

India

My India is a beautiful country if you not look from any color glasses (mindset). but it has lot more problems then it can solve or we would like it to solve. First we should ask this question are we not responsible for its problems? Then second question should can be play some part in solving the problem or become part of the solution. If any one of answer to above questions is no stop reading this article right now.

One of the experts who studied the democracy in detail said so “ People get the administration as they deserve”. It is true for India as well as for that matters any other democratic country. Many times people make a comment India has this problem, that problem, which place does not have a problem magnitude and type may differ. It is useless to compare India with any other country or vice versa.

We have a choice to live with one set of problems and we did exercise the choice. Same way Indians should have choice to elect their leaders they did if things does add up to their expectation they can change the system, who are we to complain about India from USA.

Let me state one more fact that no one is happy all the time at any one given place. If a choice is given to Indians where to live of course majority will prefer to stay in India that is why India is what it now. Most of the inhabitants are happy with the things they have around them. That how many people are proud of their home, county province and country?

Umesh Rashmi Rohatgi

24161 Nilan Drive Novi MI 48375-3754USA Ph:248-471-5786 Email:”ruenterprise@aol.com”