THE COURT: Okay.

THE COURT OFFICER: This Court stands recessed until 9:30 tomorrow morning.

THE COURT: When I returned to my office yesterday at the conclusion of the day I found on my desk a motion to quash... subpoenas on behalf of Mr. Pines and Mrs. Radwanski, who are employed by the Administrative Office of the Pennsylvania Courts.

I assume Counsel has received copies of that motion?

MR. GRANT: I have, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Well, I read over the motion and I have signed an order quashing those subpoenas.

I think it is time for the Court to take back reins on the Defendant here. Because I have been a little, I guess a little bit lax. I don't know if it's lax, but it's like leaving a bull unattended in a china shop and that just goes through and knocks everything down.

The procedure we are going to follow from here on in is this. The defense had filed a Petition alleging, I think, 19 issues to be resolved. At this juncture we will concentrate solely on those issues. When those issues have been resolved, or all the evidence is in on them, if the Defendant wishes to file supplemental issues, you will have to seek permission from the Court. And if the Court gives you permission you will have to put it in writing, the same as you did with your original Petition, and serve it on the District Attorney's Office for reply. We are not going to go afield, all over the map of the City of Philadelphia. We are going to concentrate solely on those issues that were raised in the Petition, the original Petition at this time.

Now, I have a list here, I really don't know out of that list who you intend to call today and whether or not the District Attorney has signed affidavits or any other written memoranda that would enable them to proceed with that witness.

Which witnesses do you intend to call today?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, before we get to that, you indicated that you wanted us to proceed per our Petition. And I would inform the Court that claim Number 9 deals with the geographical and racial disparity question.

THE COURT: They have given you whatever they have in the file, Counselor.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: This was the subject of our --

THE COURT: Counselor. Counselor.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Of our subpoena.

THE COURT: Counselor, no more. I have ruled on that issue, you have an exception. Counselor, I have ruled.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, your --

THE COURT: If you keep talking you are going to find yourself up in the cell room. I am telling you I have ruled on those. I have ruled on that. You have an exception to my ruling.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor --

THE COURT: All right, Sheriff, take her out of here, please.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Fine. Your order says, Your Honor --

THE COURT: I don't want --

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Respondent's reply to this indicating that we --

Page 6.

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: That we --

THE COURT: And I have already made a ruling on that, okay. I have ruled on it, that's it.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your order was decided --

THE COURT: Take her out of here.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, may I have a moment?

THE COURT: She is in contempt of Court.

MR. WEINGLASS: May I have a consult?

THE COURT: You could consult with her up there.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I am telling you, I will not tolerate this. When I make an order, that's it.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Could I put my --

THE COURT: Counsel will take care of that.

(At this time Ms. Rachel Wolkenstein, Esquire was placed in custody and escorted from the Courtroom by Sheriffs.)

Page 7.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor...

THE COURT: For everybody's edification: I am not going to tolerate this nonsense in this Courtroom. I make an order, that's it. You have an exception. Take it up with the Supreme Court at the proper time. I am not going to stand here and argue with you.

MR. WEINGLASS: Nobody argued. The only point she was trying to make she didn't have a chance.

THE COURT: I know what she is talking about, I have read it. I am convinced that it is not proper at this time.

THE COURT OFFICER: Court is in session.

THE COURT: I think what you better do in the future: If you are going to issue subpoenas like that, bring it to my attention first. I think the fact that you are harassing these people by these subpoenas is intolerable. The Court will not stand for it. Besides, I don't have any jurisdiction in that issue. That's a matter for the Supreme Court.

MR. WEINGLASS: Based on a record to be made here.

THE COURT: The Supreme Court has it's records up there. I don't rule on that, they have the records there, Counselor. And they gave you whatever they had. They gave you that information. So let's not deal with that nonsense anymore. Tell me what witnesses you are going to call today. Let's proceed.

MR. WEINGLASS: We will just start with the witness right away.

THE COURT: Well, which witnesses? I want to see if the Commonwealth knows where we are going to give them an opportunity if they have any objections. Which ones do you want to call?

MR. WEINGLASS: We are calling the number one witness on the list.

THE COURT: Who is that?

MR. WEINGLASS: Carol Young. I just want to say this: Miss Young, who is a registered nurse, was here all day yesterday, and I mentioned to the Court --

THE COURT: We have all been here, a lot of witnesses have been here from day-to-day. I can't help that. If you wait until 4:30 to try to call another witness and I tell you I am tired, we will adjourn for the day and that's it. The fact that she has to come back today, I'm sorry about that, but I am not going to kill myself over this case. So you are going to call Carol Young. Who else?

MR. WEINGLASS: George Fassnacht.

THE COURT: George Fassnacht. Who else?

MR. WEINGLASS: Jerry Kracoff.

THE COURT: All right. Who else?

MR. WEINGLASS: Steve Hawkins.

THE COURT: Steve Hawkins? Oh, he's down below. Okay. Who else?

MR. WEINGLASS: Robert Harkins.

THE COURT: Robert Harkins. That's one, two, three four, five.

MR. WEINGLASS: I believe the prosecution has that witness. Gary Bell.

MR. GRANT: Has what witness?

THE COURT: He says you have Robert Harkins.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, they have indicated several times on the record that they brought Mr. Harkins to Court.

Page 10.

MR. GRANT: We didn't bring him to Court; he was in here pursuant to your subpoena. And since, since Your Honor is allowing them to proceed when they are proceeding, we haven't subpoenaed him. We don't have the witness but we are willing to go get the witness if you like.

MR. WEINGLASS: Fine. Thank you.

MR. GRANT: As to those first, we have objections as to all but two.

THE COURT: What objections do you have to what ones?

MR. GRANT: As to Carol Young.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. GRANT: Based on their page 3, they say she is a registered nurse who was on duty at Jefferson Hospital on the night of December 9th of '81 and could have testified that Mr. Jamal made no statement, basically. And that she observed the police officers verbally and physically abusing Mr. Jamal.

First of all, she is not in support of any claim that is cognizable here. The issue as to whether or not Mr. Jamal made the statement was litigated by the Jury. Number one.

Page 11.

Number two, she did give a statement to the police and she categorically denied that the police leveled any verbal abuse or physical abuse at Mr. Jamal. And this is an outright fabrication.

Number three, Judge, whether she could have or would have been called is an issue of strategy and tactics and I don't see in here alleged that Mr. Jackson, if he had put her on, she would have affected the case. So we object to that. They never noticed us, they held her all day not even letting us know she was here. Last night they said we have a witness. I object to that witness.

Number two, Jerry Kracoff is an attorney representing Mr. Jamal from Pittsburgh. He said that some prison official read Mr. Jamal's mail. Now, I don't think that reading his mail occurred during the course of the proceedings where he was convicted 13 years ago but probably happened about two or three years ago at the earliest. So what we are talking about is post-trial information. That's not cognizable by Your Honor.

Lastly, Mr. Hawkins. Mr. Hawkins is

Page 12.

Counsel for them. Mr. Hawkins has two affidavits which are objectionable for three reasons. He takes hearsay testimony from a Juror and he purports to have it brought before Your Honor. Number one. The Juror has to testify and not him because that is not admissible, but the Juror is incompetent to testify. So testimony in that are regard is incompetent, we would submit to Your Honor.

Secondly, he took an affidavit purporting to say I reviewed appellate Counsel's work in this case and being a legal expert of six years in the profession, or six years doing death penalty cases, I find in my expert opinion beyond a reasonable degree of legal certainty that she was ineffective. Well, frankly, the Supreme Court has already stated, or the Superior Court has already stated that a lawyer's, another lawyer's opinion as to whether a second lawyer is incompetent is strictly within the purview of the court reviewing counsel's performance. They don't give a whit as to what that lawyer thinks because those lawyers who are called judges decide that issue. Moreover, he is Defendant's Counsel.

Page 13.

He, besides being incompetent testimony from a Juror, being hearsay testimony, and his legal opinion being of no import, he has no reason to be on this list.

So Mr. Kracoff does not go to the truth-determining process. Carol Young is offered for purposes that have already been litigated by the Jury. And Mr. Hawkins' testimony is totally incompetent in every respect.

And I would note for the record that the list they gave you claims to be only a list until Friday, which implies that if this goes beyond Friday they have another list for Your Honor. And you specifically asked for the list of witnesses for the remainder of the proceedings and an offer of proof as to what they would show. Which we submitted to Your Honor and gave a copy to Counsel.

MR. WEINGLASS: Counsel has a way of reading documents where he only reads portions of the documents that he likes and he conveniently omits those portions of the document that he doesn't like because they undermine totally his position. Let me give you an example quickly and briefly.

Witness number one is Carol Young. This is a witness whose statement to the police they have had for 14 years. And we intend to call her in connection with that statement. Counsel says she has nothing to offer. But he hasn't read the statement. Because what did she tell the police? Back in 1982 she told the police that when she was in the process of treating Mr. Jamal, a police officer said to her, quote, you should let the son of a bitch die. Then when she continued with her treatment of Mr. Jamal, another police officer said to her don't waste your time on him. In addition to that, she'll tell this Court if she is allowed to testify today that a police officer was standing on Mr. Jamal's catheter bed while he was being treated in the intensive care unit and under critical conditions. An act which ordinarily one might assume was an attempted murder, and yet there was no complaint filed against any police officer as a result of Mr. Jackson's filing a complaint. All of that this witness will testify to. She was a registered nurse. She was the supervisor of the operating room. She had serious responsibility in the hospital and she was attempting to carry them out that night. She'll tell this Court that her observation of Mr. Jamal that night is that he was subdued. Her observation of the police that night is that they were unprofessional. This is something that the Jury never heard.

They didn't hear it, we contend, and this goes to an issue we raised because Mr. Jackson, as he pointed out to this Court, in the rush of preparing this case and under pressure from the Court and being rushed along, he failed to call registered nurse Carol Young. We think she should be called to the stand. She should be asked if she was available then. She should be asked if she gave the police a statement. And this record should contain her testimony so that a reviewing court could make a determination, which they must, if they have to, as to whether or not Miss Young's testimony was important for the defense and Mr. Jackson's failure to call her was a factor that goes to the issue we raised, namely, the ineffective assistance of Counsel. So that's our first witness. And she would testify to that.

Page 16.

THE COURT: All right. What is your answer to that?

MR. GRANT: Mr. Jackson was on the stand and they never asked him if he did not call her for strategic or tactical reasons, first of all. Secondly, Judge, I could say I hope Judge Sabo falls down and breaks his leg but if I don't say that to Judge Sabo I am not verbally abusing you. I'm talking unpleasantly about you but I am not verbally abusing you. Certainly that doesn't amount to physical abuse. That's what they are claiming these statements this nurse received from fellow officers of Mr. Faulkner amounts to. It's not true.

Obviously I did read the statements, Counselor.

Secondly, Judge, if they have him on the stand, Mr. Jackson, and they establish that he didn't call her and it was not because of tactical or strategic reasons to advance the interests of his client, that is not ineffective assistance. And they have not established that. There is no foundation for this witness.

THE COURT: All right, what I will do temporarily, I will hold up on Carol Young,

Page 17.

Jerry Kracoff and Robert Harkins, and I will allow you to submit to me any cases that you can find on that issue. Just Xerox the case, I don't want a brief.

MR. GRANT: I think Robert Harkins is an appropriate witness. They have alleged that he saw photographic arrays and that was --

THE COURT: I thought you said he was the attorney.

MR. GRANT: No, Kracoff.

THE COURT: Kracoff was the attorney.

MR. GRANT: Kracoff is the attorney.

THE COURT: Well, who is Robert Harkins?

MR. GRANT: He is a witness that they claim saw a photo array and that knowledge was suppressed from them.

THE COURT: Oh, okay. So then all you are talking about then is Carol Young and Kracoff.

MR. GRANT: And Steven Hawkins.

THE COURT: Well, who is he?

MR. GRANT: He is one of Mr. Jamal's Counsels.

THE COURT: Oh, he is the attorney.

Page 18.

MR. GRANT: Who purports to be a witness as well.

THE COURT: All right, I made a mistake. Then it will be Carol Young, Jerry Kracoff and Steve Hawkins.

MR. WEINGLASS: If the Court please.

THE COURT: They will be held in abeyance and give me any cases on the issue that will support your position. I don't want to hear anymore argument because all I am getting is a lot of hot air from everybody. Give me a Xeroxed case on the subject, that is the best way. Let me read the case and if I find out that you are right, I will reverse myself.

MR. WEINGLASS: Case on?

THE COURT: Give me a case.

MR. WEINGLASS: On what? On what?

THE COURT: Well, give me a case, Xerox the case for me, let me read it. I don't want you to tell me --

MR. WEINGLASS: On what issue? So I have direction here.

THE COURT: That's what I am telling you to do.

MR. WEINGLASS: On what issue, Your

Page 19.

Honor?

THE COURT: On any issue dealing with --

MR. WEINGLASS: With respect to Carol Young.

THE COURT: For the reason that he's already said. You haven't asked that question. You haven't laid the foundation. You want to call your attorney back again, Anthony Jackson, fine. Call him back in, let's lay the foundation.

MR. WEINGLASS: Could --

THE COURT: But the other two. Whatever cases you have on it just Xerox the case for me and give it to me. I will read it, okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: May Carol Young, may Carol Young, who is a registered nurse, be excused then?

THE COURT: Oh, yes, sure.

MR. WEINGLASS: Subject to recall.

THE COURT: That's right, subject to recall when a proper foundation is laid, okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Now, Your Honor, I make this request of the Court. Our next witness, who is here and we will put him on the stand, is George Fassnacht.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: And his affidavit is appended to the Petition.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: In order for me to conduct a proper examination of Mr. Fassnacht I do need Miss Wolkenstein here. I will be doing the questioning; she has done the evaluation of the very lengthy Firearms Unit report and the ballistics report. I need her assistance for this examination.

THE COURT: Let me say this: If she apologizes to the Court and assures me that she is not going to argue with me anymore about any ruling that I make, I will let her come back down. Now, you better go talk to her. I will take a short recess.

THE COURT OFFICER: This Court will take a short recess.

- - - - -

(Brief recess.)

- - - - -

THE COURT: Mr. Weinglass, what is the situation?

MR. WEINGLASS: I have talked to Miss Wolkenstein. She indicated she would make the representations to the Court that the Court indicated.

THE COURT: Did you have her brought down?

MR. WEINGLASS: While we are waiting, may I bring up --

THE COURT: Yes, while we are waiting I want to bring up one thing. I see that this list that you have given me is only to August 4th. I asked for a complete list.

MR. WEINGLASS: That's right, our, we are operating under a time pressure that precludes our having a complete list.

THE COURT: No, no, no, no. There is no time pressure. You have 19 issues.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right.

THE COURT: I am hearing only evidence on those 19 issues at this time.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right.

THE COURT: So anybody that is on this list that is not on that 19 issues, just scratch them off.

Page 22.

MR. WEINGLASS: They are all to the 19 issues.

THE COURT: Okay, well.

MR. GRANT: There is the Jury Commissioner of the County of Philadelphia on here, Judge.

THE COURT: He wasn't even Jury Commissioner at that time so he wouldn't know anything about anything.

MR. GRANT: I would move that that subpoena be quashed.

THE COURT: Is that Michael --

MR. GRANT: Michael McAllister, the last person on page 1.

THE COURT: Yes, he is out.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, we do make an allegation of disparity in the jury system.

THE COURT: He doesn't have that information, Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, it is in the office. And we have subpoenaed him duces tecum to bring the information.

THE COURT: No, it is not part of your PCRA matter.

MR. WEINGLASS: It is a separate item.

Page 23.

THE COURT: Where does it fit in under the PCRA? Where does it fit in under section 9501?

9501? 9543.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time.)

THE COURT: Counselor, I want you to look at that section. And I want not only their names, but a statement of who they are, what they are going to talk about, and how it fits into your Petition. You haven't given me that. And I want all of the names, not just until August the 4th. You had 10 lawyers here when you started. Now you are down to three or four. And you have your Philadelphia lawyer here. Let him do some work for you.

MR. WEINGLASS: The matter I wanted to bring before the Court is the following. I believe yesterday an attorney unknown to me but whose name is somehow associated with an attorney by the name of Capone -- C-A-P-O-N-E -- also unknown to me -- brought to Court and handed to me personally a handwritten letter from a William C. Harmon -- H-A-R-M-O-N. And the part of the letter that's germane to our proceeding is the following from Mr. Harmon.

I would like you to contact the defense lawyers for the Mumia Abu-Jamal case and tell them I could be a witness in that case because I was there that night that he was supposed to have killed the officer in question. I was there and I know Mumia did not kill that officer. I wrote to the Daily News, to Gregory Charles, and told him some of the things I saw. But I haven't received any answer as of yet. And if I can help in some way I would like to.

The reason why --

THE COURT: Fine, Counselor. You have Greer, he is an investigator, let him go investigate.

MR. WEINGLASS: Mr. Greer is not my investigator, never was.

THE COURT: Whatever investigator you have now.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right, now --

THE COURT: Counselor, whoever you have who is your investigator now, give him the letter, let him try to find him. I am not here to try to find witnesses for you, that is not my job.

Page 25.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am not asking that. The letter was given, as I understand it, to also the District Attorney.

THE COURT: Well, there is a lot of things I have. Do you want to see all the letters I got? Holy smokes, there is a lot of letters. I can't, I can't decide issues on letters. That doesn't mean a thing to me.

MR. WEINGLASS: No.

THE COURT: Locate him, get a statement from him, file it as a supplemental. At the end, after we have dealt with these 19 issues that you have here, the Court will take it up at that time.

MR. WEINGLASS: The point I wanted to make to the Court is that the District Attorney's Office, I am told, also received a copy of this letter.

THE COURT: So what?

MR. WEINGLASS: I think the District Attorney's Office has an obligation, since this is evidence of innocence --

THE COURT: No, no, no, no. This is --

MR. WEINGLASS: -- to pursue this.

Page 26.

THE COURT: This is your obligation. This is a PCRA; they could just sit back here and do nothing. You have the responsibility.

Go ahead, I will listen to you. Go ahead. What is your position in this? Do you have responsibility here?

MS. PERKINS: Yes, Your Honor, yesterday morning around lunchtime, I don't remember where we were in the proceedings, some man walked into this Courtroom who I have never seen before and handed me this photostatic copy of a letter, not an original letter, that was addressed to a Mr. Capone. Now, there is a defense attorney named Mr. Capone who knows me personally. I have not gotten any calls from Mr. Capone. I didn't know who this man was. This case has been so publicized everybody is getting FAXs from people all over the universe that say they know things about this case. I have heard things from people working in the Clerk of Quarter Sessions that they have to turn off their FAX machines because there is so much extraneous information that is coming in.

He said, he handed me the letter. I started looking at it. He originally says to me it's another PCRA Defendant, someone who is incarcerated. I don't recognize the name from handling PCRA petitions. I looked at him, I said I don't know who this man is. He then walks away, comes back to me and says well, you're going to give it to Counsel, aren't you. And I said to him, look, this is the first I've heard of it. I don't know who you are, I have never seen you before. I don't recognize this name. It's not an original document. They are sitting right there. If you want to walk this letter the other 10 feet to the other side of the room and hand it to defense Counsel you are welcome to do so.

I do not have that letter. The copy that he had, as far as I know, which I saw, he gave to Mr. Weinglass. I don't even have a copy of it at this point. I think it's entirely suspect that somebody, a total stranger comes into these proceedings with something and only has one copy which he then gives to them.

THE COURT: That's why I say, let his investigator, he has an investigator, let him try to investigate it.

MR. WEINGLASS: And, Your Honor, I would ask --

Page 28.

THE COURT: If it is addressed to somebody, Capone, let him go see Capone and let's see if Capone knows who this person is. Let them do whatever they have to do but that is their responsibility.

MS. PERKINS: I am requesting that any interviews, statements, anything recorded, dealing with this Mr. Harmon or anyone else connected to this alleged statement and information, that it be provided to the Commonwealth forthwith.

THE COURT: It would have to be provided to you before you could call any witnesses. That's what I am saying. That's why I want a list, a complete list, and what these people are going to testify to. You are giving me a big story but I have to have some idea of who they are.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I understood the Commonwealth's position right up to this moment was that there is no discovery in a PCRA, and I am glad now they finally relent and they are asking for discovery.

THE COURT: No, they are not. They are just saying they don't have anything on it --

MR. WEINGLASS: No, the request is now, just now is they want discovery from our witnesses.

THE COURT: No, you are going now to the issue of his innocence. If you could bring in here proof that somebody else killed this officer, fine, bring them in.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, and I want to say one other thing.

THE COURT: Because as far as I am concerned, if you read the record, the police arrived on the scene within 45 seconds. 45 seconds. That's pretty good time.

MR. WEINGLASS: Is the Court indicating it's impression of guilt or innocence?

THE COURT: No, I am talking about the original record. You see, you weren't here for the trial. That's unfortunate.

MR. WEINGLASS: I have read the record.

THE COURT: Well, then, fine. Then you know that the police arrived in 45 seconds.

Page 30.

There were only three people there: Officer Faulkner, the Defendant, and his brother.

MR. WEINGLASS: Has Your Honor read the Petition?

THE COURT: I have read your Petition but now you have to prove that.

MR. WEINGLASS: Does Your Honor see in the Petition an explanation as to what happened?

THE COURT: Yes. But you have to prove that. The Petition is not evidence in itself.

MR. WEINGLASS: We are getting that.

THE COURT: Fine. But now you are talking about somebody walking into this Courtroom and handing a piece of paper. We don't even know who he is. He has disappeared. But you have the name somehow on there. Investigate it.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am asking two things. I am asking for the opportunity to investigate.

THE COURT: Well, sure you have the opportunity.

MR. WEINGLASS: I can't do it because I am here in Court everyday.

Page 31.

THE COURT: Well, get on your Philadelphia Counsel here. He is not here everyday. Or use one of your other attorneys here. You don't need all of them here in Court. Where is the fourth one? Let him do some work. But let the investigator --

MR. WEINGLASS: Fourth one's in lockup.

THE COURT: Well, then, fine, he is in lockup, wherever he is. But you have an investigator. Let him do the work initially and get it to you and see if it makes any sense. But I am not going to --

MR. WEINGLASS: Will the Court issue --

THE COURT: No, come on.

MR. WEINGLASS: Issue a habeas affia cundum so this witness could be brought here?

THE COURT: What witness?

MR. WEINGLASS: He is in lockup. This witness Harmon is in lockup.

THE COURT: You have to tell me what he is going to say. Did you interview him?

MR. WEINGLASS: He has to be brought here so I may interview him.

Page 32.

THE COURT: Go see him wherever he is.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, he is out near Pittsburgh and I am in Philadelphia.

THE COURT: Oh. Well, I am not going to send you to Pittsburgh. Go to Pittsburgh. You have an attorney here, you have Philadelphia attorneys here not doing anything. Send then out to Pittsburgh.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am requesting the Court to bring him here to Philadelphia.

THE COURT: No, you go to Pittsburgh.

MR. GRANT: Mr. Kracoff is in the back, he is Pittsburgh Counselor, he would like to interview him.

MR. WEINGLASS: He is civil counsel: He knows nothing of this case.

THE COURT: Do you want to talk to him?

MR. WEINGLASS: There is one other item.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: Counsel represented to the Court, if I heard right, that they are receiving a lot of information. If they received --

Page 33.

THE COURT: No, it is a lot of...

Well, I get a lot too, but I don't know that I received anything that's material in this case.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, it seems to me that only one person, one, has written in saying I was there, Mr. Jamal did not do the shooting.

THE COURT: Fine, investigate it.

MR. WEINGLASS: That one is not an insignificant person.

THE COURT: Fine, investigate it, will you please.

MR. WEINGLASS: I can not do that in the middle of a PCRA hearing.

THE COURT: Well, you have an investigator, let him go to Pittsburgh. Let him get a sworn statement from him. I am not here to do your work for you, Counselor. You have a $100,000 fund, don't you, or more?

MR. WEINGLASS: I don't know what the Court's reading in the press.

THE COURT: Well, I think I read it in the Time, I think, something about 100,000.

MR. WEINGLASS: The Court is misinformed from the media.

THE COURT: Okay, media, you see, he says you are wrong. You are misinterpreting him now, okay. The media is wrong.

I agree with you. They are wrong sometimes. But sometimes they are right.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, we feel that the Philadelphia Inquirer was right in 1991.

THE COURT: I am sure, I am sure you felt the Philadelphia Inquirer --

MR. WEINGLASS: Did a long report on Your Honor.

THE COURT: Of course they're right. Anybody that's on the liberal end of the stick is going to say you're right, but.

MR. WEINGLASS: Also 30 percent of the members of the Bar of Philadelphia.

THE COURT: Oh, yes? Well bring that 30 percent in here. That means 70 percent don't agree with you.

MR. GRANT: Could Miss Wolkenstein be brought down?

THE COURT: Yes, is she coming down?

THE SHERIFF: She is on her way down.

THE COURT: Where is she going, by South Philadelphia? She ought to be down here by now. Bring her down in that elevator.

Page 35.

THE SHERIFF: She'll be down.

THE COURT: All right, that's enough discussion for today. As soon as she comes down you talk to her and I will be right back out.

- - - - -

(Brief recess.)

- - - - -

MR. WEINGLASS: As Miss Wolkenstein is getting ready, there was a holdover matter from yesterday. A defense witness by the name of Arnold Howard gave a police report. We have asked the Court to ask the District Attorney to provide us with a copy of that. We do not have a copy. We would like --

THE COURT: Who?

MR. WEINGLASS: Arnold Howard.

THE COURT: Where is he? Oh, he is the last one on your list.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT: What is he going to testify to?

MR. WEINGLASS: He, he gave a report to the police 14 years ago.

THE COURT: Yes, but who is he? I think these witnesses don't mean anything because you didn't give me what I asked for.

Page 36.

MR. WEINGLASS: He is a civilian witness.

THE COURT: He is a civilian witness. What is his occupation, what does he do?

MR. WEINGLASS: He is not, he is a civilian, he has gainful employment.

THE COURT: Well, what does he do?

MR. WEINGLASS: He was interviewed by the police. And we would like to have the police report.

THE COURT: You mean one of the 150 witnesses that were interviewed?

MR. WEINGLASS: He might have been, but we don't have a copy of his report.

THE COURT: You don't mean a report, you mean a statement, don't you?

MR. WEINGLASS: We need a statement.

THE COURT: Well, you talk a about report and I am thinking of some sort of a specialist.

MR. WEINGLASS: I'm sorry, it is a report of his interview.

THE COURT: Well, you are talking about a statement that he allegedly made?

Page 37.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

THE COURT: Well, I am not going to hold up the proceedings. You look into the matter, see if there is a problem with that, okay.

MS. PERKINS: Your Honor, if --

MR. WEINGLASS: Is the Court addressing the Commonwealth attorneys?

THE COURT: I am not addressing, I am saying both of you. It is something that you could do some other time.

MR. WEINGLASS: We brought --

THE COURT: Don't take up the Court's time now.

MR. WEINGLASS: I wish we wouldn't have to.

THE COURT: Well, I am telling you don't.

MR. WEINGLASS: We tried last night, the Court invited us to talk to Counsel. We talked to Counsel this morning and we were told we wouldn't be given the statement.

MS. PERKINS: If I could speak, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes, sure.

Page 38.

MS. PERKINS: Just for five seconds.

Yesterday, Counsel requested the exact same statement. The reason why we declined to give it to them yesterday, among the reasons Mr. Grant expressed, was also that two weeks ago when we were here and we went through the discovery, we asked them what is it that you don't have that you need that the Commonwealth can provide as a courtesy. They pointed us specifically to paragraph 8 in their discovery request, which listed the names of people for statements that they did not have any longer that were provided as part of the original discovery. The original discovery included a statement from this Mr. Howard person. Therefore, it was an entirely reasonable presumption that they had this statement. Now suddenly they don't. So they have included a complete list of the people who they were missing from that letter, giving them the original discovery. Now we find out that there are others that they still don't have.

Now, to put this issue to rest we will give them the statement of Arnold Howard, if that will make this proceeding move along.

Page 39.

THE COURT: Okay. All right, we will take that up later.

Now, wait awhile, Counselor.

MR. GRANT: Not anymore.

THE COURT: No. Counselor, please. (indicating). Do you want her in here?

MR. WEINGLASS: There is also a Harry Fairclough.

THE COURT: Well, do it later on. Please don't take up my time now. You had everybody waiting here to hear this next witness that you want to bring in.

MR. WEINGLASS: Correct.

THE COURT: Now, Counselor, do you have something to say to me?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Yes, Your Honor.

MR. EPSTEIN: Your Honor, good morning. I'm sorry.

THE COURT: Good morning. It is still morning but it will be afternoon pretty soon. But go ahead.

MR. EPSTEIN: Jules Epstein, Counsel on behalf of Miss Wolkenstein.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. EPSTEIN: If Your Honor please,

Page 40.

may I address the Court briefly?

THE COURT: No, I would appreciate if you don't. I said I would let her back in if she apologized to the Court and because Mr. Weinglass says he needs her. Now, if she is willing to apologize to the Court, I will consider it. I don't need any discussion about it. I want to proceed with the hearing.

MR. EPSTEIN: Of course.

THE COURT: Okay. Do you have something you want to say?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Yes, Your Honor. I want to say that frustrations are running very high in the defense table.

THE COURT: Well, I am running pretty high too, so.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: And that I felt the need to complete a record based upon Your Honor's ruling.

THE COURT: Counselor, you don't need to complete anything. I make a ruling -- and I told you before -- you have an automatic exception to anything, any ruling that I make. I don't want to hear argument on it. I am tired of arguments. If you have a case on the issue,

Page 41.

Xerox the case, give it to me, I'll read the case. If it says what you say it says, I will reverse my decision. But I don't want to listen to a lot of hot air. I have been getting a lot of that. I want the law that's involved. And the only way you could give me the. law, you give me a case. Xerox the case. I don't want a brief, just Xerox the case. I will read it. If it's on point, and it covers your position, I will grant whatever you are asking. That's it.

Now, are you apologizing to the Court? I haven't heard an apology yet.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, I am stating to the Court that I will not interrupt the Court. And I just need the opportunity to be able to respond before a decision is made. And I needed to be able to complete the record on behalf of my client.

THE COURT: Counselor, I told you you didn't need to do that. All you have to do is, there are no responses, I don't want to hear responses. I want to look at the law. I want you to give me a case. The law. I still haven't heard an apology from you.

Page 42.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I agreed to give Your Honor cases.

THE COURT: Well, give me those cases. And no long dissertations. Are you apologizing or are you trying to justify what you have done?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: I am indicating to the Court that I have to make the complete record for my client and without interrupting the Court if the Court gives me an opportunity.

THE COURT: I am telling you the way to do that is just give me a Xerox copy of a case.

MR. WEINGLASS: Fine.

THE COURT: I haven't heard an apology yet.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Your Honor, I have to indicate to the Court --

THE COURT: Well, I am taking it that you are not willing to apologize to the Court. Is that it?

MR. WEINGLASS: If the apology means that I didn't make a complete record --

THE COURT: Are you going to apologize?

Page 43.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Okay, Your Honor, I do.

THE COURT: You do what?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: Okay? I apologize to the Court.

THE COURT: Okay, I accept your apology. But next time I am not going to accept apologies. I am not only going to evict you from the room but I am going to fine you a thousand dollars. So you know in advance what I am going to do. I don't want anymore arguments. That goes for everybody, okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: There is no need for a threat, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I am not, that is not a threat. That's a promise. That's a promise. It is not a threat.

MR. WEINGLASS: It was perceived as a threat.

THE COURT: No, not at all. It was a promise. I want you to know exactly what I am going to do. So if I do it you can't say I didn't know the Judge was going to do that. So I am telling you in advance I don't want anymore of this.

Page 44.

So let's have that witness out here, please.

MR. WEINGLASS: Miss Wolkenstein will assist me?

THE COURT: Sure. Yes, please.

George E. Fassnacht, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

- - - - -

MR. WEINGLASS: May I inquire?

THE COURT: Yes, sure.

- - - - -

DIRECT EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Right. Do I understand correctly that you were the supervisor of the Police Department's

Page 46.

Ballistics Unit?

A. Yes.

Q. And how long were you the supervisor of the Ballistics Unit?

A. Ahh, about half of my term with the Philadelphia Police Department, which was about five years. So the later half, about two-and-a-half years.

Q. Other than what you have already indicated, have you ever been employed in any capacity in a position calling for expertise in firearms?

A. Yes.

Q. And could you just relate that for the record?

A. Yes; by the Ordnance Technical Intelligence Service at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Maryland, where I was assistant to the chief of small arms and aircraft weapons branch. And subsequent to my employment with the City of Philadelphia, as a firearms and ordinance expert with the United States Central Intelligence Agency.

Q. Mr. Fassnacht, who is Joseph E. Smith?

A. He's the author of Small Arms In The World. And he's deceased now. And it is a standard compendium of military small arms.

A. I was his assistant for three years.

A. Yes.

Q. Approximately how many times?

A. Ahh, many hundreds, I have no... actual count.

Q. Many hundreds of times?

A. Many hundreds of times.

Q. You have testified in the Commonwealth Court?

A. Yes.

Q. And have you ever been found not qualified by any court?

A. No.

Q. Now bringing your attention back to early

Page 48.

George Fassnacht - Direct

1982: Did you have occasion at that time to have a conversation with an attorney practicing in the City of Philadelphia by the name of Anthony Jackson?

MR. GRANT: Excuse me, Your Honor. If Counsel is offering the witness to me for voir dire on qualifications, I accept, and I will state that Mr. Fassnacht is well qualified. Thank you.

THE COURT: That's what we usually do here in Pennsylvania, Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: Offer to have agreement so quickly?

THE COURT: Well, usually you ask if the other side has any questions on qualifications. That's the way we do it here in Pennsylvania. I don't know how you do it in New York, maybe it's different, but that's the way we do it in Pennsylvania. But go ahead.

MR. WEINGLASS: All right.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Now drawing your attention back to early 1982: Did you have occasion at that time to have a conversation with an attorney here in the City of Philadelphia by the name of Anthony Jackson?

A. Yes, I did.

Page 49.

George Fassnacht - Direct

Q. And could you just briefly, if you can, relate the substance of that conversation?

A. Yes. Mr. Jackson called me and asked me if I was available to take a criminal case, to assist him on a criminal case on which he was working.

Q. And did you indicate agreement?

A. Yes.

Q. And was that the case of Commonwealth versus Jamal?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you then have occasion to have any further conversations with Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes. I subsequently visited his office in central Philadelphia.

Q. And did you have occasion to meet with Mr. Jamal?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you recall where that was?

A. That was at Holmesburg Prison.

Q. And was that prior to the trial?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have occasion to examine the physical evidence in the case of Commonwealth V. Jamal?

A. No.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson provide you with any of the

Page 50.

George Fassnacht - Direct

written reports that were issued by the Firearms Identification Unit or the Police Laboratory in connection with their tests of the physical evidence?

A. No.

Q. Did you provide Mr. Jackson with any written reports?

A. No.

Q. Now, was there a reason why you agreed to enter the case and you didn't test the evidence or review the reports or render a report?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was that reason?

A. Well, I was advised of course that it was, initially it was a Court-appointed case. And that his retaining me was predicated on his obtaining funds to pay me and whatever other experts he had to hire. And I believe I billed him for some work and somewhere down the line I was informed that no further funds would be available and that was my end of my involvement in the case.

Q. So it was due to a shortage of funds to pay you that you had to leave the case before you could do any tests or testify or even review the written reports?

A. That's correct.

Page 51.

George Fassnacht - Direct

Q. Did you in fact, Mr. Fassnacht, stop taking appointed cases at that point?

A. It was soon after that that I stopped taking Court-appointment cases in Philadelphia for a period of close to 10 years. With two exceptions, I believe, because I knew the judge who was involved in the case.

Q. And you stopped taking those cases for what reason?

A. Because Philadelphia either wouldn't pay sufficiently, would arbitrarily slash the bill in half, or make you wait one, two years for payment.

Q. Did Mr. Jackson pay you for the services you rendered to him?

A. I don't recall if I received a check for $150 or not. That figure sticks in my mind. I know I billed him for 350.

Q. And when you billed him for 350, did you bill him by the hour?

A. I believe I gave him a daily rate. At that time I was charging $50 an hour or 350 a day. And if the day ran to 8 hours, it was 350.

Q. Now, you did render some services to Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Page 52.

George Fassnacht - Direct

Q. And do you recall what particular matter consumed most of the time that you worked on this case?

A. Ahh, it probably was the review of literature for possible impeachment of the comparison process. At that time the publication, I believe 1978 the year was, of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration's Crime Laboratory Proficiency Testing Program was rather new. And I believe I found a reference to it in the second edition of Scientific and Expert Evidence edited by Fred and Winkler Reed. And because it was new and I believe useful in comparison work, we concentrated on that for starters. So that he would be in a position to impeach the entire process of forensic comparisons involved in bullet specimens.

Q. So you spent most of your time just giving him general information on the science of ballistics?

A. Yes; I had to track down the study itself. When I found the study I had to go through it and make a summation. And, essentially, that's the information that I provided to him.

Q. Just briefly, what did that study involve?

A. Well, it was a blind test involving perhaps 200-and-some laboratories in the United States. And the laboratories who agreed to participate were coded so that the identity of any one laboratory was controlled by a key which was destroyed so that, obviously, a laboratory who had done, or which had done badly could not be identified. And reap the consequences.

Page 53.

George Fassnacht - Direct

So the laboratories were provided with test specimens obtained under ideal conditions, various types. It not only included firearms, it was also hair, glass, fibers, drugs and so forth. Obviously, my concern was only with the firearms.

This was divided into three sections. In the pertinent section, which was the identification of bullet specimens as having been fired from a particular gun, there was an error rate of 3.8 percent. Bear in mind that these bullet specimens that were used were obtained under ideal conditions. They were not fired through bone, tissue, whatever. And the error rate of 3.8 percent was astonishing. The matter that Mr. Jackson was involved in I felt could make good use of this study.

Q. So you provided him with information which attacked the general science?

A. To impeach the science. Not science, art, if you will. To impeach the art.

Page 54.

George Fassnacht - Direct

Q. Right, of comparison?

A. Yes, to show that mistakes could be made, that it was not an infallible art.

Q. And to your knowledge, did Mr. Jackson use the information that you gave him?

A. Yes, from my reading subsequently the transcript of the trial, I believe he did. Or he attempted to.

Q. He attempted to?

A. Yes.

Q. Was he able to?

A. I don't think he was successful in conveying that it was not germane to the case here in Philadelphia but that it was an impeachment, or should have been an impeachment, of the entire art.

Q. What prevented him from using that information?

A. I believe he was interrupted several times.

Q. He was interrupted?

A. Yes.

Q. So other than this general information about a nationwide study reflecting on the validity of the comparisons that are being made by police laboratories, did you give him any information particular to this case that he could use?

Page 55.

George Fassnacht - Direct

A. No. He gave me some details of the case and suggested that I talk to the Defendant at the prison. Which I did.

And I believe we had one long consultation by telephone subsequently. And that was the extent of my involvement in the case.

Q. That was it?

A. Yes.

Q. Incidentally, do you remember how much time you spent in going out to Holmesburg and back?

A. I was at Holmesburg quite awhile waiting for them to produce the Defendant. I believe he was involved in some activity at the time I arrived there. And I spent probably a couple hours waiting.

Q. In the couple hours that you waited at Holmesburg, was that the most time that you had spent working on this case?

A. No, I believe my review of the literature for the defense was probably a greater part, and obtaining the literature, was the greater part of time.

Q. And was the Holmesburg visit the second most

A. I believe so.

Q. -- consuming?

Page 56.

George Fassnacht - Direct

A. Yes.

Q. So you reviewed general literature, you talked to Mr. Jackson, you went to Holmesburg, and that was it?

A. Yes.

Q. No tests, no review of laboratory reports?

A. That's correct.

Q. No testimony?

A. Right.

Q. And because you didn't have funds?

A. That is correct.

Q. Were you willing in 1982 to go forward if funds were available?

A. At that time, yes.

Q. Now, sometime in 1994 did you have occasion to have a conversation with myself?

A. Yes.

Q. And did we meet on occasions also?

A. Yes.

Q. And subsequently were you provided with any materials pertaining to firearms reports or information on this case?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Do you recall what materials you were provided?

Page 57.

George Fassnacht - Direct

A. I believe a copy of the ballistics report of the, the Firearms Identification Unit report, rather. A crime lab or chemical laboratory report. Two sections of the transcript, I believe of Mr. Tumosa's testimony and the other one of Mr. Paul's testimony.

Q. Did you review those materials?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were you asked to review those materials for a particular purpose?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was that purpose?

A. To determine if there was work that should have been done that was not accomplished, services to be rendered to the defense that were not done.

Q. Work that should have been done back in 1982 that wasn't done because of the lack of funds?

A. Yes.

Q. And were you able to identify areas based on your review of those materials where you felt work should have been done in 1982 and wasn't done for lack of funds?

A. Yes. I believe that the powder residue testing should have been duplicated by the defense to ascertain why lead residue was found, primer gun residue was found on the jacket, and no powder, no gunpowder residue. And an examination of the bullet itself to, the bullet that was removed from Officer Faulkner, to determine if there were any markings on there which would identify it or rule it out as being fired from the evidence weapon.

Page 58.

George Fassnacht - Direct

The absence of any mention in the reports of testing of the Defendant's revolver to determine whether or not it had been recently fired, most common of which is smelling it. There is a particular smell to a recently-fired firearm which lasts for several hours.

And the last item I believe was the testing of the Defendant's hands, which probably could have been accomplished without too much difficult, to determine if in fact he had fired a firearm.

Q. So when you read this record did you feel that you should have been right there at Counsel's table advising Mr. Jackson in all these areas, conducting tests in your laboratory to support your advice?

A. Yes. Both the, the examination of evidence should have been done prior to trial, but most assuredly, Mr. Jackson should have had an expert at Counsel's table with him.

Q. Do you also feel, having read the record of

Page 59.

George Fassnacht - Direct

the testimony of Mr. Tumosa and Mr. Paul, that you probably should have been called as a witness and rebuttled what they were saying?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you feel that would have helped the defense in this case?

A. I believe it was important and very well could have affected the outcome of the trial.

Q. Now let's look at the some of these issues that you raise.

Let's talk firstly about an issue that you found you could have helped, and that is the question of the bullet specimen that was removed from the body of Officer Faulkner.

A. Yes.

Q. Could you explain to the Court what are general rifling characteristics?

A. General rifling characteristics differ from particular rifling characteristics. The particular being the small stria or scratches which identify a particular bullet as having been fired from a particular firearm. General rifling characteristics are the caliber, the number of lands and grooves, the direction of twist. The depth and width of the lands and grooves.

Page 60.

George Fassnacht - Direct

Q. Now, when you looked at the report of the police laboratory, or the Firearms Identification Unit, did that report describe the general rifling characteristics of the bullet specimen that was removed from Officer Faulkner?

A. It did.

Q. And to your recollection, how did it describe it?

A. It said that the general rifling characteristics were indeterminable. And then in the next breath and the same line it gave one of the general rifling characteristics as being right-hand direction of twist.

Q. Did you find that to be a contradiction of terms, that on the one hand they say it is indeterminable and on the other hand they give one of the characteristics?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Is there any explanation for that?

A. Umm, none that occurs to me at the moment.

Q. And you would have brought that out to a jury?

A. Certainly.

Q. As a contradiction within the report?

A. Yes.

Q. And then did you read the testimony that was

Page 61.

George Fassnacht - Direct

offered to the Jury by Mr. Anthony Paul?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. He was the expert firearms expert called by the Commonwealth?

A. Right.

Q. Was there any further contradiction on rifling characteristics offered by Mr. Paul's testimony?

A. Yes. In direct examination by the prosecutor he described again that the general rifling characteristics were indeterminable and again said that they had a right-hand direction of twist. Further on he stated, and used the word emphatically, that this bullet could not have been determined to have been fired from a particular gun. On cross-examination subsequently he -- oh, I'm sorry. Before that he allowed as how the general rifling characteristics were consistent with Charter Arms revolvers.

Q. Does the word consistent appear in that record before the Jury?

A. Yes, it does, it does. And subsequently on cross examine -- I'm sorry, on cross-examination, yes, I believe that Mr. Jackson questioned Mr. Paul, and at that time the... specification of eight lands and eight grooves with a right-hand direction of twist as is found in the Charter revolver were somehow connected with this bullet that was the subject of his testimony.

Page 62.

George Fassnacht - Direct

Q. But there was according to the laboratory report no eight lands and grooves that were found on this bullet; isn't that right?

A. That's correct.

Q. And yet it was made to the Jury that there was?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you have corrected that if you were a witness?

A. Certainly.

Q. Now, when you looked at that laboratory report, did you find any deficiency in terms of the efforts by the police technicians to conduct the tests that ought to be conducted when you are trying to determine if a particular bullet specimen was fired from a particular gun?

A. The evidence should have been examined by an expert for the defense to determine if in fact the findings were correct. And this was not done.

Q. And to your expertise examining the police report, the ballistics report, did you find that the police did a sufficient amount of testing to determine whether or not this bullet, the specimen bullet, was fired from the suspect gun?

Page 63.

George Fassnacht - Direct

A. I believe that more effort should have been put into determining if in fact you could tell that the rifling was in the right-hand direction of twist. That more effort should have been put into attempting to determine the width and depth of any remaining lands or grooves. Which lands or grooves are used to determine the direction of twist.

Q. In other words, if I understand you correctly, the police laboratory did not perform the tests that would have indicated whether or not this specimen bullet in fact was fired from this suspect gun?

A. Not to my knowledge. I don't know what test they conducted except that which is stated in their report.

Q. The lab report doesn't reflect any such test?

A. That is correct.

Q. Might it have been that the police actually did those tests and not being satisfied with the result they didn't put it in the lab report?

MR. GRANT: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. GRANT: Move to strike.

Page 64.

THE COURT: Yes. I guess he answered that.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Now, when they say the characteristics are consistent, namely the right-hand twist, to your professional way of looking at it, is that a word you would have used in this context?

MR. GRANT: Objection: It's irrelevant.

THE COURT: Sustained.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Would you as an expert in the firearms field, given what's in that police report, have said under oath to a jury that you were satisfied that the rifling characteristics are consistent with the suspect gun?

MR. GRANT: Objection, unless he would say under oath within a reasonable degree of scientific or artistic -- if that's what he considers his profession -- certainty that his statements were correct, then I will withdraw my objection.

THE COURT: Rephrase your question.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Incorporating Counsel's suggestion, would you have said that based on what is in the laboratory report?

A. No. The only thing consistent about them was that they were bullets and that they, according to the police report, had a right-hand direction of twist. Which half of the guns made probably have right-hand direction of twist.

Q. In other words, so it is of no scientific moment?

A. No.

Q. That it has right-hand direction of twist?

A. No.

Q. You would have to do much more thorough exploration of the specimen bullet to reach that conclusion?

A. Yes. The possibilities are so vast that if you could narrow it to the number of lands and grooves, that certainly would introduce some consistency. But the simple fact that, if in fact it were, that the simple fact that it were a right-hand direction of twist is...

Q. Practically meaningless?

A. It's an enormous amount of firearms.

Q. In the millions?

A. Many, many millions.

Page 66.

Q. Many millions?

A. Yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: If I may.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time among defense Counsel.)

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Now let's move on to another area. You indicated one of the areas that you felt you could have rendered assistance in was the area of the tests that should have been performed on the suspect gun which was recovered within minutes of the alleged shooting to determine if that suspect gun had been recently fired. Do you recall indicating that?

A. Yes.

Q. And, Mr. Fassnacht, what test could the police have done that night on the suspect gun to determine if it had been recently fired?

A. Simply sniffing it.

Q. Smelling, sniffing?

A. Yes.

Q. And why do you say smelling and sniffing, what can you tell by smelling and sniffing?

A. Well, the nose is very sensitive, more so than many sophisticated machines, for detecting odors.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, with all due respect to Mr. Fassnacht's expertise, I don't believe medicine or biology is one of them. And any comment he makes about the human nose I would ask to be stricken from the record.

THE COURT: Strike that from the record.

MR. WEINGLASS: The nose is going out?

THE COURT: The nose is going out.

THE WITNESS: All right, it's possible to smell a recently-fired firearm. The unmistakable odor lingers for several hours.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Right. Mr. Fassnacht, do not mention the organ of the body --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- through which one smells, that's out. Now, how long after could you smell the unmistakable odor of gunpowder after a gun is discharged?

A. Persistence can be up to six hours.

Q. Up to six hours?

A. Yes.

Q. And if that gun was fired allegedly with Plus P ammunition, and was fired five times, you would have no difficult in smelling if it was recently fired?

Page 68.

A. That is correct.

Q. Is there any evidence here that, anything that is presented to you, that indicates that the officers even conducted that test?

A. None that I saw.

Q. And this is an area that you would have testified about if you were called as a witness in 1982?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, another area which you mentioned is the area of the performance of tests on the hands of a suspect shooter to determine if the suspect shooter recently fired a weapon.

A. Yes. The tests were available at the time of this incident.

Q. Pardon?

A. The tests were available at the time of this incident. And I see no mention of it having been conducted.

Q. What tests are you referring to?

A. A hand-wipe analysis to determine if the person whose hands are being tested had recently fired a firearm.

Q. And there is no indication here that that was done?

Page 69.

A. That is correct.

Q. And was that test or analysis done, to your knowledge, as a matter of course in 1981 and '82 in the City of Philadelphia?

A. The test was available to them, I don't know how often they used it.

Q. Right. Do you know if the Police Department had kits to perform that test?

A. I believe they did.

Q. And so the record is clear, could you just briefly describe how that test is performed and how complicated or simple that test is?

A. Umm, it's much simpler today. And there are three ways, basically, of conducting the test.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, we only want to know what he knows about 1982. Because science and human beings have prospered vastly since then. That's the issue.

MR. WEINGLASS: Counsel is correct.

THE COURT: Strike the last answer and do it over again.

MR. WEINGLASS: I'm sorry, I should have included it in the question.

THE COURT: All right.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Page 70.

George Fassnacht - Direct

Q. You can only testify about the state of the art or science in 1982 because that's when we are examining these issues. In 1982 could you describe what the test was?

A. Yes. The principal or first test that was developed was called the neutron activation analysis test. And this was complicated to analyze but very simple to take. The analysis had to be performed by a laboratory with access to a warm thermal neutron bath, which is basically a reactor. Procedure was for most police departments who did not have such access to do the swabs and then forward the swabs to the FBI for analysis.

The second method was atomic absorption analysis, which was much simpler and could be performed in many laboratories with existing equipment.

A third test which was to be used, could be used, was only very infrequently used at that time. And to clarify, it is now much more used, was the scanning electron microscope. Which Philadelphia now uses at the present time.

Q. All right. Now let's just focus on the two tests that were being used at the time. When you talk about a wipe, could you describe that in lay terms? What does a police officer who wants to conduct this test have to do in order to do the test?

Page 71.

George Fassnacht - Direct

A. Well, the materials are available in a small plastic box. They are not very complicated. There is a few cotton swabs, some vials. A small vial of fiber solution of nitric acid, and the swabs are dipped in the vial of acid and it's rubbed on the palm or on the dorsal surface of the hand and then returned to the clean vial. And two swabs I believe are retained as controls. And the test is then complete.

Q. That's it?

A. That's it.

Q. How long does it take a police officer to complete that test?

A. A few minutes.

Q. A few minutes?

A. Yes.

Q. And all he needs are a couple of cotton swabs?

A. Well, the ones from the kit.

Q. From the kit?

A. Yeah, they are sterile and clean.

Q. And a cotton swab, that is like a Q-Tip?

A. Yes.

Q. So all the officer does in a few minutes is he

Page 72.

George Fassnacht - Direct

rubs this swab on the palm of the hand of the suspect?

A. Yes.

Q. And you indicated on the...?

A. Yes, the back of the hand, especially between the thumb and forefinger area.

Q. And that's it?

MR. GRANT: Indicating for the record the web area between index finger and thumb.

THE WITNESS: That's correct.

MR. WEINGLASS: Thank you.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. That just takes a few minutes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, if the police have a suspect who is suspected of shooting a police officer within minutes of the alleged shooting, is that a test that you would expect to see the police perform?

A. I would expect them to have performed that test.

Q. And there is no evidence that such a test was performed in this case?

A. Not that I have seen.

Q. Was that testimony you would have offered to this Jury in 1982?

Page 73.

George Fassnacht - Direct

A. Yes.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time among defense Counsel.)

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. And aside from police officers, if there were Homicide detectives who are experienced at the scene, would you have expected them to smell the gun?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you have expected them to move swabs across the hand of the suspect?

A. They probably would have left that task to the criminalistics people, crime scene investigators.

Q. Is Mr. Land one of those?

A. I have no idea.

Q. Or Mr. Tumosa?

A. Ahh, I believe he works, to the best of my recollection, I believe he is rather in the laboratory, in the laboratory as opposed to in the field.

Q. Now, have you also had occasion recently to review or examine portions of the Medical Examiner's report in this case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you note that portion on page 1 of the Medical Examiner's report where it's indicated that

Page 74.

George Fassnacht - Direct

the coroner conducting the examination retrieved a bullet specimen which he noted was a point 44 caliber?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know of your own personal knowledge what he based that finding on?

A. No.

Q. Incidentally, what is the diameter of a .38 caliber bullet?

A. Point three-eighths or 38 hundredths of an inch.

Q. 38 inches?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what was the reported diameter of the specimen bullet that was retrieved from the body of Officer Faulkner?

A. Ahh, 10 millimeters, which is approximately 40 or 40 thousandths -- or 40 hundredths, I'm sorry, of an inch. .40 caliber.

Q. So would it be correct to say it was a .40?

A. Yes.

Q. Of an inch?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, Mr. Faulkner, can you fire a bullet that has a diameter -- I'm sorry. I'm very sorry. Mr.

Page 75.

Fassnacht, can you fire a bullet that has a diameter of .40 inches, which is the diameter of the bullet reported to be retrieved from Officer Faulkner's body, with a gun that's a .38 caliber gun?

A. No.

Q. Did you note if Dr. Hoyer, the Medical Examiner in this case, found a fragment of a bullet, as well as the specimen bullet, in Officer Faulkner?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it common for a fragment of a bullet to be knocked off from the bullet?

A. Yes, it happens frequently.

Q. And to your review, the Medical Examiner appropriately noted that he had retrieved from Officer Faulkner's body both the specimen bullet and a fragment of the bullet?

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Now, when you read the police laboratory report, or the forensic report -- or, I'm sorry -- the firearms report, was there any reference in those reports to a fragment of a bullet?

A. Not associated with that particular bullet, no.

Q. Do you have any idea what happened to the fragment, having read the record?

Page 76.

A. No.

Q. Is it common for a fragment removed from the body of the deceased to be lost?

A. No.

Q. Are steps usually taken to preserve the fragment?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have any explanation as to how that fragment was lost between the Medical Examiner's Office and the police laboratory?

MR. GRANT: Your Honor --

THE WITNESS: No.

MR. GRANT: -- there is no evidence that anything was lost. And I would ask that all speculation be stricken.

THE COURT: All right, the last question and answer is stricken.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. In addition to noting that he had removed a fragment, as well as a bullet, from Officer Faulkner's body, did the Medical Examiner also note the measurements of the fragment?

A. Yes.

Q. And noted the measurements of the bullet?

A. That's correct.

Page 77.

Q. So both appear in the Medical Examiner's report?

A. Yes.

Q. And again, there is no mention of that fragment in the ballistics report?

A. To the best of my recollection, that's correct.

Q. Now, is one of the ways that you determine the caliber of a bullet weighing the bullet? Is it one of the considerations?

A. It can be a consideration.

Q. And so if you are trying to decide if a bullet is a .38 caliber or a .44 caliber bullet, one of the things you might do as an expert is to weigh the bullet?

A. Yes, that's possible.

Q. And if a fragment of the bullet is not available to be weighed, would that affect your ability to determine precisely the caliber of the bullet?

A. It could under certain circumstances.

Q. So under certain circumstances, the fact that a fragment was missing would impact the determination as to what caliber the bullet was if you are weighing them for that purpose?

Page 78.

A. If you are weighing them for that purpose, yes.

Q. Since there was one fragment found in Officer Faulkner's body in addition to the bullet, is it possible that there were other fragments as well?

MR. GRANT: Objection. Anything is possible.

THE COURT: Could you rephrase your question somehow.

MR. WEINGLASS: I will rephrase it.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Does the fact that one fragment is found indicate to you the possibility, because of that fact, that there are others, or might have been others?

MR. GRANT: Same objection, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Anything is possible in this world.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor, what I am asking is not --

THE COURT: Well, then, rephrase your question.

MR. WEINGLASS: The fact that one --

THE COURT: Well, rephrase your

Page 79.

question.

MR. WEINGLASS: That's what I am in the process of doing.

THE COURT: Okay, go ahead.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Does the fact that a fragment is found of the bullet alert the expert to any possibilities of other fragments also being present?

A. Well, that would depend on the Medical Examiner. I would assume that he would use radiography to locate radio opaque specimens which would represent other fragments.

Q. Right.

A. In conjunction with the weight of a bullet, the weight of the fragment could be considered. And if the total of the weight of the fragment and the weight of the bullet constituted the general normal weight of a bullet, one could infer that in fact you had all of the pieces.

Q. I see. You mentioned radiology. Does that, are you saying that the Medical Examiner would conduct an X-ray of the, of the deceased?

A. Yes. To locate the bullet itself and any fragments.

Page 80.

Q. Right. And in your experience, an X-ray would reveal, particularly an X-ray of the head, the brain area, would be capable of revealing whether or not there were other fragments?

MR. GRANT: I don't think he is a radiologist either.

MR. WEINGLASS: No.

MR. GRANT: So I would move to strike any speculation by Mr. Fassnacht that's not within his field of expertise.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well.

THE COURT: The objection is well taken.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am not asking him the question as a doctor.

THE COURT: Well, he is answering as a doctor.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right, in his experience.

THE COURT: He is answering as a doctor.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right.

THE COURT: Objection is sustained.

MR. GRANT: He has to have experience as a radiologist in order to give that opinion.

Page 81.

I am sure he doesn't. Do you, Doctor?

THE WITNESS: No, I do use X-ray machines but not on bodies.

MR. WEINGLASS: Do you want to withdraw that question?

THE COURT: You gave the question, he gave the answer.

MR. GRANT: No, that is my line. Do you want to withdraw the question?

MR. WEINGLASS: I don't remember what question it is anymore.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Let me ask you this, Mr. Fassnacht. In working over 20 years in your field, you worked with medical examiners?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you worked with radiology equipment yourself?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you use radiology equipment sometimes in an attempt to locate fragments of a bullet in the deceased's body?

A. I have never radiographed any person or tissue. My use of radiography is for failure analysis to determine cracks, flaws in metal and so forth.

Q. But in your experience do medical examiner's use it for that purpose?

A. Medical examiners do use it for locating fragments of bullets which are radio opaque.

MR. WEINGLASS: May I have just a moment?

(Discussion was held off the record at this time among defense Counsel.)

MR. WEINGLASS: Thank you, Mr. Fassnacht. I have no further questions.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Good morning, Mr. Fassnacht.

A. Good morning, Mr. Grant.

Q. You have testified, sir, that prior to your present three-year assignment I believe you worked for International Advisory Group, Inc.?

A. That's correct.

Q. Prior to that, for 22 years, you identified yourself as an independent expert in forensic firearms; correct?

Page 83.

A. That's correct.

Q. And as a consultant you would offer advice to people who were willing to pay you money for matters requiring expertise in munitions, ordnance, firearms, comparisons of missiles, fired cartridge casings and the like?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you have been qualified, according to your curriculum vitae, in about 16 states and two U.S. territories?

A. And overseas, yes.

Q. And overseas. And since you have become an independent expert, Mr. Fassnacht, on approximately how many occasions in the State of Pennsylvania have you appeared to give your opinion on behalf of the government of the United States, or the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, when prosecuting an individual for murder?

A. None.

Q. And how many times have you appeared and testified as an expert on behalf of the people of the State of New York when they are prosecuting a person for shooting someone?

A. None.

Q. And how many times have you ever testified on behalf of the prosecution authorities, whether it be the Attorney General, the State's Attorney, the District Attorney of the various districts, or any law enforcement agency prosecuting a person for weapons violations in the State of New Jersey?

A. None. But I have to retract my answer on one of your questions. I recall after I had left the City, and I'm not certain if it was a case that I had worked on while I was working for the City -- because there were a number of those, obviously --

Q. Yes.

A. -- which I had to come back from Federal service to testify in the City. I believe I testified once for Richard Sprague while he was District Attorney in a case.

Q. Let's clarify that. You had worked on the examination of those particular evidentiary items before you left and you were getting paid by the City to do that; correct?

A. On that one case, sir, I'm not sure. I think that may have been the exception. The only exception.

Q. Well, if you are not sure are you changing your answer or --

A. Yes, yes, I am qualifying my answer to include that there may have been one case, and one only, where I was retained by Richard Sprague, who was then D.A. Or I think he was Chief of the Homicide Division.

Q. Are you saying, are you saying, sir, that you had worked on the case on which Mr. Sprague retained you, you had done work while you were getting paid to do work on it by the City before you left?

A. I don't believe it was. That's the reason, that is the reason I am excepting. It is a possibility, again, I am not sure.

Q. And you can't say with any certainty?

A. No, I can not.

Q. Even that that's true?

A. No, I just --

Q. Okay.

A. I just want to make sure that you are aware of that.

Q. I appreciate that and I'm so advised. How about in the State of Ohio where you were an expert?

A. No, sir.

Q. Never testified on behalf of the Cuyahoga County District Attorney's Office ballistics firearms examiners to confirm their findings?

A. Not to my recollection.

Page 86.

Q. How about in the State of West Virginia?

A. For the state?

Q. Or the county or the city or --

A. No.

Q. Or the borough or the hamlet?

A. No. All of these people have their own independent laboratories. If they don't have one themselves, they have access to the next higher governmental unit. And there is no reason really for a private, under most circumstances, unless there is a conflict of interest of some type, there is no reason for the law enforcement community to step outside of it's own available laboratories.

Q. So you are qualified, in addition to those states that I have mentioned, in Kentucky; correct?

A. Sure.

Q. California?

A. Yes.

Q. Rhode Island?

A. Yes.

Q. Virginia?

A. Yes.

Q. Tennessee?

A. Yes.

Q. Illinois?

Page 87.

George Fassnacht - Cross

A. Yes.

Q. Kansas?

A. Yes.

Q. Michigan?

A. Yes.

Q. Maryland?

A. Yes.

Q. Florida?

A. Yes.

Q. Wyoming?

A. Yes.

Q. Puerto Rico?

A. Yes.

Q. U.S. Virgin Islands?

A. Yes.

Q. Never once have you ever testified that the police department of those various states or any of the agencies who did their firearms work did a good job or did the correct job, have you?

A. No, as I say, they have their own facilities.

Q. But I asked you: Have you ever testified, taken the stand and said yes, those guys were right, in any of these states in the Union and outside the country?

(Pause.)

Page 88.

George Fassnacht - Cross

A. Right as opposed to wrong, I think.

Q. No, no, no, we don't have to quibble.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, may the witness be allowed to answer? He was cut off.

THE WITNESS: I think that there are categories that would not be so sharply defined. There may have been a murder charge placed on someone, as a West Virginia case was, wherein the prosecutor did not realize that the gun could discharge accidentally or inadvertently which resulted in a change. Now, that of course was something that the police had overlooked. And if you weren't aware of it, and if you want to consider that wrong, yes, I would agree with you.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. I agree with you there are fine shadings of distinction.

A. Yes.

Q. Let me give you something that is more to the point. Whenever you have testified it's been, for all intents and purposes, to criticize the work that was done or the work that was not done by all the law enforcement agencies, police departments, what have you, in all these states; correct or incorrect?

Page 89.

George Fassnacht - Cross

A. Umm. I would have to say, adopting your phraseology, correct.

Q. Okay. So would it be fair to say that in virtually 100 percent of the times that you have been qualified as an expert in the field of forensic firearms expertise, you've always attacked or attempted to destroy the prosecution or the police department or the state's case?

A. I don't know that I would use the words attack and destroy. The object of any court proceeding is not to attack or destroy, it's to find the truth. And my efforts have been in that direction, I believe.

Q. Okay. And in your efforts to determine the truth, 100 percent of the time it has been for the person accused, if it's a murder, of the murder, right?

A. If it were a murder.

Q. And if it were a shooting that the person fortunately lived through by the miracle of science, you would still be testifying for the person who did the shooting or was accused of it, right?

A. Yes. With the caveat that, again, the police departments and the law enforcement bodies have access to their own laboratories. The defense can only rely on independent experts, unless it wants to accept the, the prosecution's version without question. Given we have an adversarial system, that would be foolish.

Page 90.

George Fassnacht - Cross

Q. Back in 1981, sir, how much did you charge for the hour?

A. I believe I charged $50 an hour at that time.

Q. And how much money did you get paid by Mr. Jackson or Mr. Jamal or persons on their behalf at that time?

A. I am not sure that I got paid. If I did get paid there are two numbers that stick in my mind: 150 and 350. I might have gotten one or the other or I might have billed for 350 and gotten nothing.

Q. Was it possible that you billed for 150 and 350 and you got both?

A. I just, I specifically said it was definitely not both. I recall it.

Q. I asked you, did I not, pursuant to a subpoena duces tecum, to bring with you any and all records that you presently possess of any of your work done, billing sent out, in this case; correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you bring them?

A. No, I have no records going back that far.

Page 91.

George Fassnacht - Cross

Q. Where were you --

THE COURT: Counselor. That noise out there, it's sort of affecting this thing. Sheriff, send somebody outside and get rid of that.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Are you able to hear me?

A. Sir?

Q. Are you able to hear me?

A. I can't hear.

THE COURT: Are you able to hear him?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

THE COURT: Okay. That is the problem. That's why I have to get rid of that noise out there. I know you can't hear him.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Where were your offices located in 1981 and '82 when you were acting on behalf of Mr. Jamal, sir?

A. At my home.

Q. At your home?

A. Yes. That is correct.

Q. And where did you keep your records?

A. At my home.

Q. Were they kept in a storage facility of some sort that would allow you to retain them for a number of years?

A. Well, they were kept in a file cabinet for a couple of years.

Q. And then you destroyed them?

A. Yes, I threw them out.

Q. By the way, back in those days, sir, did you charge a different rate for people who were indigent, that is to say they didn't have money for counsel of their own, versus those who could afford to have a lawyer of their choice?

A. No. Not really. I have done pro bono work but under very stringent conditions. I would do pro bono work if the attorney represented to me that he wasn't being paid either. So I did do, I did do some cases like that.

Q. When did you stop doing court-appointed work for defendants who needed your services?

A. In Philadelphia?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Sometime in the early to mid-8O's, I would guess.

Q. Well, early to mid-80's is 1981-'82?

A. Oh, well, it's obviously after that.

Q. So you stopped doing it after Mr. Jamal's case?

Page 93.

A. Sometime after that, yes.

Q. How much in a distance after that?

A. I'm not certain, but it was eight or 10 years. As a matter of fact, I could tell you the first case that I took recently which broke that cycle, if you will, was with Joel Moldovsky in this past autumn.

And only because the City of Philadelphia has reformed it's payment system.

Q. How about in August --

MR. WEINGLASS: The witness was about to finish. Counsel inadvertently interrupted the witness.

MR. GRANT: I'm sorry. I thought he was through.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Please answer.

THE COURT: I'm sorry, I can't hear him either because of that noise out there. We may have to just hold up.

Sheriff, take those people into custody, all right. We will get rid of the noise once and for all.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor --

THE COURT: I'm ruling here. Take them into custody if they don't move. I don't want that noise out there. I can't hear in here.

MR. WEINGLASS: I think the record should be clear.

THE COURT: The record should be clear that they are disturbing and trying to intimidate this Court, okay. And I say if they don't leave and stop that shouting I'm going to take them into custody. All right.

MR. WEINGLASS: The Court is not referring to anyone in the Courtroom.

THE COURT: No, not in the Courtroom. Outside.

MR. WEINGLASS: I think the record should show that.

THE COURT: What do you think I am talking about?

MR. WEINGLASS: I think the record doesn't make that clear.

THE COURT: The record makes it very clear: I said the noise outside.

MR. GRANT: May I proceed?

THE COURT: Okay.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. I'm sorry if you hadn't finished your answer.

Page 95.

I thought you had finished your answer, sir.

A. Ahh, yes, there is now in effect a payment system whereby expert witnesses are guaranteed a payment of 650 a day, or half of that for half a day. And at the conclusion of their work each day, whether it is a half day or full day, a slip of paper is submitted to the judge to certify that they are there present; and that payment is then taken and, that slip is then taken by the defense attorney and turned in to a City office and payment is guaranteed within 30 days. The reason for that system being in practice is because a lot of people no longer took Court-appointed cases because they didn't like waiting two years to get paid, if they got paid at all. Or got paid half of what they asked for.

Q. Number one, sir, you don't know if you got paid at all, right?

A. That is correct.

Q. And if you did get paid, since that is the obvious converse of what you don't know, you might have got paid before the time it normally takes; correct?

A. I haven't gotten paid?

Q. In this case --

A. Yes.

Page 96.

Q. -- it's possible that you got paid, and not only that, but you got paid on an expedited basis?

A. It's possible that I received a check for that bill that I submitted to Mr. Anthony Jackson, it's quite possible.

Q. And earlier than you were accustomed to receiving it?

A. If in fact I did receive it.

Q. Yes?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, how long had you been taking these appointments before you decided it wasn't worth it?

A. For about six years or so.

Q. And you really don't know when you stopped taking these appointments, do you?

A. I would say somewhere '84 or '85, somewhere in there.

Q. And the normal rate for payment was an initial fee of $150 and if you did additional work then you could, your attorney, the attorney you worked for, could apply to the Court for more monies to pay you for any work that you felt was material and needed; right?

A. I have no idea of how the attorney was reimbursed because my funds came from him and not directly from the City.

Q. Oh, I see. I see. So you did know that the normal rate, because Mr. Jackson told you, was $150, right?

A. I don't know that that is a normal rate. It is an observed rate.

Q. Is that the rate he quoted to you?

A. That figure was mentioned, yes. I don't know whether or not Mr. Jackson told me that or not, but.

Q. Well, let me ask you this. Mr. Jackson contacted you by phone or in person initially?

A. By telephone.

Q. And he said I have a case, I would like to know if you are available to take it, a criminal matter, and assist me; correct?

A. Yes. Correct.

Q. And you agreed, that's what you said on direct, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, from six years experience you knew what you were agreeing to, didn't you?

A. No. Because some people pay their bills promptly. And as a matter of fact, there is one judge who is the exception in that eight-year or l0-year hiatus who personally went up to the clerk in

Page 98.

George Fassnacht - Cross

the Chief Justice office and got the funds for me. By personal intervention.

Q. And since that's the exception --

A. Yes.

Q. -- your knowledge of six years experience says that the rule was that you knew what you were agreeing to?

A. The rules --

Q. Yes or no, sir?

A. No, the rules were arbitrary and capricious. And those two words could not be better used in the English language than to describe the payment system that was in effect at that time for experts at that time.

Q. Nobody is contending, Mr. Fassnacht, that the City of Philadelphia is the paragon of fiscal accountability. That's not why we are here. And they have reformed it I think presently to your satisfaction now?

A. Now.

Q. Well, I certainly appreciate that. Well, when you worked in the ballistics laboratory, sir, did you feel that your work was accurate and well done?

A. Certainly.

Q. And during those two-and-a-half years when you

Page 99.

George Fassnacht - Cross

were the supervisor of those who worked for you, did you feel that the people that you supervised and for whose work you were responsible was accurate and well done?

A. Yes, Philadelphia has an excellent ballistics laboratory.

Q. Well, I guess it must have changed in 1981 when Mr. Paul examined the ballistics material in this case; is that the idea?

A. Ahh, I have no idea what was going through his mind or the mind of the other experts who had signed that report, but obviously you don't have to be an expert to see that there is something wrong.

Q. Yes, I see. Now, in order to arrive at your expert opinion, is it necessary to talk to the accused?

A. No. That was done at the request of Mr. Jackson.

Q. And you billed him for that; correct?

A. That was part of what was included in my services, certainly.

Q. I see. And what scientific or expert information or insight did you get from Mr. Jamal?

A. None that contributed anything to the case.

Q. And you knew that before you went there,

Page 100.

George Fassnacht - Cross

right?

A. I went there because Mr. Jackson asked me to. And for all I know, maybe Mr. Jamal had asked him to ask me to do that. I have no idea. You'll have to ask Mr. Jackson why he asked me to go to the prison.

Q. Now, you told Mr. Jackson your hourly rate at the time he first contacted you by phone, I take it?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was that rate?

A. $50 an hour. 350 a day.

Q. And did you give him the daily rate or the hourly rate?

A. Whichever is cheaper. It goes to 8 hours it's 350.

Q. And you were available and consulting with Mr. Jackson with your expertise from the first day he contacted you up until almost the very last day of this trial, weren't you?

A. I don't know when he last called me.

Q. How about June 3Oth, 1982?

A. What is the date, sir?

Q. June 3Oth, 1982?

A. I don't know.

Q. Is it possible that you were consulting and advising him even though you were working for peanuts

Page 101.

George Fassnacht - Cross

up until the very last day of the testimony?

A. I might as a consideration have talked to him and given him some consultation even though I wasn't being paid for it. And again, that's not unusual.

Q. And do you know or recall when you were first retained to start your billing meter to tick?

A. Somewhere in the late winter or early spring.

Q. Late winter would be what, March?

A. March, April. Spring I guess would be April.

Q. March, April, May, June. Assuming that there was conversations with Mr. Jackson offering your expertise, and you so testified, up until and on the day of June 30th for an hour and a half I believe on that date, you did all that for 350 lousy dollars?

A. I may have done that for no lousy dollars, for all I know.

Q. I see.

A. Given the track record of the City of Philadelphia in paying their bills to expert witnesses at that time.

Q. I understand your problems with Philadelphia's fiscal policy, I understand. Now, you reached four conclusions in this affidavit that you signed on behalf of Mr. Jamal. A, you would have expected to find gunpowder residue on Police Officer Faulkner's jacket where the bullet entered his back. That's one of them?

Page 102.

George Fassnacht - Cross

A. Yes.

Q. B, that the Firearms Identification Unit report was incomplete in that there was no mention of the number, width or depth of the lands and grooves in the recovered bullet.

A. Yes.

Q. Three, that no one tested the gun for recent firing by the olfactory nerve: Smelling?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And lastly, that no one performed a neutron activation test, or scanning electron microscopy test, or atomic absorption test on the hands of Mr. Jamal to see if there was gunshot residue on them; correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Now, you further claim in your affidavit, I note, that you were surprised that the laboratory didn't perform one of these tests, and the test you are referencing is, to be simplistic about it, to stick the gun barrel in your nose and take a sniff: That's a scientific test that you are surprised that they didn't take?

A. Yes, you don't have to stick it in your nose.

Page 103.

George Fassnacht - Cross

You get it within a couple inches. Yeah, I'm surprised because it's so very easily done.

Q. Well, why is it that the smell dissipated nearly 20 percent from the time you wrote this affidavit until you got on the witness stand; do you know what I mean?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, in your affidavit it said the smell lasts for four to five hours. And all of a sudden you get up on the stand and now it's lingering in there for six hours?

A. I said persistence can be as high as six hours. As we all know, it depends on humidity, heat, and various other factors.

Q. And the human nose?

A. Well.

Q. That is a factor, isn't it?

A. Well, assume that you are not smoking a pipe with some noxious mixture in it. Unless your nose, your olfactory nerves have been completely destroyed, you should be able to smell it.

Q. How about cigarette smokers?

A. Some of them can't taste their lunch, some can. I don't know, that is a medical question.

Q. So depending on whether they smoke cigarettes or pipes or can't taste their lunch, this test would have little or a lot of value?

A. It's pretty strong and I really, not speaking too closely, I think that any normal person should be able to smell it rather easily.

Q. Do you know how long after this weapon was confiscated, how long, how much time elapsed before the Firearms Identification Unit received it?

A. No.

Q. Well, based on the notes of testimony that transpired in the peoples' testimony, Police Officer Forbes got the guns, took them to the ballistic lab, received a property receipt for them identifying them and where they came from, then took them to the chemical lab where they were dusted for fingerprints. The guns remained there for the completion of the test and Officer Forbes then took it back to the Firearms Identification Unit for safekeeping to await testing by the Firearms Identification Unit. Now, you don't know how long it was before people with your expertise even received that weapon, do you?

A. No.

Q. Then if you don't know this information, why are you surprised that they didn't perform this scientifically advanced sniff test?

Page 105.

A. This is not scientifically advanced and any police officer in his training, this should be included in the syllabus, that upon recovering a gun the first thing he should do, among other things, is to sniff it to see if it's been recently fired. I mean he is taught not to do anything that would damage the interior of the barrel and to preserve other parts of firearms evidence. I don't know why this can't been included. It's, it's dirt simple.

Q. Well, were you trained to do that by Joseph E. Smith? I believe that was your mentor, wasn't it?

A. No, I was not trained to do that by him. That work was completely different and did not involve forensics at all.

Q. Who turned you on to this sniff test, Mr. Fassnacht?

A. The people I worked with in the ballistics laboratory when I was there.

Q. Well, I take it that you stay abreast of the literature in your field of expertise, and you try to remain current and review studies that are done, research efforts made and general publications in the area, I take it, do you not?

A. I try.

Q. Do you think that you succeed?

Page 106.

A. I hope so.

Q. And because you stay abreast with these publications, books, research studies and the like, you are of course familiar with a work done by a Major General Julian Hatcher, it is titled 'Firearms Investigation Identification And Evidence,' first published in 1957, at about the time you were cutting your teeth in this field, right?

A. Ahh, no, sir. That was before I got involved in the forensic end of it. And actually there are three books with Hatcher.

Q. Yes, that's right?

A. Hatcher is involved in, Hatcher, Weller and Jerry being the last one. Is that the one you are speaking of?

Q. No, I am not speaking of that one. But you are right, he has published more than one.

A. Yes.

Q. This was published in 1957, was called 'Firearms Investigation Identification and Evidence.' And you are familiar with Mr. Hatcher, are you not?

A. General Julian Hatcher, certainly.

Q. And you, like other experts in your field, respect his opinions and feel that he enjoys a good reputation in the community in which you operate, don't you?

Page 107.

A. Yes. He is somewhat dated and there have been a lot of advancements since then but he is one of the people that was in on the ground floor, if you will.

Q. Yes. There's been a lot of advancements since then but we are in 1995 and you are still sniffing gun barrels, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay, let me read you this excerpt from Chapter 11, page 299 of this particular volume. Quote, a general idea of the time since the weapon was fired can usually be determined but not however within any precise and close limits. For instance, a bore -- that is the inside rifling of the barrel, right?

A. That is correct.

Q. A bore which shows dust, red rust, the accumulation of lint or tobacco fragments or the like, probably has not been fired for some time. A similar weapon which smells characteristically of powder was probably fired a relatively short time ago.

That appears to be in agreement with you, does it not?

A. So far.

Page 108.

Q. Yes, that's right.

However, this smell test is not really worth anything at all because few men are sufficiently trained both as smellers and as shooters to know the difference between one brand of powder and another.

Would you agree or disagree with that statement?

A. Well, that's an interesting statement. What's it got to do with brands of powder? If he is speaking on discerning the brand of powder, that is quite impossible to do. We are talking about relatively recent firing, and that's a different story. And as I say, people, I think people being trained in the use of firearms, every policeman is trained in the use of firearms, every policeman is trained in the proper recovering of evidence, the handling and use of firearms. And it would be a simple matter to teach them to check the smell of the bore of a recently-fired gun, and on a firing range they could do that.

Q. Doesn't gunpowder come in different strengths and different compounds, by the way?

A. It does but something burnt smells like something burnt recently. Whether it's cornine, or double base, or single base powder, you can smell it.

Q. So the same person that has this expertise in smelling guns can smell a chimney fireplace because something burnt is something burnt; is that what you are suggesting?

A. Well, the odor of gun powder, because of the guncotton substance they are all based on, has a peculiar odor.

Q. Gunpowder is the base and there are various types?

A. Smokeless gunpowder.

Q. Smokeless gunpowder?

A. Smokeless.

Q. They started using smokeless gunpowder and stopped using black powder about how long ago?

A. Oh, 100 years ago.

Q. So gunpowder does affect the type of smell you are smelling and if you use different kinds of powder you are going to have different strengths, are you not?

A. No, the smell of a freshly-fired firearm bore smell is distinct and self-evident.

Q. Okay. Well, what does the term analytical study mean in connection with your expertise, Mr. Fassnacht?

Page 110.

A. Analytical study pertaining to what?

Q. Firearms identification. Smells characteristic of gunpowder firing.

A. The smell of the muzzle or the breach of a recently-fired firearm is distinct. And we have, I have been warned off comparing the human olfactory organ, I won't use the word, because I'm not a doctor. But I can assure you that mine works and I've tested it frequently and my results are as I say: I can tell a recently-fired firearm from one that hasn't been fired for awhile.

Q. Have you ever subscribed to the Crime Laboratory Digest? It is a forensic journal published by the FBI Laboratory Division of the U.S. Department of Justice?

A. I don't believe I get that particular journal.

Q. Did you ever skim through it, whether you subscribed to it or not?

A. I can't recall. I don't think so.

Q. Well, let me read to you from January 1995, Volume 22, Number 1, at page 5, a statement by them, and see if you agree with it or disagree. Until recently there was no reliable analytical method to determine the recency of discharge of a firearm due to problems associated with the identification and detection of elements or compounds in gunshot residues which change with time.

Now, until recently -- and January of '95 is pretty recent -- apparently the U.S. Department of Justice says that, and the FBI Laboratory Division says that your nose is not very reliable?

A. I don't read, I don't get that from what you just read to me.

Q. What do you get from it?

A. We are talking about an analytical test.

Q. That's why I asked you what your definition was?

A. It means laboratory analysis in this context.

Q. Oh?

A. And the context, in the context definition that you asked for it is meaningless for me. This has nothing to do with smell.

Q. That's right, so they are saying that even with laboratory machines and tools --

A. Yes.

Q. -- they still can not reliably say when a weapon was fired?

A. What's that got to do with smell?

Q. And you are saying that your nose is better than all these analytical tests?

A. I don't want to use that word, I have been warned off it, but my human olfactory organ is very sensible to the smell of freshly burned gunpowder. And I assure you anyone can tell the difference between a recently-fired firearm and one that's been fired, say, more than six hours ago.

Q. Do you consider what you do an art or a science?

A. The identification of fired projectiles as being fired from the same firearm is an art. It is not science.

Q. And art is subjective to the beholder?

A. You have described it precisely. I couldn't have used the word better myself. It is exactly subjective. It is entirely a subjective judgment. The science of fingerprinting, if you will, of determining whether or not your fingerprints match those found somewhere, is a science because there is a certain number of points without which you do not have an identification. Doesn't exist in forensic firearms examination. It is entirely a subjective judgment in the mind of the examiner. You've phrased it very well.

Q. So your opinions are no more valuable or as limited as the next firearms examiner because it's up to you what you think you got, right?

A. I think a good question for any firearms examiner would be have you ever had a disagreement with your confreres as to whether or not a forensic comparison was in fact valid.

Q. So your answer is?

A. Sir?

Q. So your answer is this is just your opinion and your opinion only?

A. For what it's worth.

Q. And all people in your position have their own opinion about what you are saying?

A. I suppose.

Q. Now, in section D in your affidavit you say that the gunshot residue tests weren't performed on Mr. Jamal; correct?

A. Yes.

Q. What do you know about Mr. Jamal's physical activity, especially involving his hands, immediately following the firing of this weapon?

A. Nothing.

Q. You didn't read any trial testimony from the transcript that Mr. Weinglass gave you?

A. I did not receive any pertaining to any physical activity.

Q. Okay, well, let me give you some background to see if you could examine your views on this neutron activation analysis. Page 2.20, June 2nd, 1982. Based upon the trial testimony of Cynthia White, upon direct examination by the prosecutor, police arrived within 30 to 60 seconds following the shooting. On June lst, 1982, page 54, according to Police Officer Shoemaker, from the time he received the initial call made by the officer who was later killed until his arrival on the scene 45 seconds transpired.

Now, at that point Mr. Jamal began struggling with several policemen at the scene of the crime, he attempted to keep his hands from being handcuffed behind his back by flailing his arms. It took several officers to bring his hands behind his back in order to properly handcuff him. You were not aware of that, were you?

A. No.

Q. I assume you were also not aware that after Mr. Jamal was transported to Jefferson Hospital to be treated for the gunshot wound he received from Officer Faulkner, that upon being removed from the police wagon he then engaged in another struggle with the police, refusing to be removed from the wagon,

Page 115.

George Fassnacht - Cross

then refusing to walk on his own and then refusing hospital treatment, all the time resisting police. It got to the point where a Municipal Court judge had to order the hospital because of his refusal to comply with their requests, she ordered the doctors to save his life if they could despite what he was doing. Defendant was handcuffed to the hospital gurney while awaiting this order for medical personnel to provide their services. Then the emergency room personnel removed his clothing, which consisted of a jacket and two shirts, in order to operate on him, of course. Then he was operated upon and remained in the hospital several days.

Now, we are talking about, the area that you're, I guess, referring to is the web (indicating), the surface right here (indicating)?

A. And the palm.

Q. And the palm. And you have already said that you remain abreast of literature in the field and you try to, basically, consider these factors, don't you, when you give your expert opinion?

A. The factors that you have just annunciated?

Q. Yes.

A. The struggles and various --

Q. Yes.

Page 116.

George Fassnacht - Cross

A. Well, it is entirely possible that during a struggle, I don't know where he was grasped, but if you are saying that they had contacted his hands, particularly where a great deal of pressure was applied, they could have very well destroyed traces of powder residue if in fact such did exist. That is a possibility.

Q. Yeah, well, let's just assume that when you are handcuffed behind your back most people are handcuffed like this (displaying)? Can you see me?

A. Yes.

Q. This means that that web surface that you are describing is in direct contact with your body surfaces or the clothing that he wears; would that be fair to say?

A. Is that what, sir?

Q. Would that be fair to say?

A. I didn't catch the last few words.

Q. This portion between the index finger and the thumb would generally be in direct contact --

A. Yes.

Q. -- with the body surfaces and the clothing he wears?

A. That's reasonable, yes.

Q. Well, I would like to read for you an excerpt

Page 117.

George Fassnacht - Cross

from a text by, which was edited by the doctor slash attorney -- both a doctor and a lawyer, I guess -- Cyril Wecht?

A. I know him well.

Q. You know him well?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. His book was published in 1981, just about the time this murder was occurring. It's called 'Forensic Science, Law, Science, Civil and Criminal.' Dr. Wecht's publication, is his publication relatively widely known in your profession?

A. Yes; it is a three-volume set which is frequently updated, I guess, like an lot of legal texts, once a year.

Q. That's right. This is volume three.

A. Yes.

Q. And to quote it it says, firearm discharge residues that may be deposited on the shooter's hands can easily be washed off, wiped off, or, after a short period of time, worn off. Research has indicated that after approximately two hours of a normal day's activity, substantial amounts of the residue will be spontaneously lost, making it difficult to conclude that gunshot residue was present on the suspect's hands.

Page 118.

George Fassnacht - Cross

Would you agree with that?

A. Not entirely.

Q. What part don't you agree with?

A. I would, I would say if you adopted Dr. Wecht's statement as it stands there would be no further use for a police department using this test. But in fact they do. And why? Because they expect to find something. So why do this, why spin wheels, why do a test if you don't expect to find the residue?

Q. Well, no test was done, was it, in this case?

A. No.

Q. So they weren't spinning their wheels, were they?

A. Well, they didn't do the test. They didn't attempt to do the test.

Q. Well, let me read you this.

A. But is the test still available is the question and is it presently used and if so why if it has no value?

Q. Well, I guess I will ask the questions for a little bit longer.

A. Well, I don't mean to put that in interrogatory fashion. I am aware of my position, I am not asking you a question. It's rather a, by way of explaining.

Page 119.

George Fassnacht - Cross

Q. Okay.

A. It is a rhetorical question, if you will.

Q. Yes. You likewise are familiar, of course, I am sure with a work called 'Techniques of Crime Scene Investigation,' it is the third edition, by authors Svensson, Wendell and Fisher?

A. Yes.

Q. Yes. At page 240-241 of that text, which is, that chapter is entitled Gunshot Residue Analysis?

A. Yeah.

Q. They say that when primer is detonated, microscopic particles of gunshot residue are deposited on the hands of the shooter. They are present on the hands of the shooter with the greatest concentration being in the web area. The area that you described?

A. Yes.

Q. These particles adhere to the hands but are removed by washing, wringing the hands, placing the hands in the pockets, and even handcuffing behind the back. Studies have shown that gunshot residue material will remain on the shooter's hands for up to about six hours. The particles are in the highest concentration immediately after the shooting and are eventually all lost over time, depending on what actions the shooter takes.

Page 120.

George Fassnacht - Cross

Now, in addition to disagreeing with doctor-attorney Cyril Wecht, do you disagree with that statement?

A. Well, I would say first off I observed that they disagreed with Cyril Wecht. Because he says two hours. And it seems to be a disagreement among the published experts.

Q. Not as to the activity that removes it?

A. We agreed on that.

Q. That what?

A. I believe I agreed with you that being handcuffed with the hands behind the back could expose the web surfaces to the clothing and result in the loss of residue.

Q. If you were them, the Philadelphia Police, knowing the activity that I have described to you that Mr. Jamal was engaging in, tell me when you would have snuck in there and taken that test from him, at what juncture, at which struggle?

A. Well, if they really wanted to take the test and if there were enough officers on hand I suppose he could have been spread-eagled and his hands held out and somebody grabbed a leg or two. It sounds preposterous but if he were struggling that vigorously, I suppose that would have been the only way to do it. And in light of what you told me, that test may have been very difficult to perform.

Page 121.

George Fassnacht - Cross

Q. And when he was finally released from the hospital days later, are you suggesting that they should have taken the test then?

A. Oh, certainly not. That's --

Q. Certainly what?

A. Certainly not. That's preposterous. The test has to be done almost immediately.

Q. Well, what did they do that you are criticizing, sir?

A. The test as a tool, as an investigative tool to law enforcement, was available. The test was in use by the Philadelphia Police Department at the time. The test could have been used to determine whether or not in fact this gentleman had fired a firearm at the time he was alleged to. And the test was not used, whether there are reasons that it could not be effective or there was no attempt to use the test.

Q. What do you think would have been the likely results if they had taken this residue at any point?

A. That would be speculation on my part.

Page 122.

George Fassnacht - Cross

Q. And it would be fair to assume that they would have gotten no results because if people lose these particles 100 percent over the course of an ordinary day -- and they are not handcuffed behind their back and fighting with lots of police, are they?

A. No.

Q. -- would it be reasonable to assume, Mr. Fassnacht, that it would have been a futile act and worth nothing at all?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection, Your Honor. Because Counsel's hypothetical did not include the fact that Mr. Jamal's hands were handcuffed to a stretcher within a half hour of the shooting when he was in the hospital but he did not include that in the hypothetical. So I object to the question as not being inclusive of all the facts in the record and available to Counsel who questions him but who conveniently omits key facts and then asks hypotheticals with those facts omitted.

MR. GRANT: I will rephrase the question.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. If we add in Counsel's little addition here, that would be all the more reason why it would be a

Page 123.

George Fassnacht - Cross

likely failure to show anything on this test -- now we got another handcuffing of the hand -- does that help show that there is more residue or make it less likely that there is residue?

A. It depends on where the handcuffs, as you have stated, where the hands were handcuffed. Where they remained. You have given me a position behind the back with the dorsal surface of the hand against the clothing, the back of the coat jacket, whatever. And we agreed that that could result in the destruction of residue. But if, on the other hand, somebody had a hand handcuffed and it was stretched out there is no reason the test couldn't be performed.

Q. So does Mr. Weinglass' addition aid you in this inquiry?

A. Well, I believe as I understood just now what he said, that a hand was handcuffed --

Q. Yes.

A. -- not behind the back.

Q. Yes.

A. And that hand would have been proper, a proper subject for the test we've discussed.

Q. Does that aid you in answering this question, Mr. Weinglass' addition?

A. I think I just answered it.

Page 124.

George Fassnacht - Cross

Q. I didn't --

A. Unless I missed something, I'm sorry.

Q. I didn't hear an answer in those words. I was wondering.

A. Well, I am saying that given the conditions that he has --

Q. Yes?

A. -- set forth, that there would be purpose in doing the test and one could expect reasonably to find residue. Is that --

Q. Are you saying here today, that within a reasonable degree of, I guess for you it's artistic certainty, you after all that activity would have expected to find gunshot residue on the hands of Mr. Jamal?

A. First off I have to, all of this business is not art. Only the forensic comparisons of fired bullet specimens and fired cartridge cases. The rest is science.

Q. The part you are talking about is science?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you saying within a reasonable degree of scientific certainty you expect to find gunshot primer residue on Mr. Jamal's hands?

A. It's possible.

Page 125.

George Fassnacht - Cross

Q. No, beyond a reasonable degree of scientific certainty is beyond possibly, it is beyond --

A. It would be speculation on my part. In fact you are speculating that the residue had been destroyed and therefore there would be no point in taking the test. But in fact you don't know that the residue was destroyed. You're assuming that because of certain activity that took place, that this residue is gone and therefore it would be pointless. I don't know that.

Q. So when you were working on behalf of Mr. Jamal, you would have testified before the Jury within a reasonable degree of scientific certainty that the tests probably would have shown that he had fired the gun recently?

A. I wouldn't have, no.

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection to part of the question. The question to the expert should be should the test have been taken and not what the test would have shown.

THE COURT: No, he has a right to ask his questions the way he wants. You will be able to ask any questions you want the way you want to ask it.

MR. WEINGLASS: It is just an improper

Page 126.

George Fassnacht - Cross

question.

THE COURT: No, okay.

MR. GRANT: At this juncture I believe the standard is that had he testified, the outcome of the trial would have been different.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. So my question is, are you saying here now that in 1981 you would have testified beyond a reasonable degree of scientific certainty that had the test been performed it would have revealed whether or not Mr. Jamal fired that weapon?

A. No, I wouldn't phrase it like that.

Q. Well, would you answer my question, though?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you have so testified, Mr. Fassnacht?

A. No, I wouldn't have so testified.

Q. Thank you. You also say that some of the elements or chemical components of gunshot residue were not found on the jacket surface or the interior of the jacket of Police Officer Faulkner upon examination; correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And the significance of that is what?

A. They're missing.

Q. Does that show that Mr. Jamal did not shoot

Page 127.

George Fassnacht - Cross

the officer in the back?

A. Ahh, it shows that the distance determination could have been made if the residue was found and residue was not found and I don't know why. The test should have been repeated. I believe it was repeated by the prosecutor to determine the deposition of primary nitrates -- primer residue, I'm sorry -- which is largely zinc or lead stiffening. That's different in this case. I don't know why the gunpowder residue was not found but I certainly think an investigation on the part of the defense should have been done to determine why.

Q. I see. This gunshot residue, what you are saying, describing here, actually encompasses three components --

A. Exactly.

Q. -- to this phenomenon? This residue is shown in various ways. Like scorching and burning is like evidence of the closest range of firing?

A. Exactly.

Q. And then there is this fine particulate matter, like dust deposits?

A. Soot.

Q. Soot?

A. Yes.

Page 128.

George Fassnacht - Cross

Q. And then there is those partially burned or unburned rings of powder that don't get oxidized or burned up because they don't for whatever chemical reason?

A. Yes. That's correct.

Q. Now, they found some of that on his jacket, didn't they?

A. No, from my reading of the report as I recall it they found lead residue.

Q. Okay.

A. Which is, which is a fourth product of combustion of a small arms cartridge which results from the primer. And that's found from contact out to about 18 inches maximum.

Q. From contact to 18 inches lead primer residue --

A. Yes.

Q. -- would show up?

A. Yes.

Q. And so you are saying that whoever shot Officer Faulkner shot him from probably no more than 18 inches away?

A. If the lead residue test is accurate, that's what would be the determination. But I didn't see the lead residue test they did. And obviously they must have, one hopes they did a comparative test on another surface to determine, using the same type of ammunition, the same barrel of the gun and so forth, at what distances they would expect to find that amount of lead stiffening that they found on the jacket.

Page 129.

George Fassnacht - Cross

Q. You read Mr. Tumosa's report, did you not, the criminalist?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He testified in this case, did he not?

A. Yes.

Q. He testified that the man was shot in the back from a distance of 12 inches, more or less?

A. Yes.

Q. Is his testimony inconsistent with yours here today?

A. With mine?

Q. Yes, are you are saying --

A. No, I am only questioning the absence of the gunpowder residue.

Q. Okay.

A. Two types of which should have been present at that distance.

Q. You said that given the factors relied upon by the prosecution, the failure to find gunpowder

Page 130.

George Fassnacht - Cross

residue raises questions about whether or not Mr. Jamal's weapon was involved. You said that in your affidavit, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you saying here, and would you have testified in 1981 to a jury, that within a reasonable degree of scientific certainty, finding this primer lead on his jacket but not finding the other parts of the gunpowder residue you want to find would show that Mr. Jamal's weapon did not shoot that officer?

A. No, I would have testified only after I had access to the weapon in question and had conducted my own tests. Then I would have testified to whatever I had found.

Q. Well, let me enlighten you a little bit. You didn't read the trial testimony involving the jacket possessed by Police Officer Faulkner either, did you?

A. If it was in Mr. Tumosa's testimony I must have.

Q. Well, it was not.

A. Oh.

Q. First of all, the officer was shot in the back, spun around, and fell onto the ground onto his back. Officer Shoemaker then testified at this time I walked over to Officer Faulkner who was lying on his back unconscious and bleeding very heavily. There was testimony from an eyewitness who said Officer Faulkner was, after being upon his back, was shot in the face which caused his whole body to jerk while lying on his back. Officers then came to rescue him, picked him up from the sidewalk, while on his back, grasping him underneath his shoulders and arms, which would be in that very area, would it not?

Page 131.

George Fassnacht - Cross

A. Could be.

Q. And tried to place him in the back seat of a small vehicle to rush him to the hospital.

Question by Mr. Jackson -- the person paying you -- of Officer Heftner on 6-21-82, page 4.13. Cross-examination. Question: What was the very first thing you did to Officer Faulkner.

I picked him up underneath his shoulder. By his shoulders. Underneath his arm.

Question: So it would be fair to say that you stood at his head with your hands under respective arm pits.

That's correct.

At that point multiple officers then removed Officer Faulkner from the vehicle that was too small, placed him in a police van. In transport to the hospital, they then removed Officer Faulkner's clothing while inside the moving vehicle in order to uncover the wounds that he had suffered.

Page 132.

George Fassnacht - Cross

Now, knowing that this jacket that you are questioning went through these various exercises, for lack of a better word -- add to that that the officer who removed that clothing then took that jacket, placed the property receipt with it and stuffed it into a plastic bag and took it to the evidence locker room -- now, does that give you some additional insight upon which to base an opinion here today?

A. The opinion is, my opinion would be that an independent expert should have verified or conducted a test to determine if in fact the test done by the Police Department was in fact accurate. And at that time I imagine he would have been supplied with the data that you have just related and have to take that into consideration as to whether or not it would cause the loss of the powder residue. Which in fact, as you have explained, it probably could.

Q. Isn't it a fact, sir, that these trace metals that you are talking about -- and what metals are we talking about, by the way?

A. Well, they are not trace metals. We have been talking about the gunpowder residue, which is nitrites and nitrates.

Page 133.

George Fassnacht - Cross

Q. Copper?

A. No, nitrates and nitrites.

Q. It is what, a nitrite?

A. Well, gunpowder starts off as a nitrate in cellulose and they may add nitroglycerin to it. And the element nitrogen in compound with other elements constitutes a nitrate or a nitrite. And these are the particulate things we are looking for exclusive of the burning and charring.

The lead, so we don't confuse it, that being a separate item, the lead stiffening residue from the primer is something entirely different. That's, that's lead. That's the element of lead they are testing for. It is a different test, it is a chemical test.

Q. Isn't it a fact, sir, that these nitrites and nitrates are known even by experts such as yourself to fall off with handling, moving the item of clothing that's involved, and that they drop off in the regular course of everyday exercise when they are subjected to these kind of stresses -- excuse me, let me finish.

A. Yes.

Q. When they are subjected to the stresses I have

Page 134.

George Fassnacht - Cross

described to you, it is not uncommon at all, as a matter of fact it is usual, that these elements that you are talking about are found to be missing; isn't that so?

A. Well, you are partially right. And the one thing that you didn't include in your consideration is the type of material, the surface to which the residue is attached. Some things like rip-stop nylon, if you are familiar with that.

Q. That's like Macy jackets that they wear now?

A. Like golf, like golf jackets. Rip-stop nylon will create less of a base for the adherence. Loosely-woven wool, wool fabric, are much more conducive to retaining the particulates. Of course, rough handling can dislodge them. But again, it determines, it is determined by the distance from the muzzle to target. Obviously, the further away the softer the adhesion of the particles. And they would be lost first. Rough handling could cause successively closer particles to be dislodged, until you get to a point where the soot markings may be the only thing left.

Q. Right. And you didn't know because you didn't look at the jacket that this was one of those polyester, shiny jackets with a little fur collar

Page 135.

George Fassnacht - Cross

that police officers wear in the wintertime and it wasn't a police officer's jacket like you may see on some Court officers, for instance, and shiny polyester material is less conducive to these metals -- excuse me, sir. You don't mind me asking you this question, do you, sir?

A. No, sir.

Q. These kinds of fabrics are less conducive to controlling or containing or holding those nitrates and nitrates that you are describing; isn't that so?

A. It depends on the weave. If the weave is very tight, as I said, if it's rip-stop nylon, which the weave is almost invisible, like a golf jacket, it's rain proof, then the possibility of adhesion is much less.

Q. Well, you have seen the jackets that I am describing, haven't you?

A. No.

Q. Oh, so you don't have an idea of the type of fabric we are talking about here?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, if you are going to do these tests and you say that it would be helpful to the Defendant and you would have so done had you been paid more money, you can 't do those tests by just taking a gun and shooting it into a police jacket, you have to try to duplicate the conditions so that they are substantially similar before that even gets into evidence; isn't that so?

Page 136.

George Fassnacht - Cross

A. I would have to duplicate the surface onto which the test was done. Same type of material, as you just explained. I would have to duplicate the gun and the cartridges.

Q. The bullets and their powder charge?

A. The exact same type of ammunition.

Q. Back in 1981?

A. Yes, yes, same type of ammunition.

Q. And wouldn't you have to duplicate -- and how would you propose to do this -- the blood and body fluids that passed through the holes in an officer's body through the hole in that coat? How are you going to duplicate that to give validity to your ballistics test?

A. That's not necessary to duplicate. Exudation of serous exsanguination, excessive bleeding, could cause the loss of powder residue if it were there. If I saw the jacket and I saw evidence of sufficient bleeding, then obviously I would know that I would not be able to find evidence of powder residue. But blood flows usually in one direction. There are exceptions. There are exceptions.

Page 137.

George Fassnacht - Cross

Q. How do you propose to reproduce the body movements of Officer Faulkner on his back, on that very surface you want to examine, in the throes of death?

A. One doesn't attempt to reproduce such things. One either finds the residue or doesn't find it. A factor to be considered is exsanguination.

Q. You can't reproduce two of the variables that are going to effect the decision that you would make, even if you could get a substantially similar jacket, substantially similar weapon, substantially similar ammunition; correct?

A. No. Because if you are telling me that the whole jacket was covered with blood, that there were no remnants of the circular pattern left that were not damaged by blood, from which undamaged part we could deduce what we are trying to do. If you are telling me that, say, half of the, of the pattern were damaged, if you are telling me that then we can not perform a scientific test, no, I wouldn't agree with you.

Q. And how do you propose to duplicate all the body movements contributed by these other police officers trying to save this man's life?

Page 138.

George Fassnacht - Cross

A. Either -- that couldn't be done. If it happened, that would be a reason for the loss of the gunpowder residue. Less for the soot. I'm surprised the soot wasn't found at that distance. But it's possible. These are things you take into consideration. But now all we have is the representation by the prosecution that in fact this test revealed whatever they said it was.

Q. Did you ever work --

A. It has not been verified by independent examination by a defense expert.

Q. Did you ever work with Anthony Paul?

A. Sure. Oh, I'm sorry, did I work with him?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Did I work alongside of him at the same time? Or in an adversarial fashion? The second is correct.

Q. Okay.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you respect his work?

A. Yes, he's, he's, he's improved quite a bit.

Q. Does he respect yours?

A. I don't know.

Q. Okay. So you are telling us that it would be impossible to do what you propose to do for the Defendant, which is to duplicate using similar fabric with the same weapon and come up with what you think should have been the results obtained by the Firearms Identification Unit; was that fair to say?

A. No, because I haven't seen the evidence.

Q. Didn't you look at the pictures provided you by Miss Wolkenstein, sir?

A. I haven't seen any pictures.

Q. Did you ask Mr. Jackson for any pictures?

A. I didn't, Mr. Jackson didn't give me any pictures.

Q. Well, you charged him $350?

A. Maybe.

Q. Maybe. And you say that the majority of what you charged him for was for you to brush up on your own expertise and find out things that you probably were getting paid for because you knew it already; correct?

A. Wrong.

Q. Well, most of the time consumed was in reviewing literature -- and we concentrated on that -- tracking down the study and reading it, you got paid for doing that, right?

A. Yes. If I got paid. Probably did.

Q. Isn't that why he was paying you: Because you know that kind of stuff already?

A. No, ESP is not one of my fortes. This was a recent scientific test that had been just published in the literature, if I recall, in 1981. The test had been conducted in 1978. In order for me to make use of it, and pout it in a fashion that Mr. Jackson could make use of it, or attempt to, it would be necessary for me to first get the test and then study it and then reduce it to a synopsis that he could use in his Court work.

Q. So you were doing on-the-job training at Mr. Jamal's expense, is that the idea?

A. I don't know if it was at my expense or Mr. Jamal's or the Commonwealth's or nobody's. I highly suspect the later.

Q. So, sir, are you saying that had you conducted those tests, despite all the problems of duplicating the situation, that you could sit here and testify, and could have done so in 1981 before a jury, that beyond a reasonable degree of medical certainty, without being able to reproduce these events, you could state that Mr. Jamal's weapon probably did or did not fire the bullet that went into Officer Faulkner's back?

A. Based on the study of the bullet.

Q. Based on the primer residue found or not found?

A. That only concerns the distance from which the gun was fired.

Q. Okay. So what would that have --

A. It has nothing to do with the identification of a gun having fired that bullet. If in fact we found some disparity because of the short barrel and the deposition of the powder residue in a test we would have a question.

Q. What does distance have to do with this case, then?

A. It must have something to do with the case because the prosecution used it in the case as one of the points of evidence.

Q. What would you have used it for or what are you using it for now?

A. The question is was it ever, was it ever questioned or possibly refuted by an independent examiner employed by the Defendant. And the answer is no.

Q. In other words, it has no significance from your point of view as an expert ballistician?

A. I don't recall saying that. What I said was that we have only the prosecution's findings. We don't know that an independent test and review of that material would have led us to another conclusion.

Q. I see.

A. Or would have verified that test. It wasn't done.

Q. And if you found that you didn't have enough information because there wasn't enough gunpowder, that still would not have refuted or proven anything because there are reasons you have just given us why you may not find that evidence on the jacket; correct?

A. That would certainly have to be taken into consideration, certainly.

Q. Lastly, you say in your affidavit you want to know the number, the width and the depth of the lands and grooves despite the mutilated nature of the bullet taken from between Officer Faulkner's eyes; correct?

A. Yes.

Q. I believe you say if I would have had the opportunity to examine the alleged murder weapon and bullet specimen, I might have been able to determine the number of lands and grooves, their width and their depth. That's the statement from your affidavit; correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you familiar with the works of Dr. J. H. Matthews, who is a Harvard-educated scholar and author of a work entitled 'Firearms Identification'?

A. Yes, three-volume set, last one done after his death.

Q. That's right, Volume 1, Chapter 2, page 19. The depth of the grooves on a fired bullet has little application to the problem of identification of a firearm. While it is fairly easy to determine by measurement the depth of the grooves in a rifled barrel, it is very difficult to measure the depth of a groove on a fired bullet, and even when measurements are possible, they ordinarily have little meaning.

Now, you of course, obviously, disagree with this?

A. Obviously, I do.

Q. And do you agree or disagree with the commentary of Charles and Jack Gunther -- you are familiar with the Gunther brothers?

A. Yes, that's an old, old, old, old book. You are going back to, to the beginning of this as an art.

Q. Well, if it is an art, and if it is not a

Page 144.

George Fassnacht - Cross

science, I guess anybody's opinion is as good as anybody else's, right?

A. It is opinion.

Q. Okay. They state, although it is possible to obtain by appropriate measurements the class, characteristics of the firearm from which the bullet was fired, it is perhaps a better plan to compare the questioned bullet -- that is the bullet you want to find out about -- with bullets fired from known types and makes of firearms --

A. Exactly.

Q. -- using the comparison microscope for this purpose.

A. Exactly. That's perfectly correct.

Q. And that's exactly what the Firearms Identification Unit did, didn't they?

A. I don't know.

Q. Pardon me?

A. I don't know that. I imagine they attempted to do that.

Q. Oh. You don't know?

A. Unsuccessful.

Q. I see. I see.

A. What we are talking about now is the attempt on the fired bullet specimen, the damaged bullet, to learn if there are any sections of that that could be measured which would possibly exclude the evidence gun.

Page 145.

George Fassnacht - Cross

Q. I see. And that's a nice theory if you have an undamaged bullet and all things are relatively equal?

A. Depends on the damages and degrees, like anything else.

Q. Okay.

A. It could be damaged and still be very valuable. It could be damaged and be totally useless. And it could be damaged to the point where there are no general rifling characteristics.

Q. Right. And this bullet was described, I believe, as extremely mutilated, distorted, gouged, bearing numerous foreign markings destroying the major portion of the rifling markings. And the base edge was distorted and mutilated; correct?

A. Right. What's major? And again a rhetorical question, sir, I am not questioning you. What is major? Is there sufficient, is there a sufficient quantity left -- a minor quantity, if you will -- which would enable us to make a measurement and determination under the proper microscopy techniques. I don't know.

Page 146.

George Fassnacht - Cross

Q. Let's take some recourse to Dr. Matthews again and his volume. He states, if all fired bullets were undamaged and perfectly symmetrical and if each represented precisely the cross section of the barrel, measurements could be made and they would have some significance. But these bullets do not exist. No two bullets even when fired successively will be the same in every particular. The majority of bullets brought to the laboratory show some degree of mutilation and many of them show extreme mutilation.

So what makes you think that you could do better?

A. I would refer to a later book prepared at the taxpayers' expense called the CLIS, or the Crime Laboratory Information Service, compendium of rifling markings, wherein the FBI set forth, first on a computer, now in printout, various careful measurements of the bores of various firearms, including the lands, widths and depths, so as to enable investigators to determine if a particular bullet could have been fired in a particular type of firearm. If this lands and width measurement is so useless, then the taxpayers have been had once again.

Q. When was this study performed, sir?

Page 147.

George Fassnacht - Cross

A. It is the current study, last one I have is 1992. It's been going on for years.

Q. Yeah, when did it start?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Well, that's nice that you recall that, or don't recall that, but we have to put our minds and our thought processes back to what was the state of the art in 1981. Because as good as they were, perhaps they can't predict the future, nor can they live in the future. So go back to 1981 and tell us what the state of the art was then in answer to this question?

A. I believe the CLIS program was in effect then except the FBI did not release it to the public, it was on computer and available only directly to police departments. I am sure the people from the ballistics lab could give you the particulars.

Q. So now you are sure that they had availability when just 10 seconds ago you didn't know when?

A. I didn't know when it started but I believe, you asked me for a date. You didn't ask me did this date overlap this particular incident. And I think it probably did.

Q. Now, the firearms examiner's report concluded, and was so testified to, fired bullets from Mr.

Page 148.

George Fassnacht - Cross

Jamal's gun, when compared with the bullet removed from Daniel Faulkner -- and that phrase is important because you said you didn't know whether they compared the bullet that they took from Officer Faulkner's body with the test-fired bullet from Mr. Jamal's gun, didn't you?

A. No. I said that that test that you are referring to was made in order to determine if there were sufficient markings. Striae, if you will. Fine scratches, fine lines, peculiar to one gun. That if those were present on the evidence bullet, which would specifically then identify it as being fired from the gun which killed Officer Faulkner. That's the comparison that I understand that you are talking about.

Q. Well, I didn't think so but maybe you're right.

A. Oh.

Q. Test-fired bullets from Mr. Jamal's gun when compared with the bullet removed from Officer Faulkner, although insufficient to permit a positive comparison, are nevertheless consistent with the rifling characteristics of Defendant's Charter Arms revolver.

Now, they didn't say that the

Page 149.

George Fassnacht - Cross

Defendant's gun shot the bullet in Officer Faulkner, did they?

A. No, but they also said that the general rifling characteristics were indeterminable. This is very strange. This is very strange.

Q. To you it's strange?

A. It sure is.

Q. Let us consider the Gunther brothers -- who you think, I guess, are archaic?

A. Who, sir?

Q. The Gunther brothers, Charles --

A. Charles.

Q. The lawyer and the --

A. Yes.

Q. -- mathematician?

A. Yes.

Q. If the evidence bullet is so distorted and mutilated that only a small portion of the signature -- that is the identifying markings -- remain intact, it will often be impossible to reach any definite conclusions. In some cases it may be possible to determine definitely only whether or not the evidence bullet was fired from a firearm with the same class characteristics as those of a suspected firearm.

Page 150.

George Fassnacht - Cross

Now, that is exactly what the lab concluded and did, right?

A. The lab said that the general rifling characteristics were indeterminable. In plain English.

Q. Well, you have opined that since you didn't have a chance to look at the evidence, test the evidence -- all you did was read a report?

A. Yes.

Q. And you did not, basically, inspect the bullets, inspect the weapons, test-fire the weapons, visually compare under the microscope any of the bullet specimens, or inspect the fired cartridge cases, you could have made a difference in Mr. Jamal's case back then, right?

A. It's possible.

Q. Is it in your opinion to a reasonable degree of scientific certainty that you would have made a difference?

A. Only if you can predict with a reasonable degree of scientific certainty what a jury will do, and I don't think anybody in this world can. I can't.

Q. Well, we have what you didn't have in 1981. Would you be willing to try a hand at it now?

Page 151.

George Fassnacht - Cross

A. Would I be willing to reexamine this evidence?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I would not.

Q. Oh. Well, you wrote this affidavit, you challenged the competency of the lab, you found that their reports were deficient, their tests were deficient: Certainly you would want to prove that you are right and they are wrong, wouldn't you?

A. I believe it would be unethical for me to do so.

Q. Why?

A. Because I have been retained by the defense and because I believe that if my report was adversarial you would go out and hire another expert anyway. So why waste time?

Q. I am not asking you to work for me.

A. Yes.

Q. So you could still be ethical and work for them.

A. I think they should hire someone who has not been involved to reexamine the evidence, if they are going to do that, if the Court so permits.

Q. I will talk your game but I am not going to back this up?

A. I don't think that is quite, this is not a game and it's my observations. I believe that the evidence should have been examined in the first place. I believe that if the Court is so disposed, that it should be done again. And you are asking me will I do it and I am not interested in doing it.

Page 152.

George Fassnacht - Cross

Q. Of course you are not. What if you were the Court's expert and we would rely on your opinion, sir, and you would have to take the money whatever your fee is -- and we have the evidence here today -- we scrounged all over City Hall for this, and other places -- wouldn't you want to take a shot?

A. I, I really don't want to re -- to examine this evidence for the reasons that I have explained. I think it's unethically -- it's unethical.

Q. It's unethical?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it unethical to give your reminiscences in this affidavit, sir?

A. Reminiscences?

Q. Well, you are talking about possibility and speculation and I am talking about reality here?

A. I've analyzed the evidence that was proffered as far as ballistics go. And I've given my opinion as to whether or not the Defendant had adequate assistance in this particular area, for ballistics.

Page 153.

George Fassnacht - Cross

And my opinion is that he did not. Now, that doesn't mean that I want to undertake to do it. And besides which, I don't want to open myself to the, to the accusation of churning.

Q. Well, let me say this to you.

A. That is of making work of attacking someone's findings to generate more work for myself.

Q. No one is accusing you of that.

A. Well.

Q. Let's assume that if you looked at these items -- excuse me -- if you looked at these specimens that you could determine that Mr. Jamal's gun was not the murder weapon. Wouldn't you want to do that, based on what you said in this affidavit?

A. Would I want to do it?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. As I say, there are competent people out there. I really feel that it would be unethical for me to do it at this point.

Q. What if the defense asked you? They are the ones paying you now, right?

A. I still, I will still, I would have to give it some serious thought and talk to them about it.

Q. How much are they paying you to come in here and say this today?

Page 154.

George Fassnacht - Cross

A. I hope that they'll pay my daily rate.

Q. Which is?

A. 750 a day.

Q. $750 a day?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that includes each day that you come down to Court?

A. Unfortunately not.

MR. GRANT: Thank you.

THE COURT: Could we recess for lunch?

MR. WEINGLASS: There is redirect. There is redirect.

THE COURT: At 2:30.

THE COURT OFFICER: This Court now stand in luncheon recess until 2:30 this afternoon at the call of the Crier.

(Luncheon recess was held until 3:00 p.m.)

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, Mr. Fassnacht is on the stand and has not begun redirect yet and there was an area about .44 bullets that I failed to inquire into and I would like to have leave to reopen and ask him about that .44 bullet.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: I object to this, Your Honor. Because yesterday Mr. Williams asked to reopen and he was denied that privilege by the Court. And I think those applications, if they are denied on one side, in fairness ought to be denied to the other side as well.

MR. GRANT: He didn't ask to reopen, Judge. He hasn't cross-examination.

THE COURT: Okay. I will allow you to proceed.

MR. GRANT: This will be very, it will be very brief.

(George Fassnacht, having been previously sworn, was examined and testified as follows:)

CROSS-EXAMINATION (Continued)

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Good afternoon, sir.

A. Good afternoon.

Q. You mentioned that Dr. Hoyer measured the base of the bullet taken from Officer Faulkner.

Page 156.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you said it measured 10 millimeters?

A. That is correct.

Q. And then you expressed how it was four-tenths of an inch, that is the equivalent of 10 millimeters?

A. Yes, that's right.

Q. What is the true diameter of a .38, such as the snub-nose used by Mr. Jamal, what would that be?

A. .35 inches.

Q. In millimeters?

A. 9 millimeters.

Q. So the distinction we are talking about between the .38 and the measurement of Dr. Hoyer was 1 millimeter; is that right?

A. No, it's more like 5 millimeters.

Q. Well, no, between a 9 millimeter measurement --

A. Oh, millimeters, I'm sorry. I'm sorry, I'm thinking in terms of tenths of an inch or -- yeah, you are quite correct: 1 millimeter.

Q. A true .38 snub-nose, the diameter across would be 9 millimeters?

A. Yes.

Q. The bore?

Page 157.

A. The bore.

Q. And this bullet was measured at 10 millimeters?

A. That is correct.

Q. So we are talking about 1 millimeter?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, did you know, from reading the report or from reading the autopsy report or the FIU report, that this bullet had a hollowed base?

A. I believe so.

Q. And what is the significance of that in terms of the expansion of the base upon firing, sir, from a short-barreled weapon?

A. Ahh, from a short-barreled weapon it could expand.

Q. Do you think it could expand as much as half a millimeter on either side of the bullet base?

A. Possible.

Q. And you don't know whether or not Dr. Hoyer was measuring this bullet with a simple ruler, do you?

A. I have no idea.

Q. If you were going to give your expert opinion in this area of ballistics, would you use precision instruments or an everyday ruler?

Page 158.

A. Probably an optical instrument.

Q. Meaning a microscope?

A. Or a, there are a number of optical measuring devises you could use, sure. A microscope -- short of a microscope. You could use a microscope of course.

Q. And the last thing is that the base of this bullet was mutilated and distorted on the base edge; correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now considering all those three variables, is it unlikely -- strike that. Considering those three variables -- the only distinction we are making here is 1 millimeter, mind you -- is that explainable by looking at the fact that this is a hollow-based bullet which expands upon firing from a short-barrel gun, that the base of the bullet when found was mutilated and distorted, and precision instruments may not have been used, would that explain the millimeter?

A. Yes.

Q. In any event, no matter whether that explains it or not, you know from your own expertise that this is no way close to being a .44 caliber bullet, don't you?

Page 159.

A. Yes.

Q. It's consistent, if anything, with a .38 caliber bullet, isn't it?

A. Or a .40 caliber bullet. I haven't seen it so I can't tell.

Q. .40 caliber bullet? How much would a .40 caliber bullet weigh, anyway?

A. Oh, I don't know. There are .40 caliber automatics and --

Q. Well, can you tell that this bullet was fired from an automatic as opposed to a revolver?

A. You should be able to if it hadn't been too badly distorted.

Q. And if it was fired from a revolver and not an automatic --

A. There is also a 10 millimeter automatic which is roughly the same.

Q. But I am not talking about automatics, I am talking about revolvers.

A. I am just giving you types of guns in response to your question.

Q. No, my question is considering revolvers only.

A. Yes.

Q. What's the closest approximation in terms of diameter that this bullet would have come from were it not an automatic?

Page 160.

A. I would say a .38. But there's also a .4l caliber revolver.

Q. I am sure. Is that an automatic too?

A. No, it is a revolver.

Q. To your knowledge, is there any indication in this case whatsoever of a .41 caliber weapon?

A. No, no, not at all.

Q. And if Dr. Boyer, or anybody, said that the bullet that was taken from Daniel Faulkner's skull was .44 caliber, you, even you, paid by them, would say that can not be, wouldn't you?

A. Was .44 caliber? I haven't seen it.

Q. No, but I didn't ask you that.

A. Yes.

Q. If it were .44 caliber -- you saw the FIU report: You based your testimony on reading it?

A. Yes.

Q. Considering what you read, you must admit to a reasonable degree of scientific certainty that a .44 caliber that was not?

A. Yes, I would agree with that.

MR. GRANT: Thank you.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

- - - - -

Page 161.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Based on what you read of the police laboratory. But if that information was in error you would have to change your opinion?

A. Yes, that's true also.

Q. You haven't had a chance to see that bullet yourself?

A. That is correct.

Q. So what you were doing is you were answering Counselors' question on the assumption that the police laboratory was accurate?

A. Yes.

Q. And you found the police laboratory in other instances to be contradictory?

A. Yes.

Q. And also incomplete?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you were asked a series of questions about your performance as an expert over the last 20 years. Do you recall that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you indicated that you primarily or almost exclusively, I believe, testified for the defense?

A. Yes.

Page 162.

George Fassnacht - Redirect

Q. Mr. Fassnacht, if you had been asked by any agency of the United States, or any state government involved in law enforcement or prosecution, to testify as their expert, would you have done so?

A. Certainly.

Q. So it isn't that you have a bias against prosecutions, it's just that you have been asked and employed by one side of a criminal case?

A. Yes.

Q. And in your background at Aberdeen Proving Ground, who employed you there?

A. The United States Army.

Q. And were you also employed by the Central Intelligence Agency?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you also employed by the Police Department of Philadelphia?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you a person who has a bias against law enforcement?

A. No.

Q. Are many of your friends in law enforcement?

A. Yes.

Q. And when you testified for the defense in the ordinary course, would you indicate to the Court how

Page 163.

George Fassnacht - Redirect

you ordinarily enter a case?

A. Well, I'm requested by the attorney to, who believes that he has a case, to examine the evidence and render an opinion.

Q. And in your experience does the attorney do a pre screening of the ballistics material that he has before he or she brings you in?

A. Yes, usually the attorney wouldn't attempt to hire an expert unless he felt that he had something to hang his hat on that was worth looking into.

Q. So there is, so far as you know, a preliminary decision made that there is something in the case that they want you to look at?

A. That bears looking into. Bears investigation, yes.

Q. Now, in some of those cases when you are brought in and you examine the ballistics material, usually by a police laboratory or by the FBI, do you find on occasion that the ballistics information or work done by law enforcement was correct and accurate?

A. Certainly.

Q. And do you tell the attorneys that?

A. Yes.

Q. So you don't always find police or law

Page 164.

George Fassnacht - Redirect

enforcement work to be inaccurate or wrong?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, when you worked for the City of Philadelphia Police Department, did you also teach at the Police Academy?

A. Yes.

Q. And who would you teach at the Police Academy?

A. The training class of police, as they came through each class received a lecture from someone at the Firearms Unit.

Q. And you would lecture them on firearms?

A. Yes.

Q. And in those lectures that you gave the new police officers, or the new police officers to be, would you tell them about this test of smelling the barrel of a gun to see if it had recently been fired?

A. Yes.

Q. And that was part of their training?

A. Yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: May I have this next object marked?

THE COURT OFFICER: D-15.

(FIU report was marked Defense Exhibit D-l5 for identification.)

MR. WEINGLASS: Showing Counsel a four-page document marked Commanding Officer, Homicide Division, Firearms Identification Unit, marked D-l5 (handing).

Page 165.

(Pause.)

MR. GRANT: Thank you, Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: Could the document be shown to the witness?

THE COURT OFFICER: D-15, sir (handing).

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Now, preliminarily, Mr. Fassnacht, I would like to ask you this. Do you recall on cross-examination with respect to the smell test to determine recent firing, Counsel asked you if you knew when the Firearms Identification Unit received the gun, the suspect gun in question? Do you remember being asked that question?

A. Yes.

Q. And you indicated that you didn't know.

A. Right.

Q. Could you read the first full paragraph of that report?

A. Examination has been made December 9th, 1981 of the following evidence received from Police Officer J. Forbes, Number 9811, Stakeout Unit,

Page 166.

George Fassnacht - Redirect

December 9, 1981, at 5:55. It looks like a.m. but... the letter is partially occluded.

Q. Having looked at that Exhibit now, does that refresh your recollection that the Firearms Identification Unit had the guns at 5:55 a.m.?

MR. GRANT: Objection to leading.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am asking if it refreshes his recollection. He might say no.

MR. GRANT: I will withdraw my objection.

THE COURT: I thought he said he wasn't sure what it said because he couldn't read it, it was smudged or something.

MR. WEINGLASS: He said he thought it was a.m.

THE COURT: Well, he wasn't sure.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, I appreciate the Court's observation.

THE COURT: That's what he said. I am only repeating what he said. I didn't see the document, I don't know. Do we have a better document here?

MR. GRANT: I do (handing).

MR. WEINGLASS: Thank you. Counsel generously gave me his document which is a

Page 167.

George Fassnacht - Redirect

clearer document.

THE COURT: What does it say?

MR. WEINGLASS: It says -- if we can agree -- a.m.

THE COURT: A.m.?

MR. GRANT: We can agree. And I object because it doesn't say that testing was done, it said they got the gun from the officer at that time.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes, thank you (handing).

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. So according to this document, the Firearms Unit had the suspect weapon at 5:55 a.m.?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Within about two hours of the alleged shooting?

A. Yes.

Q. Right. And your testimony was that the smell test could be employed between four and five hours, and possibly up to six hours?

A. Yes.

Q. Any indication in the Firearms Unit report that they smelled the gun at 5:55 or any time

Page 168.

George Fassnacht - Redirect

thereafter?

A. Hmm, none that I have seen.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time among defense Counsel.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. With respect to your expertise, the fact that the report is silent with respect to any odor from the gun, does that indicate to you that there was no odor coming from that gun?

MR. GRANT: Objection, Your Honor. How is he going to answer that?

THE COURT: I'll sustain that.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Now, you were asked a hypothetical about the evening in question with respect to whether or not a trace metal detection test could have been employed on Mr. Jamal. And I want to ask you this hypothetical. If Mr. Jamal was taken into custody at approximately 3:54 a.m. on December 9th, 1981, and he was in a hospital within 20 minutes and his hands were handcuffed to a stretcher, if you were present in the hospital at that time and you were in charge of the law enforcement investigation, as an expert would you have requested that a, a test, the swabbing test be employed to see whether or not he had

Page 169.

George Fassnacht - Redirect

recently fired a weapon?

A. Yeah.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, first of all, he was not handcuffed to any stretcher. A stretcher was never used. If he is going to use a hypothetical he must quote from the record the facts that existed, not the ones he would like.

MR. WEINGLASS: Strike stretcher and use gurney.

MR. GRANT: And that didn't happen until after he was in the hospital and about to be operated on.

THE COURT: Rephrase your question so it's not objectionable.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. If he were --

THE COURT: He says quote from the record itself.

MR. WEINGLASS: I don't have it available immediately. And I might point out Counsel didn't quote from any record when he used his hypothetical with the Court's blessing.

MR. GRANT: If he objected I would have. I have it right here before me

Page 170.

George Fassnacht - Redirect

MR. WEINGLASS: I hear no objection so I am proceeding.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Now, Mr. Fassnacht, if he had been arrested at about 3:54 a.m., admitted to the hospital at 4:10, and placed in a treatment area, and if you were present at that time, would you have requested that he be tested to determine whether or not he had recently fired a weapon?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, when you were questioned on direct, were you offering any expert opinion as a, with a reasonable degree of scientific certainty as to what tests would have shown in 1982, tests that you never performed?

A. I ...

Q. On direct.

A. Yes.

Q. Could you offer any expert opinion to a reasonable degree of scientific certainty on a test that you never have performed?

A. No.

Q. On your direct testimony the only expert opinion you were offering, was it not, was that you should have been able to conduct such tests so that

Page 171.

George Fassnacht - Recross

you would have been able to testify before a jury?

A. That's correct.

Q. And you wouldn't venture an expert opinion with respect to a test that you hadn't yet conducted?

A. Yes.

Q. And based on your review of the materials that were provided to you, you determined that you should have been employed as an expert back in 1982 since you could have offered evidence in support of defense contentions in that trial?

A. Yes.

Q. And that you weren't because there were no funds available to retain you?

A. That's correct.

MR. WEINGLASS: Fine. I have nothing further.

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Sir, he just asked you a series of questions and what those questions went to was that if you had been given the money you wanted when you were employed beginning in late March, early April, you could have conducted tests on Mr. Jamal's hand to tell whether he shot that gun five months before?

Page 172.

George Fassnacht - Recross

A. No.

Q. That's what he just asked you and you just said yeah.

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection. He wasn't asked that.

THE WITNESS: I didn't understand the question to be that at all.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. What did you understand it to be?

A. He said should that test have been conducted, and the last question that he asked was pertaining to the examination of evidence that was examinable after the fact.

Q. I thought he said to you --

A. Not my understanding, sir.

MR. GRANT: Well, we could read the record back and we will resort to that.

MR. WEINGLASS: Could we read the record back? I accept Counsel's request.

THE COURT: Just sit down, will you please. Let him rephrase his question.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, Counsel asked that the record be read back. I join in that.

MR. GRANT: I did not ask and I will ask when I am ready.

Page 173.

MR. WEINGLASS: No wonder you didn't ask, because you are wrong again.

THE COURT: Strike all of those extra comments by the attorneys. Strike them from the record, please.

MR. WEINGLASS: Now, Your Honor, you always permit leeway to the other side.

THE COURT: I will not have this record cluttered with unnecessary comments. Just strike the comments from both sides. Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: You never struck the other side's comments.

THE COURT: Did you ever ask?

MR. WEINGLASS: Many times. And I will from now on.

THE COURT: Okay.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Mr. Fassnacht --

A. Yes, sir.

Q. -- do you not recall attorney Weinglass saying to you, and do you feel that you should have been able to conduct the tests on Mr. Jamal so that you could have offered evidence to support the defense position, and he was asking you at that time about gunshot residue from the shooter; do you recall that question?

A. No, I don't. And I don't recall understanding his question in that fashion.

MR. GRANT: Could I go back to that portion of the record if I may, Your Honor. And ask, I think it was the last four questions Mr. Weinglass asked.

THE COURT: If he can find it.

(The Court reporter read the following questions and answers at this time:

Question: On your direct testimony the only expert opinion you were offering, was it not, was that you should have been able to conduct such tests so that you would have been able to testify before a jury?

Answer: That's correct.

Question: And you wouldn't venture an expert opinion with respect to a test that you hadn't yet conducted?

Answer: Yes.

Question: And based on your review of the materials that were provided to you, you determined that you should have been employed as an expert back in 1982 since you could have offered evidence in support of defense contentions in that trial?

Answer: Yes.

Question: And that you weren't because there were no funds available to retain you?

Answer: That's correct.)

THE COURT: Read that first one again, please.

(The Court reporter read the following question and answer at this time:

Question: On your direct testimony the only expert opinion you were offering, was it not, was that you should have been able to conduct such tests so that you would have been able to testify before a jury?

Answer: That's correct.)

MR. WEINGLASS: Could Counsel apologize to the Court? It was misstated so now we know.

THE COURT: No comments, please.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. What that question said, was that your position: You should have been able to conduct that test?

Page 176.

MR. WEINGLASS: Such tests. Counsel is still misstating even after it's been read twice. Your Honor, this is hopeless. Counsel can't hear what he's just been read and he is misstating it.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. By such tests --

MR. WEINGLASS: Could it be read a third time?

THE COURT: Counselor, please.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. By such tests, that includes the swabbings you were talking about taking from Mr. Jamal's hand, sir?

A. Certainly not.

Q. Because that would be a ridiculous position to take?

A. Preposterous, absolutely preposterous.

Q. And there is no way that you would ever, no matter how much money they gave you, take a test for gunpowder residue on a person three months down the road, would you?

A. It's ludicrous. That's not what he was talking about, as I understood it.

Q. All right, now, sir, you said that this smell test, this sniff test or whatever it is --

Page 177.

A. Yes.

Q. -- is it a generally accepted method to determine recent firing?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it used in the Los Angeles Police Department?

A. I'm afraid to speculate on what the Los Angeles Police Department might do.

Q. Do you know anybody --

THE COURT: Okay.

THE COURT OFFICER: Order in the Court.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Do you know anybody in the Chicago Police Department that uses this?

A. So that you won't think that I'm referring to the wrong thing, or the wrong event, we all know, what I am referring to is the fact that the Los Angeles Police Department Ballistics Laboratory was fired en mass, every last man jack of them, and replaced by outside help because they made so many errors. In this science, as some of us think.

Q. Do you know if anybody in the Chicago Police Department smells guns when they get them?

A. I have no idea.

Page 178.

George Fassnacht - Recross

Q. Do you know of anybody that works for them?

A. No.

Q. Do you know of anybody that works in the San Francisco Police Department that smells guns when they get them?

A. No.

Q. Do you know of anybody in any major urban area that you personally know that sniffs guns?

A. I don't personally know any of them.

Q. Well, how can you say in your affidavit under penalty of perjury that this is a generally accepted method of determining recent firing?

A. It is the only method and it is generally accepted by people.

Q. By whom?

A. By people in my field.

Q. But you don't know any of them, do you?

A. Certainly I know --

Q. Name two?

A. Howard Montgomery, who was former supervisor of the Philadelphia Police Department, now in Delaware County with the State Police.

Q. So was he your teacher?

A. My teacher?

Q. Yes, was he your boss at some point and taught

Page 179.

George Fassnacht - Recross

you how to smell guns?

A. It was the other way around.

Q. You taught him to smell guns?

A. He knew that without being told.

Q. So the only people you know to do this are people you told to do this?

A. It's something that anyone who has a lot of experience with firearms realizes.

Q. Could that test be reproduced so that defense counsel, when they want to go back and say I want to test to see if that person's nose was accurate, can you reproduce that test so they can check it out?

A. No more so than you could reproduce an eyewitness' vision of the scene, no, certainly not.

Q. Are your answer is no?

A. No.

Q. And except for your version of what your nose smells, you could say that right on the report, condemn an individual to a prison sentence or worse, and there is no way that they can challenge it?

A. That is a test that can not be reproduced, if that's what you are driving at.

MR. GRANT: Thank you.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time among defense Counsel.)

Page 180.

MR. WEINGLASS: I have no questions.

THE COURT: You are excused, Mr. Fassnacht.

Mr. Weinglass? Robert Harkins?

MR. WEINGLASS: No, our next witness is present, Steve Hawkins. The affidavit has been submitted with Mr. Hawkins on Mr. Hawkins' testimony.

THE COURT: Okay? wait awhile. I thought I ruled he was out.

MR. GRANT: Yes, Your Honor, I thought they were supposed to submit cases on him as to why he should even be allowed to testify in this Courtroom.

THE COURT: Yes, that's what I said.

MR. GRANT: We have a case here for you, it is called Commonwealth versus Neal and it is cited at 618 Atlantic 2nd, page 438. It is a Pennsylvania Superior Court case, 1992 vintage. And I would be glad to hand it up to this Court.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am familiar with that case and it has no application to Mr. Hawkins' testimony. We are not calling him as an expert on any area in this case, we are calling him as a fact witness.

MR. GRANT: Well, then his affidavits were in the area of I'm an expert in death penalty litigation and I found -- just a minute -- and I found ineffectiveness. If that's not an expert opinion I don't know what is.

The other affidavit dealt with I talked to a Juror and I asked her about what went on in her mind in the Jury room and outside the Jury room. But not because some third party intervened or a foreigner came in, but among the Jurors what happened. And that is incompetent.

So he is a legal expert and he is not permitted to testify as an expert, or he is a hearsay representative of what a Juror said and that is incompetent testimony.

MR. WEINGLASS: Once against Counsel omits or he hasn't read Mr. Hawkins' affidavit. He says some of those things that Counsel alludes to but he says more, and that's what he will be --

THE COURT: Give me a copy of that and when I get a chance tonight I will be glad to read it over.

Page 182.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor has it.

THE COURT: I don't have them with me, okay. All right.

MR. WEINGLASS: Sorry you didn't.

THE COURT: Counselor, I want to read the case too.

MR. WEINGLASS: Sure.

THE COURT: Do you have any cases to give me?

MR. WEINGLASS: None are necessary.

THE COURT: Okay, fine. I will take it under advisement.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, with respect to, with respect to the Juror incompetence, I do have -- Are you going to contest that, Counsel?

MR. WEINGLASS: The Neal case?

MR. GRANT: No, are you going to contest whether or not he is allowed to comment about the Juror's statements, hearsay statements?

MR. WEINGLASS: We are going to -- I will answer Counsel's question. I am not accustomed to being questioned by Counsel.

Page 183.

MR. GRANT: I'm sorry.

MR. WEINGLASS: But I will answer it anyway. Mr. Hawkins was tendered in exhibit 10 and exhibit 11, both of which are sworn affidavits by Counsel.

MR. GRANT: I will give the Court cases on the Juror issue (handing). I just have excerpts, I don't have the copy of the case but I do have citations for Your Honor.

MR. WEINGLASS: One affidavit, which is exhibit 10 by Mr. Hawkins, deals with the issue of the Jurors. The second affidavit, which is exhibit 11, deals with the question of ineffective assistance of Counsel on the appellate stage of the proceedings.

Now dealing with number 11 first: Mr. Hawkins' testifies under oath in the affidavit that he personally interviewed appellate Counsel. And that in response to an inquiry by him, appellate Counsel acknowledged to him that the trial record was never read.

MR. GRANT: It does not say that here.

MR. WEINGLASS: It does, Counsel, paragraph 3A.

MR. GRANT: Read it into the record.

Page 184.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right. During the course of my interview -- I will transliterate -- with appellate Counsel --

MR. GRANT: No. Well, yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: With appellate Counsel.

MR. GRANT: Yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: During the course of my interview with appellate Counsel, as well as after reviewing her files, I learned of several irregularities --

MR. GRANT: That's what I am saying: It doesn't say she told me anything.

MR. WEINGLASS: -- that occurred in her representation of Mr. Jamal. A, appellate Counsel never read the trial record in Mr. Jamal's case.

MR. GRANT: It doesn't say she told him that.

MR. WEINGLASS: He will say that on the stand, I represent that.

MR. GRANT: May we go to sidebar? I think Counsel wants to go to sidebar.

THE COURT: All right, back here.

- - - - -

Page 185.

(Discussion held in the Judge's robing room was transcribed and was sealed by Court order.)

- - - - -

THE COURT OFFICER: Court is back in session.

MR. WEINGLASS: The Court has made a ruling with respect to exhibit 11. We take exception to that ruling.

THE COURT: You don't have to take exception: It's automatic.

MR. WEINGLASS: Referring to exhibit 10, which deals with the question of the Jurors. And if you read exhibit 10, there is one thing that has to be said right at the outset, and it's this: Mr. Hawkins will not testify at all about the deliberative process that the Jury engaged in, or any aspect of any Juror's conduct, thinking in the course of deliberative, the deliberative process. He will only testify as he is entitled to testify, about Juror misconduct that happened after the Court hours. That happened in the hotel. And that involved named Jurors that are named in his affidavit.

And so I want to be clear at the outset: We are not talking about attacking a verdict by inquiring of the deliberative process. We are talking about Jury misconduct, the violation of two Court orders by Jurors. And that this witness Mr. Hawkins had received this information directly and personally in a conversation with a Juror, who informed him that Jurors met in the hotel behind closed doors and conducted what, according to the one Juror, appeared to be private deliberations by a group of three Jurors out of the presence of the others while the case was being tried and prior to the conclusion of the evidence.

And I think that's evidence that the Court should hear at this time. Because, Your Honor, if we are talking about Juror misconduct, we are talking about the core of the truth-seeking process. Where because of acts taken by Jurors, the entire process is infected by wrongdoing and therefore has no credibility and has to be set aside. I think the law on that is very clear. I think jury misconduct always leads to a new trial in the interests of justice. And I think there is evidence of that here and it's direct evidence from one of the seated Jurors to Mr. Hawkins. And he's here to testify about that under oath.

MR. GRANT: And that's not admissible either. Let's assume that he was allowed, if he were allowed to present this. That means he would have to bring that Juror in and subject that Juror to cross-examination so he could say well, how did you, through closed doors, cordoned off from these people that you say were involved in open wrongdoing, did you hear this. Did you have a hole. Did you see through a window. Have a glass door. And he knows very well that is not admissible testimony. What has to be shown for them to get into that is some third-party or outside influence on the Jury. What he is accusing the Jurors of is interfering with themselves. It doesn't matter whether it is in a hotel room, in the basement of this building, or in a subway station, it is not an outside influence, it is the influence that they have on one another. And Counsel is not giving you any cases because he knows the law is the same in New York as it is in Pennsylvania. And the cases say you can't do it. And if he could find a case that says he can do it I would agree with him.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. WEINGLASS: I never wanted to have to make reference to this particular trial and this case but I am afraid I am going to have to. In a noted case that's being tried right now in the state of California, 10 jurors have been dismissed, not because of any outside influence, but because of an interaction within the jury, that the sitting court there, under the same law that governs Pennsylvania and New York --

THE COURT: I don't want to get involved with California or OJ Simpson. All I am saying to you --

MR. WEINGLASS: Apparently anybody who reads the newspaper incisively is familiar with what is happening, and it is all what Counsel referred to: Interrelations of an improper nature between the jurors.

THE COURT: Counselor, give me a case on it. Research the law, give me a case on it, I will read it. If you are right I will let it in.

MR. WEINGLASS: I believe our memorandum of law does give the --

Page 189.

THE COURT: I don't want a memorandum, I want a Xerox of the case. Get me the case so I can read it myself.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, we gave you a memo.

THE COURT: In the meantime I will hold him in abeyance. Let's go on with the next witness.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, we gave you a memorandum of law on this issue on June 5th.

THE COURT: I want a Xerox copy of the case. Don't give me the memorandum, okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, we call witnesses to Court and prior to putting them on the stand --

THE COURT: Well, he is an attorney and he is available to you at any time. There is no big deal.

MR. WEINGLASS: He doesn't practice in Philadelphia.

THE COURT: I can't help that.

MR. WEINGLASS: I know but.

THE COURT: I will hold that under advisement. Give me a case. Xerox the case for me, I will be glad to read it. And if you are right then I will let you do it.

MR. WEINGLASS: The proposition the Court wants to hear about is what constitutes juror misconduct as opposed to deliberative process?

THE COURT: Counselor, please. I think you understand what his objection was from the D.A.'s Office.

MR. WEINGLASS: But he is not the Judge.

THE COURT: I know that but he has given me a case to read. You give me a case to read and I will be glad to read it.

Counselor, I have made a ruling. Now please. Please. Okay, let's go. If you have any other witness today give me the other witness.

MR. WEINGLASS: Here are the cases, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I don't want to hear the cases.

MR. WEINGLASS: United States --

THE COURT: I am not going to look them up. You Xerox the case for me and give it to me and I will read them. I didn't ask you for a brief. I said Xerox the case for me.

MR. WEINGLASS: One is a Pennsylvania case. Does Your Honor have the Court Reporter?

THE COURT: Don't give me that. Xerox the case for me. I want to take it home with me.

MR. WEINGLASS: I can't give it to you by the time you go home. I have to go home too.

THE COURT: Well, okay. We will all go home.

MR. WEINGLASS: We all go home.

THE COURT: Who is your next witness? Xerox it for me.

MR. WEINGLASS: I thought the Court was directing us to --

THE COURT: Counselor, please. No more comments like that. I don't want to have to hold you in contempt. So please. Let's go. I said I would take it under advisement. I will read this. And Xerox the cases for me. You have a Philadelphia attorney here: Call him on the phone, let him Xerox it for me and bring it in.

MR. WEINGLASS: At this point we would like to call attorney Kracoff. K-R-A-C-O-F-F.

THE COURT: That one is out too according to my notations here.

MR. GRANT: Yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: That one's out?

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: We submitted an affidavit.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time between Commonwealth and defense Counsel.)

MR. WEINGLASS: He is a Pittsburgh attorney.

THE COURT: Wait.

MR. WEINGLASS: He is out also?

THE COURT: For the time being he is. How about Robert Harkins?

MR. WEINGLASS: Hold on just a minute.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time between Commonwealth and defense Counsel.)

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, we have lost three out of our four witnesses today.

THE COURT: I know that.

MR. WEINGLASS: It imposes a certain

Page 193.

Robert Harkins - Direct

hardship.

THE COURT: How about Harkins? You said you --

MR. WEINGLASS: District Attorney has made him available. I want to thank him for that.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: We will call Robert Harkins.

THE COURT: Robert Harkins, please.

THE COURT OFFICER: Yes, Your Honor.

Robert Harkins, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

- - - - -

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Mr. Harkins, right? Good afternoon.

A. How do you do?

Q. Now, you and I have never met, have we?

A. I don't think so.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time between Commonwealth and defense Counsel.)

Page 194.

Robert Harkins - Direct

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Mr. Harkins, if you could do us a favor: If you could pull the microphone a little closer to you I would appreciate it, okay. Do you need assistance with your chair or anything?

Now, Mr. Harkins, do you understand what these proceedings are about?

A. A little bit.

Q. A little bit. Do you understand that there has been a Petition filed by Mr. Jamal, seated here (indicating), for a new trial?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, were you ever contacted by any member of the District Attorney's Office since June of this year?

A. No, I don't think so.

Q. Were you ever contacted by any member of law enforcement since June of this year?

A. Only down the Roundhouse to talk to them for routine records.

Q. I'm sorry, I didn't --

A. I go down to give another statement to them.

Q. Oh, somebody from law enforcement asked you to give another statement?

A. No, come down and ask me to read the statement

Page 195.

Robert Harkins - Direct

they already had.

Q. To read the statements?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember who that was?

A. Who came out to see me?

Q. Yes.

A. Detective Welsh and Detective Miller.

Q. Do you remember when that was?

A. No, in July sometime, I think, if I am not mistaken.

Q. Just a few weeks ago?

A. Yes. Ahh...

Q. I'm sorry?

A. I am trying to remember the date, but.

Q. Dates are difficult, I know. But in any event, sometime in July two detectives went to see you and asked you to come to the police precinct?

A. No, they didn't come to ask me to go to the police station. They come up to where I work at and they asked me to talk about the case. And I said I won't talk to nobody until I go down the Roundhouse and talk down there. Because I didn't know who they was.

Q. And you did do that?

A. Yes, they come back with a car and picked me

Page 196.

Robert Harkins - Direct

up and took me down.

Q. Did they tell you what they wanted or how they wanted you to help them?

A. No, this one told me the trial would be reopened and they just wanted me to give them a statement if I could remember what I told them back in '81.

Q. And what did you tell them when they asked you that?

A. I said I remember some of it.

Q. And did you read some police reports containing your statements that you gave back in 1981 and '82?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And did that help you refresh your recollection?

A. A little bit.

Q. A little bit. Okay. And did they discuss anything about what's happening here in this Courtroom?

A. No, they haven't.

Q. Did they talk to you about whether people from the defense side of the case or an individual from the defense side of the case had ever talked to you or tried to talk to you?

Page 197.

A. No, they did not tell me to say anything to anybody, I did that on my own. I told them I wouldn't talk to anybody until I went down the Roundhouse.

Q. Until you...?

A. They took me down the Roundhouse. I talk to them down there.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time between Commonwealth and defense Counsel.)

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Before those detectives visited you, had you talked with any detectives or anybody from law enforcement since 1982?

A. No, I have not.

Q. Now, do you remember back in January of 1994 -- to be specific, January 9th, 1994 -- receiving a visit from an investigator named Robert Bugler?

A. That I don't remember, no, sir.

Q. You don't remember?

A. No.

Q. Being visited by an investigator?

A. There were so many came around, so many different ones came around. They come up my, where I work at and came down my house, and I told them I didn't want to talk to them.

Q. Let me get this straight. You are saying many people came to visit you?

A. In -- let's see. It was about two of them came up the gas station where I worked at. Then a couple of them came to the house. And a couple more came to the house. Since after it started and I told them I wasn't talking to anybody.

Q. I see.

A. And the last two that came around I told them that I won't talk to them unless it was in a courtroom.

Q. Now, back in January of 1994, do you remember a man named Mr. Bugler talking to you?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you remember having a discussion of some kind with some individual where you told that individual that the detective downtown told you not to talk to anybody?

A. No, I never said that to anybody.

Q. Were you aware, Mr. Harkins, that there was an affidavit filed in this case where your name was mentioned?

A. No, not till Detective Welsh and Morgan came up the gas station and told me that.

Q. They told you that?

A. Yeah.

Q. Did you see that affidavit?

A. Hmm, no, I don't think so.

Q. Did anybody read to you that affidavit where your name is mentioned?

A. No, I don't think so. I can't remember.

MR. WILLIAMS: If you could pardon me for one moment.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time among defense Counsel.)

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. But you're aware that there is such an affidavit that contains your name, somebody told you that?

A. What do you mean by affidavit?

Q. Well, an affidavit is a sworn statement that, a sworn statement has been filed in this Court that contains your name in it. Not that you signed it but that you were mentioned in an affidavit. Are you aware of that?

A. I don't think so.

Q. You don't think so?

A. No, I don't remember.

Page 200.

Q. Now, you mentioned that you had given some interviews with the police many years ago, back in 1981 and '82?

A. '81, I think it was.

Q. Now I want you -- and I know it's difficult -- but I want you to focus on that for a little while. I am going to ask you some questions about that; do you understand?

A. Hmm-hmm.

Q. Now, on December 9th, 1981, at about 6:00 a.m. in the morning, do you remember being interviewed by a detective?

A. I think the detective did come down that morning at the gas station where I used to work at.

Q. What was your occupation back then?

A. I was a manager and a mechanic for United Cabs.

Q. Did you ever drive a cab?

A. I drove off and on, not for there. One guy came in I might take the cab. And that night I was driving a cab to go out and push another cab in which broke down.

Q. I see. Now, you know what the significance of December 9th, 1981 is, don't you? You know why that date is important?

Page 201.

A. Yeah, I think the date the officer got shot.

Q. You saw that?

A. Yeah.

Q. And is that why some police officer or detective on that, actually that morning, December 9th, wanted to talk to you?

A. I think so, yeah.

Q. And you tried your best to tell them what you saw?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Now, and you reviewed that report that was written by the detective which reflected what you told that detective, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember telling that detective that the first thing you saw was Police Officer Faulkner grabbing a guy?

A. They both had one another.

MR. GRANT: Objection, Your Honor. This witness, according to their supporting affidavit and claims of error, the only relevance of this witness is because they say he was shown photographic arrays or in person line-ups and the Commonwealth did not alert them or tell them, therefore we suppressed the evidence. We are not here to try the case. And I would ask that they be restricted to their proofs.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor --

THE COURT: You are restricted to your affidavit, okay.

MR. WILLIAMS: What I am endeavoring to show -- and I hesitate to do it in front of the witness -- but what I am endeavoring, I am leading up to the critical point that Counsel has raised regarding the photographic array. I need to lead him up to that, Judge.

THE COURT: I don't think you have to lead him up to that.

MR. WILLIAMS: I feel that you do.

THE COURT: I don't think that you should. We are not here to rehash that. You gave an affidavit for a certain purpose, now let's stick to that.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Do you remember what you told Detective Sutton on December 9th, 1981?

A. About the shooting?

Q. About what you saw, yes.

A. I was coming down, coming down Locust Street,

Page 203.

Robert Harkins - Direct

17th and the Warwick --

MR. GRANT: Objection.

THE COURT: Objection is sustained.

MR. GRANT: Move to strike.

THE COURT: If you are leading him, lead him right to the issue that is involved.

MR. WILLIAMS: That's what I am trying to do.

THE COURT: No, you are not.

MR. WILLIAMS: I am trying to.

THE COURT: No, you are not.

MR. WILLIAMS: I am going to the photographic array that is referred to.

THE COURT: Well, ask him about it.

MR. WILLIAMS: I need to lead him up to it.

THE COURT: You don't have to lead him up to it. You could ask him about it.

MR. WILLIAMS: It seems to me, Your Honor, we call an issue we want to explore a wish. We want to explore an issue and it goes to what he recollects about what he told the police.

THE COURT: Well, Counsel --

MR. WILLIAMS: What happened at the

Page 204.

Robert Harkins - Direct

police station.

THE COURT: Who made up that affidavit, you?

MR. WILLIAMS: Mr. Bugler, our investigator.

THE COURT: Okay? You are stuck with the affidavit.

MR. WILLIAMS: And we intend to explore what is precisely in that affidavit.

THE COURT: Well, go right to it. That's what I am trying to tell you.

MR. WILLIAMS: That's what I am doing. I am going into what happened at the precinct.

THE COURT: All right, you said he was shown some photographs. So ask him that. Get right into it.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, I will read into the record what they allege this witness has to do with this case, if I may, from their supporting papers.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, that is in the record, there is no need to read it into the record. The Petition has been filed, it is in the record.

THE COURT: Well, stick to it.

Page 205.

Robert Harkins - Direct

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, that is exactly what I am doing.

THE COURT: No, you are not.

MR. WILLIAMS: I am inquiring as to what happened within the four corners of the precinct.

THE COURT: No, your affidavit talks about photographs being shown. So let's go right to it.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Let me ask you this, Mr. Harkins. There were discussions, were there not, on December 9th, 1981 about what happened, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And you told the police that you were very near where the shooting happened, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And that you saw the shooter; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. You didn't see the shooter get shot, did you?

A. No, I did not.

Q. And how many people did you see there when you witnessed this shooting?

A. Two.

Q. You saw the shooter?

Page 206.

Robert Harkins - Direct

A. Hmm-hmm, and the cop.

Q. And the police officer?

A. Yes.

Q. You didn't see a third person, did you?

A. I wasn't looking around.

Q. So when you were trying to describe people you were only trying to describe the officer and the shooter?

A. Right.

Q. Is that right?

A. Right.

Q. Did you see a man running across the street?

A. No, I did not.

MR. GRANT: That certainly sounds like a photo ID to me, Judge. I object. I move to strike it. This whole line of questioning I object to.

THE COURT: He said he didn't see anybody running across the street.

MR. WILLIAMS: Precisely.

MR. GRANT: I object to him continually trying to do the same thing. Could we get to the point.

THE COURT: Would you get right to the issue here, Counselor.

Page 207.

Robert Harkins - Direct

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. This was on December 9th, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you asked if you could identify the shooter?

A. Yes, I was. And I told them maybe.

Q. You told them maybe?

A. Right.

Q. Because this all happened very fast?

A. Right.

Q. Did you try to give a description of the shooter?

A. Hmm, no.

MR. GRANT: Objection.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Did anyone ask you to look at any photographs on December 9th?

A. No.

Q. Now, do you remember being interviewed again?

A. Yes, I was taken down again but the date I couldn't tell you. But I remember being taken back down the Roundhouse but I don't remember what date it was.

Q. Some detectives came to your house and did they bring you to the police station?

Page 208.

Robert Harkins - Direct

A. No, they came by and I drove myself down to the Roundhouse.

Q. Okay. So you went to the Roundhouse because some police officers or detectives asked you to?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember when that was?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Was that about a week later?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Okay. Well, in any event, when you had to go down to the Roundhouse the second time, do you remember who was there?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Was there some law enforcement people there?

A. A couple of detectives and stuff and all were there, yes.

Q. And were they interested in asking you some questions about what you saw on December 9th?

A. They asked some questions and all but I couldn't tell you what, I don't remember.

Q. Did they ask you questions about who did the shooting?

A. No, I just, they just said, I just told them I seen the guy, he shot the thing, having the gun, the guy was laying there. They were spinning around the

Page 209.

Robert Harkins - Direct

pavement.

Q. I'm sorry, who was spinning around on the pavement?

A. The cop and the -- and they was like wrestling a little bit and the cop fell down.

Q. Right, you explained all of that to the detective?

A. Yes.

Q. And the detective wanted you to help them find out who the shooter was? Was that your understanding?

A. I don't understand the question.

Q. When they were talking to you, Mr. Harkins, did the detectives, were they trying to find out who the shooter was?

A. I guess so.

Q. And you told them that the person, the police officer fell down and that's when the shooting happened?

A. Well, he leaned over and two, two to three flashes from the gun. But then he walked, sat down on the curb.

Q. The guy that done the shooting walked and sat down on the curb?

A. On the pavement.

Page 210.

Robert Harkins - Direct

Q. When you talked to the police on December 17th, 1981, did they ask you about the description of the shooter?

MR. GRANT: I object. We are not here for descriptions, we are here for identifications in the form of photographic or other IDS.

THE COURT: Why don't you get right to it, Counsel. Get right to it, will you.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Do you remember whether anyone asked you, Mr. Harkins, whether you could identify the shooter?

A. I told them --

Q. First of all --

A. When he asked me I told him maybe.

Q. You told him maybe. Did they ask you if you could look at any photographs?

A. I told them -- no, nobody asked me.

Q. Nobody asked you that?

A. Nobody either side.

Q. Do you know why they asked you to come back a week after the first interview?

A. No, I do not know.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time between defense Counsel.)

Page 211.

Robert Harkins - Direct

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Now, you mentioned something about the shooter sitting down. Do you remember that?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you tell that to any of the detectives?

MR. GRANT: Objection.

MR. WILLIAMS: It's his testimony, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I know that. But that's not part of the affidavit.

MR. WILLIAMS: Then I move to strike that testimony. If I can't inquire into it I move to strike it.

THE COURT: You asked the question.

MR. WILLIAMS: No, that was non responsive to my question.

THE COURT: Well, you should have objected then and asked to strike it.

MR. WILLIAMS: I now move to strike it.

THE COURT: Too late, it's there.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, I have never read any evidence code that puts a time frame on when I can move to strike.

THE COURT: Well, sorry about that,

Page 212.

Robert Harkins - Direct

Counselor. I can't help what you read.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time between defense Counsel.)

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, I may be a young lawyer but I am simply flabbergasted by the rulings. Let me say this. I am trying, I am getting an answer from a witness --

THE COURT: Counselor, I will tell you one more time. Look up the law. Xerox the case for me. If you are right, I will do it accordingly, all right. Okay.

MR. WILLIAMS: By that time Mr. Harkins is long off the stand.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WILLIAMS: What I am trying to do now is, I got an answer from Mr. Harkins -- with all due respect to you, sir -- and I am attempting now to impeach him. Impeach the witness with the police reports. I am entitled to do that.

MR. GRANT: While he is trying to impeach him -- if I may, Mr. Williams, so we could focus on the issue -- they are saying the Commonwealth hid Brady material that he identified someone else, or implied that he identified someone else, not the Defendant, therefore, the Defendant may be innocent. May be an innocent man.

Page 213.

Robert Harkins - Direct

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. GRANT: And that the police told him don't talk to them. He has denied both of those things, so now let's go and try the case. Let's try to impeach him about what did you really see anyway. We are not talking about photographs anymore because they lost that one. Let's just talk about the case. Which he is not here for.

MR. WILLIAMS: Let me be clear to Mr. Grant. If he wants to throw the gauntlet down, if I were allowed the latitude to question Mr. Harkins I could demonstrate to the Court that in fact his scenario, his own testimony exonerates Mr. Jamal. I say that to the Court.

THE COURT: Well, you didn't say that in your affidavit. You just said that he was --

MR. WILLIAMS: Now, if Mr. Grant wants to throw the gauntlet down (indicating), I pick up the gauntlet. I could demonstrate that Mr. Jamal's scenario is the scenario that Mr. Harkins would testify to, it would exonerate

Page 214.

Robert Harkins - Direct

him. That's what I am asking the Court: To give me the latitude to do that. I could assure the Court of that.

MR. GRANT: We don't know what Mr. Jamal's scenario is and it really doesn't matter because he is here on photographic ID and the accusation that I, and us, hid evidence from them.

MR. WILLIAMS: He is afraid that we could show innocence. We could always show innocence. Actual innocence is, as I understand it, notwithstanding any language by the United States Supreme Court, is a grounds for a new trial. I can demonstrate actual innocence through Mr. Harkins. He has already indicated that there were only two people at the scene, the shooter and Officer Faulkner.

THE COURT: Yes, but that's what he saw.

MR. WILLIAMS: Exactly. An eyewitness.

THE COURT: I know that, but everybody sees things differently.

MR. WILLIAMS: Isn't that the essence of this tribunal? That's exactly right.

Page 215.

Robert Harkins - Direct

THE COURT: Right, the fact that he only saw two people there doesn't mean that there wasn't three.

MR. WILLIAMS: That is only the first question. I want to explore that, and what I am telling the Court --

THE COURT: Your affidavit should have so stated. That is not what your affidavit said. You were calling him for a specific purpose, for which the Commonwealth is ready to answer, okay.

MR. WILLIAMS: What Your Honor is saying is -- and I appreciate the Commonwealth's fear in my questioning this witness -- what I am saying to the Court is that I could demonstrate actual innocence through this witness.

THE COURT: Counselor, you show me --

MR. WILLIAMS: The Court is barring me from doing that.

THE COURT: I will limit you to your affidavit, that's what you filed.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, let's accept that as true. Let's accept that as true.

THE COURT: Aren't we here, how does that advance the cause of justice? Plain and

Page 216.

Robert Harkins - Direct

simple. How does it?

MR. WILLIAMS: To seek justice.

THE COURT: What do you mean by justice?

MR. WILLIAMS: To insure that an innocent person is not executed.

THE COURT: How about when it is guilty.

MR. WILLIAMS: If I could demonstrate through this witness actual innocence.

THE COURT: It's already been demonstrated to a prior Jury. Counselor, justice is an emotional feeling. That's all it is. If I win my case --

All right, quiet in the room or you will be asked to leave. You are going to go out.

Justice is an emotional feeling. When I win my case, it's justice. When I lose my case, I didn't get justice, you know. So take it from there.

MR. WILLIAMS: I think there is a concept that we call truth.

THE COURT: That's right, truth. And you are bringing him in here because you have

Page 217.

Robert Harkins - Direct

accused the District Attorney's Office of doing something. Let's concentrate on that.

MR. WILLIAMS: Exactly.

THE COURT: Okay. Get to the photographs.

MR. WILLIAMS: What I am trying to demonstrate is actual innocence, which is always available --

THE COURT: You didn't say you were going to call him to show that there was actual innocence. You said you were calling him to show that the District Attorney's Office did something wrong.

MR. WILLIAMS: Okay, let me offer this to the Court. What we will then do is make a motion to amend the Petition naming Mr. Harkins as a witness that would demonstrate actual innocence. Then we could call him back in support of that allegation in our amended petition. Fair enough, Your Honor?

MR. GRANT: The amended petition, as I understand Your Honor's ruling, must be in writing. And if it is going to be in writing -- and he is already your witness, you are leading him all over the place, I haven't objected -- can't we just do this according to the rules of evidence?

Page 218.

Robert Harkins - Direct

MR. WILLIAMS: The objection is to whether I could inquire into a certain line of questioning. What I am asking is, I would like to be able to pursue that. I will use open-ended questions, if that's what they are asking.

THE COURT: I don't know what they are asking.

MR. WILLIAMS: I don't either.

MR. GRANT: I am asking if they don't have anymore questions about photographs and line-ups and us telling him don't talk to them, then he should be excused. And let's put the next witness on that satisfies anything in their filing, moving papers.

MR. WILLIAMS: Fine. What I am proposing to the Court is this: We will amend the Petition.

THE COURT: I will say to you, Counselor, you will have to do it another time. As far as I know he didn't sign that affidavit.

MR. WILLIAMS: No.

THE COURT: One of your people signed

Page 219.

Robert Harkins - Direct

it.

MR. WILLIAMS: Exactly.

THE COURT: Okay, you said you wanted to bring him in for a limited purpose. So that's what you are limited to.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, now I am saying I want to bring him in for purposes of showing actual innocence.

MR. GRANT: I object.

MR. WILLIAMS: Of course they object. Of course they don't want the actual innocence evidence to come out.

THE COURT: You will have to do that at another time.

MR. WILLIAMS: We will have to burden Mr. Harkins to come back at another time.

THE COURT: Okay, burden him.

MR. WILLIAMS: Very well.

MR. GRANT: I have no questions of Mr. Harkins.

MR. WILLIAMS: Mr. Harkins, I --

MR. WEINGLASS: This morning the Court I believe invited the defense to put on a witness of actual innocence, and we have.

THE COURT: Not necessarily. If you

Page 220.

Robert Harkins - Direct

want to amend it, have him sign some affidavit, fine.

MR. WEINGLASS: In the Petition itself before the Court we claim actual innocence.

THE COURT: I made a ruling already. You have an exception. Now, come on.

MR. WEINGLASS: We have a witness --

THE COURT: If you want to supplement your Petition, do it in the proper way, all right.

MR. WEINGLASS: It's already in our Petition: Actual innocence.

THE COURT: No, it is not. In that it says merely that somehow the District Attorney's Office did something wrong. That's the only reason he's here today.

MR. WEINGLASS: They didn't put him on the stand in the trial. They didn't.

THE COURT: So what does that mean?

MR. WEINGLASS: Maybe the closest person to the shooting. Does that say something?

THE COURT: Maybe he wasn't, maybe he wasn't.

MR. WEINGLASS: He was. If you let

Page 221.

Robert Harkins - Direct

him testify.

THE COURT: Counselor, if you want to, if you could get an affidavit from him as to what he is going to say, fine.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, we have a witness here today who was the closest person to the shooting who they didn't produce.

THE COURT: You could bring him back tomorrow. You could bring him back the next day. You could bring him back the day after that. Bring him back whenever you want, but amend your Petition. And get an affidavit from him as to what he is going to say so that the District Attorney --

MR. WEINGLASS: He won't talk to us, that is the problem. We have tried to talk to him. He will tell you on many occasions we went to his house, we went to his place of business. The witness exercised his right not to talk to us. So we can't talk to him. Only the D.A. could talk to him. And only the D.A. talked to him in '81, but they wouldn't put him on the stand. Now we have him on the stand. And we want him to tell this Court his story.

THE COURT: Okay, Counselor, I say to

Page 222.

Robert Harkins - Direct

you again: You show me in the law, give me a case that says I could compel him to testify to anything, all right.

MR. WILLIAMS: He is here ready to testify.

THE COURT: I know he is here already.

MR. WILLIAMS: We are not --

THE COURT: He is here only for one purpose. Look up the law, give me a Xerox copy of the case, Counselor. Please, I won't argue with you anymore. I have made a decision, that's it. Now give me a case on the issue, all right. Give my a case on the issue. I don't want anymore arguments as to what he is going to do, what he is not going to do.

MR. WILLIAMS: I am not here to quarrel with the Court.

THE COURT: I told you what I am saying, okay. Listen, just listen to me.

MR. WILLIAMS: I will.

THE COURT: Xerox a case and give it to me, okay.

MR. WILLIAMS: I understand that.

THE COURT: Okay, that's all I want to hear from you.

Page 223.

Robert Harkins - Direct

MR. WILLIAMS: But I want to give Your Honor a case that addresses your concerns. You want a case that says that we can show, if we can show --

THE COURT: Counselor, whatever you want to do, whatever you want to do, you give me a case that shows that you can do it. That's all. I am not going to limit it to what I want. It's what you want to do. Give me a case. Xerox the case that says you can do it, that is all I am saying.

MR. WILLIAMS: A case that says that we can put on evidence?

THE COURT: Whatever you want to do, Counselor. I can't make it any clearer to you. I am not confining you to any particular area. Xerox the case and give to it me and I will read it and if you are right you are right.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, could the witness testify subject to being struck if it turns out he is not relevant to any issue?

THE COURT: No, no, no, no, no.

MR. WEINGLASS: Frequently that is done by courts when the witness is already here.

THE COURT: Frequently, but we are not going to do that here. Give me a case that says that you can do whatever you want to do.

Page 224.

Robert Harkins - Direct

MR. WEINGLASS: This morning Your Honor implored me to bring a witness to establish innocence. You have one.

THE COURT: Counselor, I don't know what we have here.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, let's explore it.

THE COURT: No, we are not going to explore it. You are going to do it the proper way. You are going to put it in, amend your Petition, serve the D.A. with it, let them answer it if they want to answer it. In the meantime, look up your cases. You have a lawyer here in Philadelphia, let him look it up for you, okay.

All right, can the witness be excused?

MR. GRANT: I have no questions of Mr. Harkins, Your Honor. Thank you, sir.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, before Mr. Harkins leaves, just one thing: Could the Court request that the witness talk to defense Counsel?

Page 225.

Robert Harkins - Direct

THE COURT: Hey, I can't tell anybody to do anything.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am not asking you to order or direct.

THE COURT: I am not going to order him, I am not going to ask him, I am not going to do anything. That is not my prerogative. I am not here as an advocate for you or the Commonwealth or anybody.

MR. WEINGLASS: The witness is leaving.

THE COURT: It is all right if he wants to talk to you, it is all right with me.

MR. WEINGLASS: Is it all right with the Court if he wants if he talks to me?

THE COURT: Anytime. Anytime. If he wants to talk to you he can talk to you. But I am not ordering him and I am not suggesting that he --

MR. WEINGLASS: While Mr. Harkins is here: Would Mr. Harkins be willing to talk to us?

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, if I may --

MR. WEINGLASS: Again the prosecution

Page 226.

Robert Harkins - Direct

interferes.

MR. GRANT: Finish your question.

MR. WEINGLASS: Thank you. Mr. Harkins, would you be willing to talk to the lawyers in this case?

THE WITNESS: Well, mainly every time I say something you come back with something different than what I say to you, and I don't like that.

MR. WEINGLASS: We never talked.

MR. GRANT: May the record reflect what the man just said to Mr. Weinglass.

THE COURT: I think he has it.

MR. GRANT: He said every time, he said I don't mind talking to you --

THE WITNESS: If you call up the gas station.

MR. GRANT: -- and you say I said something else and I don't like that.

MR. WEINGLASS: We could meet not at your house but at a place that's convenient for you.

THE WITNESS: Can I say something? Can one of the detectives from Homicide be there when you talk to me?

Page 227.

MR. WEINGLASS: If you feel more comfortable that.

THE WITNESS: Yes, I would like Detective Welsh there.

MR. WEINGLASS: Detective Wells?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

MR. GRANT: Detective Walsh, W-A-L-S-H.

THE WITNESS: Walsh.

MR. WEINGLASS: Could we meet then -- is it best now?

THE WITNESS: I just took some medication. I worked last night and I didn't get done until eight o'clock. And I had to go to the doctor. I got home from the doctors, and I had to come down today and I'm very tired.

MR. GRANT: Would the record reflect that the highly unusual plea is from Mr. Weinglass -- nobody is interfering with him, but Detective Walsh is asked to be there -- who is charging us with crimes of criminal behavior.

MR. WEINGLASS: I am overwhelmed by the courtesy and I will be there.

THE WITNESS: A detective or police officer, anyone could be there.

Page 228.

THE COURT: Just somebody from the --

MR. WEINGLASS: What we will do is we will talk to Detective Welsh and he will talk to you about what's a good time for you, all right.

THE WITNESS: All right.

MR. WEINGLASS: Then we will all get together.

THE WITNESS: All right, Detective Welsh.

MR. WEINGLASS: Thank you.

THE COURT: Do we have anyone else for today?

MR. GRANT: I only brought in one for him, Judge, I didn't know if he wants more.

THE COURT: Who else?

(Discussion was held off the record at this time between Commonwealth and defense Counsel.)

MR. WEINGLASS: I think that exhausts...

THE COURT: Well, who are you going to bring in tomorrow, so they have a chance to...I don't want to delay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Our list.

THE COURT: I don't know on your list.

Page 229.

I know you have a whole list here but which ones are you going to bring in? You are skipping all over the list.

MR. WEINGLASS: Gary Bell.

MR. GRANT: That subpoena was quashed yesterday, Your Honor.

THE COURT: So.

MR. GRANT: And he was a witness at the first trial. And the offer of proof they made was basically retry the case through him. That is not the subject of this proceeding.

MR. WEINGLASS: Gary Bell, I beg to differ, was not quashed but the Court indicated after it heard from Officer Wakshul that it would consider Mr. Bell. Your Honor will recall.

THE COURT: I quashed it yesterday.

MR. GRANT: He did. He quashed it.

THE COURT: Sorry if you didn't remember that. Who else do you want?

MR. WEINGLASS: I can't keep up with it.

THE COURT: Well, I'm sorry.

MR. WEINGLASS: Deborah Kordansky, who we would ask the District Attorney to make available.

MR. GRANT: I will try to contact her.

THE COURT: Okay. Who else?

MR. WEINGLASS: Dessie Hightower, the defense will call.

William Thomas was the Homicide detective in charge of the investigation. We have subpoenaed him but I got a message from the Court attendant today that he wanted another subpoena for his work: He is no longer a police officer. And we are going to have to try to talk to Mr. Thomas, if the District Attorney could --

MR. GRANT: I could help you contact him but he is going to need a subpoena because he is not a police officer.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right, he needs a subpoena. We did subpoena him. And there was some question about the subpoena. Oh, he was served again.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time between Commonwealth and defense Counsel.)

MR. WEINGLASS: Okay, we don't have a problem, I'm sorry.

Page 231.

THE COURT: Will he be available tomorrow?

MR. GRANT: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Oh, okay. Who else?

MR. WEINGLASS: Mr. Hawkins. Well, we need a case to bring Mr. Hawkins back.

THE COURT: Yes. Who else?

MR. WEINGLASS: May I have just a moment?

THE COURT: Yes, sure.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time among defense Counsel.)

MR. WEINGLASS: I'm sorry. Page 2.

THE COURT: Oh, page 2.

MR. WEINGLASS: Kenney, Heftner, Hinkel, Cook.

THE COURT: Wait awhile. Wait awhile.

MR. WEINGLASS: They are in order: Kenney, Heftner, Hinkel, Cook, Dunn and Bob.

THE COURT: All of them for tomorrow?

MR. WEINGLASS: Well.

MR. GRANT: Well, Judge, first of all, what is the offer of proof, sir?

MR. WEINGLASS: They were all mentioned in Mr. Williams' direct examination of

Page 232.

Officer Wakshul. These are officers who were present at the same time, submitted to interviews, the Commonwealth has copies of all their interviews. And we wanted to call them because the Court invited it when the Court refused to allow Mr. Williams to go into that area. And so in response to the Court invitation, we subpoenaed them. They were all police officers present at the hospital.

MR. GRANT: I forgot to mention something yesterday, Your Honor, and that is the same thing they were trying to do with Mr. Harkins here today. They brought in Mr. Wakshul because their claim was that he was not allowed to go on vacation, we found out they wanted him and we whisked him away. Now, that's the only reason that man was sitting on the stand. The only reason, by the way. But they wanted to go into his statements and the times when he didn't say something, when he did say something. But the only reason he was there was because we sent him on vacation, you see.

Now they want to bring in these other officers to talk about something that had nothing to do with their claims but just to expand upon something that he said because they lose these battles and then they want to go play in another playground.

I object to these people, some of whom were witnesses at the first trial. We are not trying this case again.

THE COURT: Well, I don't want to try it again, of course. I mean at least not in this PCRA. That is not the purpose of a PCRA.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, there is another claim that Mr. Grant is ignoring. The other claim is ineffective assistance of trial Counsel. There's two prongs to that claim.

THE COURT: Well, I know that, but you had him on the stand.

MR. WILLIAMS: Had who on the stand?

THE COURT: Anthony Jackson.

MR. WILLIAMS: Yes, to establish prong number one, that is that his performance was objectively deficient.

THE COURT: But where. You had to be specific.

MR. WILLIAMS: The second prong is the prejudice prong. That is what didn't Mr. Jackson do and what effect did it have on the Page 234.

Jury.

MR. GRANT: Wrong, that is not the prong. The prong is if you didn't do something did you have a strategic or tactical reason. And I didn't ask him because this wasn't even in contemplation in your mind. Counselor, you are making it up as you go, and you know it.

THE COURT: Wait awhile. I thought they were going to bring Anthony Jackson back anyway.

MR. GRANT: I doubt that, Judge.

THE COURT: Well.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, we inquired into the whole aspect of the confession. Mr. Jackson's testimony was that he did not respond to or refute the confession, which he indisputably could have done at the time of trial. And that he had no tactical reason for doing that.

THE COURT: Did you ask him why he didn't bring in certain witnesses?

MR. WILLIAMS: We asked why didn't you refute the confession.

THE COURT: Wait. That is a general statement. Did you ask him why he didn't bring in certain witnesses? You are talking about the emergency room in a hospital: There are a lot of people there.

MR. WILLIAMS: Exactly.

THE COURT: And I am sure there was a lot of commotion there, and I am sure there was a lot of noise there.

MR. WILLIAMS: Right.

THE COURT: And I am sure there was a lot of people that heard things that other people didn't hear things.

MR. WILLIAMS: But what is remarkable is that no one heard the confession until two months later they recalled it. That's what is remarkable. Or three months later.

THE COURT: What do you mean recall it? There was a guard there that recalled it right away. She was not a part --

MR. WILLIAMS: Are you are talking about Priscilla Durham?

THE COURT: She was not part of the police.

MR. WILLIAMS: The only publicized report of her hearing the confession is in February, two days before Mr. Wakshul recalls the confession.

THE COURT: No, if you read the notes you would have found out she testified that she gave a copy of that to her supervisor.

MR. WILLIAMS: And I have never seen that exhibit.

THE COURT: Well, I'm sorry you didn't see it but you weren't here for the trial.

MR. WILLIAMS: I have looked at the exhibits, there is no statement handwritten by Miss Durham.

THE COURT: This is 13 years, 14 years later. I don't know where the statement is either.

MR. WILLIAMS: There is no statement.

THE COURT: Well, that is your statement.

MR. WILLIAMS: There is no statement.

THE COURT: That is your statement.

MR. GRANT: They didn't ask Mr. Jackson if he had a reason for not doing it.

THE COURT: That's what I am trying to say.

MR. GRANT: But I asked Mr. Jackson can you see any strategic or tactical reason why he wouldn't bring in Mr. Wakshul to refute the confession and he said certainly. And the portion that he read into the record, or I read with him was, he said he had a bad copy, was the very reason. And that was the 2-11-82 statement as to what Mr. Wakshul said as to why he wouldn't touch Mr. Jamal any further, why he went out in the hallway. That was Counsel's statement. Counsel stated that, if you believe him, he had a strategic or tactical reason. And you can't get over that hump by bringing in more evidence: You've got to deal with that. And they didn't want to deal with it, they didn't deal with it.

THE COURT: Well, you have to bring Anthony Jackson back if you want to.

MR. WILLIAMS: The redirect examination --

THE COURT: Counselor, for the time being, they are not going to be called. If you want to get around that, you call Mr. Jackson back and let's find out why he didn't call them, okay. Anything else?

MR. GRANT: Yes, Your Honor. There is a Mr. Kracoff, one of their affiants, who is in the room.

THE COURT: Who?

MR. GRANT: Mr. Kracoff from Pittsburgh, he was here this morning. If he is going to be a witness I would ask that he be --

THE COURT: You are talking --

MR. GRANT: -- sequestered. But if he is not going to be I would like them to state so on the record.

THE COURT: Where is he on the list?

MR. GRANT: He is on page 1, Your Honor. He was right after the other lawyer they wanted to make a witness.

THE COURT: What is his name?

MR. GRANT: He is the third one down, Mr. Jerry Kracoff.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor will recall a half hour ago I asked for Mr. Kracoff to be called as a witness and the Court quashed him.

THE COURT: Yes, I said he was out.

MR. WEINGLASS: He is a quashed person.

MR. GRANT: Very well. Okay. Thank you, Your Honor.

Page 239.

MR. WEINGLASS: He has joined the legions of our quashed witnesses.

THE COURT: But who else? Just those three, then, for tomorrow?

Anybody else on here that you could think of?

MR. WEINGLASS: Are we calling all the police officers?

THE COURT: No, I said no. We are not calling those police officers. That's what I said.

MR. WEINGLASS: The way this happens is Mr. Williams' questions, he is invited by the Court to call the police officers, we subpoena them, they come here and the Court quashes the subpoena.

THE COURT: Regardless of what I suggest to anybody, you have to do it properly. You have to ask Jackson why he didn't call these people. Let him tell us why, okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Anthony Jackson, I will try to respond to that invitation as well. But --

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: -- each time we do so when the witness appears we are told we can't use them.

Page 240.

THE COURT: Counselor, I am not going to tell you again: You have to first do it through Mr. Jackson. He has got to tell us why he didn't call them.

MR. GRANT: He already told us, Judge, first of all.

THE COURT: If he did he did. Get the notes, order the notes and if it's in there.

MR. WEINGLASS: That's it. I invite them to order the notes. It is the same as when they had them read back this afternoon.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: What Counsel says is not in the notes.

THE COURT: Okay. Besides that you have a lot of other names here. Are you going to call any of those other people?

MR. WEINGLASS: We would like to, in light of the testimony that was given, in light of the cross-examination of Mr. Fassnacht this morning, where Counsel asked Mr. Fassnacht a hypothetical which included struggles inside the Jefferson Hospital, we would like to call, recall witness Carol Young, who is a registered nurse who was in the emergency area, who will testify concisely to the fact that there was no struggle.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor --

MR. WEINGLASS: That Mr. Jamal was laying on the floor and there was no struggle. And so now that they have brought it up in the cross-examination of Mr. Fassnacht, we would like to renew our application that Carol Young come in here to testify as to what happened inside the Thomas Jefferson emergency room.

MR. GRANT: That's nice. That same old thing. Judge, in the trial, and I gave a hypothetical and on each point I am referring to places in the notes of testimony of witnesses who testified before that Jury. I don't give hypotheticals based on what I want to hear like Mr. Weinglass. I give it based on trial testimony, which is what the law requires. And if he wishes me to cite him to page number and volume I will do it right here in the record.

But absent that, you can't bring in some person 13 years later and say yeah, I didn't see this or I did see that. That's not the basis of a hypothetical and I object.

And this morning they were told you have to supply some law, bring me a case. Now, they don't want to do that. They haven't brought the case this afternoon, by the way, but they still didn't tell me her name because they always want to go around the back door to see if it is open or not. They always want to do that.

THE COURT: Well, maybe they ought to spend the rest of their time looking up cases, I don't know. But if you have nobody else, you just want to call those three, it's all right with me.

MR. GRANT: I am always watching the back door, Mr. Weinglass.

THE COURT: Then for tomorrow all we have is those three.

MR. GRANT: I could make some witnesses available tomorrow to them.

THE COURT: Which ones?

MR. GRANT: Dr. Hoyer I believe is one of the persons that they are claiming is incompetent and he affected the outcome of the trial. I will object. Would you like me to?

(Discussion was held off the record
at this time among defense Counsel.)

Page 243.

MR. WEINGLASS: We would prefer Mr. McGill.

MR. GRANT: Well, if we could establish those foundation area bases that the Court ordered you to produce with Mr. Hightower, Miss Kordansky and those other people, then we could deal with the issue of whether you will even get him legally.

THE COURT: Who is this Dr. John Hayes, who was he?

MR. GRANT: He is a doctor that says Dr. Hoyer is incompetent.

THE COURT: Oh.

MR. GRANT: Why don't we bring him in here. A New York doctor.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, Your Honor, Your Honor, Dr. Hayes has filed an exhibit which is an affidavit attached to the Petition in which he sets forth what he would testify about. None of it has to do with what Counsel just represented. If the other side doesn't read our Petition, and if the Court doesn't read our Petition, but misrepresentations are made here, and rulings are made on the basis of misrepresentations, it's very difficult to proceed.

Dr. Hayes is a practicing doctor, a pathologist. The assistant coroner in New York. He is available Friday morning. And he will be here Friday morning.

MR. GRANT: And he did say in his affidavit, page 2, line 6, or paragraph 6: Furthermore, I was asked to and did examine the Medical Examiner's findings respecting the cause of death of Officer Daniel Faulkner. I strongly disagreed with the medical --

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon --

MR. GRANT: -- conclusion that the gunshot wound to Officer Faulkner's back was a contributing cause of death. Given the fact that the protocol recites that the pathway of the bullets which struck Officer Faulkner's back went through soft tissue in the upper back and neck and exits in the left side of the neck without impacting or injuring regional blood vessels or nerves and causing no significant injury, it was inappropriate to list that as a contributing cause of death. I read him.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right, but that's --

Page 245.

THE COURT: What does the death certificate say he died of?

MR. GRANT: Gunshot wound, manner of death was homicide.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Counsel is misreading that.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: The cause of death listed in the Medical Examiner's report --

THE COURT: Not the Medical Examiner.

MR. WEINGLASS: -- is gunshot wound to the head and to the back. And that's where, that is past --

THE COURT: You mean he didn't die from something else?

MR. WEINGLASS: I'm positive. He did not die from a gunshot wound to the back. He would have to be in the middle of the Sahara.

THE COURT: That was only one of the injuries that he suffered.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right, but no responsible doctor would have put it that way.

THE COURT: Well, what is the difference how you put it? The man is dead and he died as a result of gunshot wounds.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, in the Medical Examiner's report, as I understand it, it has to be put accurately. And this was inaccurate. And it was inaccurate for a reason. But Counsel read only part, and the last part. It starts with furthermore --

THE COURT: Okay, you said you will have him here Friday morning, okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: We will have him here Friday to testify about matters other than what's been read.

THE COURT: Okay. All right. You are going to have him Friday. Anybody else for tomorrow? Just those three?

MR. WEINGLASS: And Mr. McGill.

THE COURT: No, he is not available. I am sure he is going to be a long time if he gets on.

MR. WEINGLASS: What does the Court mean he is not available?

THE COURT: I am talking about at the present time. You were supposed to do the foundation before you were going to put him on. Now, you haven't laid the foundation yet.

Page 247.

MR. WEINGLASS: We have laid the foundation.

THE COURT: You are premature with McGill. Now, is there anybody else that you want tomorrow?

MR. WEINGLASS: Commissioner of jurors.

THE COURT: Who?

MR. WEINGLASS: Michael McAllister.

THE COURT: I struck him off this morning. He wasn't even the Jury Commissioner at the time this occurred.

MR. WEINGLASS: It is a duces tecum subpoena. It is bringing the records of his office.

THE COURT: What records?

MR. WEINGLASS: The records indicating the way the jurors were selected.

THE COURT: Juries, they were selected from a jury panel. The voting list that we have.

MR. WEINGLASS: It is a question of whether the panel was Constitutionally selected.

THE COURT: Oh, we are not getting into that now. Please. Please.

Page 248.

MR. WEINGLASS: That's in our Petition, Your Honor. If you read it.

THE COURT: Yes, I know.

MR. WEINGLASS: It's there.

MR. GRANT: Oh, Mr. McAllister, I think why they are bringing Commissioner McAllister in is the case of Commonwealth versus Rosa. And that was a case where the Defender's Association of Philadelphia litigated a claim that jury selection which was done based on voter registration was not fairly done and there were not randomly selected panels at certain times of the year. For instance, when they would take certain people from certain districts, some are smaller than others, and at certain times of the year there is an inequitable distribution of people from different segments. Judge Arnold New decided that issue. It's a case of the Court of Common Pleas level. And he decided that even if randomness, or what Counsel calls unrandomness, if it affects jury decisions, the jurors are picked fairly throughout those available even though at times it fluctuates based on how many people are in a certain section. And therefore he found no improper jury pools impaneled. But they are bringing Mr. McAllister in as a witness in that. And after hearing his testimony and the reputation of the Defender's Association, the Judge made his finding. It has been written and recorded and they know it. And they know the claim they are making has already been decided here in this jurisdiction and they lost but they are going to try to revisit it by bringing in the Jury Commissioner and putting him up there and making him go through all this, when the precedent has been set and it's already been litigated and the rule of law already exists.

THE COURT: Can you give me a Xerox copy of that case?

MR. GRANT: I think I can: I happen to be the one that tried the case.

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: In point of fact, Commissioner McAllister could testify to the fact that the jury pool system was changed during or after the Rosa case. In fact, he changed the entire way the jurors were selected in this district. Whether it exactly came from the Rosa case or other determinations, in point of fact the way that the jury panels are structured now and drawn from is totally different from the way it was at the time Mr. Jamal was tried.

It is our contention that the way those pools were selected is in violation of Constitutional law. It is a violation.

THE COURT: Will you give me cases on that?

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: The cases are in our Petition, they are cited in our Petition.

MR. GRANT: The rules change.

THE COURT: Xerox them for me, please.

MR. GRANT: Jury selection changed because the Commonwealth asked Mr. McAllister to include drivers' licenses, and put them in the pool if you have a license. In addition to voter registration. Some people don't want to vote, they don't care about that. To include drivers' identification cards. Meaning some people don't drive but they still, the State gives them ID.

We suggested a number of things to expand the jury pool to bring more people in. And it is not because anybody sued, it is because the Commonwealth requested it, Miss Wolkenstein.

And I will bring Your Honor a copy of that case. And by the way, that was 1993, if I am not mistaken. So I don't know --

MS. WOLKENSTEIN: The testimony of that hearing, there was a stipulation between Commissioner McAllister and the people bringing the lawsuit that said that the jury pool had been selected in the same way for the prior 20 years. Which covers the period of time that Mr. Jamal was tried, and the period of time that that jury pool was selected.

MR. GRANT: And found to be Constitutional.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. WEINGLASS: May we have a ruling on Commissioner McAllister?

THE COURT: Yes, I said it's not relevant to the issue. It's already been resolved. He is going to Xerox me a case.

MR. WEINGLASS: The Court is going to wait until it receives the case?

THE COURT: He says he is going to give it to me. I am assuming he is going to give it to me.

MR. WEINGLASS: Is the Court ruling on whether or not the Commissioner could testify?

THE COURT: Yes, based on his assertions.

MR. GRANT: In order for that to have happened, Mr. Jackson would have to raise that claim to preserve it for them to tag along now and get it. And he didn't raise it. He couldn't predict future events, nor could he predict that somebody would question it and it would be found to be okay. Even the greatest lawyers don't have a crystal ball to look at. They don't have a basis to subpoena him.

THE COURT: I know that.

MR. GRANT: And that claim's been waived.

MR. WEINGLASS: Has the Court ruled?

THE COURT: Anybody else?

MR. WEINGLASS: I am unclear on the Commissioner McAllister.

THE COURT: I said for the time being he is out. Who else do you have for tomorrow, if anybody?

MR. GRANT: There are only a few witnesses left on this list, Judge. We should get through with this hearing by Tuesday.

(Pause.)

THE COURT: Is that it?

MR. WEINGLASS: That's it, Judge.

THE COURT: All right, I guess we will have to adjourn until tomorrow morning.

THE COURT OFFICER: This Court stands adjourned until 9:30 tomorrow morning.

(At 11:15 a.m. the hearing was convened in the presence of the Court and the attorneys.)

- - - - - -

THE COURT: Good morning, everyone.

MR. WEINGLASS: May it please the Court: Today is August 3rd, which means that there's two weeks, or 14 days, to August 17th, which is the date of execution under the warrant signed by the Governor. We have made earlier motions for a stay which were deferred. At this time on behalf of Mr. Jamal I renew the motion for a stay of the date of execution.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, based on the witness list submitted by the defense, this proceeding is nearly complete. I don't see why on the eve of completion Your Honor has to make a ruling that's already been held in abeyance, and that taking it under advisement has been affirmed by the Supreme Court and they ordered that had these proceedings take place. And I assume when they ordered it to take place they didn't mean to take place up until the penultimate day of conclusion, but to take place until conclusion, and thereafter they would reconsider, or Your Honor would reconsider.

And I ask you to abide by the order from the Supreme Court, and Your Honor's own dictates, and complete this evidence. I would suspect that at the latest the defense will be resting on Monday morning, and probably as soon as tomorrow. That being the case, I don't see any reason to entertain this motion at this time.

THE COURT: All right, it is still held in abeyance.

MR. WEINGLASS: I'm sorry, I didn't hear it.

THE COURT: I am still holding it in abeyance, okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: I'm sorry, Your Honor. I can only hear the air conditioner.

THE COURT: I don't know, do you want to go to the seventh floor? You will be able to hear better there.

MR. WEINGLASS: Am I being invited to the seventh floor? My Co-counsel was there yesterday.

THE COURT: They have courtrooms up

Page 5.

there.

MR. WEINGLASS: Oh, courtrooms.

THE COURT: Forget it, Mr. Weinglass. Forget it.

MR. WEINGLASS: All right.

THE COURT: My previous order still holds.

MR. WEINGLASS: But Your Honor didn't make an order, you deferred the order.

THE COURT: Well, that's what I am still deferring.

MR. WEINGLASS: But, Your Honor, there is 14 days.

THE COURT: I know. I can count.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right.

THE COURT: I went to school too, you know. I know what August 3rd is, I know what August 17th is. I have a calendar.

MR. WEINGLASS: But it's impossible for this proceeding to be completed and as the Court --

THE COURT: I don't know that. I don't know that.

MR. WEINGLASS: If the Court will please bear with me. And the Court has indicated on the record that you anticipate, no matter what your decision, that this matter will have to be reviewed, or will be reviewed.

THE COURT: That's right.

MR. WEINGLASS: By the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

THE COURT: Absolutely.

MR. WEINGLASS: And as a jurist you know full well that that review will not be completed and cannot be completed.

THE COURT: I understand.

MR. WEINGLASS: In 14 days.

THE COURT: Counselor, I understand all of that, okay. And I told you don't worry about it. I know when the 17th is coming. And if I don't know, I'm sure the Supreme Court knows.

MR. WEINGLASS: But, Your Honor, in order for --

THE COURT: Counselor, please. I have heard your argument. Please. Let's proceed with your witnesses that you have for today.

MR. WEINGLASS: I want to inform the Court of one other thing in relation to the argument.

Page 7.

THE COURT: Yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: We are this afternoon on behalf of Mr. Jamal filing a petition in the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania seeking a stay.

THE COURT: Counselor, I can't stop you from doing anything you want to do. If the Supreme Court wants to entertain it, that's up to them.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right. I want to inform --

THE COURT: I can't dictate to the Supreme Court. You do whatever you think you have to do, okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: I'm asking you not to dictate, but to assist the Supreme Court since I have to --

THE COURT: They don't need my assistance, believe me they don't. They know how to count too. Better than I do. They don't need my assistance.

MR. WEINGLASS: In order for us to apply to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, I have to make representations to that Court as to whether or not this Court has denied the stay. So I ask the Court to indicate on the record

what it's --

THE COURT: You tell them exactly what I said. I told you I was not denying the stay.

MR. WEINGLASS: And you are not granting the stay.

THE COURT: And I am not granting it. I am not denying it, I am not granting it. I am taking it under advisement, okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: Okay.

THE COURT: Let's get your next witness.

MR. WEINGLASS: I would. There are several matters that I have to put on the record and my witness is here.

Yesterday the defense received from the Court Administration three volumes of transcripts from the pre-trial proceedings in 1982. We have not had an opportunity to fully review them. We note there are matters of substance in them which we did not previously know. One of the items is that Mr. McGill on April 1st moved for an order to remove the addresses, not the names, the addresses and telephone numbers of all of the witnesses that the Commonwealth was interviewing. We did not know until yesterday afternoon at a quick glance at that volume that it was done in that manner. So as we're reviewing these transcripts of 1982, proceeding at the same time in this Court, we are now advised that another volume, of another hearing date, March 18th, 1982, will be provided to us in the middle of next week.

And so given the fact that we are proceeding in a PCRA without having the record of the trial below available, I ask this Court to continue these proceedings so that we may review the pre-trial record of the earlier trial and then after review of that record we will file an amended petition reciting facts that are contained in that record. We cannot do that as of now because we don't have the volumes. So I ask the Court to grant the continuance until we get the full set, which I'm told we'll have in the middle of next week, and then we will file an amended petition.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, to call these pages volumes is I think something like hyperbole. We know what those volumes are because you gave them those volumes about three days ago, and they consist of volumes of about four or five pages each. There is no secret that they were without the names and addresses of the witnesses, because they put it in their affidavit which they signed back in May of 1995. They are now getting copies of what they already read. It doesn't take a lot of research but because he says the names are missing, now we find out it was by Court order, and now we know it was not a discretionary, arbitrary and capricious act by the D.A., but a considered opinion by the Court who exercised discretion.

The only thing we are missing is a volume of 3-18-82. And you read to them from the transcript docket exactly what transpired on that date. It is not substantive. The Quarter Session File is the official record. It has been moved into evidence and they know precisely what it entails. I would ask Your Honor to proceed.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, please, I don't think the Court read the entire docket of March 18th.

THE COURT: Well, you could look at it. All it says is that Mr. McGill filed certain papers.

Page 11.

MR. WEINGLASS: There were a number of motions referred to.

THE COURT: I know, but he filed them. He just filed them and they made a record that he filed them. There was no hearing on it until later on.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, Your Honor wasn't the Judge. And I wasn't there.

THE COURT: I know that.

MR. WEINGLASS: And this is no way to litigate: On guesswork.

THE COURT: It is not guesswork.

MR. WEINGLASS: We should have the document.

THE COURT: How could I give you a document that doesn't exist?

MR. WEINGLASS: Exactly.

THE COURT: Well, because the Court Officer here only put in the fact that somebody filed a paper. It's like when you file a complaint, they say complaint filed.

MR. WEINGLASS: How could I protect Mr. Jamal's rights when I don't have the record?

THE COURT: You have the records, Counsel.

Page 12.

MR. WEINGLASS: I do not have March 18th and I just received the four others.

MR. GRANT: May we proceed, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes, let's proceed.

MR. WEINGLASS: I would want to point out the Court yesterday asked us to file an amended petition.

THE COURT: Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: And we will be --

THE COURT: I don't have to tell you what to do. You do whatever you think you have a right to do. Do it. Don't ask for my permission. Do whatever you want. If you think --

MR. WEINGLASS: We will be filing an amended petition but because we are involved in these proceedings, we will not be able --

THE COURT: Well, you had 10 lawyers here when you started out. Give it to one of those others. You have three or four lawyers here. Give it to one of the other lawyers.

MR. WEINGLASS: The Court is mis characterizing what's visible in the Courtroom.

Page 13.

THE COURT: Well, I can't help it if one of your attorneys is missing.

MR. WEINGLASS: There are two lawyers in the Courtroom.

THE COURT: Well, two of them are missing.

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

THE COURT: Two are missing. I don't know where they are.

MR. WEINGLASS: All right, I will tell you where they are. One is out interviewing a witness and the other one is working on research which the Court ordered yesterday afternoon, plus an amended petition which the Court invited yesterday morning. Plus a stay in the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, which we are doing while we are right here in Court with the trial lawyers.

THE COURT: Fine, but in the meantime, Counsel, in the meantime you said you were going to have three witnesses today: Kordansky, Hightower and Thomas. Let's proceed with that. Let the other lawyers do what they have to do. You do what you have to do.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, Your Honor, I'm asking for time so that we can perfect this proceeding.

THE COURT: No time. You are here now, let's proceed with these witnesses.

MR. WEINGLASS: We are not --

THE COURT: You could have plenty of time maybe later on. But right now we are all here, we're all gathered here. We didn't come here just for nothing. We came here because you told me that you were going to have three witnesses today. Let's start with those three witnesses.

MR. WEINGLASS: And the Court is denying a continuance?

THE COURT: Right, absolutely.

MR. WEINGLASS: Okay.

THE COURT: I don't know how many times I have to tell you that.

MR. WEINGLASS: One other thing I wanted to make note of. Yesterday afternoon in the midst of this hearing photographs were taken of physical evidence with the assistance of representatives of the District Attorney's Office. Those photographs will be developed and they are going to be examined by an expert probably on Monday of next week. And I am just putting the Court on notice that while we are here in Court proceeding, we are also filing amended petitions, we are also preparing petitions to the Supreme Court, we are photographing evidence. We are trying to get the photographs to experts. We do not have an opportunity to present our case in full under these circumstances.

THE COURT: Well, Kordansky, Hightower and Thomas. Let's get them on. Let's go.

MR. WEINGLASS: The Petitioner calls Dessie Hightower.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: While we are waiting for Mr. Hightower, we could use the few minutes. There is one matter, we provided Counsel and the Court with an indication that we would like to call witness Ward Churchill. And Mr. Churchill, we represent, is an expert in the area of domestic surveillance by law enforcement, particularly the working relationship between the FBI and Philadelphia Police Department. We just wanted to indicate to the Court we will be calling Mr. Churchill.

Page 16.

MR. GRANT: We have a response, Your Honor, but we will reserve it until they actually call this so-called witness.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. GRANT: Thank you.

Dessie Hightower, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

- - - - -

DIRECT EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Good morning, Mr. Hightower.

A. Good morning, gentlemen.

Q. Are you appearing here today pursuant to subpoena?

A. Yes, I am.

MR. WEINGLASS: Could the microphone...

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Mr. Hightower, what is your present occupation and employment?

A. Caterer.

Q. Are you a caterer here in the City of Philadelphia?

Page 17.

A. Yes, I am.

Q. Drawing your attention back to the end of the month of June 1982: Do you recall appearing as a witness in the trial of Commonwealth versus Jamal?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Were you called by the District Attorney's Office or were you called by the defense in that case?

A. Defense.

Q. And you did take the stand, did you not, and testify?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Do you recall who it was who asked you the questions initially?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And who questioned you in the Courtroom initially?

A. Tony Jackson.

Q. Do you need a glass of water?

A. No, I'm fine.

Q. Did you meet with Mr. Jackson before you took the stand to testify?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Now, prior to giving testimony in Court, were you interviewed by representatives of the police department?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall on how many occasions?

A. Two or three times.

Q. Were you also interviewed by an investigator for the defense?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And was his name Robert Greer?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. And to your knowledge, did he tape record you?

A. I believe so but I can't actually remember. I believe so, yeah.

Q. Now directing your attention to your first interview with the police: Was that on the night of the shooting, December 9th.

A. That morning, yes.

Q. That morning?

A. It was the a.m.

Q. And do you recall where that occurred?

A. Ahh, I don't know what's... I'm, ahh, I'm not quite sure.

Q. That night when you were interviewed, or early morning when you were interviewed by the police, did you indicate to them that you saw someone run away after the shooting?

Page 19.

Dessie Hightower - Direct

A. Ahh, let me make this clear. When I was interviewed by I believe it was a detective that evening, that morning, I'm not quite sure, I told him that I did see someone fleeing, ahh, that area before any officers arrived on the scene. I seen someone fleeing towards I believe 12th and Locust area.

Q. And were you then interviewed by detectives a second time?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. And was that approximately one week later?

A. Yeah, approximately, yeah, one week from the incident itself, yes.

MR. WEINGLASS: May I have this document marked next in order for identification.

THE COURT OFFICER: D-16.

(Investigative report was marked Defense Exhibit D-l6 for identification.)

THE COURT OFFICER: D-l6 (handing).

MR. WEINGLASS: Could the witness be shown what's been marked --

THE COURT: Just a minute, he is looking at it.

MR. WEINGLASS: Oh, I'm sorry.

(Pause.)

Page 20.

Dessie Hightower - Direct

MR. GRANT: Thank you, Your Honor. Thank you.

THE COURT OFFICER: D-16, sir. D-16,sir (handing).

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Now, Mr. Hightower, that second interview by the detectives... Do you know what time of day that started? Let me strike that.

Do you know what day it was that you were interviewed a second time?

A. 12-15.

Q. Are you referring to the document that's been marked?

A. Yes, I am.

Q. D-16?

A. Yes.

Q. Does that help your recollection on what day it was?

A. Yes, now it does, yes.

Q. So it was December 15th, about a week later?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And does that, referring you to the front page of that document, does it indicate what time that interview began?

A. Yes. 4:00 p.m.

Page 21.

Dessie Hightower - Direct

Q. 4:00 p.m?

A. Yes.

Q. Now I refer you to the last page of D-16. Does that indicate what time the interview ended?

A. This is 12-15-81, right?

Q. Yes.

A. Okay, 9:40 p.m.

Q. 9:40 p.m?

A. 9:40 p.m.

Q. Does that mean that you were interviewed on that occasion for five hours and 40 minutes?

MR. GRANT: If the Court pleases, Your Honor, what purports to be D-16, a statement, is actually a composite of at least two statements, for Counsel's benefit. So there were two different interviews at least.

MR. WEINGLASS: Right, thank you.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Let me ask you this. Do you remember how long you were interviewed on December 15th? Do you remember that now?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Approximately how long?

A. 5 hours. 5 hours and 40 minutes.

Q. Now, on that occasion were you asked again

Page 22.

Dessie Hightower - Direct

what you saw on the night in question?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Did you indicate on that occasion that you saw someone flee the scene after the shooting?

A. Directly after the shooting?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, I did.

Q. So you told the detectives on the night of the occurrence and a week later essentially the same thing?

A. It was exact same thing, sir.

Q. Did you indicate on those occasions whether you saw this person flee before or after the police arrived?

A. Is states in the interview record here that I stated to the officers that I seen someone flee before the officers came on the scene.

Q. Do you know where this second interview took place?

A. I was at a precinct, I don't know exactly where, though.

Q. It wasn't at the Roundhouse where --

A. I don't believe so, no.

Q. Were you interviewed the first time at the Roundhouse?

Page 23.

Dessie Hightower - Direct

A. It's been almost 14 years ago, I don't know. I'm not sure. But I do believe so.

Q. Did you describe the person who you claimed you saw fleeing?

A. To the best of my ability I described the male. It was a male approximately six-foot, what I seen -- again this is 14 years ago -- with a red-and-black sweater on, fleeing towards 12th and Locust. Past a hotel that was there then, I don't know if it's there now or not.

Q. Now, what happened -- strike that. Did anything happen in that second interview after you indicated to the detective that you saw someone flee?

A. I don't understand you.

Q. All right. Did the detective make any suggestion to you after you told him you saw someone flee in that second interview?

A. I can't remember him making a suggestion to me.

Q. Did there come a point in time when you were asked to take any kind of a test?

A. During the second interview?

Q. Yes.

A. I took a polygraph test. That's the only

Page 24.

Dessie Hightower - Direct

test. It wasn't a written test, it was a polygraph test. Is that what you are saying?

Q. Yes. Is that what it was?

A. That's what I took.

Q. Now, would you describe for the Court what you mean when you say a polygraph test?

A. Well, it is a machine, I take it, that gauges whether or not you're telling the truth or you're not telling the truth.

Q. Did you see the machine?

A. It was applied to me, yes, I did.

Q. And did you see what the machine was doing?

A. Umm, I seen the needle on the paper, I seen it moving, so...

Q. Was there anything attached to your body at that time?

A. Whatever the apparatus is that they put on you when the machine is working, that was applied to me. I haven't had one done since then so I can't, I don't know was it a wire or some type of apparatus was applied to my arms.

Q. To your arms?

A. Yes, sir, arm area (indicating).

Q. And were you asked questions?

A. Yes.

Page 25.

Dessie Hightower - Direct

Q. Do you remember any of the questions that you were asked while the wires were attached to you and you saw the machine?

A. Not in detail. You mean --

Q. Well, were you asked if you saw someone run away?

A. I was asked several questions. Ahh... ahh, I was asked that question. I was asked whether or not Mr. Jamal was the actual shooter. I was asked was this someone fleeing the scene. And I was asked several other questions but I said I can't remember all of them right now.

Q. But there were several questions?

A. Yes, there were.

Q. Now, later on were you interviewed by, you indicated, Mr. Greer, the investigator?

A. Yeah, Robert Greer, I believe his name was.

Q. And you said you were -- by the way, does May 3rd as the date of this interview ring any bells for you?

A. Ahh, I believe that was several days before I had to -- before I came to Court, so it doesn't ring a bell. But it was in the springtime.

Q. Now, had you previously told anyone in the District Attorney's Office that you didn't want to talk to Mr. Jackson?

Page 26.

Dessie Hightower - Direct

A. I don't remember telling anybody at the D.A.'s Office that. I had a problem with Mr. Jackson. I believe he was to meet with me and he never showed up. So I got a little ticked off about that and I didn't want to meet with him.

Q. You didn't want to meet with him?

A. No, that's how I came to be interviewed by investigator Greer.

Q. Okay. You told Mr. Greer that?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. But you were willing to meet with Mr. Greer?

A. Yes, and I did.

Q. And after that you never met with Mr. Jackson again?

A. No, I haven't. No, I didn't, rather.

Q. And you came in here to testify without having met with Mr. Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. He never tried to get in touch with you to your knowledge?

A. No.

MR. GRANT: Objection, move to strike that. It calls for speculation. He doesn't know.

Page 27.

Dessie Hightower - Direct

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, he knows he never got in touch with somebody.

MR. GRANT: Well, trying to get in touch with somebody is not anything he could testify to.

THE COURT: Are you withdrawing that question?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Did he ever get in touch with you?

A. No.

Q. Incidentally, when you took what you described as the polygraph test, did the detectives indicate to you the results of that test?

A. Ahh, I believe they did. I had passed the test.

MR. WEINGLASS: Thank you, Mr. Hightower.

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, just so the record is clear: The reason Mr. Hightower is on the stand, as I understand it from the supporting papers of their Petition, is because there is an allegation that the Commonwealth suppressed evidence that was discoverable under Rule 305 of the Pennsylvania Rules of Criminal

Page 28.

Dessie Hightower - Cross

Procedure. That being that the defense is entitled to polygraph information. Unless the defendant is the person polygraphed, under Rule 305 there is no such right. And we have turned over all three documents arising from it. Nevertheless, because they wish to complete these proceedings, we are not waiving our right to say that this is total surplusage. And under those circumstances, I will be cross-examining Mr. Hightower.

THE COURT: Okay.

- - - - -

CROSS-EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Good morning, sir.

A. Good morning.

Q. Now, Mr. Hightower, you said when Mr. Weinglass asked you just a moment ago whether the detectives told you the results of the test, you said --

A. No, I said I passed, me. I don't know what that meant.

Q. You said, I believe they did, I passed.

A. That's what I said, yes.

Page 29.

Dessie Hightower - Cross

Q. Now, you believe they told you the results?

A. Well, again, this is 14 years ago. I'm pretty sure they did.

Q. And you just confirmed that you passed, you said it again pursuant to my question, right?

A. Yes.

Q. And you signed an affidavit and swore to it --

A. It was just the same. Would you show that to me, please?

Q. No, it is a different thing.

A. Thank you.

Q. An affidavit is a document --

A. Could you show it to me, please?

MR. GRANT: Yes, sir. May I approach, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes, sure.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. (Handing) Referring to the Petition for Post-Conviction Relief, exhibit number 5, affidavit of Dessie Hightower. This page and that last page.

Start at page 4, paragraph number 4, sir, would you please read so that this gentleman can type down what it says?

A. Read from?

Q. Paragraph 4. Back to where you started at the bottom of the page. And read into the microphone so I could hear you.

A. Okay. During one of the police interviews after I told them that I saw someone, black male about five-eleven to six-foot with long hair, possibly dreadlocks, run from the scene and -- should I complete this page?

Q. Yes.

A. Past the hotel on Locust after the shooting, they asked if I would, then they asked if I would take a polygraph test of the observation. I agreed. A test was administered and I was told that I passed. Is that what you want me --

Q. Yes, sir. And you signed that? Could I have that, please?

THE WITNESS: (Handing).

THE COURT OFFICER: (Handing).

THE WITNESS: That is my statement there, yes, it is.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. You swore to somebody that was true, right?

A. At that point in time? I can't remember.

Q. What do you mean?

A. When you say did I swear that to somebody that was true, at that point in time?

Page 31.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. If that was during the trial, yes, I did. But if that wasn't during the trial, I can not remember whether I --

Q. Okay, I appreciate that.

A. Okay, thank you.

Q. Mr. Hightower, I know this is going back 13 years.

A. Yes.

Q. And back then you were a young man?

A. Well, hopefully I think I still am somewhat young.

Q. I understand that. But when you signed this it was less than 90 days ago?

A. Is that now? Or is that back in '81?

Q. You never saw this before, did you?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. When did you see it?

A. Are you -- is that the affidavit that the defense had given me, sir, is that what you are asking me?

Q. Well, you read it, you tell me?

A. Yes, that is what I said to him. They was talking about that was the attorney Weinglass had given to it me, yes.

Page 32.

Q. And that was on May --

A. Okay.

Q. On May 17th -- May 10th of this year?

A. Yes.

Q. And you said if it --

A. I was confused, okay. Thank you. Just clear --

Q. This man could only type down one of us talking at a time.

A. Okay.

Q. When I start talking, you listen; when you start talking, I'll listen.

A. Thank you.

Q. Okay? Now, you said if those words were what I said at the trial, it was true, and if it's not, I'm not sure. What do you mean by that?

A. Obviously, I was confused with the dates. No, I did make that statement and I did sign the affidavit, yes.

Q. And you swore it was true?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And you swore it was true because you know it's true, not because you think it's true?

A. Because I know it's true.

Q. Would you like to reconsider that before I go any further?

A. No, I wouldn't, no.

MR. GRANT: Could we have Detective Thomas and Officer Sterling come into the room, please.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. While they are doing that, sir.

A. Okay.

Q. Do you recall testifying at the trial when you testified on behalf of Mr. Jamal here that at some point you told the detectives you didn't know if the person you saw running was a male or female?

A. Ahh, I do believe I said it was a -- to me what I observed at that point in time, it looked to be a black, to be a black male by the size and the build.

Q. Yes, sir. My question was, do you recall testifying at trial that you had told the detectives investigating this case and interviewing you that at some point you had stated to one of these investigators that you didn't really know if it was a male or female?

A. The only way I possibly could have said that is because of the hair.

Q. Well, did you say it or did you not say it?

Page 34.

A. I can't remember.

MR. GRANT: Please step up and identify yourself for the record.

MR. THOMAS: William E. Thomas, Detective, 744, retired.

LIEUTENANT STERLING: Lieutenant Craig Sterling, Philadelphia Police Department, Badge number 330.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Mr. Hightower, I would like you first to look at the gentleman here who says his name is Mr. William Thomas (indicating), retired detective. Do you recognize this person?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Never have seen him before in your life?

A. I don't recognize him.

Q. This person here, Officer Craig Sterling: Have you ever seen him before?

A. Faintly remember but I can't say I do.

Q. And as to this faint recollection, where do you faintly recall seeing his face?

A. Ahh, possibly one of the detectives that interviewed me, I believe.

Q. Oh. Which interview was that?

A. Sir, I don't know if it was the first or second interview.

Q. And was he the person asking you the questions?

A. I don't know. I really can't answer that. Maybe he asked me some questions, maybe the other gentleman did. If he did interview me. I can't say yes, I can't say no.

Q. And perhaps both of them asked you questions, right?

A. Yes, perhaps.

Q. And would it refresh your recollection if I said maybe this gentleman -- Mr. Sterling -- is the one that attached those instruments to your body and gave you the polygraph?

A. No, that wouldn't refresh my recollection.

MR. GRANT: Thank you, gentlemen.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Now, when I said to you did you ever tell the detective, did you ever testify whether or not this person you saw was either a man or a woman and you said it's possible, did you or didn't you?

A. Yes, that is in the, in the transcript, sir. Can you show me where I said that at, please?

Q. Yes, sir. I will refer your attention, and Counsels', to June 28th, 1982, page 28.148. I will read it to you and then I will give it to you.

A. Thank you.

Q. This is Mr. McGill, he is the Assistant D.A., he was cross-examining you.

A. Yes.

Q. Meaning that after Mr. Jackson had talked to you, the D.A. got up and asked you some questions?

A. Okay.

Q. Beginning at page 147 he said, question: Now, Mr. Hightower, when you came back, when you heard the shots, you were still covered, were you not, from the wall in the parking lot where all the shots were fired.

Do you understand what he is saying at that point?

A. Yes, I understand.

Q. He is saying you are behind the wall, you are afraid to look out because you hear shots?

A. Yes.

Q. And you say oh, yes. Question: You were not outside at all. Meaning beyond the wall?

A. Okay, yes.

Q. You say no. Question: As a matter of fact, in one of your statements you said, and you were understandably quieted -- I think it means you were understandably quoted -- as saying -- and this is your last statement to Counsel -- I wasn't going to peek my head around the corner, not knowing where the shots were coming from, I didn't want to catch a stray bullet. Isn't that something that you said.

And do you recall that?

A. The shots.

Q. And you answered yes, yes. This is what I want you to focus on.

A. Okay.

Q. Now, in reference to this individual you say you saw running, the one I believe you said that you were unsure -- and he stops and says and correct me if I am wrong -- your testimony was you were unsure whether or not that was a male, or it could even be a female, that's what you said.

Answer: Yes.

Question: All you saw was the back of the head, right.

Answer: Yes. And a sweater.

Would you like to see this?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you like to see this?

A. No, that's clear.

Q. Okay. So you did indicate that, you did tell the police you didn't know whether it was a man or a woman?

A. I think I -- okay, if that's what the testimony said, that's what I said, yes.

Q. And you would agree that your recollection of the events of that night of December the 9th, 1981 were much clearer six months later than it is 13 years later; would you agree with that?

A. Yes, I would.

Q. Now, you said that Mr. Jackson and you didn't have a... a very good relationship because he stood you up on an occasion for a meeting, right?

A. To the best of my recollection, yes. Yes.

Q. And you don't know whether he had a pressing engagement in court?

A. No, I, no, I don't.

Q. You don't know whether he went to the hospital?

A. Well, whatever the situation was, I didn't meet with him.

Q. And you didn't know whether he was with Mr. Jamal attempting to assist him in his case?

A. Whatever the situation was, I didn't meet with him.

Q. I see. But you did meet with his investigator, right?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. And you told his investigator that you didn't want to meet with Anthony Jackson, right?

A. I just said that talking, what you just said. But, yes, it came across that way: I would prefer not to meet with him.

Q. Okay. And when you dealt with the Police Department, Mr. Hightower, did they treat you in a professional and courteous manner?

A. For the most part.

Q. And they respected you as a man and didn't try to change anything you said, did they?

A. No, they didn't try to change any of my statements.

Q. And did they ever tell you I don't want you to cooperate with Mr. Jackson or anybody that works for Mr. Jamal in this case?

A. No, that wasn't stated to me at all.

Q. And were you trying to hide from Mr. Jackson's investigator or did you meet him when he contacted you?

A. I met him when he contacted me.

Q. So there was no problem between you and Mr. Greer, who was the investigator, a tall black man?

A. Yeah, I remember vaguely, a very big guy.

Q. Yes. And he treated you with respect, did he not?

A. Ahh, yes.

Q. And he took an interview from you?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. And your recollection is, although it's been 13 years, you think he tape recorded you, right?

A. Yeah, but I'm not quite sure. I am not quite sure that he did.

Q. In any event, before you took the stand to testify for Mr. Jamal, whether it was tape recorded or otherwise, it was reduced to writing in some form and they gave it to you to read so that you could remember what you said -- look at me when I'm talking. Don't look at Mr. Weinglass.

A. I'm not looking in that direction.

Q. Okay, let me stand over here for you.

A. Okay, that's no problem.

Q. You did look at the statements that you gave to Mr. Greer in preparation to testify, right?

A. Yes, I did.

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection: It's confusing. It is unclear whether it was back

Page 41.

Dessie Hightower - Cross

then or now.

MR. GRANT: I am going to unconfuse him right now.

THE COURT: They are interviewing him now?

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

THE COURT: Is Greer interviewing him now?

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor didn't hear the question. The question was did you look at the statement.

THE COURT: Before he testified at the time of the trial?

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, that clarifies it if that's the question. But at the time of the trial wasn't part of the question.

MR. GRANT: May I approach, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes, sure.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. I am going to show you, Mr. Hightower, what purports to be a statement taken from you by Mr. Greer on May 3rd, 1982, and I want you just to flip through the pages, take your time and see if that is in fact the interview that you recall having given him?

Page 42.

Dessie Hightower - Cross

You could just go back until it stops, it's about seven pages. Take your time, sir.

(Pause.)

A. All right. Thank you.

Q. I know this is stressful.

A. Okay.

Q. Just relax.

(Pause.)

MR. WEINGLASS: The record should reflect that we have just been handed a confirmation of what we alleged in the Petition and what the witness has testified to: The results of a polygraph test that was administered to this witness on December 15th --

THE COURT: Well, Counselor, could you leave that for later on. Let's finish with the cross-examination.

MR. WEINGLASS: I just --

THE COURT: We will take that up later on.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor --

THE COURT: Not in front of the witness. If you want to see me back here I will talk to you.

Page 43.

Dessie Hightower - Cross

MR. WEINGLASS: He is about to be shown it by Counsel.

MR. GRANT: No, he is not, but he will be soon.

I did, in fact, hand him a copy. At this stage he is not entitled to it, actually, at all but I am out of courtesy.

MR. WEINGLASS: It wasn't included in the Response to the Petition where we alleged this.

THE COURT: Okay, all right.

MR. WEINGLASS: When they should have informed us.

THE COURT: Okay, Counselor.

MR. GRANT: By the way, Your Honor, our Response in discovery was not that we didn't have it, but that we have no such document where he passed a polygraph. And that's what they alleged.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Do you recognize that, sir?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Is that the statement that you gave Mr. Greer?

A. Well, not really verbatim. Yes, it looks to be.

Page 44.

Dessie Hightower - Cross

Q. You say you don't know if it's verbatim?

A. I said I didn't read it verbatim, it looks to be.

Q. Okay, it looks to be. If there is any confusion as to any part I am talking about, I will give it back to you.

A. Thank you.

Q. You're welcome. While I'm here, so we are together --

A. This was back in '82? Right?

Q. Yes, May 3rd, '82.

A. Okay. I am keeping my dates straight.

Q. Okay.

A. Thank you.

Q. I am not going to try to confuse you on these dates.

MR. GRANT: I am here because he may want to have recourse to this (displaying).

THE COURT: Okay.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Question by Mr. Greer: Mr. Hightower, I don't have your statement with me but I have read it. How many times were you questioned by the police.

And you say three times, right? I am right here.

Page 45.

Dessie Hightower - Cross

A. Okay, if it says that.

Q. Okay (indicating)? Did you ever tell the D.A. that you did not want to talk to me or anyone else connected with this case.

Answer: I told them I didn't want to give a statement to Mr. Jackson, his attorney. I didn't say I wouldn't talk to an investigator or anything like that.

Now, you understand I am working for his attorney.

A. Say again.

Q. I am working for Mr. Jamal and his attorney. You said yes, you told me that over the phone. I decided that what I told them I can tell you.

Meaning what you told the police, you feel like it is okay to tell this investigator?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And he says to begin, you were going to Whispers. Did you see the police car during the time you were trying to get into Whispers.

And they are talking about Officer Faulkner's police car, the officer that was slain that night.

A. I understand.

Page 46.

Dessie Hightower - Cross

Q. And you said, I seen him pull up and I seen him get out of the car and walk to the passenger side. I was looking out the side of my eye, I really didn't pay any attention, it probably was a routine thing. I was walking back, you know, where the wall is. Walking back towards the car. I heard the shots go off. Maybe three or four, probably two or three seconds in between. I walked back and peeped from behind the wall. I couldn't see anything. I didn't hear anymore shots going off, okay. So I walked towards Whispers, and by then it was flooded with other police officers. I saw somebody running past the hotel.

A. Oh, may I --

Q. Yes.

A. -- say something?

Q. Yes.

A. When I gave that statement to investigator Greer, the part where I seen someone running from the scene, that was prior to the, umm, backup or whatever, the police that came. When I actually seen someone running from that scene, that was prior to the arrival of the additional officers. I want to clarify that, sir.

Q. And you told Mr. Weinglass that, I understand that.

A. Well, I'm telling you so you also know that. Because the way it was tooken down, it wasn't in sequence, that's what I'm saying to you.

Q. Well, are you saying that Mr. Greer got it backwards?

A. Yes. That's what I am saying to you.

Q. Well, could it be that you said it backwards instead of him writing it down backwards, or tape recording it backwards?

A. I'm clarifying that now, if I can actually do that, okay.

Q. You can do that.

A. Okay. Thank you.

Q. You say, and by then it was flooded with other police officers. I saw somebody running past the hotel. I don't know if they were running because of the gunshots or what.

A. Hmm-hmm.

Q. Now, you said I don't know if they were running?

A. That person. It wasn't multiple, it was single. It was just one person.

Q. And at that time, Mr. Hightower, you were just a nice guy who saw something and you wanted to cooperate with the police and tell them what happened, you wanted to cooperate with the police, tell them honestly what you knew, and that's all that was going on here; correct?

A. At that time that's what I seen, yes.

Q. Yes. And you really have not really changed that no matter how many times you have been interviewed, have you?

A. I believe I have been consistent.

Q. Hmm?

A. I believe I've been consistent.

Q. Yes. Now, you said that you were given a polygraph. At any time did anyone tell you why they wanted to give you a polygraph, sir?

A. Again, we are going back 14 years ago. You are asking me something I really can't answer honestly.

Q. But you can honestly answer that you in fact were given one?

A. Yes, I could honestly answer that.

Q. And you could in fact honestly answer you passed one?

A. I could honestly answer that, but I can't say who explained to me why they are giving it to me or what was the reasons. No.

Page 49.

Q. Okay. Now, this occurred about a week after you gave your first statement?

A. (Witness shrugged shoulders.)

Q. Is that a yes or --

A. Yes.

Q. Is your middle name Delmar?

A. Yes.

Q. At that time did you live at 5452 Arlington Street?

A. Yes, yes.

Q. And at that time you were unemployed, were you not?

A. I believe so.

Q. And this wasn't your first experience back in 1981 taking a polygraph examination, was it?

A. No, I think I took one prior to that for a job.

Q. And after you took the polygraph examination, then the person --

A. Are you saying for this case or for the job?

Q. I am not going to talk about that job interview anymore.

A. Okay.

Q. Everything I am going to talk about is about this case.

Page 50.

A. All right, thank you.

Q. The person that gave you the polygraph examination was different than the person that was asking you the questions that were reduced to writing in your police interviews, were they not, two different people?

A. You, you are kind of mixing me up here.

Q. Okay. The person that first interviewed you and took down --

A. I believe so. What you are saying now, I believe so.

Q. You believe there were two different people involved?

A. I believe.

Q. After the first person interviewed you he took you to another person in a different place where they had a polygraph machine; correct?

A. Now are you talking about the same day or two different, the first interview or second interview?

Q. Okay. They only polygraphed you once?

A. Right.

Q. And they only polygraphed you on the day when you were there for five hours, as you say?

A. If that's what the documents say, sir.

Q. Right?

Page 51.

A. Right.

Q. And that was the second time you were there, not the first time?

A. Yes, okay.

Q. Don't try to confuse me.

A. Don't try to confuse you? Okay.

Q. You were there, you were interviewed by the detective?

A. Yes.

Q. You then were taken to a room where this machine was standing there lurking in your face, right?

A. Oh... yes, if you want to put it that way, yes.

Q. All right. And at that point in time the man affixed these various wires and gadgets to you, cuffs on your arms, and things on your pinkie and fingers and what not, and the needle started moving around and all that?

A. Yes.

Q. And while he had those things on you he asked you some questions, didn't he, just to see what it's like, what your body acts like when you are not telling the truth and you know it; didn't that happen?

Page 52.

A. My body -- no, you really got me confused now --

Q. Test questions?

A. I don't, I don't know. Maybe he did, I don't know.

Q. Let me see if I could refresh your recollection.

A. Okay, thank you.

Q. He asked you if you lived in the United States, and did you personally tell Ralph Baldwin you saw Police Officer Faulkner killed. And he described this person to you, Ralph Baldwin, as a six-foot-ten-and-three-quarter-inch --

A. Six-foot-ten?

Q. Yes, sir. Now listen to me.

A. Okay.

Q. Six-foot-ten-and-three-quarter inches, 175 pounds, and I believe that he said his hair was black with a white streak in it.

A. Oh, these are test questions, sir?

Q. Yes, sir. Do you remember that?

A. Again, I can't say that I do.

Q. Okay.

A. But.

Q. It's all right.

A. Yeah.

Page 53.

Dessie Hightower - Cross

MR. GRANT: I would like marked as Commonwealth's Exhibits 10, 11, 12, 13 and 14 -- I believe that would be next in order.

THE COURT OFFICER: 11 is next.

MR. GRANT: Okay, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15. Previously submitted to Counsel for the Defendant.

(Set of polygraph examination documents were marked Commonwealth Exhibits C-11, C-12, C-13, C-l4 and C-l5 for identification.)

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. I am going to show you some papers, Mr. Hightower.

A. Okay.

Q. I am going to ask you when he shows them to you if you recognize your signature?

A. Yes.

THE COURT OFFICER: Excuse me. C-15, Your Honor, starting with C-l1 (handing).

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. You could look at all of them.

A. I see it.

Q. One is a document Mr. Weinglass has already shown you. Look them over, don't say anything, just look them over.

Page 54.

Dessie Hightower - Cross

A. Should I read the whole thing or just look for my signature?

Q. No, you could look at everything because I am going to ask you some questions about those documents.

A. Okay, could you give me a minute, please?

Q. Pardon?

A. Could you give me a minute, please?

Q. I could give you an hour, don't worry it, just take your time.

A. Okay.

(Pause.)

THE WITNESS: (Indicating).

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Are you ready, sir?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay, do you recognize from having looked at it now, does that refresh your recollection?

A. Yes.

Q. As to the event that we are talking about?

A. Yeah.

Q. It is coming back to you because you recognize some words?

A. Some of the wording, yes.

Page 55.

Dessie Hightower - Cross

Q. Yes. As a matter of fact, at that time you had at least a year of college under your belt, didn't you?

A. Two.

Q. Two, okay. Now, one document I would like you to look for there -- you could spread them out.

A. Okay, just tell me, I could pull it.

Q. Okay. It says polygraph examination agreement?

A. That's C-15?

Q. I don't have the number, that's why I am asking you to spread them out.

A. Yes, the agreement, yes (displaying).

Q. What does that say, sir?

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, I am going to object. This is all hearsay. Detective Sterling is here, and if are we are going to have polygraph results introduced, I think it has to be introduced through the detective who took the test, not by asking the witness whether he believed the detective did right or wrong.

So I think it's improper to be asking the witness these questions. First, without laying a foundation; and secondly, without calling the officer who took the test to describe what he did.

Page 56.

Dessie Hightower - Cross

MR. GRANT: I agree 100 percent. And in order to verify and authenticate that these are his, I have to ask him is this your signature, did he ask you the questions. Kind of a foundation.

THE COURT: Go ahead.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Would you read into the record -- by the way, on that document that says polygraph examination agreement, is that your handwriting on that document in two places?

A. You asked about my signature?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. That is my signature.

Q. Yes, it is. Read what it says into the record?

A. I hereby voluntarily and willingly submit --

Q. No, no, no, you have to speak out. You have to slowly say it.

A. I do hereby voluntarily and willingly submit to a lie detector examination in order to show that possible truth or honesty of my statements. And I hereby release from the Police Department and examiner Detective Sterling, I guess it is his badge number, 845.

Page 57.

Dessie Hightower - Cross

Q. What it really says: I, Dessie Hightower, do hereby voluntarily and willingly submit to a lie detector examination in order to show if possible the truth and honesty of my statements. And I hereby release the Philadelphia Police Department and the examiner C. Sterling -- that was the person I showed you, the white male, a moment ago.

A. Well, you just read it for me: I don't have to read it then, right?

Q. Well, yes, that's right, I am reading it for you because you didn't finish reading it.

A. Oh, okay.

Q. From any and all claims resulting from or arising out of this examination.

And then you sign it again, put your address and the date 12-15-

81, right?

A. (Witness nodded head affirmatively.)

Q. Then the examiner starts asking you some questions just to see?

A. Are we going to another document now?

Q. Yes, we are going to another document. It consists of two pages.

A. Okay.

Q. Strike that. Take the long one out

Page 58.

(displaying).

A. Just keep me abreast when you go to another document, thank you.

Q. You're right. I'm sorry.

A. Okay.

Q. The next document, what number is that document up at the top?

A. That's C-12.

Q. Okay, I will write them on mine so I know. Okay, that's C-12. That gives your date of birth as 10-19-59, says you were 22 at that time, right?

A. Ahh, yes, it does.

Q. So we know that's you, right?

A. This is me.

Q. Okay. And he asked you a bunch of background information to make sure you are not sick or on drugs or using alcohol, because those kind of things affect the machine, did he tell you that?

A. Ahh, yes, I guess.

Q. Okay. And then he said at the bottom, he said this test concerns the shooting death of Police Officer Daniel Faulkner, 26-year-old white male, which occurred on 12-9-81 at about 3:55 a.m, 1200 block of Locust Street.

A. It says the shooting death of --

Page 59.

Q. Yes.

A. -- Officer Faulkner.

Q. Yes, the shooting death of Officer --

A. Which occurred on 12-9-81 at about 3:55 a.m.

Q. Okay? Now, as a result of him telling you that he then asked you a question and then he asked you to give him an answer.

And tell me if I'm wrong: Before he started giving you the test he said I'm going to give you all the questions that I'm going to ask you in this test, before you even take the test?

A. I can't remember that, sir.

Q. Okay. Read the question that he wrote down that he asked and what answer he said you gave?

A. You are asking me to read it again?

Q. Yes, slowly and loudly, please.

A. You seem to do it better than me. Could you?

Q. Do you want me too?

A. Yeah, I would prefer it.

Q. All right.

A. Thank you.

Q. Question: What can you tell me about the shooting of Police Officer Faulkner.

Answer: I didn't see any shooting, but I heard three shots close together, then two later. I got to 13th and Locust Streets and I saw the first car pull up and then there were police all over. And the -- I think that's supposed to mean they -- they got the suspect -- and you have in parenthesis Jamal -- and his brother, and they put the officer and Jamal into separate wagons. They asked me if I could identify Jamal as shooting the cop and I told them no.

Now, this is a week after the killing: 12-15-81? It says so up at the top, right-hand corner, right?

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. Now, at that time you knew Mr. Jamal's name?

A. Say that again, please.

Q. At that time you knew Mr. Jamal by name?

A. Yes -- yes.

Q. And you knew his brother?

A. No, I did not know his brother. I guess because of the media reports and things of that nature.

Q. But you didn't rely on the radio reports to know Mr. Jamal's name, did you?

A. I don't know where you are going with that. I don't understand.

Q. You don't have to, just answer it.

Page 61.

A. I don't understand.

Q. You knew Mr. Jamal's name before you had to read the paper and the radio, right?

A. I had knew his name?

Q. Yes.

A. Umm... I knew his name.

Q. And you knew his face?

A. No, I can't say I knew his face. I knew his name.

Q. Where did you first meet him?

A. When did I first meet Mr. Jamal?

Q. Yes.

A. Ahh, it's been, it was I guess maybe four or five years prior to that. I believe he was a reporter for WDAS at that time. And I was president of the Philadelphia Student Union. And he interviewed me in the park or at the station briefly in reference to the Student Union.

Q. Was he wearing dreadlocks when he interviewed you?

A. I don't remember.

Q. And you didn't recognize this same person that talked face-to-face with you?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Okay. And you knew once you read the papers that this was the same guy that interviewed you four or five years before, right?

A. Yeah, well, it came back, it came back to me, yeah.

Q. Now he said that is the question I am going to ask you, did he not?

A. Say that again, sir. Could you repeat the question?

Q. Did Detective Sterling say to you now, Mr. Hightower, this is not difficult, that's the question I am basically going to test you on? Do you recall him telling you that?

A. No. But if it's in the documents. Again, you are asking me a lot of things I can't remember, sir. So you are refreshing my memory.

Q. Yeah, I'm trying to.

A. Thank you.

Q. All right. And to verify that this is you, would you look at the next document? It's two pages.

A. 13.

Q. Two pages?

A. Two pages.

Q. Has some scribbling out in the middle and so forth. It is attached, it is stapled pages.

A. Two pages?

Page 63.

Q. Yes.

A. Okay, that's C-14.

Q. Okay. And there is a series of questions and answers on there, right?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. After looking at both pages, do you remember telling him any of those things on there?

A. Say it that again, please. Would you say that again?

Q. Yeah. Let me get closer to you.

A. Thank you.

Q. Do you remember telling him anything on those pages? After looking it over, does it refresh your recollection?

(Pause.)

Q. You recognize that, don't you?

A. Yeah...

Q. Well, did you put tacks on the teacher's chair when you were 9 years-old and get caught or not get caught? You did that, didn't you?

A. I did that, yeah.

Q. Yes, you did that. And you beat up a girl when you were 8 years-old and you got caught for it, and they caught you fighting and your mom said that's not right?

Page 64.

Q. (Handing) We have a signature at two ends.

A. Yeah.

Q. And you beat up a boy when you were 16 years-old and you got caught for that punch, right?

A. Oh, boy, yeah.

Q. This is you, isn't it?

A. This is me.

Q. All right. Now, they gave you the test, and before they started the test they said this is your piece of paper, it is going to have squiggly lines on it, it is going to be charts and graphs, but it's yours, and before we start I'm going to put it in here, and I want you to sign it at the beginning, and when I take it out I want you to sign it at the end, because I don't want anybody to say this isn't your test; do you remember doing that?

A. This is the polygraph test you are speaking on?

Q. Yes, the test itself, a piece of paper?

A. Possibly.

MR. GRANT: Okay, let me see if I have that (handing).

MR. WEINGLASS: (Handing).

BY MR. GRANT:

Page 65.

This is the top.

A. That is my signature, yes, it is.

Q. What date is that?

A. 12-15-81.

Q. Okay, at the end of the paper we have another signature. Whose name is that?

A. That's my signature.

Q. Okay. Do you remember signing these?

A. Yes, that's my signature.

MR. WEINGLASS: Counsel, is there a time indicated?

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Is there a time indicated there?

A. Yes, last part, 8:54 p.m.

MR. WEINGLASS: 8:54.

THE WITNESS: 8:54 p.m.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. And you were released, according to your statement, at 9:40 because you were there 5 hours and 40 minutes, right?

A. Yes.

Q. So this occurred about 45 minutes before you left, this ended 45 minutes before you left, right?

A. Yes, approximately.

Q. And after you took this test you stayed there another 45 minutes, didn't you?

Page 66.

A. Well, I guess I did, if I left at 9:40.

Q. Right. And the reason you stayed another 45 minutes is because they told you -- didn't they? -- Mr. Hightower, we asked you this question and we detected deception: Last Wednesday did you see Jamal with a gun in his hand. Your answer was no. And they said we think you're lying and I want to turn you back over to this detective and I want you to talk to him.

Do you recall them telling you that?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Well, do you recall this two-page document that has the writing on it that Mr. Weinglass showed you before?

A. No, what's there?

Q. It says Dessie Hightower, has a number 9 there?

A. Yeah, okay, page 9 is it? Yes.

Q. Do you want to -- I am going to read the question and read the answer and see if it refreshes your recollection as to what they told you before they gave you this.

Question: After having spoken to Detective Sterling, do you have anything to add to your prior interview.

Answer: I know that I didn't see him with the gun, I didn't see Jamal with the gun.

Do you remember saying that to them?

A. I believe so, Counselor.

Q. Well --

A. You are asking me about something 14 years ago; and this is not my handwriting either.

Q. I know it is not but it is on the bottom, isn't it (displaying)?

A. Okay, yeah, okay.

Q. Is it or not?

A. This is my signature, yes, it is.

Q. Go to the next page. Is your signature on the bottom of that?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. You seem like a prudent and careful man. You didn't sign something you didn't read, did you?

A. Well, sir, again, it's been 14 years ago so you're telling me something that I may have forgot.

Q. Okay.

A. Okay.

Q. Why were you saying I didn't see, I know I didn't see the gun in his hand? Were they accusing you of having seen it in his hand?

Page 68.

A. Well, maybe the question was geared that way. Again, it's speculation.

Q. Okay.

A. But I'm not quite sure. If I took that tone, it must have been something because it wasn't conducive to what I was saying.

Q. Right.

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection: Counsel again is misreading a document, this one right in front of him. I could only assume he is doing it purposely. He didn't say what Counsel just told him he said. He said I know I didn't see him with a gun. I didn't see him, Jamal, with a gun. Counsel adds did you see him with a gun in his hand. It's very different when he reads it.

MR. GRANT: Did I say that?

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

MR. GRANT: I'm sorry.

MR. WEINGLASS: The document is right in your hand. I would think you would at least have the decency to read it right.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Are you reading along with me?

A. Now I will be.

Page 69.

Q. I know I didn't see him with a gun, I didn't see Jamal with a gun.

Do you remember saying that to them?

A. Counsel, if it's down here and I signed it, I assume that I did.

Q. Next question: The male that you saw running, did he have a gun.

What was your answer?

A. It says no.

Q. Question: Did anyone tell you Jamal had a gun.

What's your answer?

A. I don't recall anyone saying that Jamal had a gun.

But you said did anyone tell me. Did anyone tell you that Jamal had a gun. My answer to that was I don't recall anyone. No, I don't.

Q. Yes. Do you know why they are asking you all these different reasons why or if Mr. Jamal had a gun? Did they tell you why they are asking you these things?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection to the form of the question. The witness can't know why the police --

THE COURT: He is asking him if they said that to him. Listen to the question, Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: I did. It could be read back. Could the question be read back? I ask for the privilege of having the question read back. The first part.

(The Court reporter read the last question.)

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Did they?

MR. WEINGLASS: I object to the form of the question. You know the reasons why. How could he know the reasons why?

MR. GRANT: I will rephrase it. I will withdraw the question.

THE COURT: All right.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Did they tell you why they were asking you in these different ways if you saw him with a gun?

A. No, I don't remember that, sir.

Q. Didn't they show you on your chart?

A. Oh, are we back to --

Q. No, on that long piece of paper, I showed you at both ends you signed it. Didn't they point to that and say you see right here, when I asked you this question about did you see the man with the gun you said no and this needle went up here like this? Do you recall that?

A. Are you speaking on this C-12?

Q. Listen to me.

A. You asked me to read --

Q. Listen to me.

A. Okay, thank you.

Q. The piece of paper that I was holding up for you (displaying).

A. Yes, the polygraph.

Q. It showed names at both ends?

A. Yes.

Q. Didn't they point to that where they had written a question and say this needle says you're lying about this one question?

A. I can't remember that.

Q. Okay, fine. Next question: When you first saw Jamal, did you know who he was.

What's your answer, sir?

We are back on, we are back on C --

A. C-l1 is it?

Q. I guess it's 13.

A. I believe it is. Let me know when I keep flipping these papers.

Page 72.

Q. I'll let you keep up. Go ahead.

A. Thank you.

Q. When you first saw Jamal did you know who he was?

A. Ahh, my answer was no. I didn't know until I heard it on the radio.

Q. No, no, wait, we don't want Mr. Weinglass to get upset. Read the whole thing?

A. Excuse me, did I read that wrong?

Q. Yes.

A. Then you read it for me.

Q. No, I didn't know that until I heard it at home on the radio.

A. On the radio, yes.

Q. Oh.

A. Okay.

Q. Question: Did you see anyone besides other police on the scene with guns.

Answer: No. When he -- Detective Sterling -- asked me if I saw Jamal with a gun in his hand --

A. It says when Detective Sterling asked me.

Q. It says what?

A. When he: Detective Sterling.

Q. No, when he --

Page 73.

A. Yes.

Q. -- Detective Sterling -- asked me if I saw Jamal with a gun in his hand, I could picture him with a gun but I didn't see him with one?

A. Now, that's, that part right there I don't understand. Umm, I didn't, I signed this but I do not believe me saying I could picture him with a gun.

Q. Yeah, everything so far is --

A. No.

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection, Your Honor. The witness has to be allowed to answer. He is being cut off.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Are you finished?

A. No, I wasn't, Counselor.

Q. Finish?

THE COURT: Go ahead.

THE WITNESS: No, I do not believe that I put that. I signed this but I do not believe that I put I could picture him with a gun. That doesn't even sound conducive to what I have been saying all along.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. I know. That's the problem?

A. The word I could picture him with a gun, okay.

Page 74.

That's what I think they should have said, sir.

Q. And you read this before you signed it?

A. Well, sir, I was there, it was just so many hours, maybe I was extremely tired at that time. I am not making excuses up but I am simply telling you the truth. That does not sound conducive to what I have been saying.

Q. Why are you looking --

A. I am not looking in that direction.

Q. Why are you looking at this man when you are talking to me?

A. Well, you stand over here, Counselor, I will talk to you.

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection to the false accusation against the witness. Counsel has been wrong in repeating the record, wrong in reading documents, and he is wrong again and falsely accusing the witness.

THE COURT: All right, okay.

MR. WEINGLASS: I ask the Court to admonish Counsel.

THE COURT: Stand over there (indicating).

MR. GRANT: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: So he can't. Or if you have to, get right up close here maybe, so there is no misunderstanding.

Page 75.

MR. WEINGLASS: So we can't what?

THE COURT: No, I said so that he knows what documents he is looking at, because his documents don't have the numbers on it. For the record, refer to the number.

MR. GRANT: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Do you have the number on this that you are talking about? I don't know if it's in the record.

THE WITNESS: C-11.

THE COURT: C-l1 you are talking about?

MR. GRANT: I believe so, Your Honor. (displaying).

THE WITNESS: His is not --

MR. GRANT: Numbered.

THE WITNESS: -- numbered.

THE COURT: His isn't?

THE WITNESS: His isn't, the attorney's.

MR. GRANT: We are on the same page, aren't we?

THE COURT OFFICER: Same document.

Page 76.

THE COURT: Mark it so when you are talking about it you can refer to C-11.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Now, you don't have recollection independently just from going back in your mind 13 years about these questions and answers on here, do you?

A. Say that again, please, Counsel.

Q. Yes. You don't have recollection independently, just from your memory, with your own mind, going back to this time when this was happening?

A. No, I can't recall every word verbatim again what you are asking me. But what I am saying is -- if I could finish what I am saying. Thank you. That the questions the way they formulated some of them do look like what I said. Because I can kind of feel me saying that. If you understand what I am saying.

Q. Which ones on there look like you didn't say them besides the one that you have identified which --

A. The one -- go ahead, I'm sorry I cut you off.

Q. It's okay. Besides the one you say I don't recall saying that -- which was I could picture him with a gun but I didn't see him with one -- you didn't say that, according to you?

Page 77.

A. It doesn't sound like anything, it doesn't sound conducive to what I was saying all along.

Q. Well, when you say it doesn't sound conducive, that means this is contradicting the statement that you gave to Mr. Weinglass' investigator, the investigator -- just a minute -- and it contradicts what you had told the police earlier; is that what you mean?

A. Umm, Counselor, that part of the statement I can not actually say that I said it. It doesn't sound like that. As far as whatever else you said as far as what I told attorney Weinglass or the police, I don't know anything about that. I am just simply saying about that one part of this last question does not sound like me, okay. I'm telling you something that I'm feeling from my heart. If you could understand that. If you can't, what can I say?

Q. Well, you could say this, you could say any other thing in here, is there anything else in here that you feel from your heart is not true as well?

A. Well, do you want to give me a second, I will read the whole thing over again.

Q. Take your time.

A. Thank you, sir.

(Pause.)

Page 78.

MR. WEINGLASS: When Counsel says in here, what is he referring to?

THE WITNESS: He is saying C-11.

THE COURT: He is reading over the thing that he wants to read over, Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: But when Counsel says in here, is it all of the testimony? All of the record? The one or two pages in front of the witness?

MR. GRANT: I think the witness --

THE COURT: That's what he is looking at right now.

MR. GRANT: If the witness understands, I don't think it is required that he understands.

MR. WEINGLASS: The witness may be misled. It's not that the witness understands.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Do you understand, Mr. Hightower?

A. I am trying to desperately.

Q. Do you understand what I am saying to you, do I need to state it to you differently?

A. Are we talking about document C-ll? If you are talking about this document, I understand what you are saying about this document.

Page 79.

Q. Which one do you have in your hand?

A. I have C-l1 in my hand.

Q. Which one have we been talking about for the last five minutes?

A. I believe it is C-11. So we are on that same Page.

Q. Answer my question.

(Pause.)

A. The rest of these questions and answers seem to be, seem to be in order, or conducive as to what I have been prior to this saying.

Q. You mean it matches what you were saying before you took that test? What does conducive mean, that's what I am trying to figure out?

A. Do we have a dictionary around maybe.

Q. No, but I'm pretty good. Try me.

A. Okay, what I am saying to you, Counselor, is that what my prior statements or affidavits or testimony, to me, what I am saying, everything I said I said over and over again. I didn't have to shy away from anything. Because what I'm saying is the truth.

Q. Yeah.

A. Okay. And can I say something, please? May I?

Page 80.

Dessie Hightower - Cross

Q. Say whatever you feel.

A. I could take some offense to you saying I'm looking over to defense attorney Weinglass. I have a mind of my own, Counselor, and I can say what I'm thinking and what I'm feeling. I don't need, I don't need -- excuse me. I am not trying to make it a thing here. I just want you to talk to me as a human being. As a man. I think we could go from there.

Q. Were you looking at him? Did you look to him, yes or no?

A. I'm looking all over this room. I am in a confined area.

Q. Oh, all right. Now, the only thing that's not right is something that is not conducive to what you said before in that piece of paper; correct?

A. You are talking about the last statement?

Q. Yes.

A. The last part of the last statement.

Q. Yes.

A. Seems to be.

Q. And from what you saw in the interview you gave to Mr. Greer, the investigator for Mr. Jamal, the only thing that wasn't conducive to what you were saying there is the cops were all around you when you saw that person running, but you are telling us that was out of sequence too?

Page 81.

Dessie Hightower - Cross

A. No, I did not see the cops around when the person started to run. The cops were not even on the scene when I seen the person flee from the crime area.

Q. Yet that's what it said in Mr. Greer's interview, right? I read it?

A. Well, yet, I also did not read his interview intentionally enough or he wrote down what I said wrong.

Q. And as soon as you got a subpoena from the D.A.'s Office because we wanted you to come here and tell the Court what you claimed in this, in this book here, this document, that Petition, what's the first thing you did?

A. I don't understand what you are saying.

Q. What's the first thing you did when a subpoena was served at your house two weeks ago? You called Mr. Weinglass, didn't you?

A. No, I did not call Mr. Weinglass -- I mean what is the first thing I did. I signed the subpoena.

Q. Did you call Mr. Weinglass immediately afterwards?

A. I don't recollect that.

Page 82.

Dessie Hightower - Cross

Q. Did you call him at any time after you got it?

A. Either, he had contacted me. I didn't have his phone number or where he was at so I believe he contacted me.

Q. And the day you got the subpoena you didn't come to Court, did you?

A. Well, uhh --

Q. Yes or no, sir?

A. No, I did not.

Q. And you didn't come to Court but you called Mr. Weinglass, didn't you?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection. The witness indicated that I had called him. After I was informed in Court here that he had been served.

THE COURT: Counselor, this is cross-examination, please.

MR. WEINGLASS: The witness already gave the answer. Counsel is misstating it.

THE COURT: This is cross-examination.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, you can't misstate a prior answer. You cannot do that to a witness.

THE COURT: This is cross-examination. Counselor, please sit down. Please.

Page 83.

Dessie Hightower - Cross

MR. WEINGLASS: Let the record show the Court in an angry voice is pointing a threatening finger.

THE COURT: And you in an angry voice are speaking to the Judge in disrespect. I asked you please to sit down.

MR. WEINGLASS: I don't want to be pointed at in this Courtroom, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Counselor, please, sit down. Go ahead.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. You called Mr. Weinglass to tell him I got a subpoena here --

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. -- did you not?

THE COURT: Objection is overruled.

THE WITNESS: No, I don't remember saying that. Excuse me, please.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. The answer is no?

A. No, I don't remember saying that also.

Q. Did you call him?

A. I just stated to you, I think, I do believe

Page 84.

Dessie Hightower - Cross

Mr. Weinglass had contacted me. And how would you know that I said that to Mr. Weinglass? Was my phone tapped or something? I didn't say it to the Court or anything.

Q. No, I will --

A. What are you saying, sir?

Q. I will tell you how I know: Because you called and left a message for me to call you, and you said when I called you, didn't you, I talked to Mr. Weinglass, I called him, he had worked this out?

A. After he contacted me.

Q. That's how I know. I am not tapping your phone, you told me with your mouth; do you recall that?

A. Just refreshing my memory.

Q. Why do I have to keep refreshing your memory?

A. Because I am asking you.

Q. You are sure about everything that you said about what you think isn't conducive to you?

MR. WEINGLASS: Objection: Argumentative, form. May I have a ruling?

MR. GRANT: I think it is a proper question. I asked him a question.

MR. WEINGLASS: May I have a ruling? It is argumentative and --

Page 85.

THE COURT: It is overruled. Come on, let's go.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Sir, you flunked the box, and you know they told you you flunked the box, and you signed an affidavit?

A. Say it again, please. The box?

Q. The box: The polygraph machine.

A. Well, I don't know, you are saying the box, I don't know what you mean by the box.

Q. No. Polygraph. You flunked it and they told you you flunked it, yet you signed this document under oath swearing to it that you passed it, right?

A. No, they did not tell me I flunked it.

MR. GRANT: Thank you, sir.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

MR. GRANT: Nothing further.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Let's get one thing straight right away, Mr. Hightower --

THE WITNESS: You know, you know, could I say something, please?

Page 86.

MR. WEINGLASS: Sure.

THE WITNESS: I came here today to tell the truth. I didn't come to get into a mess with you or with the Judge or with the defense.

THE COURT: Wait awhile. You haven't been shouting with me.

THE WITNESS: Well, I came to tell the truth.

THE COURT: But that's for the Court to decide.

THE WITNESS: Judge, could I finish what I am saying?

THE COURT: Go ahead.

THE WITNESS: Thank you. If what I am saying is not up to liking or is not -- could I use the word conducive again? -- to what you might want me to say, well, I'm sorry, sir.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. You're welcome. Mr. Hightower, when you were served with the Commonwealth's subpoena were you asleep?

A. I was in the bed sick that night. I just took two, ahh, soft gel, Nyquil soft gel tablets. And if you know what they do to you, I was out of it.

Page 87.

Q. And it wasn't in the afternoon that you were --

A. It was in the evening hours, sir.

Q. Do you know that Mr. Grant here represented to the Court that you were served in the afternoon?

A. Well, he misled the Court.

MR. GRANT: Objection: I said in the daytime.

MR. WEINGLASS: Let's check the record. The word is afternoon, Counselor.

THE COURT: Well, he is saying now that you are misquoting. Come on, let's get moving. Regardless of what he said before, you are on redirect. Let's limit it to redirect.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, there was a misrepresentation made here to the Court.

THE COURT: Redirect means redirect. Now let's get into redirect. We are not here to argue what he said or what somebody else said.

MR. WEINGLASS: Okay.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Let's start, Mr. Hightower, at the beginning.

A. You are talking the night of the incident?

Q. Pardon?

A. You are speaking of the night of the incident?

Page 88.

Q. The night of the incident. Did you go down to a police station and be interviewed on that night?

A. Yes, I did, Counselor.

Q. Was it about 5:00 in the morning when you went down?

A. Somewhere in there, 3:00, 4:00. Between 4:00 and 5:00, I guess.

Q. At that time did you know that Mr. Jamal was the person involved in this case?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Did you know who was the suspect who was taken into custody?

A. You mean at that point in time?

Q. Yes.

A. No, I did not.

Q. And you were interviewed, were you not?

A. Yes.

Q. That night?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Did you go down to the police station voluntarily?

A. Yes, I -- yes, I did. I believe so.

Q. And you sat there and you were asked questions and you gave answers?

A. Yes.

Page 89.

Q. Do you remember telling the police that night, within one hour of the shooting, when you didn't know who was the suspect, you said, quoting Counsel, I seen a male run away wearing a red-and-black sweater. And then later you said I did see the guy who ran and he looked Jamaican too. And then later you said I just seen the back of him. He had on dark-colored pants and a red-and-black sweater, that's all I seen. He was about five-foot-eleven or six-foot.

A. I do remember, yes.

Q. Now, were you telling the police the truth at 5:00 in the morning on December 9th, 1981?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Were you making up any stories?

A. For what purpose -- no, I wasn't, no.

Q. Incidentally, Mr. Hightower: Have you ever attended a rally held on behalf of the supporters of Mr. Jamal?

MR. GRANT: Objection. That's beyond the scope of my cross.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. WEINGLASS: Pardon?

THE COURT: Yes, it is beyond the scope.

MR. WEINGLASS: No, Your Honor, there were questions on cross on whether or not he had met Mr. Jamal. Whether he knew him.

THE COURT: Before. Before. Before the incident.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes. And that opens the door to questions on

--

THE COURT: Before, before the incident.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, the implication is he is biased in favor of Mr. Jamal because he knew him. I am asking him now whether --

THE COURT: How do you know that's what it is?

MR. WEINGLASS: Oh, that's the implication.

THE COURT: No, it is not the only implication.

MR. WEINGLASS: That is one implication.

THE COURT: Well, maybe.

MR. WEINGLASS: I have a right to correct it. Is the Court preventing me from asking that question?

THE COURT: Counselor, there was an objection, I ruled on it. If the D.A. wishes to withdraw his objection, I have no problem with it. I only rule when I have to rule.

MR. WEINGLASS: And what is the basis for the Court's sustaining the objection?

THE COURT: I don't have to give you a basis, Counselor. I will do it at the appropriate time.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. So that night, that morning, you said I seen a male, I saw a guy and he looked Jamaican and you described the male again. And you said he was five-foot-eleven to six-foot tall.

A. Approximately, yes.

Q. And that was within one hour of the shooting?

A. Yes, it was, Counselor.

Q. Had you talked to any of Mr. Jamal's lawyers before you made that statement?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Had you talked to any investigators for Mr. Jamal?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Were you telling the police just what you saw on the morning of December 9th?

A. I was telling the detectives at that time what

Page 92.

I had, what I had observed to the best of my knowledge.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time between defense Counsel.)

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. And you had no reason to deceive or to tell a lie to the investigators that morning?

A. No, I did not, Counselor.

Q. One week later, approximately, on December 15th, you told us you were again interviewed by the police. Right?

A. Yes.

Q. This time they kept you there for over five hours; is that right?

A. 4:00 p.m. to 9:40 p.m.

Q. It's almost six hours?

A. 5 hours and 40 minutes, Counselor, yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Grant asked you on cross did the police treat you well, or the detectives, and you've said to him -- and I wrote down your answer -- for the most part. What do you mean by that?

A. From what I could recollect for the most part they were pretty fair with me. It was inconvenience waiting around and, you know, for different questions and answers to be, and waiting around for the polygraph test and all that. So for the most part they were pretty fair with me.

Q. But on that occasion, in 5 hours and 40 minutes, did you tell them again -- and I am reading from an exhibit -- I then looked and I saw a man in a black, a red-and-black sweater run past the hotel down Locust Street? And did you also tell them when they asked you... how much time elapsed between hearing the last shot and seeing the man, the running man, and you said about 15 seconds. And then they asked you can you describe the man as to his height and general build, color, and if he had a hat on or not. And you said he was black, about five-nine to six-foot, he seemed to have dreadlocks.

Did you tell them that?

A. Yes.

Q. On the second interview, less than one week later?

A. Yes, Counselor.

Q. Incidentally --

(Discussion held off the record between defense Counsel.)

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. You weren't alone that night, or the early morning hours when you saw these events on the street, were you?

A. No, I was not.

Q. You were with another gentleman, weren't you?

A. Yes.

Q. And his name is Robert Pigford; isn't that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And he's now, to your knowledge, a police officer with the City of Philadelphia; isn't that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. To your knowledge, is the Commonwealth going to bring him in here? Have you heard from him that he's been subpoenaed?

A. No.

Q. You told him about what you saw too, you told Mr. Pigford?

A. That night or recently?

Q. Any time.

A. Yes, I told him.

Q. And he is now a police officer?

A. Yeah. Yes, he is.

Q. By the way, by the way, before you testified in June of 1982, had you ever testified in a court of law before?

Page 95.

A. No, I don't believe so.

Q. That was your first time?

A. Yes.

Q. And you haven't talked to Tony Jackson before you took the stand?

A. No, I already stated that, no, I haven't.

Q. And when they asked you on cross-examination, when the District Attorney asked you now in reference to this individual you say you saw running, the one I believe you said that you were unsure, and correct me if I am wrong, from what your testimony was you were unsure whether or not it was a male or could even be female, that's what you said?

A. Repeat that, please.

Q. Yes. Do you want to see it?

A. Yes, thank you, Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: I will mark it, it is page 28, 148. Counsel questioned.

MR. GRANT: For the record, June 28.

MR. WEINGLASS: June 28.

THE COURT OFFICER: (Handing).

THE WITNESS: Repeat your question, please. I've read this. Could you repeat your question?

Page 96.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Having read that, that question that was asked you in Court when you were testifying for the first time, do you remember saying anything to anyone that you were unsure if it was a man or a woman before you were in Court?

A. I said it was a black male.

Q. Pardon?

A. I said it was a black male, five-eleven to six-foot.

Q. That's what you have always consistently said?

A. I said it was a black male, five-eleven, six-foot.

Q. Do you know if you've ever described the person you saw running as a female?

A. No, I don't.

Q. But the prosecutor in questioning you suggested that you were unsure. Is that right?

A. (Witness shrugged shoulders.)

Q. Were you unsure?

A. I said it was a black male, five-eleven to six-foot.

Q. As a matter of fact, when you were tape recorded by Mr. Greer, did you say I couldn't identify anybody but whoever he was he was a black man with possible dreadlock hair; isn't that right?

A. If that's what I signed in a signed statement I said it.

MR. GRANT: It is not signed.

MR. WEINGLASS: Oh. It is the transcript of your tape-recorded statement (displaying).

THE WITNESS: So.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. In asking you if you were unsure, do you think Mr. McGill there was playing a lawyer's game of twisting your words?

A. I don't know what Mr. McGill was trying to do. You have to ask Mr. McGill that, Counselor.

Q. Now, when you were questioned with the polygraph --

A. Yes.

Q. -- did they ask you on the polygraph if you saw someone running away?

A. I believe so.

Q. Is that in any of the documents that were shown to you by Counsel?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. In connection with the polygraph?

A. Yes, it was...

Page 98.

(Pause.)

A. Go ahead, Counselor, I am trying to read with you there.

Q. Pardon?

A. No, go ahead.

THE COURT: Next question.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. They never tested you by polygraph, did they, on if you saw someone running away?

A. I don't see the question, the question, all the questions that were --

Q. Right there is a document with all the questions on it. Which is this document. (displaying).

THE COURT: Do you have a number on that?

THE WITNESS: No.

THE COURT: What is the number?

THE COURT OFFICER: Let me see your documents. That would be C-14.

THE COURT: Write C-l4 on your documents, if you are asking him any questions. Right there, over there. It's yours.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Page 99.

Q. When you read over these questions, they never even asked you that when you were hooked up to the polygraph?

A. That question's not down here.

Q. Right, so you were telling them on the morning of the occurrence, you were telling them a week later, you consistently said you saw the man run away after the shooting, and when they hooked you up to the polygraph they didn't even ask you that question?

A. The question's not down here, Counselor.

Q. Does the description five-foot-eleven to six-foot sound to you like you were talking about a woman running away?

A. I do know women that height but, no, it doesn't, no, I don't believe it was a woman.

Q. You don't believe it was a woman?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Did you know someone named Veronica Jones that night, a prostitute?

A. Ahh...

MR. GRANT: Objection: Beyond the scope.

THE COURT: Sustained.

MR. WEINGLASS: Your Honor, the position the Commonwealth took --

Page 100.

THE COURT: I said sustained.

MR. WEINGLASS: -- during the trial was that he saw a young prostitute running away who was a very small woman.

THE COURT: Counselor, I said sustained. Remember, you are on redirect now.

MR. WEINGLASS: Yes.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. So you took the polygraph about 8:00 to 8:54 that night; is that right?

A. Yes, that's what it said.

Q. So you were there for four hours before they hooked you up to the machine; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And you signed off at 8:54 on the tape, or the scroll, right?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And then you were there almost another hour, or 45 minutes to an hour with Detective Sterling questioning you, right?

A. If that's the detective's name on the documents here, yes.

Q. Well, I'm not sure it is detective. But in any event, directing your attention to --

MR. WEINGLASS: What is the C number?

Page 101.

THE COURT OFFICER: C-11. This one.

BY MR. WEINGLASS:

Q. Showing you C-11: That's not your handwriting on that document, is it?

A. My signature.

Q. But not your handwriting?

A. No, it's not.

Q. So it was the police or the detective who interviewed you who wrote down what you allegedly said?

A. Yes.

Q. Did they tape record you?

A. I don't remember, Counselor.

Q. Have you ever seen the tape?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know if they have tape recorders in a police station?

A. I would assume so.

Q. And you were, if I recall correctly, you were in your first year at Temple at that time, or had been to Temple?

A. Community College.

Q. Community College for how long?

A. I think it was like my second or third semester, I can't remember back.

Q. Did anyone ask you to write down what you saw in your own handwriting?

A. I believe so. I think it's here.

Q. Is this any... (displaying). Would you, would you give me --

A. C-12.

Q. C-12. And that's what you read, or was read into the record. I didn't see any shooting but I heard three shots close together, then two later.

A. Yes, I'm reading with you.

Q. Pardon?

A. Yes, I see it.

Q. That's all that you were asked to write that night?

A. No, it's... it's more here. After that there's more.

Q. Right. But it's all that is contained on C-ll?

A. Oh, excuse me, that's C-12.

Q. C-12?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, when you used the word conducive, is it possible here in Court you meant to say consistent?

A. Well, to -- yes.

Q. You were saying the same thing consistently?

A. Yes.

Q. You never altered what you said you saw that night?

A. No, I didn't, Counselor.

Q. And what you saw that night is you saw, you heard shots, you saw a man run away, and then the police arrived?

A. Yes, that's what I am saying, Counselor.

MR. WEINGLASS: I have no further questions.

MR. GRANT: Briefly.

- - - - -

RECROSS-EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. The person you described, sir, you said that you saw run away was a five-foot-eleven to six-foot person, right?

A. I said black male.

Q. Well, at one point you said black male and I read you what you said at trial. Okay?

A. Okay, person.

Q. Person.

A. Person.

Q. Five-foot-eleven to six-foot person, Jamaican possibly. What's that mean?

A. Because of the dreadlocks, I believe I seen flapping up and down as the person ran away.

Q. Oh, the person had dreadlocks flapping?

A. Seemed to be.

Q. Seemed to be?

A. Seemed to be.

Q. Okay. By the way, the police took you to the wagon where they had Mr. Jamal right there at 12th and Locust and they asked to you look in?

(Pause.)

Q. Do you recall that?

A. I am trying to but I can't recall that though.

Q. You described that person you saw running seemed to have dreadlocks, who could have been approximately six-foot tall, and they had a red-and-black sweater, right?

A. The person that was running was running towards 12th and Locust. Mr. Jamal was on the corner of 13th and Locust. I do believe.

Q. He was on the corner of 13th and Locust?

A. I do believe.

Q. What was he doing there?

A. I don't know, I just seen the police officers after they apprehended him beating him up putting him in the wagon.

Q. Oh, I see. Did Mr. Jamal have dreadlocks that night?

A. I can't remember, Counselor.

Q. Oh. Was he about six-foot that night?

A. Is he six-foot now? I don't know.

Q. Oh. What color is my suit?

A. It's a dark-colored suit. If it is black or, I don't know if it is black or navy blue.

Q. Right. Did you know that Mr. Jamal was wearing a red-and-black shell with a dark blue shirt, had dreadlocks and was about six feet tall that night?

MR. WEINGLASS: Counsel has problems with color, not the witness.

THE COURT: Counselor, this is cross-examination. You brought it up.

MR. WEINGLASS: He is misrepresenting now the evidence in the case.

MR. GRANT: Okay. I will say that on property receipt 854920, which was admitted into evidence and is part of this record, made available to Mr. Weinglass, that's what was admitted.

BY MR. GRANT:

Q. Did you see Mr. Jamal that night with that clothing on?

A. I can't recall that, sir. Being honest with you. I can't say that yeah, I seen him with that sweater on, no, I can't say that. You remember you asked me to be honest and I am telling you.

Q. Okay, did you see two people with dreadlocks about six-foot tall?

A. I said I seen one person.

Q. You didn't see two people wearing the same things looking like twins, did you?

A. No, now you are confusing me, no.

Q. You are not confused, sir. You didn't see two?

A. I just said you are confusing me and you are telling me I am not confused.

Q. You only saw one person that night wearing the clothing I described?

A. In that area, yes.

Q. In that area?

A. That is correct, towards 12th and Locust Street.

Q. And later on, before you went down to the police station, did you see another person looking the same way with the same clothing and dreadlocks about six-foot?

A. No, I didn't.

MR. GRANT: Thank you very much.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

THE COURT: All right, we will recess for lunch until, what's that? 2:15.

THE COURT OFFICER: This Court will take a luncheon recess until 2:15.

(Luncheon recess was held from 1:l0 p.m. to 2:45 p.m.)

THE COURT: Good afternoon, everyone. Next witness.

MR. WEINGLASS: If it please the Court: This morning we received the Court's order dated August 2nd quashing subpoenas on 11 individuals: Kracoff, Bell, Cranshaw, Campbell, McAllister, Kenney, Heftner, William Hinkel, Cook, Dunn and Bob.

Am I permitted to re-argue any of these or --

THE COURT: No, you were told then if you want to bring Anthony Jackson back, bring him back. All right, we will --

Page 108.

MR. WEINGLASS: I'm sorry.

THE COURT: Who are you going to call now?

Trial attorney Anthony Jackson, do you want to bring him back to lay a foundation?

MR. WEINGLASS: I heard the name, I didn't hear what the Court said before.

THE COURT: I said do you want to bring him back?

MR. WEINGLASS: Anthony Jackson?

THE COURT: Right.

MR. WEINGLASS: We are attempting to locate him.

THE COURT: Okay, fine, but who are you going to call now?

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, there are people on this list, and the Court --

THE COURT: Well, Counselor, yesterday you told me that there were three you were going to call today: Deborah Kordansky, Dessie Hightower, and William Thomas. I have that down here. Now, which one of those two remaining are you going to call now?

MR. WEINGLASS: We also have some of the witnesses, we didn't know their subpoenas were going to be quashed until we came here. The witnesses --

THE COURT: No, you were told that yesterday. You were told that yesterday. Please.

MR. WEINGLASS: Well, not as to all of these.

THE COURT: Yes. All of those.

MR. WEINGLASS: So their subpoenas are quashed?

THE COURT: Right. Kenney, Heftner, Hinkel Cook, Dunn, and Howard Bob, okay. And you said you were going to call these three today so let's call them.

MR. GRANT: Could I have the Court's indulgence for one moment, please?

THE COURT: Yes, if it will expedite things.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time between Commonwealth and defense Counsel.)

MR. WEINGLASS: We are ready to proceed.

THE COURT: Okay, which one?

(Discussion was held off the record at this time between defense Counsel.)

Page 110.

MR. WEINGLASS: Sorry, Your Honor.

THE COURT: That's all right, which one?

MR. WILLIAMS: Good afternoon, Your Honor. The Petitioner calls...

William Thomas.

THE COURT: Okay.

- - - - -

William E. Thomas, having been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

- - - - -

DIRECT EXAMINATION

- - - - -

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Good afternoon, Mr. Thomas.

A. Good afternoon.

MR. GRANT: Before we start, Your Honor: Since he is not an affiant, and there has never been an offer of proof, and he hasn't given any statements, I would like to know the parameters of where we are going with this witness.

THE COURT: I thought they had given you that.

Page 111.

MR. GRANT: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Tell him.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time between Commonwealth and defense Counsel.)

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, there is apparently a wide-ranging list of events that Counsel would like Mr. Thomas to testify to, many of which were covered at the time of trial. However, he does say that this witness will testify as to whether or not a Commonwealth eyewitness Cynthia White was given police protection while she plied her craft, which I think is legitimate.

He also is indicating that he wants to ask him about photo IDS; and Mr. Harkins, their witness, established there were none.

And he wants to ask him about selectivity in the selection of polygraph examination interviewees, which I think is improper.

So I am going to move to object, except as to whether or not police protection was provided for Cynthia White, whether there was a plea agreement with Cynthia White. And anything about polygraphs I think is totally speculative.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, the issue of the polygraphs is the extension of what we heard this morning from Mr. Hightower. And the claim is in our Petition that there was bias in the investigation of this case. We root that claim in a new Supreme, United States Supreme Court decision, the decision of Kyles versus Whitley, which apparently expanded the concept of Brady to encompass a claim of bias in the investigation. And we take advantage of that new ruling in Kyles versus Whitley in our Petition.

And part of that, part of that claim is that in the selective use of polygraph examination. That buttresses our claim of bias in the investigation in as much as the polygraph was used solely on an accounting student, that is Mr. Hightower, and not on other witnesses, all of whom had criminal records. In particular, most egregiously, Cynthia White.

So we intend to inquire into that to support our Kyles versus Whitley bias in the investigation claim.

Page 113.

Detective William Thomas, Ret. - Direct

MR. GRANT: I object. The reason I object, Your Honor, is the reason Mr. Hightower testified is because they said he passed a polygraph and we say no you didn't. Now they want to talk about well why did you pick him in the first place. But that is not the issue they raised in their claim. Their claim is you kept from us the fact that he passed the polygraph -- even though it is not admissible in Court -- that still would have made us believe him better, I guess.

MR. WILLIAMS: That is just not true. Our Petition is clear that we raise the claim of bias in the investigation. How they treated Cynthia White was one prong of that.

THE COURT: Well, what is your problem? I don't see --

MR. WILLIAMS: So I am offering, giving an offer of proof as to areas of inquiry for Mr. Thomas.

THE COURT: You mean this officer has the authority to decide who takes a polygraph and who doesn't?

MR. WILLIAMS: That's what I want to inquire.

Page 114.

Detective William Thomas, Ret. - Direct

THE COURT: Why didn't you talk to him before so you could have filed some sort of affidavit here before? To me it looks like almost --

MR. GRANT: A fishing expedition.

THE COURT: A fishing expedition, sure. You should have talked to him before, found out what he knows.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, we have testimony from Mr. Thomas from the trial where he describes himself as the hub of the wheel. The wheel being the investigation and he was the hub. He was in charge of this investigation. Based upon that sworn testimony in the trial, we have reason to believe that he is competent and equipped to answer questions as to what was happening in an investigation that was under his auspices.

MR. GRANT: I would just object as the questions I feel are objectionable arise, rather than stand here.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WILLIAMS: May I inquire, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes, please.

Page 115.

Detective William Thomas, Ret. - Direct

MR. WILLIAMS: Thank you.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Mr. Thomas, I am feeling a little under the weather and I don't have the benefit of a microphone so --

THE COURT: That's all right, you shout pretty loud. You are not as quiet as Mr. Grant. Mr. Grant needs a microphone, you don't.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, I've never had a problem hearing Mr. Grant.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Mr. Thomas, can you tell us what your current occupation is?

MR. GRANT: Objection as to relevance.

MR. WILLIAMS: I am only, this is so someone reading this record could know who is the witness.

THE COURT: If you want to find out if he is still a police officer, ask him.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. What is your occupation, sir?

MR. GRANT: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I am --

MR. GRANT: Judge, the record knows he is a retired police officer who was the assigned

Page 116.

Detective William Thomas, Ret. - Direct

detective. That's all the record needs to know. We don't need to know where he works or who he is.

THE COURT: He is a retired police officer. Let's go, come on.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. You are a retired police officer, sir?

A. I am a retired detective, sir.

Q. When did you retire?

A. The last day of February, 1989.

Q. And how long were you with the Philadelphia police force?

A. Counting my military time, approximately 24 years.

Q. Now, have you had discussions with the prosecution team in this matter since June 5th, 1995?

MR. GRANT: I object to the characterization. What is that: Prosecutor team?

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. The District Attorney's Office, pardon me. Have you had discussions with the District Attorney's Office since June 5th, 1995?

A. No, sir. Several members, police detectives that are present in and around the Courtroom now are

Page 117.

Detective William Thomas, Ret. - Direct

personal friends of mine outside of this jurisdiction. And I have had conversations with them. But nothing involving these proceedings or this incident.

Q. So you have never discussed this proceeding with any member of the District Attorney's Office since the filing of the PCRA?

A. I don't know when that's filed.

Q. June 5th, 1995.

A. Not any of the particulars or anything like that, you know. Like at lunch time I mean I may talk with one of the detectives about years gone by when we worked on several other cases, stuff like that. But, no, none of the facts.

Q. Now, would you share with us and for the benefit of the record what role did you play in the Faulkner shooting investigation back in late 1991 and -- I'm sorry -- 1981 and 1982?

A. I was the assigned detective. I was assigned by my supervisor in the Homicide Unit to handle this investigation.

Q. What does it mean to be assigned to handle the investigation?

A. The assigned detective is, you would be responsible for all of the paperwork, the reports, et

Page 118.

Detective William Thomas, Ret. - Direct

cetera, that they be compiled, put together and disseminated to the D.A.'s Office and other pertinent units or what have you.

Q. What role did you play in terms of how the investigation was conducted?

(Pause.)

A. Well, investigation was conducted under the supervision of my supervisor at that time, which would have been, I believe, Sergeant Givens and I think Lieutenant McGowan, they would have been the overall supervisors.

Q. Do you recall in the trial of this matter back in 1982 describing yourself as the hub of the wheel in the investigation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What does that mean: The hub of the wheel?

A. In other words, in Homicide in a squad you have numerous separate detectives, you have separate supervisors. When you're assigned to a particular investigation, that is your investigation. All of the detectives in your particular squad, or in this case you may have 1 squad and 3 squad, I'm going to look at almost every interview or everything that comes in in the particular case and what have you. Whereas a certain detective in 1 squad may only see

Page 119.

Detective William Thomas, Ret. - Direct

what he does, I may see all of it.

Q. So if I understand you correctly, being the hub of this wheel permitted you to have an overview of the direction of this investigation?

A. Somewhat, but not as much as my supervisor would have because they were able to be stationary.

Q. And how about the scope of the investigation? Were you able to, during the time that you were the hub of this wheel?

A. I don't understand the question.

Q. The scope of the investigation.

THE COURT: He said he didn't understand your question.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. You don't understand what I mean by the scope of the investigation?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, did you have an understanding as to how many detectives and investigators were interviewing witnesses?

A. No, sir, that would be something for a supervisor to know.

Q. So you didn't know that?

A. I would have an idea.

Q. And what was that idea?

Page 120.

Detective William Thomas, Ret. - Direct

A. But I would not -- excuse me.

Q. What was your idea as to how many, how much manpower was devoted to the investigation?

A. You are talking about on the specific night of the incident?

Q. No, the investigation was ongoing, was it not, after the incident?

A. An investigation in a Homicide Unit will use any and all parts of the Homicide Unit that the supervisors feel that are necessary. And anything that's within the Police Department.

Q. And what was your understanding as to how much was necessary?

A. That doesn't go into the scope of me as a detective, that's the supervision.

Q. So you did not know?

A. I may have been aware of who was working on what, but the scope of how many people, that's not within my duties as an investigator or detective.

Q. Now, did you assist the assigned prosecutor in this case, a Mr. McGill, during the course of the trial itself?

A. Yes, I was with Joe McGill during the trial.

Q. What was your assignment or duties during that period of the case?

Page 121.

Detective William Thomas, Ret. - Direct

(Pause.)

A. I was subpoenaed to come to Court. I bring the records, a file like this (indicating), this is what we call, we have numerous reports, documents, photos, et cetera. And the originals et cetera are in my file. And I have to keep tabs. If somebody wants page 1, or property receipt number 99, I've got to be able to locate it and I have to have that there. You know, any number of things that I may have to do while I'm on subpoena from the D.A.'s Office.

Q. So to effectively assist Mr. McGill during the course of the trial, you had to be familiar with all the police reports that were prepared in this case?

A. I have probably seen every report that was prepared in this case, that's correct.

Q. Now -- pardon me, Mr. Thomas.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time among defense Counsel.)

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Now, during the course of the investigation prior to the commencement of the trial, did you attempt to keep abreast of how the investigation was going?

(Pause.)

Page 122.

Detective William Thomas, Ret. - Direct

A. What do you mean by that, Counselor?

Q. Well, did you try to keep abreast of the status of the investigation: Whether all the witnesses that needed to be talked to were talked to, whether witnesses had to be re interviewed, things of that sort?

A. The scope of usually determining whether someone is to be re interviewed, et cetera, is usually determined by the supervisor.

Q. Who was that supervisor, Mr. Thomas?

MR. GRANT: Objection: Asked and answered. Herbert Givens and Lieutenant McGowan.

MR. WILLIAMS: Very well, I will accept that answer from Mr. Grant.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Now, you mentioned the police reports. And that you were familiar with all the police reports. Can you tell us -- pardon me.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time between defense Counsel.)

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Can you tell us why the addresses of the civilian witnesses were redacted from those police reports?

Page 123.

Detective William Thomas, Ret. - Direct

MR. GRANT: He could if he were the Judge. That was redacted, Your Honor, and ordered to be so. So I object.

THE COURT: Objection is sustained.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Could you tell us when the addresses were redacted, Mr. Thomas?

MR. GRANT: I object. That is an irrelevancy since that is not a decision of the investigator in any event.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, if he knows.

MR. GRANT: I think it is irrelevant if he knows.

MR. WILLIAMS: Mr. Grant is representing to the Court these addresses were redacted pursuant to a Court order. My understanding is that order was given on April 1st, 1982.

THE COURT: Don't you think the District Attorney is also involved in it? He is not the Judge. He was in Court.

MR. WILLIAMS: Mr. Thomas is here, I would like to know if it happened prior to April 1st, 1982.

THE COURT: Why don't you say that.

Page 124.

Detective William Thomas, Ret. - Direct

MR. WILLIAMS: I am asking when.

MR. GRANT: May I ask what claim this is supposed to advance that they haven't noticed us on?

MR. WILLIAMS: The ineffective assistance of Counsel. Mr. Jackson testified ad nauseam about the fact that addresses were redacted. And it impeded efforts to perform as a competent attorney.

MR. GRANT: He gave a very specific offer of proof. Now, of course, this is not one of the many offers that he's made to me, but I object to it because it's beyond the scope of what his own offer is, and, furthermore, it is irrelevant.

THE COURT: You see, you didn't give it in written form here. Stick with what you told the District Attorney you were going to prove with this witness. Stick to that. You made a statement to him.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor is barring me from asking questions about that?

THE COURT: I am not barring you from anything. If you had properly done what you should have done he would have had all this information. He only found out just awhile ago what you hoped to prove by this witness. Now, you gave him a statement, stick within that statement.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor, they've had our Petition since June 5th.

THE COURT: They may have but you never gave them anything in writing. You never gave them an affidavit or anything as to what you intend to prove by this witness until right this moment. And I told you before, at the beginning, I wanted you to do this.

MR. WILLIAMS: From the very outset of this case --

THE COURT: From the outset of this case I told you to give them the list of names and give them written statements of what you hoped to prove. You didn't do that with this witness and you evidently didn't do it with a lot of other witnesses. You said to the D.A. now you were going to go into a certain area and I am limiting you to that area, okay.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor --

THE COURT: Counselor, I have made a ruling. You have an exception to my ruling.

Page 126.

Now let's proceed, okay.

MR. WILLIAMS: Very well.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Being the hub of the wheel of this investigation, Mr. Thomas, were you aware of whether any witnesses expressed a reluctance to assist in the investigation, that is to offer a statement as to what was or was not observed at the time of the incident?

MR. GRANT: I would ask that he be specific as to which party, the Defendant or the Commonwealth, as to whether they were reluctant to offer assistance.

MR. WILLIAMS: Oh, I'm sorry.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. To any law enforcement personnel, any witnesses express reluctance to law enforcement personnel who were investigating the shooting death of Officer Faulkner?

A. Let me make sure I have this straight, Counselor. You are asking me if I know of any civilian witnesses who reported to myself or other police personnel that they were reluctant to testify in this matter?

Q. Or just to assist, that is to offer a statement.

A. At this juncture, I don't recall of any. I don't recall of any.

Q. Was Cynthia White available and willing to assist in the investigation of this matter, or did she ever express a reluctance?

A. Cynthia White had some fears from certain retaliations but she never mentioned to me not wanting to testify.

Q. Did she ever express reluctance to discuss what she allegedly observed on December 9th, 1981 with any law enforcement personnel?

MR. GRANT: Objection. Calls for speculation on his part.

MR. WILLIAMS: Unless he is the law enforcement personnel. If he knows. I am only asking if he knows.

MR. GRANT: Withdrawn.

THE COURT: Okay.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. If you know, sir?

A. The word in there that keeps getting me sort of unclear on your question is reluctance. In other words, you're asking me to determine her reluctance?

Q. Yes. Did she express any?

Page 128.

A. Not reluctance, no.

Q. She expressed fear?

A. There was an indication that she did do that, that is correct.

Q. Okay.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time among defense Counsel.)

MR. GRANT: Could I ask Mr. Thomas to pull the microphone closer so we could hear him.

THE WITNESS: I'm sorry, Counselor.

MR. GRANT: Thank you, sir.

THE COURT: Mr. Williams, please will you come over here. Could we move forward.

MR. WILLIAMS: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: You are wasting a lot of time.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, Your Honor, I am trying --

THE COURT: I said luncheon was supposed to be 2:15. You didn't start until 2:45. So let's try to move along.

MR. WILLIAMS: I am trying to be as complete and as careful as I must be.

THE COURT: Well, we know that but let's move along.

Page 129.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. You were present at the trial of this matter, were you not?

A. Counselor, during this case I was outside the door and what transpired inside the door for the most part I could not comment on. I wouldn't know from personal knowledge.

Q. Were there times, Mr. Thomas, where you sat at the prosecution table during the course of the trial?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what determined when you would do that?

MR. GRANT: Objection as to relevance. And as to what area that purports to support.

THE COURT: Rephrase your question somehow.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Well, let me put it this way. Were you aware that a witness by the name of Veronica Jones testified in the trial of this matter?

MR. GRANT: Objection: Cynthia White was his offer of proof as to the bias on behalf of the Commonwealth.

MR. WILLIAMS: If Your Honor will indulge me just a few questions and you will see the relevance of this, Your Honor.

Page 130.

MR. GRANT: I think I know the relevancy right now. The same relevance that was brought out here in the course of the trial when he was having Veronica Jones say what was in the mind of Cynthia White as to what treatment she would get. That's been litigated.

MR. WILLIAMS: I am not going to inquire into that.

MR. GRANT: Well, this is an irrelevant line of questioning.

THE COURT: Why don't you stick to what you told the D.A. you hoped to prove.

MR. WILLIAMS: I am going precisely into that.

THE COURT: Well, he says that is not so.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor has a peculiar way of always finding --

THE COURT: Counselor, please, I do not know what you said to him because I was not privy to that discussion.

MR. WILLIAMS: But you are willing to accept what he says willy-nilly.

THE COURT: Are you calling him a liar?

Page 131.

Detective William Thomas, Ret. - Direct

MR. WILLIAMS: No.

THE COURT: Are you calling him a liar?

MR. WILLIAMS: I am not calling my friend a liar.

THE COURT: Okay. You spoke to him. I wasn't part of that conversation.

MR. WILLIAMS: But I may have a difference of opinion as to what was represented.

THE COURT: Well, talk to him about it. I can only go by what he said about the area that you were going to cover. Now cover that area. Maybe I should have let you say it so the record could have it.

MR. WILLIAMS: I am trying to do that.

THE COURT: Well, then do it.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Mr. Thomas, were you aware, were you aware that Veronica Jones testified that she was offered the same deal as Cynthia White: that is that she would be allowed to prostitute herself without fear of arrest, were you aware of that?

A. No, sir, I wasn't aware of nothing like that.

Q. You were unaware of that fact?

Page 132.

Detective William Thomas, Ret. - Direct

A. At this juncture, yeah, I was either unaware of it or I don't recall it, sir.

Q. You are either unaware of it or you don't recall it?

A. I don't recall it.

Q. Had you had -- withdrawn. Now, your understanding was that Cynthia White was a prostitute; is that true?

A. That's correct.

Q. And was your understanding that Veronica Jones was also a prostitute?

A. At this juncture I don't remember who Veronica Jones is, what her part is in the case. Counselor, you are going 13, 14 years back. And the number of people that was interviewed at that time, like I said, I didn't even peruse anyone's file, I came here at your request. And all --

Q. Okay.

A. And I couldn't recall any, all the names that was in these files.

Q. Fair enough. Let me ask you this. In your experience as a seasoned, retired detective --

THE COURT: He means retired as a detective.

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, he has been

Page 133.

Detective William Thomas, Ret. - Direct

retired for quite some time.

THE COURT: I know that, but what is the seasoned? You mean before he retired?

MR. WILLIAMS: No, he was a seasoned detective and now he is a seasoned retired detective.

THE COURT: Oh. I am a Senior seasoned retired Judge?

MR. WILLIAMS: I won't venture to speculate on that.

THE COURT: Oh, okay.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. But nonetheless, as an individual with many years of experience in law enforcement, is it your experience that prostitutes are vulnerable to police pressure because they can be arrested for attempting to earn a livelihood?

MR. GRANT: I object. As opposed to dope dealers and murderers?

MR. WILLIAMS: Yes.

MR. GRANT: And pimps and thieves?

MR. WILLIAMS: Yes.

MR. GRANT: Obviously, he is not a psychiatrist, he is not qualified as an expert in that field. So I think the question is

Page 134.

Detective William Thomas, Ret. - Direct

ludicrous, Your Honor, and I object to it.

MR. WILLIAMS: I think law enforcement --

THE COURT: Why don't you get right to the heart of it.

MR. WILLIAMS: This is the heart of it.

THE COURT: No, the heart of it is did he do anything. Is that what you are saying?

MR. WILLIAMS: Not at all, Your Honor. I am not suggesting that at all.

THE COURT: Well, what are you suggesting?

MR. WILLIAMS: If Your Honor had read the Petition and the memorandum of law you would know.

THE COURT: Counselor, I don't know what you told him you were going to prove. If you want to make a public announcement and tell me what you intend to prove with this witness then I would be in a better position, because I was not privy to your private conversation.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Mister --

THE COURT: Are you going to give me

Page 135.

Detective William Thomas, Ret. - Direct

that or not?

MR. WILLIAMS: Well, I don't want to do it in front of the witness.

THE COURT: Well, that's why I told you to talk to him in private.

MR. WILLIAMS: Mr. Grant stood up and reported the substance of our conversation to Your Honor.

MR. GRANT: I did, Your Honor. And it didn't include any of this. Every time I object it's because it's not what he purported to represent to me.

MR. WILLIAMS: With Your Honor's indulgence.

(Discussion was held off the record at this time between Commonwealth and defense Counsel.)

THE COURT: Do you see why I want you to put it in writing before you call any of these witnesses? So that the D.A. will have it, I will have a copy of it, I will know where you are going to go. Would you please do that in the future. I told you that at the very beginning of this case.

MR. WILLIAMS: Your Honor --

Page 136.

Detective William Thomas, Ret. - Direct

THE COURT: Just remember what I said, all right. In the future please get it in writing.

MR. WILLIAMS: What mystifies me is that is what we offered at the very beginning.

THE COURT: Counselor, you did not put it in writing. I don't have anything in writing. He doesn't have anything in writing. Would you please do that in the future.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Now, Mr. Thomas, is it fair to say that the livelihood of prostitutes depends upon whether they can avoid arrest?

MR. GRANT: Objection. Unless he is a prostitute.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. In your experience in law enforcement, is that your understanding?

MR. GRANT: Objection.

THE COURT: Is it what?

MR. WILLIAMS: That their livelihood depends upon their ability to avoid being arrested.

THE COURT: I don't know, their livelihood is catching somebody that is willing

Page 137.

Detective William Thomas, Ret. - Direct

to pay. If they don't have anybody that is willing to pay, whether they get arrested or not is not going to affect it at all.

MR. WILLIAMS: Certainly if they get --

THE COURT: They have to have somebody that is willing to pay.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. And to be able to elicit somebody who is willing to pay for their services, they also have to avoid being arrested; is that true?

MR. GRANT: Your Honor, I object to this line of questioning.

THE COURT: I don't think necessarily that that's true. I think they consider that as a sort of taxation. If you want to get into the specifics of this case here, that's a different story.

Let's find out what they did as to this. Not hypothetical questions. Because I could answer them for you.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Now, earlier in this proceeding we heard testimony from a Mr. Greer, who testified that he observed Miss White attempting to elicit the

Page 138.

Detective William Thomas, Ret. - Direct services, elicit customers but with the protection of certain law enforcement personnel.

MR. GRANT: Objection. That's not true. The record reflects that he saw Miss White on a street corner standing there with two people in a red car beside her.

THE COURT: That's what he said.

MR. GRANT: There was no solicitation testimony.

BY MR. WILLIAMS:

Q. Were you aware that there were two individuals parked near Miss White on numerous occasions? Were you aware of that?

A. First of all, I didn't hear the, umm, testimony. But to your comment of -- I'm not aware of two people in a car watching Mrs. White -- Miss White.

Q. You were not aware of that?

A. No.

Q. Okay. Were you at all involved in the questioning of Miss White?
