

Story of 3 P

P-Public \ P-politician \ P-public-servant (including police).

In democracy these are the three figures everywhere. The first and foremost P should stand for Public because that exist first and then they needed public servants and then they needed their representatives politicians. When Politicians came what they did divided and started ruling instead of serving the public with the help of public-servants (please note they are still called Government-servants and I am avoiding using this term in Public).

Every body loves the ruling part, as no body wants to be servant of public, because they like to be another part of another big P (power). But every body forgets soon that power is really vested in Public and temporarily given to them, who in turn are like a sleeping Giant and this Giant think that they don't have power and are helpless because they are not united.

The correct order of this pyramid should be inversely proportion to the letters each contains i.e. first public then politicians and last not the least public servants.

But unfortunately at present system as exist in India is opposite first politicians, then public servant and in last comes public. There should not be any power struggle for ideal conditions and all should live in Peace Peace Peace. together.

Think now for a second why it is so answer comes right away. The present rules and administration in by product of British rule and do they want this for their subjects no but at the same time they wanted a committed bureaucracy. Hence there is lot of discrimination power given to this group instead of robust rule which can't be manipulated. All the rules in Democracy should be in public interest rather than for discouragement. Encouragement should be the norm not otherwise as it is now, if you make the mistake you will be punished if caught. Enforcement of rules is not possible but one who is caught will be punish only public. Similarly if any Politicians or public servants are found breaking the rules are punished as the ruler part was always British and they saved in the name of British Crown service and Civil servants. This is certainly misuse of Power. We have to go through the Following steps in order to reverse the Pyramid of power.

- 1. Public should vote for increase of perk and pay for politicians, public servants.
- 2. Rules, which are redundant, should be abolished.
- 3. For check and balance legislative, executive and Judiciary should be independent of each other separated.
- 4. Permanency of Government Jobs is hindrance in progress of democracy and providing housing and domestic servant should be scraped. Appointment for positions for one term of four to five years term. If rules are Robust continuity is not a problem.
- 5. All housing of Government should privatized and then only public Servants will realize how public is living. And the money thus saved should pay off the Govt. Debt.
- 6. Make Public service and politicians services less lucrative and people should come to serving attitude not ruling attitude. Three time and out be it public office by appointment or politicians.
- 7. Politicians have no lucrative perks unless all public have Roti Kapara Aur Makan (Food Sheltor and Job).

8. Schools can opened any where like business now, try to open the school and you will know what we mean here. You can open up to 5 crores industry without any paper work but for school. Government had to control the Quality of schools not the quantity.
9. Encourage should be norm not the punishment as it exits.
10. Three strike should be rule and out in any profession or for politicians.
11. Dream India as you would like to see it in future.
