Earth Echo

founder

Philippe Pierre Cousteau

Interview by Ashley Agron

ABOUT EARTH ECHO

Earth Echo International is a nonprofit organization founded in 2000 by Philippe and Alexandra Cousteau in honor of their father Philippe Cousteau Sr., the son of explorer Jacques Cousteau. Earth Echo's mission is to inspire individuals to take action to sustain and enhance our water planet.

INTERVIEW

AA: What is the meaning of Earth Echo?

PC: We felt the word Echo reflects what we are doing in our organization which is echoing the legacy of my late fathers work. Also, echo reflects our relationship to the environment.

AA: Why is Earth Echo's headquarters in Washington, DC?

PC: For several reasons. Washington is a great central location for traveling within the U.S. or Europe. Also, Washington is home to many organizations because of the government influence.

AA: It is Earth Echo's mission to inspire a sense of stewardship for our planet and to help others create an environmentally sustainable future. Could you explain what this means. How do you plan to accomplish this?

PC: We have added the word ACTION to our mission statement. It is important for people to become aware of the problems, however, we want to take this a step further and make people take Action. It is very empowering when people get involved and take action towards solving the environmental problems of this world. We must change people's behavior. This behavioral change regarding products we use or foods we eat, or how we take care of our earth and its water is the action we need to get to the solutions. Awareness must lead to Action.

On Monday morning, October 30th 2006, I arrived at the Headquarters of Earth Echo International in Washington, DC to interview founder Philippe Pierre Cousteau. I first noticed that the location of their offices is very impressive. Before walking into the building and to my left, just a few steps away, is the White House. I proceeded up the elevator to enter the world of Earth Echo. I was immediately escorted to the interview room. While waiting for the interview, there was nothing to prepare me for who I was about to meet. Entering the room was an impeccably dressed, six foot four, debonair 26 year old who is taking a huge leadership role to educate the public about environmental and conservation issues of our water planet.

Philippe Cousteau is the son of Jan and Philippe Cousteau Sr., and the grandson of Jacques Yves Cousteau. He earned his masters degree in History from St. Andrews University in Scotland. He is a world traveler but calls Washington, DC his primary residence. Philippe is continuing the work of his legendary family, inspiring individuals in his words, "to become better stewards of our water planet."

AA: How has your family influenced your interest in this field?

PC: My father was Vice President for the original Cousteau Foundation. Although he died in a plane crash in 1979, my mother kept his influence active in my life. I grew up with his inspiration. I also love exploring.

AA: What type of media/documentary projects have you been involved in and are currently working on now. What do you hope to accomplish through these projects?

PC: I have worked on many documentaries. I recently worked on a project with Animal Planet. I was hosting "Oceans Deadliest" in Australia with Steve Irwin during his fatal attack by a stingray. It was a tragic accident. I was asked to finish the documentary. The show will be presented on January 21, 2007.

AA: What role does education play in conservation efforts?

PC: First you must define education. Every platform is an education source. It is critical for awareness and then you get action. Education is crucial to get the awareness and then action and ultimately solutions.

AA: What did you think of the Al Gore movie "An Inconvenient Truth"? Do you think these types of grass roots documentaries are effective in promoting their awareness towards their cause?

PC: The movie had to be done. It beacons social debate. It was a great film that can't be criticized due to its truth.

AA: What ecological challenges does Santa Barbara, or the West Coast face in general that need to be attended to?

PC: I have a great interest in California since I was born there. California must address the oceans debris and coastal development issues. California does a lot of good work helping environmental problems. As far as Santa Barbara, it would help if people downsized. Smaller homes equal less sewage, etc. However California as a whole is very progressive.

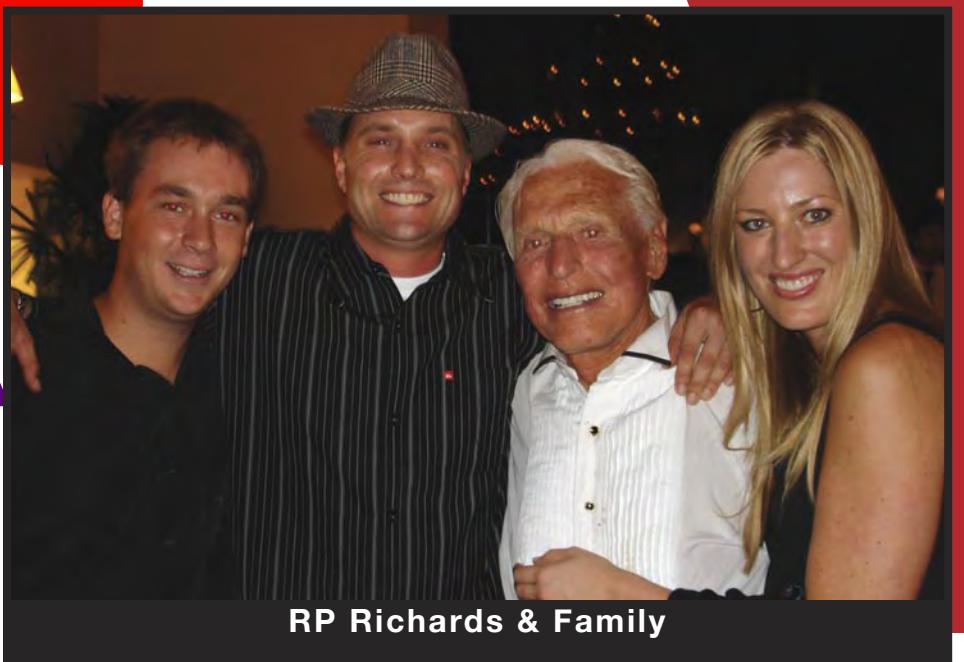

AA: What can Santa Barbara's citizens do to help gain sustainability and protect the environment that we cherish?

PC: It is great to join support groups. There should be local and global unity.

Philippe Cousteau is currently working on a new radio adventure "Living on Earth", video games, a simulator ride for theme parks and resort consulting. He travels around the world educating the public on the environment and our oceans. Most importantly he encourages people to not only become aware, but to take ACTION.

Wine Tasting with Andrew Firestone

INTERVIEW BY ASHLEY AGRON

*D*riving into Santa Barbara County's Santa Ynez Valley, heading towards the Firestone Vineyards, you can't help but enjoy the beautiful views of the hills. What a privilege it must be to be involved in the making of fine wines. The experience begins on working with the vines all the way to a finished product of an exclusive yet affordable wine must be satisfying.

Today, Andrew Firestone is going to share his thoughts about California wines and his experiences living on the vineyard. Andrew Firestone grew up on the Firestone Ranch and Vineyards. After graduating from college, he moved north to the San Francisco area to become an investment banker. After five years Andrew has returned to the family business which he loves. This vineyard has been a family tradition of the Firestone's for three generations.

AA: What is your favorite premiere Firestone wine?

AF: Our "Ambassador" wine. This wine was named after my grandfather. It is a true Bordeaux blend which is the most expensive bottle we ever made. We have a winemaker that is capable of making such a fine wine as the Ambassador. We are very particular about how we price our wines. We are a family vineyard and want to make great wines at affordable prices. This way our wines can be enjoyed by everyone for every occasion. The price of a bottle of Ambassador is $60.00.

AA: What makes a wine worthy of Reserve on the label?

AF: We will put a Reserve label if it is a significantly better wine.

AA: Do you have dessert wines?

AF: Yes we do. They are sweet wines. The dessert wines are not the main focus but we do enjoy them.

AA: How do you compare California wines to French wines?

AF: I am biased toward California wines. I love the fact that California wines are user friendly. Even some of the best California wines are not that expensive so you can drink them casually. You don't feel a need for a special occasion to open a bottle of fine California wine. You open one to enjoy with friends and family.

AA: What are the future plans for Firestone Wines?

AF: Firestone wineries are focusing on making better and better wines. We also want to make better wines that are reasonably priced. We want great value everyday drinking wines. Wines you can share during the holidays or any dinner.

I enjoyed my interview with Andrew Firestone because of his enthusiasm regarding wines that people are not afraid to open and share with friends and family. Wines that can be enjoyed at dinner or dinner parties. The Firestone Wineries produce wines that have great taste and quality yet are affordable.

Ask The Date Detective

"Who's lying next to you?"

By Carmen Naimish

"This relationship seems too good to be true."

In the last issue of Social Scene Magazine, we introduced you to private investigator and founder of DateSmart, Carmen Naimish. You were invited to ask her your dating questions.

The Date Detective Answers Your Questions

Question: The man I'm dating tells me he's been divorced for 3 years, I'm beginning to believe that's not true. I've never been invited to his place; he disappears for periods of time and does not answer his cell phone. I don't want to be involved with him if he's still married.

How can I be sure?

Still Single.

Answer: If his divorce is final, record of it should be accessible at the County courthouse where it was filed. Many times, a divorce drags on for years in a battle over assets or custody of minor children. Sometimes they find it easier to say they're divorced than try and explain, the truth is always best.

Answer: In most criminals backgrounds I check, I find a more severe offense than the person admits to. Your boyfriend could be headed back East to serve time for something else. His record will be found in the county where the crime was committed.

Question: My mother is in her late 50's, she met a man on an Internet dating site. He lives in the UK, he has charmed her, but I see Red Flags. My mother had health problems recently and is vulnerable. He asked for money, she has wired him over $1,000. I think he's lying about himself and that my mother will send him more money and he will break her heart.

What can I do to stop her?
Worried daughter.

Answer: Your mother is most likely being scammed. There is a ring of Nigerian romance scammers based out of London. They use an attractive photograph of someone else and claim it's them. Their scheme is to develop a relationship with a woman, prey on her vulnerabilities and gain her sympathy for their current unexpected plight. The scheme always involves money and it is usually conducted through Western Union.

Winter Wonderland

Sweden

In the village of Jukkasjärvi in Sweden, 200 km north of the Arctic Circle, lies a Hotel made completely of ice. Fly into the Kiruna Airport 12 km from the village. From there, dog sleds pick you up and take you to the hotel. The ice for the hotel is taken from the banks of the Torne river. The hotel's construction starts in November and is ready for guests to enjoy by December. The hotel closes when the roof starts to melt which is usually in April. Each year the design of the hotel is changed so returning guests are always amazed. Inside the hotel never exceeds -5 degrees Celsius, however thermal wear is provided by the hotel. The hotel boasts the first Absolut Vodka bar. For more information call 460-980-66800
