

Samoa College
CLASS of 1993

As I turn the almost tattered pages of my 1993 Year Book, I am laughing uncontrollably, filled with excitement with each page content and amazement that this was a decade ago.

1993 as I recall was a 'busy' year, being senior graduating students and vying to get top grades in the PSSC exams and of course looking forward to UPY.

I had almost forgotten that I was a prefect and of course still can't believe Mana was the deputy head girl [laugh]. I think the highlight of that year at the college was the "Light at the End" drama production with its 'slice of life' script which saw performances for the Teuila Festival and at Vaipouli College in Savaii. Who can ever forget Natalya's award winning soliloque from Macbeth and Louisa's "Auoi ka fia ola" speech.

13.1 was dubbed by our form teacher Mrs. Lynn Rasmussen as "Organised Chaos". With only 5 males in our class, it explains the emergence of women's rugby amongst the domineering ladies of our class especially at that time when the Manu Samoa had their first test with the All Blacks. We were truly rugby fanatics, each of us nicknamed after famous Manu heroes and displayed some awesome tackling and scrum techniques. It's a pity though that none of us never made it to the Manu Samoa [laugh].

1993 also saw the opening of the new library and laboratories. Construction for the fale by SCOPA also came underway towards the end the year.

Ten years later, I am most proud to see my colleagues working successfully in all fields of life contributing to our economy and community.

Now as I close this Year Book, it has indeed been a trip down memory lane. I smile now as I reminisce meeting my husband at the college like many of my colleagues. Let those memories be treasured.

Every Saturday I visit the college grounds, aka One Tree Hill, with the SCOPA Netball Club and there we continue to build and strengthen our support for the school that brings us such fond memories.

Congratulations Samoa College for achieving this milestone of 50 years old.

To all my colleagues, wishing you and your families greener pastures in your future endeavours.

Nella Tavita Levy

Nella Tavita Levy

1990 – 1993 Samoa College
13.1, Prefect, President Commerce Club

1994 UPY

1995 – 1998 Victoria University, Wellington, NZ
Bachelor of Commerce and Administration (Marketing & Commercial

Law)

1999 – current Principal Trade Policy & Research Officer (2002)
Ministry of Foreign Affairs & Trade

Samoa

Married: Patrick Boyd Levy

Son: Patrick Allen Levy