

STEVE IRWIN

(1962-2006)

Steve Irwin was born in a suburb of Melbourne in Australia and spent his childhood in Queensland. His fascination with wildlife stemmed from an early age from his parents who both worked in the zoology and conservationist fields.

Such was his enthusiasm for animals at an early age he was given a 12 foot python on his 6th birthday and under his father's supervision wrestled his first crocodile at the age of 9.

Contrary to his popular TV name "The Crocodile Hunter," Irwin was anything but that. His legendary documentaries had just two aims. These were to inspire the world's population to get enthusiastic about wildlife conservation through his own passion for it and also to demonstrate the work that he was doing in moving endangered animals to areas where they would be better protected.

He was admired worldwide not only for his great work, but for his love of life and total commitment to what he enjoyed doing the most. Is it possible for any of us to forget his total calmness in the face of danger? His passion for what he did was nothing short of extraordinary.

"You know, you can touch a stick of dynamite, but if you touch a venomous snake it'll turn around and bite you and kill you so fast it's not even funny."
