

Em

and

B

In The Great

Who-Threw-It?

Caper!!

It has certainly been one of those days. B was trying to figure out who threw the giant boomerang through their milk-carton and Lin was busy playing midnight handstand.

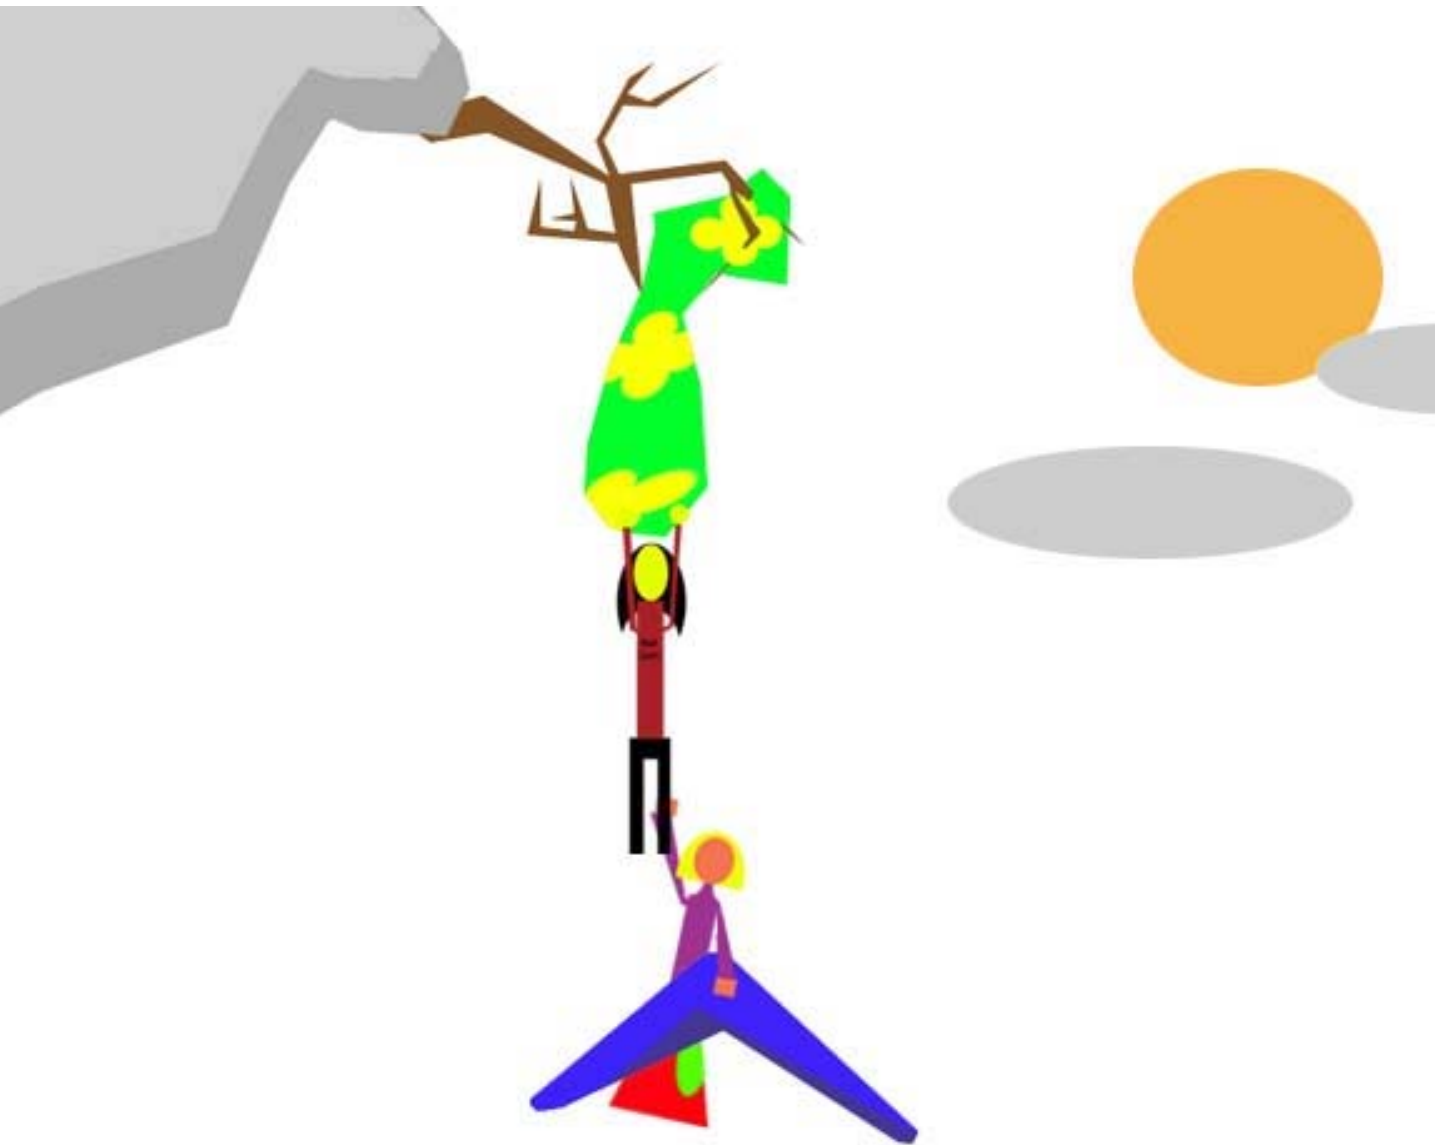

The girls didn't know it but they were being watched quite closely through a telescope. the owner of the telescope? none of your business right now! but you will find out later. could this strange man be the one who owns the boomerang thrown through the carton? who knows? not me, that's for sure.

So, said Em, what do you think we should do? how are we going to figure out who threw this thing? B had a great idea. why don't we get on the blow-up sled and ride down the hill to figure out who the boomerang belongs to? Em thought that was a really good idea so she grabbed the sled and blew it up with her mouth.

The sled, having been blown up, swooshed down the mountain that just happened to be where the girls needed it. so down the mountain they went. wahooooo. Em was definitely enjoying herself. B was having problems holding onto the boomerang, the flowers on the sled were pretty.

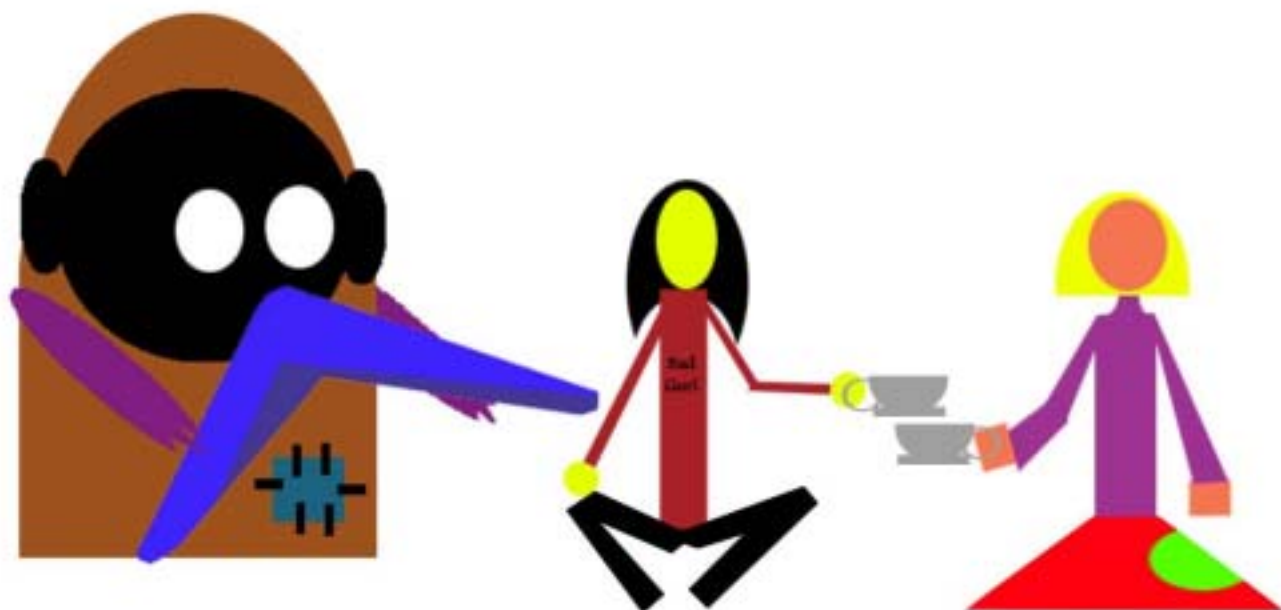

Oh no! this is a horrible thing, the girls have fallen off a cliff and their sled has become punctured on a cliff-branch. good thing E_1 has a great grip on the sled and B has a good grip on the E_1 and the boomerang, what on earth are they going to do?

Good things happened though. it turns out the ground was right below them. Not all cliffs are that high, stupid! aaaaaanyway, the girls looked around and saw a cave. out of the cave came a strangely timid looking hunchback. he said hello and invited them in for high tea. the girls accepted and joined him.

Huntback's House of Tea
"come for the tea, and ask questions of me!"

The timid huntback took the boomerang from the girls and looked it over as they drank their tea. It was a nice boomerang, solid construction, blue. It was kind of angled, but many were. But he couldn't figure out whose it was, so he sent them north towards the giant ball of twine.

Wall O' Trophies

Who is this strange fella? could he have any more colors on his body? It seems that he is just standing around doing nothing. But what is that blank spot on the wall? It looks like a familiar shape. hmmm, perhaps the sign is deceiving,....

Hey look, the timid hunchback gave them his car. he said keep it because he is timid. Em found herself a trucker hat and B put her arms outside the window in the back seat. very dangerous, she liked that. Off they went in search of the owner of the boomerang!