Letter To Reader

Dear Reader,

I am an expert on filmmaking who is attempting to share my knowledge through a website. My theme for the website will be filmmaking. I want this website to be shared with schools across the world so for them to learn how to make movies. After about 5 months of doing research, I have come up with 3 main ways to show you all the things that I know about filmmaking. I've gotten an interview with another expert and you have access to that through this website. I've also done a short film for you to watch and learn how to make a movie.

I strongly believe that the different genres in my website will educate you on how to make a film. My main research question for my research was what it takes to make a film. The interview I've done has given me a lot of information on how I can make my movies better as well as helping out beginners. I also posted an article that I was part of about Lord Of The Rings. In my free time I created a short comic about two people attempting to figure out how to make a movie the correct way. Lastly, I've added a Twitter duologue between two experts on filmmaking.

This was a exciting journey out here in Los Angeles. I love what I've been able to learn and do with film. I love to be able to put a story on film and share it with others. My only complaint with this is that making a movie can be very time consuming and expensive, but those are challenges that are worth facing for the end product. I am surprised that not many people pursue the career of a filmmaker. I am excited to be able to share my knowledge with others and hopefully encourage someone to make their own film.

Sincerely,

Theo Kremer
