Introduction:

What is available in this Archive?

Since 1970 I have published materials about the political situation in Italy, viewed from the perspective of the revolutionary Left. Those materials have been published as Red Notes pamphlets.

In the course of my activities I have collected a large amount of documentary material. That material is now a historical Archive, and I am in the processing of housing it in appropriate institutions.

How can you access this Archive material?

A large part of the material is lodged at the British Library of Political and Economic Science in London (the LSE Library). There it can be consulted by any member of the public who wishes to use it

The LSE Red Notes Archive can be accessed here:

<https://archives.lse.ac.uk/Record.aspx?src=CalmView.Catalog&id=RED+NOTES&pos=86>

For access, contact the Librarian at

Address: LSE Library, 10 Portugal Street, London, WC2A 2HD

PLEASE NOTE:

A sizeable proportion of the material, including most of the books, is

NOT currently housed at BLPES. Negotiations are under way with other institutions for storage of the remaining material.

What are the future plans for the archive?

I am producing an Archive Listing of everything contained in the archive. That Archive listing is appended below. Eventually it will be produced in small pamphlet form.

I am hoping that some of the materials contained in the archive will eventually become available on-line, for people to download. However, that will take a while coming.

For the moment the materials exist only in the form contained below.

I hope that you find the Archive of interest.

La lotta continua.

Brief historical note outlining the importance of the Archive:

Harry Cleaver – Introduction to “Reading Capital Politically”:

“Trying to understand these threads and the lines of their influence on my collaborators in that journal led me to Europe in the summer of 1978. In a whole series of encounters that proved enormously informative, I began to piece together the political and intellectual history of the various ideas and politics. In England I met with John Merrington and Ed Emery, two key figures in the circulation of Italian New Left ideas into England, and hence to the US. In John’s Offord Road apartment I spent many hours in conversation about intellectual and political developments in Italy and their influence in England. I also spent several days reading through his handwritten translations of Italian texts, many of which had not been published at that time. With Ed Emery I discovered Red Notes, a series of publications that included translations from the Italian produced by John and him to influence the pattern of workers’ struggles in England. [...]

“Along with all these discussions, and my efforts to reconstruct the threads of ideas I had come to study, I also began to gather historical materials, key texts in which these ideas had been laid out and developed. It was clear that I would have to learn Italian, at least a reading comprehension, to come to grips with the very large numbers of books, journal articles and pamphlets generated in the tumultuous and creative world of the Italian New Left -- most of which were untranslated and unknown in the English speaking world despite the valiant efforts of John Merrington and Ed Emery. A first synthetic reconstruction of the history of these ideas, based on these discussions and on the materials gathered, makes up a substantial portion of the latter half of the introduction to this book. The materials themselves make up the sizeable collection contained in The Texas Archives of Autonomist Marxism.(7)”

Lotta Continua ceased publication in June 1982. Many of the gaps in our collection are due to periods when the paper was not printing (especially in the later years). However, as you can see, there are years for which we have no issues at all. If anyone is able to fill some of these gaps, we would be very grateful. Send us your papers! For the history of Lotta Continua newspaper, see our published "An Interview with the Editor: An Almost Complete History of Lotta Continua Newspaper"
