

Relationship

What is relationship? It is a vast subject let us only examine this in context of social sense, not in preview of trade relationship or national and international relationship. Every relationship in this world depends upon give and take. Take some time and give some other time. There cannot be any relationship where one only take and never give, or vice versa with only one exception we always take from God and can never give him back.

Let us test this on mother child, father child relationship. Though it may appear that some body or say parents are always giving, but it may not be true on close inspection. Was it necessary condition for a child to come in this world through you, no it was the child who made you parent in the process, that means are we not gained in it. And let me quote one thing that raising the child is the most satisfying job in the whole wide world. Suppose you have no children you will be labeled as childless couple. Now take husband wife relationship, in this relationship give and take is only way to grow this relationship to the height of its panicle. But it is said love is most important issue in this, but it only plays 5% rest 95% is compromise, which is the other name of give and take.

Now take friendship for example in the last ,people say friendship does not look for return of some sort, but practically only give and take or compromise only works in long run.

Hence if we wants any relationship to grow and continue for a longer time we should be ready for give and take.
