

My leave behind would be a black mug that when a hot beverage is placed inside, turns white and reveals my logo. On the back of the cup, it would have contact information and a photo of my work. There are companies who customize these cups for whatever image you'd put on it, and when you buy in bulk, it costs about $1.50/mug. That isn't so much that it will break the bank and it's something that the client will use frequently and have a visual reminder of who you are. Below is the other side of the mug:

