

Compassion

From society point of view compassion is most important attribute of man, which works against greed and give rise to sharing. During festivals this quality comes into light more often. Man always considers him or herself as individualistic. But now when life is so complex and we are in so much large numbers, each one of us depend, more and more on others for our daily needs rather than doing everything ourselves.

With so called progress many of us are left behind and our daily needs and necessities remain unfulfilled. And age old question remains about the gap between have and have not. As resources of world remain unchanged provided by nature and a group is involved in value added process but there always a group left behind in this rat race whose demands are not met with this value added process. This gap can be filled with actions of some good intentional governments in some countries, but by and large this gap is filled by society at large, some time these gap can be filled with international communities not wounded by geographical limitations.

Compassion for fellow citizen locally and internationally is must and every one of us should have this quality. In the end if we have one bread loaf we should be able to share one slice with someone else who is not linked to us by race, color, creed or by country. Please get involved in some such activity and sharing will give you such a great joy you will like to repeat this experience more and more. And this can make all the difference in the world.
